The Woman's Home Mission Society has decided to raise a special fnnd to help their schools and to be counted as a part of the general fnnd. It is of great importance that the Twentieth Century Movement be made to help these worthy schools. Already they have accomplished great good, bnt their nsefnlness is capable of great increase. It is in perfect accord with the spirit of the Twentieth Century Movement that the members of the Woman's Home Mission Society and others direct snch part of their thank-offerings as they may desire to these schools. This they were officially asked to do by their Board at the annnal meeting recently held in Dallas, Tex., and with this request the purposes of the General Board of Education are in perfect accord.

J. D. HAMMOND, Secretary.

AN OPEN LETTER TO OUR PASTORS.

DEAR BROTHER: The Woman's Board of Home Missions has decided to raise not less than $10,000 as a Twentieth Century Thank-Offering for the eqnipment and endowment of its educational institntions. It is to be a part of the $1,500,000 called for by the General Conference, not an ontside effort, nor is its collection to be made in any way antagonistic to it. To this end we respectfnlly request yon, as pastors, in enrolling the names of the women in yonr charge, to give them, or any others, an opportnnity to direct snch part of their offerings as they may desire to the educational institntions of the Woman's Home Mission Society, which are as follows:

The Sne Bennett Memorial School, London, Ky., and the Indnstrial Home and School, Greeneville, Tenn., for the monntain people; the Cnban schools in Florida and Key West, and the Chinese and Japanese schools in California, for onr foreign popnlation; Friendsbnry Home, Baltimore, Md., and Ann Browder Cnnningham Home, Dallas, Texas, for the training of city missionaries and resone workers.

Yon will please trn over all money so directed, with the name of the donor, to the treasurer of the anxiliary of the Home Mission Society in yonr charge. If you should have no anxiliary, send the money directly to the General Treasurer, Mrs. W. D. Kirkland, 207 Fatherland street, Nashville, Tenn., giving the name of yonr Conference as well as that of the donor.

MISS BELLE H. BENNETT, President.
MRS. R. K. HARGROVE, General Secretary.
MRS. W. D. KIRKLAND, General Treasurer.

MISS MELISSA BAKER'S BEQUEST TO THE WOMAN'S HOME MISSION SOCIETY.

The following extracts from Miss Baker's will will be read with interest as explaining the nature of her mnnificent beqnest to the Home Mission Society: "I give, devise, and bequeath to E. B. Prettyman, W. W. Smith, and George B. Baker, the homestead property known as 'Friendsbnry' (with the request that the name of 'Friendsbnry Home' be applied to same), on which I now reside, consisting of one entire block with the bnildings thereon, . . . in trnst as follows: If, at the time of the probate of my will, the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society of the M. E. Chnrch, South, shall have become a body corporate, capable in law to receive devises, bequests, and gifts, and if within two years thereafter said society so incorporated shall have raised or have provided not less than the sum of $10,000 as an endowment fund for city mission work, and shall agree to condnct snch work in the city of Baltimore, and to apply the proceeds of said fnnd to that work in said city, and shall fnrther agree to accept the said property hereby devised and use the same as a center of operations in the work of said society in the city of Baltimore, then said trustees shall convey said property to said Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society. . . . I give and bequeath to the trnstees named in the foregoing item $10,000, in trnst, to pay over the same to the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society if they shall comply with the reqnirements of said item."

The Woman's Board of Home Missions accepted with gratefnl appreciation the property bequeathed to them by this elect lady, and proceeded at once to arrange for complying with the reqnirements of the beqnest. Friendsbnry Home will be made, as Miss Baker desired, the center of operations for our mission work in the city of Baltimore; and that it may the more perfectly meet her wishes and the needs of the work it will be made a home where missionaries are trained for the entire work, as well as furnishing a home for those who will be engaged in that work in Baltimore. There will also be snch indnstrial classes for the poor as circnmstances may render possible and desirable. With this pnrpose in view we have placed it in the list of onr educational institntions, and appeal to the friends of the society to direct a portion of their Twentieth Century Thank Offering toward its eqnipment and endowment. Two years are given the society to raise the $10,000 required to secnre the bequest, and we have determined, by the help of God, to do it in less than that time, not alone by Twentieth Century offerings, bnt by special donations and every means possible. Friendsbnry is valned at $50,000, and $10,000 in money is added to the gift. Is the Woman's Home Mission Society, is the Methodist Episcopal Chnrch, South, willing to lose the donation of $60,000 by failing to add to it the $10,000 necessary to secure it?

For eighty-five years Miss Baker has expended time, thought, and money in Christ's service, and when she went hence she added this one more good work for her native city.

In writing to me she said: "I give this property as a memorial of my grandfather, Richard Jones, who pnrchased it a woodland and made it a home a few years after he came to Baltimore from Wales, Nov. 27, 1[illegible]. He joined the Wesleyan Church while quite a yonng man, and continued a Methodist all his life. I have heard my mother say that this was one of the circnit appointments; her father had preaching in front of the house in the Summer, and in Winter fitted up a room in a large building on the grounds, and she was converted at one of these meetings. My father was a very holy and charitable man, and very kind to the poor. He spent mnch of his time in prayer, and had an npper room where he retired to read and pray. Over the mantel was painted: 'God's promise is mine inheritance.' So I feel that this home should be devoted to a good pnrpose, and in memory of him."

Who will not agree with this beautifnl sentiment? A Christian home for one hnndred and six years is snrely a place for the living Christ to dwell with those engaged in his work of redemption.

MRS. R. K. HARGROVE, General Secretary.

SICK FANCIES IN CHURCH.

I wonder why people fill up the back seats first. Do they believe in the "survival of the fittest"? If they are all "back numbers," when did they go out of date? I wonder if they would be missed, only as a background to the real worshipers.

I wonder what makes the members of the choir look at each other and laugh, even while they are singing, "While life's dark maze I tread." I wonder if they can be unconscious of the solemnity of being engaged in the worship of the most High. I wonder if the service of song ever soothes and heals their broken and aching hearts, even though they seem so careless and even indifferent. I wonder what made the chief soprano put that large, shiny buckle right in front on her hat, so that it comes almost between her eyes. I wonder if she realizes how much like a target it is, and if she can possibly guess how many, beside myself, have been aiming invisible guns at such a "shining mark."

I wonder if I can persuade myself that I have "centred the spot," if I can fix my attention on the sermon.

I wonder why nature, always kind, did not bless mortals with the gift of seeing who it is misbehaving in the back of the church without turning around in their seat.

I wonder what makes some good people look so awful glum and dismal. I wonder if all their wretchedness is on the outside. I wonder if more people are not kept from the church by their presence than are benefited by their prayers and testimonies.

I wonder what makes the preacher throw up his right hand, and stand so still and majestic, thrilling one with the impression that they are in the power of the mighty angel who shall declare that time shall be no more. I wonder if it is "wise-hearted" to go to church when one is sick.

HASTY ACTION AND STRANGE ENLIGHTENMENT.

A short time since a private member called on her pastor and announced that she was going to "quit" the Methodist Church. The pastor asked, "Why are you going to do that?" She answered, "Oh, I am not going to stay in the church when they pay a Bishop three thousand dollars, and pay such men as good Bro. G. only three hundred dollars." The pastor replied, "The Bishops are at a great deal more expense in traveling over large districts of country than a preacher is in a station or on a circuit." She answered, "That is too much difference to make between men, and I am not going to stand it." The pastor rejoined: "The church at large pays the Bishop his salary, while the people to whom the preacher preaches pay him his salary. They are to blame if he gets no more, and are to bear the blame for Bro. G.'s getting but three hundred dollars." The woman retorted, "Bro. G. is a good preacher, and as good a man as any Bishop, and I am not going to stay in a church that makes such a difference between men." The preacher said: "My dear sister, be kind enough not to break up the church by withdrawing just now. I am in very peculiar circumstances, and if the church is dissolved now, within a few days I shall be greatly embarrassed. If you will suspend your action for a few weeks, I can adjust myself before this community, and can remain or leave in good standing. Please, on my account, do not dissolve and leave the church to dissolution." The woman had not suspected such a catastrophe. She has not expressed the design of "quitting" any further.

It takes but little sober thought to see that the church can do better without us than we can without the church.

The writer met with this information from a brother Methodist. "We have no use for presiding elders," he said. I answered, "We need them to work our system." "No," he replied. "The preacher in charge can do everything the presiding elder does, and we would save paying out that much money for no real benefit." Well, this to me was information, coming as it did from my own pastorate.

I did not go out of that same community before I heard this stated, "We have no use whatever for Bishops." My answer was, "We certainly need Bishops in controlling our Conferences and managing our work." The reply came, "No other church has Bishops, and I see no use for them." I rejoined by saying, "We have Bishops to work our economy, and make our system practical." Then came the reply, "I see no need of such expense, nor why you can not get along just as well without them."

Here was information humiliating to me. I had read up some on Methodist Church history, and for a long time have made it a principle to keep up in my reading in our church publications—that is, our weeklies, monthlies, etc.; but here was information outside of all my reading. I may confess to a want of close analysis and a want of thoroughly systemizing my literary pursuits, but I can not, on any of these lines, account for my want of the information tendered me by my advisers alluded to above.

However, this was made plain in a brief space of time, visiting in the homes of these persons. I discovered that there was not a Methodist periodical to be found in their houses, nor scarcely to be found in their neighborhoods. I could see how their knowledge came to them, though I am well advanced in years. I do not think my thirst for knowledge has abated, and I sacrifice some comforts and conveniencies to be able to keep some stand in the intelligent world; but to give up the refining culture of the mind and the soul-edifying spiritual force given in the columns of our Advocates, I can not forego for the wisdom alluded to above. Nor can I in conscience recommend to our Methodist people the repudiation of the literature of a church whose works and publications have enlightened the world and enlarged the borders of the Lord's Zion for a wisdom, the knowledge of which is to be had in the absence of the culture of a refining literature. Where there is content with such knowledge, surely "ignorance is bliss."

WHAT THINK YE!

Having settled in a few words the question as to "which is the great commandment," our Savior quickly asks the Pharisees, "What think ye of Christ?" A very wise and pertinent question.

The same spirit of worldliness which existed in the days of Christ still dwells among men to-day. There are many people living in Christian lands who have not God in all their thoughts.

Great ado will be made to welcome the immortal Dewey when he returns home; yet many who will spend hundreds of dollars and travel hundreds of miles to see that individual, rarely give anything to missions, and seldom, if ever, go to church to worship Him who has promised to meet even with two or three who have gathered together in his name. Honor to whom honor is due.

As many of the readers of the ADVOCATE will soon be called upon to exercise the highest privilege of American citizenship—that of voting—we crave their attention for just a few moments. If our country ever needed honest, sober and upright men for officers, then surely we need them to-day. Straws sometimes show which way the wind is blowing. When we have drunkards and men who favor open saloons aspiring to high office, we believe that it is time to think, speak, and act. In our humble judgment, no drunkard is fit for any office, high or low. The moral influence of such men is not righteous, to say the least of it. It is "more blessed to give than to receive."

No one will doubt that the daughters of Mississippi Methodism are worthy of any equal showing with our boys; then why do we withhold from the former the opportunities which we give the latter? He who will give of his means, be it much or little, to endow a college for our girls, invests his money in that which shall yield an hundred-fold.

One other thought: While we believe that Christianity is spreading, and rejoice that the "leaven" is beginning to leaven the whole lump, but there is much yet to be done.

From a recent issue of the Youth's Companion we clip the following: "A pretty long row was drawn the other day by the Superintendent of Education in a great city, when he told Rev. Dr. Huntington that among the children of school age in his jurisdiction there were one hundred thousand who did not know of the existence of such a book as the Bible. . . . College presidents testify that a large per cent. of college students are lamentably ignorant of the Scriptures. Sunday-school instruction does not go far, and the only safeguard against the heathenization of a part of our population seems to lie in a reviving sense of parental responsibility—a re-enthroning of religion in the family."

We heartily agree with the Companion in the above, even though it contains one phrase that is a rather hard lump for a Sunday-school superintendent to swallow. The phrase reads thus: "Sunday-school instruction does not go far." Bold as this assertion may appear to be, we believe that it is sustained by the evidence before us.

Rollin tells us that the ancients realized the value of home training. While the dark clouds of war were yet hanging over France, Napoleon uttered these words, "What France needs is not more mothers, but better mothers."

Shame on those parents who turn loose a family of children who are aliens to law and order, being a pest to the town or community in which they live. "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it." GEO. W. HIVELEY.

The earthworm is now accused of playing considerable part in the spread of disease. Pasteur found germs of charbon near the surface of soil in which sheep that had died from the disease had been buried several years previously, and Dr. Halstead Boylan, of Paris, finds reason for believing that not only charbon, but typhoid and yellow fevers and tetanus may be spread by germs brought to the surface from dead bodies by earthworms. An epidemic of yellow fever in the Amazon Valley in 1850 seems to have resulted from microbes rising from the soil over the grave of a Jamaica man who died from the fever and had been landed at Para for burial.—N. Y. Advocate.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. W. L. Graves, Tunica, Miss., June 7, 1899: "We have just held a revival meeting with gratifying results at Robinsonville, Miss. The church was greatly blessed, sinners were converted, and some of them saved. Rev. O. L. Savage did the preaching, and it was well done. We have increased the membership at that place by one-third since Conference. Soon we will begin the erection of a new church there. Our League at Tunica, organized with forty-five members, since the revival meeting here in April is progressing nicely."

Rev. S. S. Holladay, P. C., Florien, La., June 2, 1899: "This work is partly mission work. It extends up and down the K. C. R. R. a distance of nearly forty miles. We have organized a good church in Leesville, and will build a church shortly. The outlook all over the work is encouraging. A great deal of the fine timber is being made into lumber. There has been a great change in this country. Within a few years a man can travel the distance now in one hour that once required a hard day's ride on horseback through the pine forest. We are moving along very well. We have collected all of the money assessed to this charge for foreign and domestic missions. We have not held any protracted meetings yet. We have received about forty members into the church, most of them by certificate. My second quarterly meeting just held. Bro. J. T. Sawyer was on hand and attended to the business of the Quarterly Conference, and preached to the satisfaction of all present. We are working and praying and expecting a revival in this section. Pray for us."

Best Edition of the World's Best Books

—THE—

"COMBINATION" BIBLE.

A SUPERB EDITION

of the Holy Scriptures showing at a glance at the foot of the pages all changes made by the revisers.

New Type. All Proper Names. Self-Pronouncing. The Most Valuable Collateral Matter.

There is a steady and increasing demand for first-class Bibles. Every body is anxious to obtain a copy of the best edition of the Holy Scriptures. Old editions are constantly being replaced by Bibles that are in every way more attractive, and there is practically no limit to the demand.

Our "Combination" Feature.

Hitherto the King James and Revised Versions have been printed in parallel columns, but this makes comparisons of texts tedious and unsatisfactory, and makes the book very unwieldy. We have overcome this difficulty by "combining" the two Versions on the same page, showing at a glance in foot-notes all the Changes, Additions and Omissions made by the Revisers.

The Old Version Printed in Full.

The King James Version is the basis, and this Version is read straight along from the text, while the Revised Version is read from the text in combination with the foot-notes. Our "Combination" Feature has met with universal approval and is strongly endorsed by all leading Divines and Biblical Scholars.

It is only by a comparison of the two Versions that the greatest benefit can be obtained from reading the Holy Scriptures, and this comparison every reader can easily make by our simple arrangment for showing the changes made by the revisers. This is the greatest triumph of Bible Publishing the World has ever known.

OUR OFFER.

To those unprogressive people who do not read and pay for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE we sell this Bible at the publisher's retail price—$4.25. To our subscribers we sell it at the very low rate of $2. The only condition attached to this offer is that the subscriber must pay his subscription one full year in advance, viz.: to June, 1900. We will send it postpaid to any person who will send us three new cash subscribers at the regular rate. For six new cash subscribers at the regular rate we will send two "Combination" Bibles, postpaid.

For fifty cents additional we will send a Bible with index.

For twenty-five cents additional we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside.

Send for circular. Address REV. W. C. BLACK.

SELF-PRONOUNCING

S. S. Teachers' Reference Bible

The self-pronouncing text enables the reader to pronounce all proper names at a glance.

This Bible is printed from Large, Beautiful and Clear New Type. All Proper Names are Divided into Syllables and Every Vowel is Marked and the Syllables Inflected, showing the Sounds and Accents as they are given in a Dictionary, thus enabling the reader to properly pronounce every word. This feature is a great improvement and a strong recommendation for this Bible over others.

This Bible contains the celebrated Oxford Teachers' Helps together with a complete series of New Maps illustrating the geography of Palestine and the surrounding countries from the earliest times, and embodying the most recent discoveries renders this Bible especially desirable to teachers and students of the Holy Scriptures.

Imperial Seal Binding, Tuck Edges, known as "Divinity Circuit," Linen Lined, Round Corners, Red under Gold Edges, Price, $4.00.

This book in Bourgeois type will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price ($3.50) to any address; but to that select class who read and pay for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE, we furnish it on the following terms: Pay your subscription one full year in advance, viz., to June, 1900, and we will send it to you, postpaid, for $1.50. (A little later you will have to pay to July, 1900.)

The same Bible in Minion type will be sent for $1.25; in Emerald type, for $1, to those who pay a full year in advance.

For fifty cents additional we will send Bible with index. For twenty-five cents additional we will have your name engraved on the outside in gilt letters.

It is a great deal easier to be up to the occasion in some shining moment of a man's life when he knows that a supreme hour has come than it is to keep that high tone when plodding over all the dreary plateaus of uneventful, monotonous travel and dull duties. Regarding the importance of the Sabbath day, Dr. Dwight remarked recently, "But for this day, earthly things would have engrossed all our thoughts, the world as a canker would rust, corrupt, and consume all disposition to piety and all hope of heaven, the soul would be benumbed, religion would die, God would be forgotten, and mankind would cease to be saved."—Exchange.

A Christian ought to be an ideal businessman—prompt, alert, straightforward, doing business as an agent and representative of his Majesty the King of the Universe. He must do nothing to degrade the dignity of the ancient and honorable firm of which he has been by grace made a partner. It isn't simply a matter of dollars and cents that is implied in business. These are important; but I believe that business, which is merely the exchange of things and the interchange of services, was instituted for the training of man in fellowship, and for the setting forth of God's will.—Selected.

PRINCIPLES AND POLITICS.

It is an encouraging sign in the political world that more and more attention is being paid to the characters of the men who run for office and who are placed in positions of public trust. The old notion that any man who has plenty of friends and a pleasing address is just the man for office is coming to be recognized as the source of much evil. The mischievous policy of voting for a man merely because he has been nominated by the party machine without regard to his special fitness and trustworthiness, is still far from being a thing of the past; but, on account of increasing defections from their ranks, the political parties are becoming careful about the habits and standing of the men they put forward. We trust the day is not far distant when it will be impossible for an immoral or unreliable man to get into any public position. That day will never come, however, until the majority of the Christian people of our land awake to the momentous importance of taking a hand in politics, and of voting only for the best men to fill State, municipal, and other offices. The purification of politics oft seems but a Utopian dream; but no matter how difficult or mighty the task appears, those who love God and their fellow-men must undertake it, nor think of slackening their efforts until success is assured. The splendid victories for reform and honest administration of affairs recently achieved in several large cities of the Union indicate that the conscience of the public is being aroused, and that the people are not going to be fooled all the time by rascally schemers. What vast evils the cities of America have suffered at the hands of boodlers and corruptionists! Alas! their reign is not yet ended, but the day of righteous government is dawning, though it is but slowly.

The average politician, though loud in his profession of fealty to principle, and in the declaration of his interest in the welfare and rights of the people, is too often deficient in morality and that rugged honesty that is worth infinitely more than eloquence or learning or leadership. When the public—especially the Christian part of it—has scruples about voting for this or that nominee because his character is not above reproach, the party managers are wont to silence all objections by calling out in stentorian tones, "Vote for principles, not men." As if, forsooth, it were possible to properly apply principles to the administration of public affairs without men of principle to carry them out. It is but a trick to deceive an unwary public. It is vain to expect men of loose morals and convictions to make exemplary legislators, unbiased administrators of justice, or faithful guardians of the public peace. Good laws and beneficent measures are but a farce, unless they are upheld by stannch and upright officers who are more anxious to carry out the will of the people than their own fancies and preferences. The proper enforcement of law will never be possible until we cease electing to office men of shadowy reputation and questionable character. We can never be sure of any kind of reform in politics and government unless we see to it that righteous men are entrusted with the administration of public affairs. The supply of sober, upright men is by no means exhausted. Then why should our citizens anywhere be guilty of the supreme folly of conferring honor and office upon those whose past is a mixture of good and evil, and whose chief recommendation is their promise of reformation?

Not a few Christians erroneously suppose they are doing their whole duty as citizens in minding their own affairs, and letting politics severely alone. This is a grievous mistake. The great reason to-day why so much political corruption exists is, that the better element of our population has, for the most part, taken no hand in political affairs, leaving them entirely to the ungodly. When such apathy or ignorance exists the people do not deserve good government. It is as much our religious duty to vote for good men, and to endeavor to have them elected, as it is to pay our debts or obey the laws of our country. While it is not always possible to keep bad men from being elected to office, we ought, by all means, to show where we stand, and by our attitude help to put a check upon any evil policy or practice they may attempt to inaugurate. Silence gives consent to not a few iniquities. The indifference that characterizes many professing Christians, as regards the duties and privileges of citizenship, is positively disgraceful.

In selecting men to uphold our laws and to administer public affairs, fitness and moral integrity should always be the prime considerations. Yet how oft in voting men are influenced far more by personal friendship, or by church or party loyalty, or by self-interest, than by regard for the abilities and incorruptibility of the candidate. The great need of our times is for citizens who would sooner cut off their right arms than cast a vote for unprincipled men. How shameful it is that Christians so frequently compromise their religion by supporting unworthy—yea, notoriously immoral—men in their race for office! May God speed the day when men shall cease to think that crookedness, intemperance and godlessness are excusable in political life!

ANENT THE ASSAULT UPON GIBBS.

A few Mississippi papers have recently exhausted their vocabulary of invective in denouncing J. T. Senter, editor of the Columbus Commercial, who first published the facts concerning the contemptible and cowardly assault upon Rev. H. P. Gibbs. Speaking of this, Rev. J. A. Bowen, pastor of our church at Columbus, writes: "I know that the facts, as stated by the Commercial, are absolutely correct, and I endorse everything this paper has said about the affair. The editor of the Commercial is a Christian gentleman, and one of my stewards, and is loyal to Christ and his church. He is defending Bro. Gibbs' cause without any pay whatever. He commands the respect and confidence of all good people in Columbus and in Lowndes county. The people of Columbus honor Bro. Senter for the defense he has made for the ministry." Bro. Bowen also adds: "I thank you for what you have said for Bro. Gibbs and his cause. You and Bro. Senter have told the truth, and we will stand by you both."

All Methodists—yea, all good people everywhere — instinctively identify themselves, at least in thought and feeling, with Bro. Gibbs' cause. For two strong men to choke and beat an invalid preacher because he has simply told the truth concerning the social and moral conditions prevailing in his parish, is not, as some newspaper scribblers would have us believe, a trivial offense. It is a crime against civilization, an outrage upon decency. We do not take to ourselves any credit for denouncing this contemptible outrage. We have only done what every good citizen must do.

LITERARY NOTES.

BY W. F. B.

The Spring number of Dr. Curry's Expression gives several interesting essays on the dramatic art. Of these are "Recent Methods of Teaching Oratory," "The Right Attitude Towards Art," and "One of Delsarte's Principles in Art."

In the Open Court, for June, Rev. Th. Thede, pastor of the Evangelical Church of Naples, writes on "Paganism in the Roman Church." Prof. L. Levy-Brubl, of Paris, continues his article on "French Philosophy at the End of the Eighteenth Century."

The Cosmopolitan Magazine, for June, contains an article by Mr. H. P. Nason, entitled, "Progress in Air-Ships," in which he describes the recent improvement of dirigable balloons. An illustrated sketch of the present condition of affairs in the Philippines, past and present, by Robt. Lawrence Packard, will be of interest.

In the June number of Ainslee's Magazine the chief of the New York Fire Department gives an account of the modern method of fighting fire. The leading stories in the number are: "A True Story of the South Seas," by Louis Becke and Walter Jeffery; "The Blue Dwarf of Belle Mer," by C. G. D. Roberts, and the Japanese sketch, "Sakuma Sukenaii."

The June Critic has an unusually attractive table of contents. Sir Walter Besant contributes an article, in which he explains his references to publishers in his book, "The Pen and the Book." The famous singer, Murel, writes on the musical drama. Tighe Hopkins tells how Sardou lives and works. A portrait and interview of Rev. C. M. Sheldon, author of "In His Steps," appears in this number.

FOR CENTENARY.

We invite the attention of Louisiana Methodists to the following appeal from Dr. Cooper. The small amount called for can be easily raised if all will help according to ability. This is a matter of great importance. Let all respond promptly.

To the Methodists of Louisiana:

Centenary College needs a larger dining-hall and other necessary improvements. It will take $1,500 or $2,000 to make the necessary improvements. Who will help us? Who will send in subscriptions ranging from $5 to $50? We are doing what we can to give Louisiana Methodists a college equal to the best. Help us at once. I. W. COOPER.

SUNDAY PAPERS IN LONDON.

Until quite recently England was without the curse of a Sunday newspaper. Then, within a few months past, the Daily Mail and the Daily Telegraph each commenced the issue of a Sunday edition. The result was a storm among the Sabbath-observing Britons. Meetings were held, and protests both private and public were made against the innovation. Lord Rosebery made an earnest appeal to the proprietors against the wrong, and the country and the churches joined with him. As a result, the Daily Mail surrendered, and announced the death of its Sunday edition as "a frank concession to the religious feeling of the public." This was a notable victory for the right, and an honorable confession of an honest man. It shows the power of public opinion when backed up by moral sentiment.

But the Sunday edition of the Telegraph still continues, and the outcome in this case is not certain. Its owners are said to be Jews, and they can not be reached on the line of reverence for the Christian Sabbath. Against them the battle will be long and hard; but the people are continuing the warfare vigorously, and hope to succeed in stopping this publication. The English understand that there is no one thing which tends so powerfully to secularize and destroy the Christian Sabbath as the Sunday newspaper, and they do not propose to submit to the evil, if they can prevent it. We in this country know how to sympathize with them, for we are now suffering from the baleful influences of this monster evil.—Pittsburg Advocate.

WILL NOT SUBSIDE.

The Briggs agitation will not down with the admission of the noted Union Seminary professor to the Episcopal priesthood. Rev. Dr. Costa, of New York City, keeps up his attacks upon "Briggism." His sermons upon the subject from time to time have a more fearless and defiant ring. He sees in the favor which it is receiving in his denomination a Unitarian leveling tendency. He said in a recent discourse, "We have reached the end of Anglicanism in this country, and men must now shift for themselves." He declares the movement for Unitarianizing the Episcopal Church "is not only real, but audacious and aggressive, offering to furnish the literature of the subject to theological students. The propaganda has long been duly meditated, and the ring-leaders boast that interference can not take place. This confidence has some apparent support. On the eve of this festival of the Holy Trinity in the public press we find an open, categorical and defiant denial of the Trinity. This open and undisguised movement in favor of Unitarianism, this bold proclamation of unbelief, is the natural consequence of the late action of the ecclesiastical authority, which, by the admission to the ministry of the leading opponent of orthodox Bible interpretation, reduced the Scripture to the rank of fallible books, without plenary inspiration, making the belief in a fallible book a sufficient ground for admission to the ministry. The open advocacy of Unitarianism was expected to follow, and it has come, confident and unblushing."

This is no lone voice crying in the wilderness. The echoes are heard in various quarters. Alarm has possessed many of the clergy and laity for their church's peace and purity. Her fundamental doctrines are being imperiled in their estimation. With latitudinarianism tolerated and sanctioned, they think the time for action has come, and propose to do something positive to stay the tide of loose teaching and practice so strongly setting in. Rev. Dr. Houghton, of New York City, last week called a meeting of Episcopal clergymen opposed to Dr. Briggs' ordination for conference. He is reported as saying "that preliminary steps had been taken at the meeting to form an organization to make war against the higher criticism. When the organization is in marching order, the public will be informed of what it intends to do, but before then it will be impossible to give any definite idea of the plans. The campaign must be conducted with military strategy."

All this looks as if the Episcopal Church was going to have its hands full of its new, but troublesome, priest. He went out from us to have rest and freedom, but has only stirred up a fresh fight and become a bone of contention in a peaceful household. It is not the man, but what he represents, that makes his coming a peril to increasing numbers of Episcopalians.—Presbyterian.

SCOLDING PREACHERS.

"Scolding preachers are as powerless as nagging women. Nothing can atone for lack of kindness in spirit and courteous deference in manner. When one's voice rises to a shriek of petulance, it is a betrayal of conscious weakness." So says Frank Crane. He is right. We never knew of a case where a preacher did any good by scolding, in the pulpit or out of it. The worst of all times to scold is at the close of a pastorate. To accompany a resignation by a bitter and sarcastic statement of the causes which led to it—whether true or not—is to destroy one's influence in that community. —The Standard (Chicago).

Booker T. Washington, in a letter to a prominent colored man in North Carolina, says: "Unconsciously we seem to have gotten the idea into our blood and bones that we are only acting in a manly way when we oppose Southern white men with our votes. In some way, by some method, we must bring the race to the point where it will cease to feel that the only way for it to succeed is to oppose everything suggested or put forth by the Southern white men. This I consider one of our real problems. I believe that there are thousands of white Democrats in North Carolina who are better friends to the negro than Governor Russell, and I see no necessity in continuing to follow Governor Russell, who has no power to protect, or if he has the power, does not exercise it, rather than these other white men who can protect us if we cease to continually and forever oppose them."—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

Within fifty-eight miles of Pittsburg, Pa., is the little town of Bolivar. The principal business is brickmaking. This is controlled by the Reese Hammond Fire Brick Company. They have had no saloons for thirty years. There are two hundred and fifty men in the employ of the company. They nearly all own their own homes. There is no poverty, no suffering, very little crime, no strife between labor and capital. The Golden Rule is lived up to by both sides. Poverty is abolished; it goes with the saloon. There would be many towns and cities like Bolivar if the press and public speakers would tell the truth about the infernal business which fills the land with sorrow and despair. — Bishop McCabe.

EPWORTH LEAGUE DEPARTMENT.

"ALL FOR CHRIST."

REV. THOMAS B. CLIFFORD, Jackson, La., EDITOR.

We have just received a programme of the fifth State Conference of Epworth Leagues in Mississippi.

It is well arranged and neatly printed, and contains good pictures of Bishops Galloway and Hendrix and Prof. Hemphill.

The Conference opens Thursday afternoon, June 22, at 3:30, with devotional exercises conducted by Rev. W. M. McIntosh, pastor of the Methodist Church at West Point.

The general topic will be "Twentieth Century Methodism"—discussed under three heads: (1) Its Spirituality, (2) Its Educational Feature, (3) Its Missionary Impulse.

Mississippi has done well in the past, but still greater things are expected of her in the future. It is hoped that at the West Point Conference a tidal wave of religious enthusiasm shall be set in motion which, rolling on and out, shall reach every heart and every home.

Judge L. H Estes, of Memphis, the well-known Epworth Leaguer and lay preacher, has been appointed to serve till Conference a circuit in the neighborhood of Memphis made vacant by the recent death of the pastor. He now presides over two circuits—being district judge, he administers the law in the one case, and as pastor preaches the gospel in the bounds of the other. We doubt if in the history of Southern Methodism there has occurred a similar incident.

During the Topisaw Camp Meeting (Miss.), to be held in August, it is expected by those in charge to arrange for a special Epworth League Day—a rally for the young Methodists. We appreciate an invitation to address the congregations upon that day, and, if no providential hindrance, we will be on hand to fill the place assigned.

Rev. Harry W. May sends tidings of the organization of an Epworth League at Amite City with twenty-one members. He reports the prospects good for a large increase in numbers and interest. We would be glad to hear from other pastors as to their present work among the Leaguers and their anticipations for the future.

We hereby acknowledge receipt of the Louisiana Chautauqua Annual, a well-printed, handsomely-illustrated pamphlet of about twenty pages. It contains programme and other information concerning the lectures, etc., to be delivered during the month of July on the Chautauqua grounds at Ruston, La. The editor of this department in the ADVOCATE very much appreciates the honor conferred upon him in placing his name upon the programme. For full information or for pamphlet address the secretary, W. K. Dunoan, Esq., Ruston, La.

The Young Men's Christian Association of Centenary College will send two young men to Asheville, N. C., to the Summer training-school. They go with the idea of getting information as to the latest methods in Bible study and hand-to-hand work among young men both in college and elsewhere. We pray that the blessings of Heaven may ever rest upon this great work among young men.

NOTICE.

The Columbus District Conference will be held at Phœba, July 4 to 7, beginning at 9 A. M., July 4.

The morning session of first day will be devoted to the cause of missions, and will close with a sermon on missions by Rev. S. M. Thames.

The afternoon of first day will be devoted to the Twentieth Century Fund, and will close with a sermon on Christian education by Rev. W. B. Murrah, D. D.

Committee for License to Preach—Revs. E. Johnson, E. S. Lewis, J. M. Barnes. For Orders—Revs. S. M. Thames, R. A. Meek, M. E. Tumlin.

I hope each pastor will see that his Quarterly Conference Record Book is brought up for examination, as the law directs.

We insist that all the lay members of the Conference be present.

IS IT MALARIA OR ALUM?

[Popular Science Monthly.]

Langnor, loss of appetite, indigestion and often feverishness are the common symptoms of a physiological condition termed "malaria." All these symptoms may be and frequently are the effect of the use of alum baking powders in food making. There is no question about the poisonous effect of alum upon the system. It obstructs digestion, prostrates the nerves, coagulates and devitalizes the blood. All this has been made clear, thanks to physicians, boards of health, and food commissions. So "highly injurious to the health of the community" does the eminent head of the University of Pennsylvania, Dr. Barker, consider the alum baking powders, that he says "their sale should be prohibited by law."

Under these circumstances it is worth the while of every housewife to employ the very little care that is necessary to keep so dangerous an element from the food of her family.

A pure cream of tartar baking powder, which is the only kind that should be used, ought to cost about forty-five to fifty cents a pound. Therefore, if you are paying much less, something is wrong; if you are paying twenty-five cents or less per pound, the powder is certainly made from alum.

Always bear these simple facts in mind when purchasing baking powder.

THANKS.

MR. EDITOR: Please allow me, through your paper, to thank the many kind friends for letters of sympathy received since my husband's death. They were not written in vain, for they have come to me in the time of sadness and loneliness as messages of comfort. The children and I beg an interest in the prayers of the ministers and Christian people.

SPANISH-AMERICAN WAR PANORAMA

is one of the war books which is likely to be in continuous demand. It is a panoramic record of the triumph of Yankee Doodle. The eagle flaps his wings on every page, and "Old Glory" waves around and above every scene. Prominent officers connected with the war are here portrayed, as well as many of the "men behind the guns." Military life is pictured to the eye, from recruiting to guard mount and skirmish line. Nor is the ludicrous omitted. The company cook receives the attention due to his importance; the mess is shown; cavalry scenes are given; the hospital arrangements are depicted; the heroines of the Red Cross service are displayed; street scenes in Havana, Santiago and elsewhere are unrolled, the new citizens or subjects (which are they?) of Uncle Sam appear and disappear as the leaves are turned.

In a word, the gazer visits the new localities and sees the tumultuous new life, without the risk or expense of a sea voyage.

The Album is 5½x8 inches, weighs 12 ounces, printed on finest coated paper.

Sent FREE to any address in the United States, Canada, or Mexico, for 12 cents in stamps or coin, to cover postage and packing. Copy may be seen at any ticket office of the Big Four Route.

OUR EXCELSIOR ART BIBLE.

In accordance with our motto, "Better and Better," we have gotten out a Bible which is superior to any hitherto offered. Besides the Holman self-pronouncing feature and all the Oxford Helps, it has the Combination feature, i. e., the revised version in foot notes, and also contains a number of magnificent illustrations, sixty-four New and Beautiful Full-page Phototype Engravings.

These Magnificent Illustrations represent the most important Scenes and Events in the Sacred Scriptures, and are the work of eminent artists. A large number of prominent Clergymen and Religious Journals have endorsed our Combination Edition of the Holy Scriptures and have given it strong recommendations.

In mechanical workmanship, printing and binding, these Bibles are superb, while at the same time our prices are very low.

No subjects are so well adapted for Illustration by Superb Works of Art as the Grand Scenes and Events described in the Holy Bible. And no other subjects have so occupied the Thought and Genius of the World's Greatest Artists.

The reader has all the most Important Scenes and Events of the Sacred Scriptures placed before him, and is delighted with the Artistic Beauty of these Unrivalled Engravings.

THE PRICE.

This magnificent Bible is catalogued by large Northern publishers at $6. We sell it to our subscribers for $3 on condition that they pay up all arrearages and pay their subscription a full year in advance.

OUR $1 OFFER.

Much has been said about reducing the subscription price of the ADVOCATE. The only way in which a reduction can be brought about is by an increase in the number of subscribers. In order to facilitate this result, we make the following offer: Until further notice we will take new subscriptions at the rate of $1 for eight months. When seven thousand five hundred new names have been sent in at this rate with the cash, we will extend the time four months longer, thus reducing the price to $1 per annum. When the extension is made, old subscribers will get the benefit as well as new ones, provided they first pay up all arrearages. Of course, no commissions can be given under this offer. Address

SOCRATES died from a cup of poison administered by the hand of a friend. How many in this land have died by poisonous remedies given by friendly hands to combat diseases? It is quite a comfort to know that when giving DICKS' CHILLIFUGE there is not a drop of poison in a bottle full of this beneficent remedy.

IF MOTHER KNEW.

BY CHARLOTTE PERKINS STETSON.

If mother knew the way I feel—
And I'm sure a mother should—
She wouldn't make it quite so hard
For a person to be good.

I want to do the thing she says,
I try to all along—
And she just never counts the right,
But pounces on the wrong!

A dozen times I do a thing,
And one time I forget;
And then she'll look at me and ask
If I can't remember yet!

Then she'll tell me to do something
And I'll really start to go,
And she keeps right on telling it
As if I didn't know.

'Till it seems as if I couldn't!
It makes me kind of wild!
And then she says she "never saw
Such a disobliging child!"

I go to bed all sorry,
And say my prayers and cry.
And mean next day to be so good
I just can't wait to try.

And I begin next morning
And try to do just right;
But mother's sure to scold me
About something before night.

I wonder if she ever thought
A child could go so far
As to be perfect all the time
As the grown-up people are!

If she only knew I tried to—
And I'm sure a mother should—
She wouldn't make it quite so hard
For a person to be good.

WHAT A GOVERNOR SAYS TO BOYS.

Governor Mount, of Indiana, has written some suggestions to boys which are wise and well put. We quote the "five fundamental principles" which, he declares, are essential to success, and lie at the foundation of good citizenship:

Discipline.—Obedience to constituted authority, self-control, discipline of the will, of the tastes, the passions, the aspirations, the habits. "He that ruleth his spirit is greater than he that taketh a city."

Love of home and country.—I never knew a boy who loved his home, his parents, his brothers and sisters, and to whom it was a joy and pleasure to respect and obey his parents, who ever brought grief to his home or dishonor to his family. Through the tempting and dangerous environments of war, and the multiplied conditions since, I have found it a pleasure steadfastly to keep the boyhood promise I made my mother never to use tobacco or intoxicants. From a life of experience I can most earnestly commend the wisdom of making and keeping such promises. The love of country is interwoven with the love of home. The love of home makes stronger the love for the government which protects the home.

Habits of industry.—I would prefer that my child be reared in the most unpretentious cottage, and trained to habits of industry and economy, than to be brought up in a stately mansion, surrounded by the enervating influences of wealth, ease and idleness. "An idle mind is the devil's workshop."

Principles of temperance.—If greater energy were expended in teaching the principles of temperance to the youth in the schools and in the home, there would be less demand for temperance laws and fewer victims to the drink habit. The increased consumption of tobacco, and the widespread indulgence and the evil effects of cigarette-smoking, are assuming alarming proportions.

A purpose in life.—I would impress upon the mind of every youth the motto of Longfellow: "I am determined to be intensely something;" or that of Emerson: "Hitch your wagon to a star." Intensity of purpose, a resolute determination, with indomitable will-power, coupled with the foregoing principles, are the essential factors which will win in the battle of life.—Selected.

NEATNESS.

I wonder whether the mother, when training her boy with a helpful, useful manhood in view, ever thinks of the possible and very probable wife whom her son some day may have.

As the mother sows so will the wife reap. Inculcate, if possible, habits of neatness; do not allow him when he comes into the house to throw his coat upon one chair, his hat upon another. It may be easy for you to pick up after him, but maybe in the years to come it will be less easy for the young wife, and "just as the twig is bent the tree's inclined."

I know a young wife who takes great pride in doing the work of her little home, but whose duties are doubled by a careless, untidy husband—muddy rubbers worn into the house, collars and ties thrown upon the sideboard, overcoat dropped upon the first convenient chair or couch. When his wife asks him to be more careful, he says, laughingly and thoughtlessly: "Mother always picked up after me; why can't you?" It is selfish in a man, but the real fault goes further back; for, as he says, "Mother always picked up after me;" and, as the old saying is, "It's hard to teach an old dog new tricks."

If that mother had been more mindful of her duty toward the boy whose early training had been intrusted to her, if she had been less thoughtless of the grave responsibility resting upon her, he would have been a different man. He would have grown up with a love for order and tidiness; he would have been more thoughtful and considerate, and throughout his life he would have conducted himself in a manner to cause the least possible trouble to others.

Teach your son to be thoughtful and tender toward yourself as well as others; teach him to respect and reverence womankind, knowing that these seeds sown in his heart will grow and bear good fruit years hence.

IN THE HEREAFTER.

Whatever mystery there may be concerning the life which believers in Christ shall live in heaven, we may be sure, at least, that they will carry with them all that is true and divine of their earthly life. The character formed here, they will retain through death. The capacity they have gained by the use of their powers, they will have for the beginning of their activity in the new life.

So heaven will be a far more natural place than we imagine it will be. It will not be greatly unlike the ideal life of earth. We probably shall be surprised when we meet one another to find how little we have changed. The old tenderness will not be missing. We shall recognize our friends by some little gentle ways they used to have here, or by some familiar thoughtfulness which was never wanting in them. The friendships we began here and had not time to cultivate, we shall have opportunity there to renew and carry on through immortal years.

Even at the best, human friendships only begin in this life; in heaven they will reach their best and holiest possibilities. There are lives which only touch each other in this world, and then separate, going their different ways, like ships which pass in the night. There will be time enough in heaven for any such faintest beginnings of friendship to be wrought out in beauty.—Selected.

THE VALUE OF STORIES.

A gentleman who acted as private secretary and amanuensis for Prescott, the historian, gives some extremely interesting particulars in relation to the daily habits of that remarkable man. He was as regular in his movements as clockwork, and among his invariable habits was that of listening every day of his life, for the space of an hour, to some story or tale read to him by his wife or his secretary. He needed this kind of mental refreshment as a relief from his grave study of the matter-of-fact histories in which he worked, as much as he needed sleep or exercise in the open air.

And what he required every mind requires. Stories, therefore, are as necessary to the preservation and improvement of the human intellect as any other kind of literary exercise. It is only the thoughtless and unphilosophical who speak of stories with contempt. They are to the sober realities of earth what flowers are in the vegetable world. Roses and violets are as important in the economy of the universe as are oaks and cedars. The story-writer, therefore, is not to be held in less esteem than the author of ponderous volumes of history or dissertations on philosophy and political economy. Each has his sphere, and is entitled to respect according to the degree of ability with which he fulfills the duty which his talents qualify him to discharge.—New York Ledger.

Oliver Wendell Holmes was so eminent in literature that we almost forget that he was an M. D., but he had decided opinions as to the proper care of the body, as the following instance will show. On being asked if a young man desiring to attain success in life should smoke, he answered: "Certainly not. It is liable to injure the sight, to render the nerves unsteady, to enfeeble the will and to enslave the nature to an imperious habit likely to stand in the way of duty to be performed."—Exchange.

Kind words do not cost much. They never blister the tongue or lips. We never have heard of any mental trouble arising from this quarter. Though they do not cost much, yet they accomplish much. They make other people good-natured. They also produce their own image on men's souls, and a beautiful image it is. We have not yet begun to use kind words in such abundance as they ought to be used.—Pascal.

The Christian's heart, like the house, is not completely garnished until all dust of the world is thoroughly removed from every remote corner and all cobwebs of doubt swept from its walls. Only the candle of the Lord can light up and discover these to the view.—Exchange.

LIKE A THIEF IN THE NIGHT,

Malaria creeps into the system and leaves a poison which saps its vitality until the well-known symptoms of CHILLS AND FEVER, INTERMITTENT FEVER, CONGESTION, BLOODY URINE, etc., will show their snake-like heads. Fortunately there is an antidote in DICKS' CHILLIFUGE, which absolutely exterminates Malaria in a few hours; so pleasant to the taste that children love to take it. It banishes fevers like mist before the morning sun; brings as a gift rose cheeks, health, happiness, and makes life worth the living.

WEARING RUBBERS.

Here's the first law of health—keep your feet dry. We all know it. We all know that pneumonia and consumption always start with a cold, and that the shortest cut to a cold is a pair of wet feet. But it's so important a matter that we can't be reminded too often, especially when the reminder carries the weight of authority.

Dr. Wendell C. Phillips, one of the most distinguished physicians in New York, was recently giving a lecture on "Colds, and How to Prevent Them." It was a rainy night, and he began:

"Not half of you. Now, that is what I thought. Every one of you should have rubbers on a night like this. To go without them is to invite colds, bronchial trouble, catarrh and pneumonia. It is astonishing how people neglect their feet. Rubbers are fifty cents. You can save a lot of money on the investment—perhaps a ten days' doctor's bill, to say nothing of medicine."

The doctor might have made it still stronger and said that a fifty-cent pair of rubbers would not only save doctor's bills and medicine bills, but often life itself. Don't try to save on rubbers. It's the most expensive economy in the world, especially just now when everybody is getting the grip.—Congregationalist.

NEED OF SLEEP.

A physician who is a specialist in nervous diseases says that women should sleep at least nine hours at night and one hour in the day time. A woman will plead that she hasn't time to lie down for a few minutes in the day time; and she will infringe upon the hours of night, which should be given to sound, healthy, needed sleep, in order to finish some piece of work which could as well be completed on the morrow. She will rush and hurry all day long, and then, when the household is hushed in slumber at night, she will sit to read the daily paper, thinking she will not have to pay for the time she is stealing from the health-giving sleep that comes before midnight.—New England Farmer.

AT REST.

BY ALMA FULTON.

(In memory of my father, Rev. Isaac Fulton, who died Aug. 19, 1897.)

At rest! The tronhlons voyage ended,
The weary day's work done;
Around the throne thy voice is blended
With the praises of His own.
At rest within thy Father's home;
No more with slow, uncertain steps
Through life's dark wilderness to roam;
At rest, by thine own Father kept.

Not dead! Ah, no; but gone before
To live in that blest land
Where sin and sorrow come no more;
Near the great white throne to stand,
Near to the Master whom he served,
With steadiest patience still,
With loving faith that never swerved,
Anxious to do His will.

With earthly eyes no more we'll see thee;
But, father dear, thy memory lives;
And through its infinence we are near thee,
This precious boon our Lord doth gives,
And when our service here is over,
And on God's mercy we must wait,
We'll meet again to part, no, never,
Amid the angels at the gate.

BARROW—Sister S. A. BARROW was born in Columbus, Ga., on the sixteenth of September, 1828, and died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. John Kline, in Warren county, Miss., on the thirtieth of March, 1899. She was married in 1845 to Mr. J. W. Barrow in her native home, after which she came to Mississippi, and spent the remainder of her long and useful life. She was converted and united with the Methodist Church in the thirteenth year of her life under the pastorate of Dr. Geo. F. Pierce, who was afterward made Bishop, having consecrated the morning of her life to the service of the Master.

Sister Barrow was always a bright and cheerful Christian, and her seat was never vacant at the house of God when circumstances were admissible. Having devoted the morning, noon and evening of her life to useful work in the church of God, it was but natural that her Christian pathway, "like that of the just, should shine more and more" until God said, "It is enough; come up higher."

I talked and prayed with her during her last illness, and never knew one who was more submissive to the divine will. She talked of death like a Christian philosopher, and as a prelude to endless joys. In her case death was divested of all fear, and she longed to be at rest. May her Christian mantle fall upon the shoulders of her surviving daughter! Farewell, dear friend, but not forever. We shall meet again in that bright, sun-clad clime, where the pure and the good are its only inhabitants. W. W. HURST.

Vicksburg, Miss.

REYNOLDS—Sister NANCY REYNOLDS (nee McCommack) departed this life April 23, 1899, and passed triumphantly into the presence of the God she loved. She was born in Jasper county, Miss., May 9, 1814; moved to this State in 1849; married G. P. Reynolds, Jan. 13, 1852. She leaves seven children to mourn her loss.

Sister Reynolds was converted and joined the church at an early age. She was a member of the Methodist Church over half a century; true to her vows and loyal to her church to the last.

It is a great benediction to meet such devout souls as Sister Reynolds possessed. Through much sorrow and tribulation she had grown into the beauty of a true saint, and the aroma of her mellowed life cast its fragrance wherever she went. All loved, honored, and respected her. Her professions were modest, her life was holy. Many care-worn itinerants have pillowed their weary heads upon downy pillows that her consecrated hands prepared. We weep that she has gone. We miss her in the church and community; she is missed in her home. We rejoice that she lived, that her influence remains, that she rests from her labors. May the God of all grace comfort the bereft hearts of her sorrowing loved ones! We will meet again

"On the happy golden shore,
Where the faithful part no more,
Where the storms of life are o'er."

Downsville, La. HER PASTOR.

TAYLOR—Mr. JAMES T. TAYLOR was born in Georgia (if I mistake not), April 14, 1818. His first marriage was to Miss Sarah Carpenter, Sept. 24, 1838, by whom he had five children. He moved to Upshur county, Texas, in 1859. His first wife having died, he was married to Miss Mary Emiline Smith. He moved to Louisiana and settled on the Atchafalaya river, where he has lived most of the time since. He had been an acceptable member of the M. E. Church, South, up to the time of his death. He had one time a pretty property on the river, but reverses befell him and left him in very destitute circumstances. Notwithstanding this, he held his integrity and died esteemed by his old friends. I met him some time before his last illness, and found him in communion with God and assured of his acceptance. He died in the faith Oct. 30, 1898.

COX—Mrs. MARY A. COX was born in Jasper county, Ga., May 4, 1825, and died at Coalville Church, near Wood Market, Miss., Feb. 20, 1899. She was the daughter of William and Rebecca Clark; married Sampson Cox, Sept. 3, 1841, in Muscova county, Ga.; was converted and joined the M. E. Church at the age of thirteen years, and lived a Christian the rest of her life.

Sister Cox was noted for her piety. She was never heard to complain when clouds of sorrow o'ershadowed her pathway. Beautiful virtues crowned her sweet, pure life. Kindness and love for others were bright jewels adorning her life, and words fitly spoken like apples of gold in pictures of silver. A good mother, ever faithful to God. She succeeded in raising up her children for God. Her beautiful, sweet life impressed not only her own children, but her neighbors' children. Truly a mother in Israel has fallen. We miss her in our homes and churches. To her loved ones we would say: Be faithful. Your mother is in heaven waiting to welcome you. Her hands reach out in tenderest love. Oh, those beautiful, beautiful hands! You shall clasp them again once more, your mother's own beautiful hands. GEO. W. HUFF, P. C.

PECK—On Friday, April 28, 1899, just before 3 P. M., the spirit of our dear Sister PECK, the wife of Dr. Peck, of Rose Hill, took its flight to an unknown world to us.

Sister Peck was about fifty years of age when called by her Lord to enter the door of the invisible world. She spent the larger portion of her life in teaching school. She was happily married to Dr. Peck about one year ago. She had been a faithful member of the M. E. Church for many years. To know Sister Peck was to love her. In her death our community has lost a true friend and counselor, her pastor and family a loyal and devoted sister, her husband and his children a loving and tender wife and mother. She has only left us but a few brief years. We, together with her husband, who is very sick himself, will soon join her in the beautiful beyond. She bore her long and painful illness with patience and fortitude, despite the zealous and faithful efforts of her medical attendants, and loving care of the family and many friends, who were ever ready with willing hand to attend to her every want.

May He who holds the power of life and death in His hands help those that are bereaved to be resigned to His will!

SHERRARD—Miss S. MARCHMONT SHERRARD, of Ruston, La., died at the residence of Mr. J. D. Talley, Austin, Texas, May 3, 1899, and her remains were shipped to her home. She was a lovely girl, about twenty-three years old. She had been in Austin only three months, but in that short time she made a great many friends by her gentle, amiable manners and unassuming, charitable disposition. She was a member of the Methodist Church, and a Christian in the highest and best sense of the word—Christ-like. Those of us who were most intimately associated with her learned to love her dearly. She was sick nearly two weeks, and during that time she had the best attention possible. Mr. and Mrs. Talley did everything in their power for her, and many other friends assisted in every way possible. Our hearts bleed for her bereaved parents, sisters and loved ones, who did not even have the sad consolation to minister to her in her last hours; but they know that their darling is in heaven, and if they are faithful to God, as she was, they will see her again where there is no more sorrow and where death never comes.

CALHOUN—Died at the family home, near Jonesville, La., on Sunday, May 14, 1899, at twenty-four minutes past six o'clock P. M., Mrs. MARY J. CALHOUN, wife of Dr. D. P. Calhoun.

Mrs. Calhoun was a member of the Christian Church, and died giving every assurance that she was prepared and willing to go. Her death marks another triumph for the religion of Jesus Christ. She leaves one daughter, Miss Emma Oswalt.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and, therefore, requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

JOB EARNED HIS TITLE BY GREAT SUFFERING. Had he flourished in these days, his recourse for consolation would not have been the company of three nagging friends, but a bottle of DICKS' MUL-EN-OL, which has a wonderful power to dissipate the inflammation, cool the feverishness, and completely cure boils and carbuncles.

NAPOLEON LOST THE BATTLE OF LEIPSIC because of a fit of indigestion. One dose of DICKS' MUL-EN-OL would have given him instant relief, and the fate of the kingdoms of Europe been decided differently. It is really marvelous how quickly a colicky pain will vanish when a teaspoonful of Mul-en-ol in a wineglass of hot water is taken. Try it; you will never suffer from colic.

28th ANNUAL CAMP MEETING

Seashore Camp Grounds.

WILL OPEN (D. V.) ON WEDNESDAY, JULY 12, NEXT, AND CONTINUE FOR 8 OR 10 DAYS.

The Grounds are opened April 1, and closed Nov. 1, for occupying cottages and reception of visitors. Modern and ample accommodation have been provided for the multitudes that annually visit this refreshing and delightfully cool and bracing place of rest, free from malaria and contagious diseases.

The sea bathing is unsurpassed by any resort on the Mississippi Sound, while the supply of pure, sparkling drinking water is furnished by one of the finest of artesian wells, whose waters possess rare virtues.

The exhilarating sea breezes refresh the fatigued, and act as a tonic to the debilitated visitors from our smoke-enveloped and dust-stilling cities and towns. Boats for sailing and fishing always on hand. The drives along the seashore present magnificent views, and are over ten miles in length. Visitors are not expected to arrive or depart on the Sabbath day.

The L. and N. R. R. Company will place on sale the reduced rate of fare during the season, from all points on their lines, and secure a corresponding rate from all connecting lines. Tickets will be placed on sale July 5 to 22, inclusive, and be good to return on until Aug. 31. Two daily mail trains step at the camp grounds, besides the accommodation and excursion trains, during the entire Summer season. A fine hotel, with a frontage of 75 feet, equipped with electric lights and all modern conveniences, has been erected.

All itinerant preachers of the Southern Methodist Church will be admitted into the grounds and provided with lodging accommodations in Wesley Hall free of charge.

The usual entrance fee will be in force this season. No charge will be exacted for entrance on the Sunday of the camp meeting. A cordial invitation is extended to all who desire to attend the camp meeting and spend a while on the camp ground.

Persons wishing to secure accommodations before and during camp meeting, or rent cottages for the season, will please communicate with W. L. Via, superintendent Camp Ground (Biloxi, P. O. 42, Miss.) or any of the following officers:

J. A. WOODVILLE, President, New Orleans, La.
J. B. LEFTWICH, Vice-President, Mobile, Ala.
W. B. THOMSON, Treasurer, New Orleans, La.

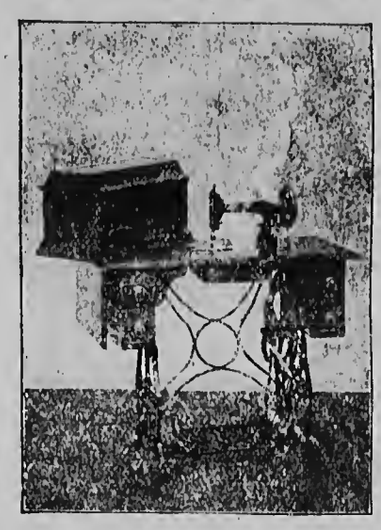
New Machine Offer.

By Far the Best We Have Ever Made.

Always on the watch for something good for our subscribers, we have succeeded in making arrangements whereby we can make a sewing machine offer which is far better than any we have been able hitherto to make. Read the following description and then read our offer:

No. 4 IMPERIAL.



THE IMPERIAL HIGH ARM SINGER will be found the perfection of mechanism as regards simplicity, durability and adaptability to the wide range of work embraced in the general family needs.

A Handsome, Light-Running, Lock-Stitch, High Arm Machine that will not fail to please the most fastidious. Embracing all the advantages with all desirable improvements of other first-class sewing machines, so simple in mechanism that the most inexperienced need no assistance in operating it. Book of instructions with every machine. Any child can learn to run it.

Extra Set of Attachments also free with each machine, consisting of the following: One Tucker, One Foot Ruffler, One Set of Plate Hemmers, four different widths up to ¾ of an inch, One Binder and One Thread Cutter.

No. 3 Machine, drop leaf table, gothic cover, case of two drawers at one end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $24. Our price, $14.75.

No. 4 Machine, drop leaf table, gothic cover, case of two drawers at each end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $25. Our price, $15.50.

No. 5 Machine, drop leaf table, gothic cover, case of three drawers at each end, making seven drawers in all. Dealer's price, $26. Our price, $16.25.

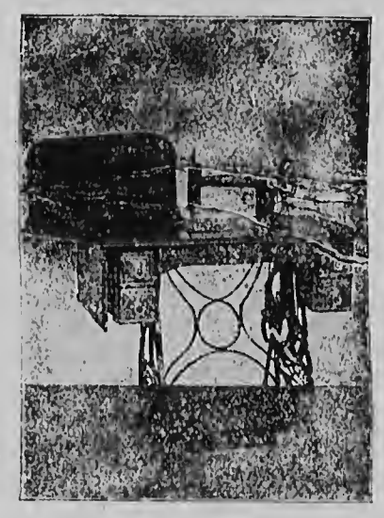
No. 4 Columbian.



EXCELLENCE OF THE COLUMBIAN.—All wearing parts are of case hardened steel possessing great durability, and by the turning of a screw all lost motion caused by wear can be taken up. All parts are fitted so accurately that the machines are absolutely noiseless, and as easy running as fine adjustment and best mechanical skill is possible to produce. No expense or time is spared to make them perfect in every respect, as every machine passes a rigid inspection by competent men before leaving the factory.

NICKEL PLATED.—The balance wheel and many of the due parts are nickel plated, with other parts finely enameled and ornamented, giving it a rich appearance.

A Self Setting Needle and Self Threading Cylinder Shuttle are used in the Columbian High-Arm Sewing Machine. They are so simple that any one can easily operate them in a few minutes' time, as our Instruction Book is fully illustrated, showing how to do all kinds of fancy work with attachments.

Extra Attachments, in velvet-lined case, sent free with each machine: 1 Tucker, 1 Ruffler with skirring plate, 1 Hemmer set (4 widths) and Binder, 1 Braider (Foot and Slide), 1 Thread Cutter.

ADDITIONAL ACCESSORIES.—Each machine is supplied with the following outfit: 1 Hemmer and Feller (one piece), 10 Needles, 6 Bobbins, 1 Wrench, 1 Screw Driver, Oil Can with Oil, Cloth Gauge and Thumb Screw, and a Book of Instructions. The Book of Instructions is profusely illustrated, and answers the purpose of a competent teacher.

No. 3—Drop leaf, Bent cover, case of two drawers at one end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $29. Our price, $17.

No. 4—Drop leaf table, Bent cover, case of two drawers at each end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $31. Our price, $17.75.

No. 5—Drop leaf table, Bent cover, case of three drawers at each end and center drawer, making a seven-drawer machine. Dealer's price, $33. Our price, $18.50.

The chief difference between Numbers 3, 4, and 5 is in the furniture, i. e., in the number of drawers. If you do not want to pay for the extra drawers, you need not do so. We sell these machines under a ten years' guarantee, by which we mean that if any part gives out by reason of any defect therein, the manufacturer will replace the same free of charge. Moreover, we allow the purchaser to test the machine ten days. If at the end of ten days you are not satisfied, you have only to drop us a postal card, and your money will be refunded.

OUR OFFER.

We will send any one of the above-described machines at the prices named, and also send the ADVOCATE free for six months. The only condition attached to this offer is that subscribers who are in arrears must first pay up all arrearages to date. It would be well to avail yourself of this offer at once, as we can not promise that it will last very long. Notice that you take no risk whatever. We do all the risking. Address

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

A tornado at Salix, Ia., killed three persons and wounded several others.

The exodus of Uitlanders from Johannisburg has begun, and business is at a standstill.

Henry Walters, of Baltimore, has given $15,000 to that city to provide two public bath-houses.

It is not believed that German opposition to the arbitration scheme of the Peace Conference will be so serious as to defeat it.

Rev. Dr. Wm. McF. Alexander, the new pastor of the Prytania Street Presbyterian Church, this city, preached his first sermon Sunday morning.

The American troops have completely occupied the province of Cavite, having driven the Filipinos out after the hardest work the Americans have had. The important towns of Parnaque and Las Pinas were seized.

An organized effort has been inaugurated in Washington to have the Republican party take a stand in the next presidential campaign against the civil service law as at present framed and administered.

After a quiet Sunday, on which no attempt was made to run cars, the struggle between the Cleveland Electric Railroad Company (Big Consolidated) and its striking employees was resumed in lively fashion on Monday.

The United States cruiser "Olympia," with Admiral Dewey on board, arrived at Singapore, on June 11, from Hong Kong. Admiral Dewey's health continues to improve. The "Olympia" will probably leave Singapore, June 16.

Immigration this year is extraordinarily large. Already, from July 1, 1898, to May 23, 1899, 207,036 emigrants have passed through the channels of the immigration bureau. The arrivals for the preceding year were 178,748, for the year preceding that 180,556.

An ordinance containing the provisions necessary to put into effect the tax for sewerage and drainage, and the issue of bonds, was drawn up on Saturday, and will be discussed at a conference before being submitted to the Council.

Admiral Sobley has been flooded with requests from conductors of magazines for articles giving his experiences in the war. He has made up his mind not to write a line for publiontion, his idea being that officers who assist in making history should not write any of it.

The American Line steamer "Paris," which ran on the rocks off the Manacles, May 21, is now known to be doomed. A southeast wind is blowing, bringing in heavy seas, which are driving the steamer astern landwards. Her boilers have shifted, her false bottoms are gone, and the divers are unable to work.

The municipality of Havana has presented to General Maximo Gomez a certificate naming him as an adopted son of the city. In a short letter, which appeared, he thanks the governors for the honor conferred, and says that nothing could touch him more than this illustration of the friendship of the people of Cuba, who can always depend upon his loyalty.

In view of the possibility that the residence at Beauvoir may pass out of the hands of the family, Mrs. Jefferson Davis has been packing the movable effects for transportation, and all that is of historic interest connected with the life of President Jefferson Davis has been placed in Confederate Memorial Hall, in this city, under the care of the associated Confederate veteran bodies.

There is now every indication that the predictions that the Peace Conference now sitting at The Hague will adjourn without having accomplished anything important will be verified. Although there was at the onset a great show of harmony and desire to agree upon abstract propositions, the threshing out of the details has developed that there exists but little harmony on any one point.

The very active campaign which is being waged against trusts and combinations all over the country is beginning to produce satisfactory results. It is true that the great trusts have not been destroyed, nor even materially crippled; but it is equally true that their stocks and securities have depreciated in value, and the smaller combinations have met with serious difficulties in their financial transactions.

The War Department has disposed of the question of the artillery captured at Porto Rico and Cuba by turning the whole matter over to the governors of the States. The law under which these guns can be distributed provides that they may go only to the soldiers' monument associations, Grand Army posts and municipal corporations. One gun will be allotted to each State, and the governor is asked to decide what disposition shall be made of the gun for his State.

The failure of the conference between President Kruger, of the South African republic, known as the Transvaal, and Sir Alfred Milner, the British High Commissioner, held a few days ago at Bloemfontein, capital of the Orange Free State, has created a very grave feeling in Europe. Utterances in the British Parliament and expressions by the English press indicate that the British Government will now send an ultimatum to President Kruger, and, should that fail to bring about an improvement in the situation, force will be resorted to. According to the advices received, President Kruger was firm in his refusal to allow any of the more important concessions demanded by the British High Commissioner.

BRO. MELLEN'S ATTACK.

It is a fact that some men, when they undertake to reply to an argument, attack the author of the argument rather than the argument itself; but that a Christian minister should do it amazes me. Bro. Mellen alludes to my article on "Farming Out Our Colleges," but does not offer a single argument in favor of the old policy there condemned, nor anything against the growing idea of concentration which I plead for, but, instead, he rails at "over-zealous brethren," and speaks of "the repeated assaults, direct and indirect, on East Mississippi Female College," and gives expression to this piece of bitter unkindness: "How hard it is for human nature to forgive another who has succeeded where one's own self had failed." This means that I have criticised the management of East Mississippi Female College because I am envious of President Beeson because he has succeeded where I failed. No Christian man that I know of ever before charged me with such demoniac meanness. I never saw an hour in all my life when I felt anything akin to that with which my Bro. Mellen charges me, and never in my life—before I professed religion or since—have I felt that I could make the charge against any man. How can Bro. Mellen do it? Bro. Mellen professes the second blessing, and I do not. Maybe that is why I can not understand how it is that he can do it. "Judge not," said our Lord. "Love thinketh no evil," said Paul. Does the second blessing warrant one in thus setting aside the moral code of the New Testament? I do not understand it; I wait an explanation.

Bro. Mellen hints that I failed in college work. I never heard that before. I gave ten years of my life to college work, and I look upon them as the most successful years of my life. Many of my brethren have thus spoken of them; never before have I heard that anybody considered them otherwise. Is Bro. Mellen right and the rest of us altogether wrong? Was my work at Kavanaugh and Edward McGehee a failure? That is news to me, and somehow I can not believe it.

I am not hasty in concluding that Bro. Mellen's unkind words are intended for me. He says: "Recent publications are . . . making some people think how hard it is," etc. Now, no "recent publications" on the subject have appeared save what Miss Addie V. Marshall and I have written. President Chambers has written nothing recently, nor has he inspired or suggested anything that I have written, and Miss Addie has never tried to run a college, and could not be said to have failed; so it must be I whom he attacks.

In December, 1897, there appeared in the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE an article from my pen on, "We Must Have an Endowed College for Our Girls." In this article, as in my last, I pleaded for a better policy of female education, showing how the present unwise and unrighteous policy resulted in sham education. Nobody ever dared to controvert my statements. College presidents and others familiar with that line of work declared that all I said was true. I personated no college, but gathered instances from Whitworth, Edward McGehee and East Mississippi Female Colleges. My article was declared to be "an attack upon East Mississippi. Neither Bro. Chambers, nor Miss Swanson, nor Miss Park found ground for complaint. If it was an attack on East Mississippi, it was solely because she was the most vulnerable. "Let the galled jade wince," said Shakespeare. "The hit dog always hollers," says Sam Jones. These homely aphorisms touch the case. I simply stated facts which nobody disputed, but the cry is raised, "You have attacked East Mississippi Female College." I did not say so; I drew the picture, and special champions of East Mississippi labelled it.

Then I discovered later that there were certain very objectionable features in the management of that college, and I asked an investigation by the Conference Board of Education. The investigation was had, and I discovered that the impression was being made by somebody that I had personal grievances that impelled me to the demand. Nothing was farther from the truth. A member of the Board of Education came to me after the investigation and wanted to know if the affair between President Beeson and myself could not be adjusted. I replied that there was no affair between us; I had no grievance whatever; I was simply calling the attention of the church to things that ought to be reformed. It is true that President Beeson had refused to permit me to hold service once per week for the girls in the college, but I did not think the refusal was because of any personal objections to me other than the fact that I did not accept his second-blessing theory; and I had observed that no one save an out spoken second-blessing advocate was allowed the privilege that was denied to me. I had observed also that he permitted no one save positive second-blessing teachers to, even for one Sunday, teach his boarding pupils in the Sunday-school; and that, save in the revival I held early in 1897, his boarders attended no revival services save those held by second-blessing evangelists; hence I did not take his refusal, although it seemed so curt, as an affront to me, but rather to the church which I represented. I presumed that he was afraid I might neutralize the second-blessing teachings of others. I could imagine no other reason for refusing me. The article of December, '97, had not then been written, and the only contention I had ever had with him was a kind protest made, I think, in May, '97, against his permitting the second blessing taught and stressed in the college. While I deprecated his policy most earnestly and honestly, yet I respected his opinions, and did not question his motives, and I took no act or word of his as a personal affront to me. I did not find anything personal in it, nor do I yet, although my motives have been cruelly impugned and I have been grossly misrepresented.

Bro. Mellen speaks of "repeated assaults, direct and indirect, on East Mississippi Female College." He thus characterizes my protests and demands for reform. I found, as I thought, more effort to get proselytes to the second-blessing theory than to make loyal Methodists of the girls. I saw girls almost forced by the peculiar magnetic methods of persuasion and cross-questioning used by certain evangelists to accept the second blessing. I saw them marched past the Methodist Church, time and again, to second-blessing services down in a mission hall on a lower street, and that, too, when services were being held in the church. I saw these things, and I protested, and my protest is called an "assault," and I am told that it is because I envy President Beeson in his success. I saw a series of commencement exercises in this Methodist (?) college, that has been advertised as "the most religious," in which whole series, even including the graduation of a class, not one word of prayer was offered. No occasion was either opened or closed with prayer or benediction. I saw this, and I protested, and my protest is called an "assault."

I found the catalogue claiming for the college a high grade, where almost all of the higher studies were marked "elective," and were not elected; and I saw girls presented for graduation who had not completed algebra. I saw all this, and I protested, and my protest is set down as an "assault," and I am charged with the meanest envy that ever burned in human heart.

I found no Epworth League in the college, and the missionary society, which had stood so long and had done such excellent work, was disbanded by the president; and I, believing that these should be in every Methodist college, protested; and I protested again that so few of the teachers in the college were Methodists, but all my protests are classed as "assaults."

If I have had any motive other than a desire to remedy evils, I have not been conscious of it. I stand ready to show cause for every criticism passed, and prove ground for every protest. Neither the Board of Education, nor any other disinterested party, has ever denied the justness of my criticisms, nor the reality of the grounds of my protests. All the answer I hear is an attack on me, charging me with "repeated assaults on East Mississippi Female College" and envy of President Beeson, etc. Does my Bro. Mellen mean what he says? Surely he does not. He has not weighed his words; he is too good a man. I can not believe that he means it, but he said it. Ah, me!

The force of my criticism has been weakened in some quarters by making it appear that I had personal dislikes, grudges, or grievances—all of which allegations are utterly false. Now, I have, in obedience to a high sense of duty, begun an agitation looking to the abandonment of the unrighteous old system of farming out our colleges for girls, and the endowment of our largest, best-located college, and the centralizing of our educational efforts thereon, and I shall not be diverted from my purpose and my work by any impugning of my motives that any fertile imagination can hatch. No sort of mud throwing will drive me from this field.

I have outlined no policy that means anything akin to "a la Randolph-Macon and the Virginia schools;" nor have I suggested who its president should be. I am "grinding no axes," either for myself or any other man, but I am pleading for better education for our girls, better work for workers, and more sensible economy for our Conference as the patron of higher education. Why can not Bro. Mellen leave all personalities and address himself to this argument? Why must Christian men imagine that every brother who advocates some policy contrary to their way of thinking must have some low, mean motive behind his advocacy? In the name of our blessed religion, why?

Why should we continue any longer the ruinous farming-out policy? If Bro. Mellen has any arguments to offer in favor of this system condemned by our best educators and outlawed by the General Conference, let him present them. We wait to hear them. Temporary seeming success of an individual college thus farmed out is no argument. "All is not gold that glitters." It may be that "things are not as they seem," and nothing in the system secures anything akin to permanency.

Bro. Mellen speaks of East Mississippi Female College as "the most successful and liberally patronized school for girls in our Conference," and he half sneers at Whitworth as having "less patronage and a smaller faculty." What evidence has Bro. Mellen that East Mississippi Female College has a larger patronage than Whitworth? In her catalogue of last year she records the names of 327 pupils. Asterisks mark 51 of these as specials. Some of these were members of the faculty; a large number of these were primaries and kindergartners. Just how many we have no way of knowing. Many of these primaries and kindergartners were little boys. Whitworth has no kindergarten department, and but very few primaries and "preps." She stresses college work; she deals but little in specials; she had 145 regular "collegiates." East Mississippi may have had as many, but Bro. Mellen has certainly no evidence of it from the catalogue. As to the faculties of the two colleges: East Mississippi had in her literary college work just 5 teachers; Whitworth, 5. The local patronage of a city like Meridian will give a somewhat larger patronage in music than a town like Brookhaven, but instrumental music does not count a great deal in character building—the principal work for a Methodist College. East Mississippi's excess of faculty is reached in her teachers and cheap assistants in kindergarten, primary, and special work, and in a larger music class. Thus we see that there is practically nothing in the boast for East Mississippi of a larger faculty and patronage. "Things are not as they seem." Quantity does not mean so much as quality, anyway. I know of an institution that boasts of a larger faculty and student body than either, whose graduates could not enter the sophomore class of either. It is a fact, however, that a graduate of East Mississippi of the class of '97 is to graduate from Whitworth next Wednesday, and she has had to work hard all of the year to do it. This needs no comment. This fine young woman with an East Mississippi diploma found that she needed a Whitworth diploma.

Again I insist that I am pleading for a cause that ought to address itself to every thoughtful mind as most sensible and righteous. The old "farming-out" policy is ruinous and unholy; let us quit it. If it means centralizing our work—and it does—what of it? Let it be done. If East Mississippi can make a better showing in the way of property buildings, apparatus, location, organization and clientele than Whitworth, let her do it, and I will vote for her.

Brethren, quit throwing mud, quit quarreling, and show up. Show up, not in windy resolutions passed by Boards of Trustees, nor in newspaper puffs, but in real estate and buildings and graduates, thoroughly trained, and such facts as mean something in this contest. I love Edward McGehee College as if she were my own child, but my love for any one college shall not warp my judgment. I know we have too many, and need a better than any we have, and I shall contend for a wiser, more righteous policy, whatever may happen to Edward McGehee, Whitworth, East Mississippi, or Port Gibson.

GRENADA COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT.

The closing exercises of our college began on Sunday, the eighth. Revs. R. A. Meek and N. G. Augustus preached the sermons. Large and appreciative congregations, morning and evening, greeted these learned and eloquent divines.

The sermon in the morning, by Bro. Augustus, was founded on Phil. viii, 11, and was a masterly presentation of the exalted character and work of Christ. The influence of Jesus on the intellect and heart of man was held up to the audience in its many phases till it was clearly seen to be the mightiest force in the universe of God for the uplifting and final restoration of the human race. Truly, in the equation of the moral and intellectual world Jesus Christ is not an unknown quantity. The creations of the splendid geniuses of the world, as seen in the course of its literature, signally failed to create a character that for a moment we would compare with the matchless character of the Man of Galilee. Homer and Virgil, the first and best of the world's poets, the creations of whose splendid genius and imagination have enriched the classic page, these but describe heroes of war and blood, not the world's true hero. He is not a possible conception, and, therefore, not a creation of the greatest and best of men and ages past; nor was the character of the Christ the creation of the Hebrew people. The nation was, at the time of Christ's appearance, on the decline. Its ancient glory and splendor was waning, so the perfect character which the four rude and unlettered writers of the gospel describe is not the ideal of the past ages thrown on history's page to-day, as of some ancient myth, but it is, it must be, the divine-human—the Son of God, the Son of man—who touches the world and makes it thrill to its centre depths. Truly, it was a great sermon with a greater theme.

At 8 o'clock P. M. Bro. Meek discoursed to an appreciative audience on the choice of Moses (Heb. xi, 24-26). The sermon of this gifted and eloquent preacher was a gem of sacred oratory. From exordium to peroration the effort was sustained as, on "the electric foot of thought," the speaker trod the transporting heights where Moses stood and saw (by faith) the unseen world as a "panorama of unfallen things." The choice of Moses was a wise choice; the choice of faith is always so. The world's honors and riches, its ambitions and plans, were placed at their true value, and with Moses as the true exponent of their worth, for he is heir of all. The preacher, in eloquent speech, contrasted the shriveled honors of the world with the crowns of glory, the riches of earth with the estates of heaven, the heirship of earthly crown and scepter with the immortal dignity and grandeur of an heir, a child of God. The closing scene of Moses' life on "Nebo's lonely mount," God's hands to lay him in his grave, while adoring angels attended the funeral rites; the opening heavens, the deepening splendors of the eternal world, the welcome, the approving smile of God, and the congratulations of all the mighty host of heaven—these were dwelt upon as resultants of the choice of Moses, and the earnest appeal of the preacher to make such a choice now was full of pathos, and hearts were made to feel, "This is truly the only royal road to glory and to God."

These brethren made our commencement Sunday a red-letter day in Grenada. We are proud of our own boys. They can preach anywhere and to profit.

The evening with Mrs. Kate Payne's little folks was an enjoyable hour. No one understands and loves the little ones more than this good teacher. The grand concert and art levee were enjoyable to the last degree by lovers of the art.

Dr. J. C. Morris' address on "The Decay of Sentiment" was a splendid effort. The good doctor is at ease in the presence of college folk, and his speech will bear fruit. Strong in statement and argument, spiced here and there with humor, chaste and sparkling, and a little bit of withering satire thrown in, the address was very nearly a perfect thing of its kind. The doctor captured his audience, and will be welcome to come again. The closing words to the five young lady graduates were tenderly, lovingly spoken, and found receptive minds and responsive hearts.

President Malone delivered an address to the class of graduates in his own gentle, persuasive manner, and if his wise and gracious words are heeded, the young ladies will not pause in the study and work of life, but will go on to higher attainments.

Grenada College has done well under President Malone and his fine faculty, and we can but wish for him and them large measures of success in life.

Rev. R. M. McIntosh, the new president, made an enthusiastic speech at the close of the exercises, and his friends wish and expect for him a career of great success in his new and inviting field of work. Bro. Mack will do his best—mark that.

COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES

OF THE EAST MISSISSIPPI FEMALE COLLEGE AT MERIDIAN, MISS.

On the thirty-first of May the East Mississippi Female College closed the most prosperous and successful session in its existence of thirty years. The enrollment has grown under the present administration from 15 boarders and 125 students to over 300 students, 130 boarders, 178 music pupils, 122 Latin and Greek pupils, 28 officers and teachers. This enrollment is nearly double that of any of the Conference schools in the State, and treads closely on the heels of the heavily-endowed, free-tuitioned State institutions, while more than one third the total enrollment—including the Primary Department—study Latin and Greek. Twice have the buildings been enlarged to accommodate the increased patronage—once by the erection of a three-storied frame building, and later a three-storied brick, and yet, at the recent meeting of the Board of Trustees, the president stated that nearly every room in the college had been taken for next session already, with applications still being made. Judging the future by the past, entertainment can hardly be had within the college walls for students applying for admission after the session opens. There will be no room. We have about reached the place in East Mississippi's history where the only way to get in is to apply three months before the session opens.

The meeting of the Board of Trustees, on Tuesday, was the largest, most harmonious for years—not a hitch, not a ripple. Reports from the secretary and treasurer showed a most gratifying state of affairs. Every financial difficulty has been satisfactorily arranged, all legal papers are in perfect order, with money in the treasury—something few colleges can report. Two resignations were tendered and accepted. The vacancies were filled by the unanimous election of Rev. J. M. Weems, D. D., and Judge Jno. R. Enoch, judge of the Eighth Judicial District of Mississippi.

The commencement sermon by Rev. M. L. Barton, superintendent of the Orphans' Home at Water Valley, was plain, practical, spiritual, and will be productive of much good.

The annual address, delivered by Prof. W. L. Weber, of Millsaps College, on Wednesday evening, was deep, logical, thought-provoking; one of the most forceful and appropriate it has ever been my pleasure to hear.

The commencement exercises were conducted in a style very different, in many respects, from the average girls' school, and, it is believed, on a much higher plane, more fruitful of lasting beneficial results. The theme round which all the exercises circled, and in which they centered, was, "The Women of the Bible." Each of the graduates, in her graduating essay, delineated the character of one of the prominent women of the Bible, while the same subject was interestingly interwoven in the calisthenics, drills and tableaux. Last year the theme was Rome; the year before, Greece. It is easy to see this plan is of great profit to the students and of special interest to the audiences. Another commendable feature was, the exercises lasted from one and a quarter to one and a half hours. There were thirteen graduates, the English, music, elocution, French and German departments being represented.

The music was of a superior order. The audience was treated to the skillful rendition of one of the most difficult pieces ever presented to a Meridian audience. This piece alone spoke the superiority of this conservatory. Two years ago Dr. Alfred A. Wright, of Boston, Mass., at the Crystal Springs Chautauqua, said of the head of this conservatory, Prof. Conrad, that he had traveled nearly all over the world, and heard most of the finest pianists, but had heard none superior to Prof. Conrad. He considered him a master of his art. The music at these exercises tend to confirm this criticism.

The moral and spiritual atmosphere has been most excellent. Scarcely a girl out of the 130 boarders went to her home unsaved. Last session there were less than half a dozen, but this year the number approximates zero.

This closes this memorable session. History has been made which will stand for all time. Its pages are open to inspection.

HELP.

Never are kind acts done
To wipe the weeping eyes,
But like the flashes of the sun,
They signal to the skies;
And up above, the angels read
How we have helped the sorer need.

Never a day is given,
But it tones the after years,
And it carries up to heaven
Its sunshine or its tears;
While the to-morrows stand and wait
The silent mutes by the outer gate.

Correspondence.

LETTER FROM GERMANY.

MR. EDITOR: Some days ago I was in the city of Strasbnrg, and met there a gentleman whose history, I thonght, might interest the readers of the ADVOCATE, and prove inspiring to them, as it did to me.

At the breakfast table my attention was attracted by a gentleman with a note-book on Old Testament theology and a fonntain-pen in his hand. I thonght it probable that he spoke English, for the Germans, as a rnle, are strangers to a fonntain-pen. I spoke to him; we soon became friends, and, dnring my few days' stay, I obtained a peep into his life. He is Dr. T. Witton Davies, professor of theology in Wales, and is attending lectnres at the University of Strasbnrg. His parents, who were Welsh, never learned to write, and his father conld not read. His early schooling was very meagre, and, at elght years of age, he took employment in an iron works, where he remained till he was twenty-one years old, when he sought admission to Pontypool College, intending to enter the ministry. He failed to pass the entrance examination, bnt the committee, as he says, thonght, though he had no edncation, he showed promise, and allowed him to enter. Here he passed the matricnlation and first examination for the degree of Bachelor of Arts at the London Universlty, after which he took a short conrse at Regent's Park College, where he passed his final examination for this degree. He became a pastor, and, after serving for nearly two years, he was called to a professorship of the classical langnages. While holding this positlon, he continned the stndy of theology, chiefly in the branch of Semitic langnages, and at the end of eleven years was made principal of the Midland Baptist College and professor of theology—one might say facnlty of theology, for he constitnted in himself the entire facnlty, teaching dogmatics, chnrch history, and the langnages and exegesis of both the Old and New Testaments.

In 1892 he heard lectnres at the University of Berlin, and several years later went to Leipsic. While there he met an American Baptist preacher, who, with characteristic American enterprise, advised him to work for a doctor's degree. He had not dreamed of such a thing, bnt, nrged by his friend, he set to work, and in one semester, of fonr or five months, had prepared a thesis, which was accepted by the facnlty, and he came np for examination and passed. His thesis has since been published in book-form under the title of "Magic, Divination, and Demonology among the Hebrews and Related Peoples," and is a scholarly production, showing thorongh research, especially in the department of Semitic philology. When it is recalled that this book was prepared within a few months' time, and that the anthor was attending a heavy conrse of lectures, it will be seen that it represents extraordinary exertion.

Dr. Davies' position as a biblical scholar may be gathered from the fact that he is a contribntor to several theological magazines, and is writing for both of the new Bible dictionaries which are now being prepared nnder the editorship of Drs. Hastings and Cheyne, respectively. He has resigned his position in Midland College to accept a call to the professorship of Old Testament literatnre in Bangor Baptist College, while at the same time he will be lectnrer of Semitic langnages at the Bangor Universlty College. To start at twenty-one years of age without edncation or favorable circnmstances, and in twenty-seven years make the record he has made, is, beyond doubt, exceptional. What may be the secret of such snccess? His own words are, "What has been done is entirely dne to regular, systematic, and diligent toil." His rnle is to rise at six, and work diligently till one. After eating he rests the entire afternoon, and begins work at six or seven, and works till eleven. He says the constant application of this rnle has enabled him to do what he has done, and he has never made it a custom to remain at his work late into the night. He takes great pleasnre in attribnting mnch of his sncccss to his wife, who attends to his correspondence, and corrects and copies his manuscripts.

The Christian ministry, perhaps more than other professions, is composed of many who have started in the race handicapped. Every-day logic would argne, "Yon have no chance; therefore, yon mnst remain behind." The record I have jnst narrated declares snch reasoning as vicions as it is common. It is not a "chance" that is needed, bnt the determination and self-sacrifice to win in spite of the absence of what the slothinl call a chance. Saint Panl wrote to a yonng minister to "endnre hardness as a good soldier of Jesns Christ," or as the marginal reading of the Revised Version has it, "Take thy part in snffering, hardship, as," etc. Were the same apostle writing to yonng ministers to-day, when their danger comes, not from a persecnting Cæsar seeking their lives, bnt from ease and agreeable snrronndings, I fancy he would say, "Take thy part in endnring systematic, patient toil for thy Master."

It is not nncommon for preachers to complain of their lot, thinking that the anthorities have not advanced them to the positions they deserve. If it is the prominent position in and of itself they are pining for, the ministry of Christ is not the place for them. Snch self-seeking finds no warrant either in the teachings or example of Him who came "to minister and to give his life a ransom for many." If it is a larger field of nsefnlness that we seek, let ns heed the words of Bishop Fowler, of the M. E. Chnrch, to a body of yonng preachers, "Make your own appointments." Does anyone imagine he meant this to be done by dickering with Official Boards and presiding elders? Far from it. He snggested a plan for daily stndy and pnlpit preparation, which, for rigor, I have not seen snrpassed. His idea was, that by constant application the preacher shonld become so efficient that he wonld be in demand, and thns "make his own appointments." "There is always room at the top," bnt the way to the top is the way of self-denial and nntiring indnstry. "The fault, dear Brntns, is not in our stars, bnt in onrselves, that we are nnderlings."

A STUDENT MISSIONARY CAMPAIGN.

BY DR. W. R. LAMBUTH.

A nnmber of onr choicest yonng men have pnt themselves at the service of the Board of Missions for a Snmmer campaign. Their object is to enlist the Epworth Leagnes in prayer for missions, in the study of missions, and in systematic giving to the cause of missions. Without remnneration these stndents will visit fifteen Leagnes, or give their services for from fonr to eight weeks to this work.

The campaigners have been carefnlly selected in every case. Each goes ont under the personal endorsement of the president of the college he may represent, besides the approval of an Executive Committee which plans and directs the movement; nor does he visit any charge for work without the invitation of presiding elder or preacher. A Training Conference, in which the campaigner was thoronghly drilled for his work, has been held at each of the following institntions: Vanderbilt University, Central College, Hendrix College, Sonthwestern Universlty, Yonng Harris College, Emory, Wofford, Trinity, Randolph-Macon, and Emory and Henry.

A snmmary of resnlts accomplished last year in 90 days by 160 campaigners, in the United States, engaged in the most landable effort of awakening an intelligent missionary interest among the yonng people, will easily demonstrate the effectiveness of such an effort when well organized. One thonsand yonng peoples' societies were visited, and one hnndred thonsand persons addressed. Only 44 Missionary Committees were fonnd in the Leagues, bnt 600 were organized. In the 1,000 societies they fonnd bnt 10 missionary libraries. By the close of the campaign 650 were sold, making a total of 10,400 volnmes of fresh missionary literatnre. Three hnndred stndy classes were formed where only eight existed previously.

"Over 15,000 people were pledged to systematic giving to foreign missions, while pastors and people in twenty different States were most hearty in their endorsement of the campaign, and from all qnarters came reports of qnickened spiritnal life."

The stndents from onr Sonthern Methodist colleges who campaigned last year nnder the immediate direction of Rev. P. L. Cobb rendered admirable service to the cause by their tact and devotion, won the approbation of onr pastors in every case, and met all their expenses, both of ontfit and travel, with an ontlay of but $1.50 to each Leagne, inviting them to a visit. The secretaries of the Board of Missions are so favorably impressed with the work of last year that they cordially commend the movement to onr pastors, and bespeak for those stndents who are dnly authorized to act as campaigners their hearty co-operation.

Dr. H. M. DnBose gives his endorsement in the following words:

"The missionary campaign of the Stndent Volnnteer Movement has my unqnalified official and personal endorsement. I consider the Stndents' Movement to have marked the beginning of a distinct era of advance in Christian missions. The campaign dnring this and coming years shall have my earnest sympathy and co-operation. Very faithfnlly,

"H. M. DUBOSE,

A BOX FOR JAPAN AND CHINA.

To Those Having Friends in Japan:

Frequently there are those who desire to send packages, books, etc., to friends in onr mission fields, bnt because of the distance and the difficnlty attending the shipment of a small parcel, they can not do so. To all snch we wonld state that some of onr missionaries will retnrn to Japan abont the end of Augnst, and they have offered to take all parcels that are sent in for onr missionaries in Japan as well as China. A box will be made np in onr office in Nashville, and it will go along with the freight of the party.

Let those who desire to join in this box observe the following:

1. All parcels to be in Nashville by Angnst 15.

2. All freight and express charges to be prepaid to Nashville.

3. A list to be sent with each parcel showing full statement of contents and cost of same. This is qnite necessary.

4. Send all parcels to Mr. G. W. Cain, No. 346 Pnblic Sqnare, and address to him all correspondence relating to the same.

5. Each parcel to be done up in two wrappers—the onter showing only the address given nnder No. 4; the inner the address of the person in Japan or China for whom intended, along with the name of sender.

NOTES FROM GREENVILLE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Conference met in Hollandale, Miss., Jnne 1, 1899, and was in session two days. No one of the nineteen pastors of the district was absent, except on account of sickness. Fonr of onr brethren, however, had the misfortnne to be ill. All are better now.

The Conference was honored by the presence of two visitors: Rev. G. W. Bachman, Conference Snnday-school agent, and Rev. M. L. Bnrton, manager of the Mississippi Orphans' Home.

The most spirited debate of the session was on the qnestion, "Is it ever proper to employ irreligious persons in official positions in the Snnday-school?" The majority of the Conference seemed to be on the negative side, on the gronnd that "the carnal mind is enmity against God," and can not bnt lead away from God. What say onr theologians? Is it better to teach "the letter" than not to teach at all?

The Conference affirmed its abiding loyalty to Grenada College, and expressed satisfaction at the election of Rev. W. M. McIntosh as president.

B. Campbell Trigg and J. W. McGee were recommended to the Annnal Conference for admission on trial into the traveling connection. Bro. Trigg was licensed to preach at this Conference, and Bro. McGee was recommended for deacon's orders. They both desire to attend school, if possible.

The Conference association was pleasant indeed. The preachers are nearly all yonng men—"boys" they call each other—and the older ones are yonng in heart. For years this district has been snpplied with the yonnger men of the Conference, and they have labored in the face of nntold difficnlties, temptations, and criticisms; yet the nniversal verdict, so far as this writer is aware, has been, "Nothing against him." Manhood's best mettle is demanded for this work; the edge will soon tnrn on anything else.

Reports from the work were encouraging. Several good revivals have been recorded, and many are expected ere this month shall close. May the Spirit of God abide with his servants!

Financial reports are below the average. The cotton crop was not harvested till in April, and at least half of it was rnined. This means a short income for all in the Mississippi Delta. None will bear it more patiently than the Methodist preachers. J. R. COUNTISS, Sec.

IN MEMORIAM.

REV. BENJAMIN F. PHILLIPS.

B. F. Phillips, son of D. P. and J. E. Phillips, was born in Hardin connty, Tenn., Oct. 17, 1839. His father moved to Grenada, Miss., the year after B. F. Phillips was born, and here he was brought np to manhood, and ever lived in Mississippi, except one year he spent in Texas. On Dec. 20, 1859, he was married to Miss Mattie B. Scott, of Yalabnsha connty, Miss. He received his edncation in the high school of Grenada; converted when he was sixteen years old, and shortly felt a call to preach; bnt this call he resisted until, on Oct. 5, 1871, he was brought to yield, and in Sardis he was licensed by Rev. Amos Kendall, who was then his presiding elder. He was a local preacher until admitted on trial into the North Mississippi Conference at Aberdeen, November, 1874. He was received into the Conference in fnll connection at Sardis, November, 1876, and ordained deacon at the same Conference by Bishop Geo. F. Pierce; ordained elder at Macon, December, 1878, by Bishop Robt. Paine. After this Bro. Phillips spent a long life in the traveling ministry, always ready for the conflicts and privations incident npon an itinerant minister's life; so he was ever ready to go wherever sent by the appointing power, and dnring his ministerial career filled the following appointments, all in the North Mississippi Conference: 1875, Cassady circnit; 1876, Charleston circnit; 1877-78, Wesley Chapel, Water Valley; 1879-80, he was retnrned to Charleston circnit; 1881-82, Oxford circnit; 1883-85, Hebron circnit; 1886-89, Colnmbns circnit; 1890-91, Black Hawk circnit; 1892-93, Booneville and Baldwin; 1894, Tnnica; 1895-96, Shnqnalak circnit; 1897-99, Shannon. On all these works Bro. Phillips was popnlar as a man and minister, and on most of them had fine sncccss in bnilding np the chnrch and in bringing sinners to Christ. He, being a revivalist, had many very fine revivals, and added many to the chnrch. He was a good preacher, plain, pointed, and forcible, and, above all, religious, spiritnal, and persuasive. While he was strong in doctrines, he was pathetic in the presentation of Bible trnths. Being of a cheerfnl natnre, he made all feel pleasant abont him, and thns he was very popnlar with the yonng people, and drew them to him by his tender disposition. No yonng person was afraid of "Uncle Phillips;" they loved him. Thongh with an overflowing, cheerfnl disposition, his piety was deep, his conversion trne, and his social relations appreciated by old and young. Bnt the warfare is over, and we shall see and hear him no more as he marches forward in the great battle of temperance, integrity and virtne against all sin. Having fonght his last battle, on May 17, 1899, at Ocean Springs, where he had gone in qnest of health, he laid his armor by, the victory to enjoy. Consoling his loved ones, and sending messages to his brethren of the North Mississippi Conference, he bid the world adieu, shonting, "Victory! victory!" and now wears the crown. He was bnried in Shannon from the Methodist Church in which he had so often sonnded the gospel trnmp. After fnneral services by brethren of his Conference his remains were interred by the Masonic brotherhood, where he "sleeps, bnt not forever. There will be a glorions morn."

"FAITH HEALING."

MR. EDITOR: In the issne of the ADVOCATE, of May 18, onr esteemed brother, Rev. D. G. W. Ellis, has an article with the caption, "Faith Healing." I offer some objections to the views expressed.

If his premises are correct, the logical conclusion is, that there is no efficacy in prayer, and this proves too mnch. If we are not to pray for the recovery of the sick, there is no reason why we shonld pray for the continnance of health to the well. Christ says, "What things soever ye desire, when yon pray believe that ye receive them, and ye shall have them." Christ further says, "Ask anything in my name; I will do it."

Bro. Ellis quotes what persons say: "We pray God's blessing npon the means nsed for the cnre of the disease."

Now, this is a very improper prayer. If physicians were infallible, their diagnoses of the cases wonld always be right, and then knowledge wonld enable them to apply the correct remedy; bnt for want of wisdom and of the true knowledge of the natnre of the disease, the means selected might be of deadly and not of curative natnre. This wonld reqnire God to work a miracle when the same resnlt can be brought about in the ordinary way in the application of natnral laws. We ought not to expect God to snspend his laws (I will not say violate his laws, for this he can not do) for onr accommodation when natnral laws properly applied wonld prodnce the desired resnlt. But what shall we do? The prayer shonld be that God wonld direct in the nse of snch means and the pnrsnance of snch a conrse as wonld resnlt in the recovery of the sick. Otherwise God wonld have to change the natnral chemical action of the medicine npon the system, which would be a miracle.

In my pastorate in Texas I visited a brother who was critically ill. I prayed for the nse of snch means as would be efficacious in the case. The doctor changed his prescription. The next day the patient was better, and finally recovered.

Another illustration: My wife was extremely ill; prayer was made; the attending physician advised me to send for Dr. M. in consultation. The thonght forcibly impressed itself npon my mind as if spoken, "Don't send for Dr. M.; send for Dr. E." Now, Dr. M. was in town, and Dr. E. seven miles away. Without hesitating, I sent for Dr. E. He made my wife two visits, and dismissed the case as cured. The fact is, he treated the case with the proper remedy.

Donbtless many snch instances might be given. Onr prayer shonld be not to bless the means being used, bnt that infinite wisdom wonld direct in the nse of the proper remedy. "If any lack instrnction, let him ask of God," etc. J. M. PUGH.

We are grateful for the realization of this long-coveted privilege, and nnder obligation to Mrs. R. R. Parker, First Chnrch, Jackson, for resnrrecting the welcome addresses delivered by Bessie Carnes in behalf of Jackson Jewels, and Ava Fergnson in behalf of Capitol Street Workers, at onr annnal meeting of the W. F. M. S., Mississippi Conference, 1897.

There were nine banners in the colors of the Rainbow, with one of the frnits of the "Spirit" (love, joy, peace, long-snffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance) painted on each. Fonr were bonrne by the Capitol Street Workers and five by Jackson Jewels, who marched in from opposite doors, and there united ranks down the middle aisle, and the leaders, Bessie Carnes and Ava Fergnson, walked upon the pulpit stand and, with clasped hands, recited the following speeches, while their respective anxiliaries occupied the front seats on each side.

Jackson Jewels' welcome to the W. F. M. S., recited by Bessie Carnes:

I proudly represent a band
Of "Jackson's Jewels" rare,
And bring yon love and greetings from
My comrades bright and fair.
Mission work is dear to us,
And we most truly pray
That every home we help to build
Will spread the gospel ray,
Until our Savior's blessed light
Shall span the world around,
And "Jewels" from all heathen lands
Will sparkle in his crown

Capitol Street Workers' welcome, recited by Ava Fergnson:

With loving words of welcome, too,
We bring you words of cheer
This band of workers here proclaim
Reinforcements now are here.

'Tis well for you, oh, mothers dear,
And yonr loved ones in Christ a hold,
That you have shown a tender care
For his lambs in heathen fold.

His promise is alike to all
Of every land or sea,
"As ye have done it unto them,
Ye have done it unto me."

Do you think you rightly prize
This privilege untold
Of leading home the Savior's lambs
To his own sheltering fold?

"Feed my lambs, feed my sheep,"
His latest message given.
And will he count you guiltless, friends,
Should they lose their way to heaven?

Toil on, pray on (in faith and love),
Through the Holy Spirit's sway,
The seed you sow in youthful hearts
Will bear rich fruit some day.

And souls from China and Japan,
And other lands, will come
To know and love our Savior King,
And shout his "harvest home!"

We trust this beautiful picture will be imaged npon each heart so indelibly that all lingering prejudices will be obliterated, and the worth of both of these grand organizations will be fully appreciated, so that neither will be neglected. These societies do not need us more than we need them. The two need not conflict. Those who carry both are strong workers, because they are broad enough to see the whole field.

One person who heard these recitations said that night that the sight of the twin interest (Home and Foreign Missionary) was more impressively and simply expressed and explained to her than ever before, and she wonld go home with the two duties with "clasped hands" in her heart. Another said, "Sister, you have solved the vexed problem through your children, and taught us women a lesson that I shall not soon forget." MRS. E. D JONES.

The Christian Life.

No one can tell the far-reaching influence of a popular hymn filled with the love of God. It is illustrated in some measure by Miss Charlotte Elliott's hymn, "Just as I am." A correspondent of The British Weekly mentions an incident showing its great and widespread nsefulness: "When Miss Elliott died there were found in a drawer more than a thousand letters she had received, thanking her for light and blessing received by the writers from this hymn. They had doubtless been to her a cause of joy and praise to God, bnt her diffident and retiring nature restrained her from any bnt the most general reference to what she had written."—Selected.

Make time for serious thoughts. Let no day pass without some memory of solemn things. Each morning as you rise remind yourselves that "God spake these words and said." Each evening as you lie down to rest let God's angels close the door of your heart on thoughts of purity and peace. The soul that has never lived face to face with eternity is a vulgar soul. The life that has never learned the high law of holiness is a ruined and a wasted life.—F. W. Farrar.

We are like vessels tossed on the bosom of the deep; our passions are the winds that sweep us impetuously forward; each pleasure is a rock; the whole life is a wide ocean. Reason is the pilot to guide us, bnt often allows itself to be led astray by the storms of pride.—Matastasio.

If we can not do "good for evil," or if we can not "overcome evil with good," how little we are like Jesus. If we can not do these, where, then, is our hope? What our promise?—Rev. C. L. Sheppard.

"He That is Warm Thinks All So."

Thousands are "cold" in that they do not understand the glow of health. This implies disordered kidneys, liver, bowels, blood or brain. Hood's Sarsaparilla makes "warm" because it gives all who take it perfect health.

A KICK, AND WHEREFORE?

Under the above heading I published in these columns, some time ago, an extract in regard to "a Lottery for Souls" carried on by authority of the Catholic Church in certain parts of Mexico. This exposure, coming, as it did, from a daily secular paper, created just such a "kick" as would be creditable to the renowned Mexican "bronche."

It seems that the publication, in the secular paper, of the account of this "lottery" scheme of getting souls out of "purgatory" was accidental. This secular paper is published by the same parties who publish a weekly religious paper, and though this "Lottery-for-Souls" news was intended for the denominational paper, the foreman inadvertently put it in the "forms" for the daily paper in question.

It seems, furthermore, that some devout Catholic felt grieved by heaping on his church such "Protestant misrepresentation," and resolved to wipe the sad stain off his ecclesiastical mother's robes.

In order to this cleansing, "A Catholic" seems to have opened up correspondence with high officials in order to obtain the soap necessary to the cleansing. This cleansing compound "A Catholic" found in a letter from "the Bishop of Angelopolis (in whose diocese the raffle . . . took place) . . . to Rev. Joseph F. Steaham, pastor of the Church of the Magdalene, Pocantico Hills, N. Y." "A Catholic" urges the belief that this "letter from the Bishop of Angelopolis" completely refutes "such a distortion of a Catholic devotion."

"Shortly before the month of November, in certain churches in which special works are performed in aid of the souls in purgatory, the rectors of these churches make out a series of numbers, say, from 1 to 1,000. Opposite these numbers the faithful may write the names of the deceased persons for whom they wish the work to be performed, giving at the same time an alms of ten cents or so to cover expenses. Certain special spiritual works are promised beforehand for the four or five souls whose number shall be drawn in the lottery. For example: for the first, the thirty Gregorian masses (one mass on each day for thirty successive days); for the second, a solemn mass of requiem; for the third, fourth, fifth, etc., a certain number of private masses, and besides this some masses are offered for all the souls in common. On the day appointed the drawing takes place." . . .

It will be remembered that the "kick" was at the charge that the Catholics practiced the lottery iniquity on departed souls.

Now, the kicker appeals to "the Bishop of Angelopolis," and said Bishop proceeds to "kick the kicker" with more terrific force than "the Protestant missionary" kicked him.

Here, in this letter from "the Bishop of Angelopolis," we have an official statement from one of the Bishops of the Catholic Church that "shortly before the month of November" there is a drawing "in aid of the souls in purgatory," and "the series of numbers"—tickets, I suppose—run, "say, from 1 to 1,000;" that the price of these lottery ticket for souls is "ten cents or so" (the missionary who reported the facts said the price of the tickets was $1); on these successful tickets "certain special spiritual works are promised beforehand for the four or five souls whose number shall be drawn in the lottery," and the "money collected is given as stipends for masses and other expenses."

Now, as all "masses" are said by the priests, of course, the priests get the money gathered by these lotteries. We are constrained to believe that much more benefit goes to the pocket of the priests than to the "souls of the departed."

The Catholic Bishop says the priests—"my priests"—have not "given assurance that souls," even those aided by special works, have "certainly left purgatory and gone to heaven."

Certainly not. Such assurance would break up the lottery business. If "given assurance that souls"—the souls of my departed friends—had "certainly left purgatory and gone to heaven, I would no longer pay "ten cents or so" for a ticket for them. Ignorance and superstition are the only foundations on which such an absurdity as this "Lottery for Souls" can rest.

That the intelligent Catholics of our country would at once, and forever, denounce this whole play upon the credulity of ignorant people, there is, to my mind, not a shadow of doubt. This "Lottery for Souls" can nevermore be denied, for here it is affirmed by a Catholic Bishop. And all for money for the priests' pockets. J. A. PARKER.

OUR DECREASE IN MEMBERSHIP.

Man's capacity for religion is the fundamental element of his nature. His intellectual, social and civic relationships are the outgrowth of his supreme relation to God. Religion is the conserving factor of all that is highest and best in the social organism. Spiritual conservation is impossible without God. The heighth, depth and breadth of the spirituality of any church or age is determined by keeping in close touch with the Holy Spirit. Fruit is the measure of vitality, or spirituality. The vital current in the church has never been constant; as a necessary result, the fruitfulness has been variable.

Our decrease of 8,633 members and preachers during the past year is an illustration of this principle. The general cause of this decrease is evidently spiritual depression in the vital current of organic life. But there are vast numbers of special forces that produced the general condition of spiritual depression, which found expression in the numerical decrease of the past year. Some of these special forces might be enumerated—as an increase in worldliness, unwise polemical agitation, the inordinate spirit of greed which characterizes the age, a spirit of radicalism in thought, lack of self-denial and consecration in the individual life of the church. No catalogue of special causes would be exhaustive.

But the phenomenon of decrease exists as a fact. It is not an accidental or common place event. But as an unusual phenomenon, expressive of certain conditions, it is the providential voice of God to Methodism. Great seasons of revival activity and spiritual power seem to follow after seasons of decline, stagnation and unfruitfulness. Methodism was born in a period of spiritual stagnation and death. The Reformation arose in the darkest period in modern history. Periods of spiritual barrenness and depression are followed by reactions that swings the consciousness of the church back in close touch and communion with the Holy Spirit. It brings about self-examination, penitence, deeper trust, and a more confiding reliance for God to lead his people through the valley of humiliation. A sense of defeat is often a better teacher than the greatest success. Failure is often the school wherein the church is prepared for greater success and victory.

If the providenceef God has watched over the church, and given her success in the years that are past, then is not his providence preparing her for the greater work and greater success of the new century? It is a very easy matter to believe in divine providence, and of God's favor to us as a people, with our increase in membership and material success; but when there is a decrease, it requires a larger faith, and a more optimistic vision, to believe that God is leading his people through a season of discipline and preparation, massing the spiritual forces of the church for the greatest work of the greatest era in the history of humanity. "All things work together for good to them that love the Lord." This optimism is the spirit of Christianity. This decrease during the past year is prophetic of greater successes for the church in the coming decade.

Southern Methodism is prepared to go forward and attain the greatest victories in her history. With her million and a half loyal sons and daughters and the treasures of her material resources at the feet of Jesus, we have a vision of rising hope that shall culminate in the greatest spiritual prosperity that Southern Methodism has ever known.

REV. B. F. PHILLIPS.

Inasmuch as God, in wisdom, has taken from our midst our highly-esteemed and dearly-beloved brother and pastor, Rev. B. F. Phillips, who departed this life May 18, 1899, at Ocean Springs, Miss.; therefore, be it

Resolved, That in the death of Bro. Phillips our people have lost a wise counselor; the church a faithful, true and noble worker; the Conference a worthy member, and our country a patriotic and useful citizen.

Resolved, that these resolutions be spread on the Minutes of the second Quarterly Conference of Shannon, Aberdeen district, of North Mississippi Conference, this June 3, 1899.

Not only did the magi bring gifts, but they brought rich and costly gifts. We should bring our best—our gold, frankincense, and myrrh, the alabaster box of our heart's deepest love, and the best of all, our life and service. Too often we give Christ only what is left over after we have taken all we desire for self-indulgence, or for the promotion of our own ambitions. We should always let him have the best.—J. R. Miller, D. D.

The slightest sorrow for sin is sufficient, if it produce amendment; the greatest is insufficient, if it do not.—C. C. Colton.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. C. F. Emery, Edwards, Miss., June 10, 1899: "Our second Quarterly Conference was held at Learned, May 27. We have a very neat church-building there, and though the place is small, the attendance upon public worship is much better than at many places much larger. There is a fine class of people there and in the neighborhood, whom it is delightful to visit. Nowhere have I ever known people more hospitable. They love to have the pastor in their homes. The stewards, Dr. T. B. Cox and Bro. K. N. Chase—the latter Sunday-school superintendent—are both young men of solid piety, and are zealous in the work of the church. Dr. Monnger preached delightfully Sunday morning. He is justly held in high esteem and loved by all who know him. Sunday night was devoted to the exercises of Children's Day. A very elaborate program was prepared, and admirably rendered by the young people. Many came from a distance for the occasion, and the building could not hold the audience. Too much praise can not be given to those who, by their labors, made the entertainment possible—notably, Mrs. Nannie Cox and Miss Beulah Chase."

Rev. W. T. Woodward, P. C., Lecompte, La., June 8, 1899: "We are having a hot time in this section now, and a very great drouth. The gardens have dried up. If the corn don't get rain in a few days, the crop will be very short. Cane is also needing rain. Cotton is doing well. We are serving a very fine people this year. We have a double-barrel station, viz.: Lecompte and White Chapel; twice per month at each place. We have had fifteen additions to the church this year—eleven by certificate and four by profession of faith. Have added dining-room and kitchen to parsonage, papered one room; some other improvements; painted the Lecompte Church. The Alexandria District Conference was held here May 24-28. We had a fine attendance indeed. All the preachers of the district were present save W. H. Hill, of Chicot and Washington. Every work was represented by one, or more, of the lay delegates. The reports of the preachers show that good work is being done along all lines. The Alexandria district is on the up-grade. We had good preaching all the way through; not a sorry sermon was preached. Rev. Geo. Jackson (superannuate) preached Wednesday night. He made an appeal to consistency, both on the part of the preachers and laymen. (Let your light shine.) Thursday, 11 A. M., Rev. J. W. Lee preached a strong sermon from the text, Matt. v, 20. That night W. E. Aken preached a forceful sermon from Romans vi, 23. Friday, 11 A. M., Rev. H. S. Johns gave us a charge of dynamite, taking for his text Eph. iii, 13, 14. At night Rev. J. J. Smylie, of Meridian, Miss., preached a telling sermon from Matt. v, 13. Saturday, 11 A. M., R. Raudlo, of Simesport, La., gave us a big feed of pure corn, intermixed with some fine hay. Saturday night, and Sunday, 11 A. M., Rev. I. W. Cooper, of Jackson, La., preached two fine sermons. Sunday night our 'beloved' gave us something to think about. Dr. Parker, our presiding elder, has proven himself to be pre-eminently the proper man for the Alexandria district. He is a patient, painstaking officer, looking carefully into all the interests of the church. There was reported by the different brethren, at the District Conference, more cash already raised for foreign and domestic missions than was reported from this district last year. All other claims are equally as well up. Our 'beloved' has looked especially into these assessments made by the Annual Conference. God bless you in your noble work!"

OUR EXCELSIOR ART BIBLE.

In accordance with our motto, "Better and Better," we have gotten out a Bible which is superior to any hitherto offered. Besides the Holman self-pronouncing feature and all the Oxford Helps, it has the Combination feature, i. e., the revised version in foot-notes, and also contains a number of magnificent illustrations, sixty-four New and Beautiful Full-page Phototype Engravings.

These Magnificent Illustrations represent the most important Scenes and Events in the Sacred Scriptures, and are the work of eminent artists. A large number of prominent Clergymen and Religious Journals have endorsed our Combination Edition of the Holy Scriptures and have given it strong recommendations.

In mechanical workmanship, printing and binding, these Bibles are superb, while at the same time our prices are very low.

No subjects are so well adapted for Illustration by Superb Works of Art as the Grand Scenes and Events described in the Holy Bible. And no other subjects have so occupied the Thought and Genius of the World's Greatest Artists.

The reader has all the most Important Scenes and Events of the Sacred Scriptures placed before him, and is delighted with the Artistic Beauty of these Unrivalled Engravings.

THE PRICE.

This magnificent Bible is catalogued by large Northern publishers at $6. We sell it to our subscribers for $3 on condition that they pay up all arrearages and pay their subscription a full year in advance.

MOB VIOLENCE.

Among the many questions that are now engaging public attention none is of more vital importance than that of putting down mob violence.

The lustre of Southern civilization has been sadly dimmed of late by repeated acts of lawlessness which ought to bring the blush of shame to the cheek of every good citizen. The heart becomes sick at the bare mention of the horrible scenes recently enacted within our borders.

In behalf of the people of our beloved Southland, however, we resent the "holier-than-thou" attitude of the Northern press anent this matter. "The barbarism of the South" has become a pet phrase in Northern journalism. Some of these modern Pharisees have oceans of tears to shed over the human fiend who perishes at the hands of an infuriated populace, but not a word of sympathy for the innocent and helpless victim of his brutal lust. Such moralists may exhaust their vocabulary of vituperation without contributing one iota to the mitigation of the evils of mob violence. The fact is, that it is a very great mistake to suppose that the people of the South are more depraved or more lawless than those of other sections. Under similar conditions the same anarchistic tendencies would manifest themselves in any other section. The negro who outrages the honor of womanhood fares no better in New York, or Ohio, than he does in the South. Give any Northern State the same percentage of negro population that exists in several of the Southern States, and let brutal lust manifest itself in the same forms and with the same frequency as here, and Judge Lynch would render as many verdicts there as here. This is not mere guess-work, but a deduction from well-established facts. When the percentage of negro population is taken into the account, more negroes are lynched in the North than in the South.

This, however, is no justification for mob violence. Mobocracy is wrong in principle and prolific in evil results, no matter where it exists, or what conditions have given it birth.

Not every mob goes to the extreme of bloodthirstiness and barbarity that a few weeks ago brought our sister State of Georgia into such unenviable pre-eminence; but when the citizens of any community gain their consent to take the law into their own hands, and inflict summary vengeance upon a base wretch like Sam Hose, no man can predict what shocking atrocities will be committed, or how many victims will fall under the mob's fury. When the restraints of law have been laid aside, the basest passions of the human heart hold high carnival, and the wicked find their coveted opportunity to give vent to shameless cruelty. The evils of lynch-law, alas! do not stop with the death, often under torture, of the criminal thus punished without due process of law. When men find that they can take the law into their own hands with impunity, the temptation arises to act independently of the law in the case of offenses less grave than that of which lynching is the usual penalty. Thus slowly, but surely, respect for law and the action of the courts is scattered to the winds, and a deplorable impatience with the delay incident to trial and the undeniable proving of the guilt is fostered. Ere long it comes to pass that men are ready to form a mob for the punishment of almost any serious offense, whether real or fancied, and woe be to him who falls under suspicion, or who opposes its will. In a community in which lynching has been resorted to a few times, the formality of a trial comes to be looked upon as a useless expense and waste of time. The mob's cry for immediate action means the downfall of justice and the desecration of liberty. Thus a generation of law-breakers is trained up by the mob, whose methods and acts are utterly antagonistic to morality and civilization.

One of the worst features of the whole business is, that now and then a mob, in its blind fury, wreaks vengeance upon an innocent man, or upon a suspect whose guilt is not clearly proven. Nothing is more calculated to kindle discontent and bitterness among the negroes towards the whites of the South than this fact. While not desiring, in the least, to hide or excuse the blackness of the crime which so frequently calls forth mob violence, we assert most emphatically that one crime does not justify another. When we consider the awful demoralizing effects upon society, upon Church and State, of the disgraceful scenes that characterize most lynchings, how can we say that they are justifiable and necessary?

In view of the occasion it gives for the most savage cruelties, in view of its indescribable corrupting influence upon the morals of the young, in view of the utter disregard of the forms of justice, the restraints of law, and the spirit and teachings of Christianity, we condemn lynch-law as one of the darkest blots upon our civilization. To look upon it with indifference is to give it encouragement. It is an evil of alarming magnitude, and if allowed to go unchecked, will undermine the foundations of government and civilization. Let good people everywhere join with those in authority in banishing it entirely from our midst. Let every Christian do his utmost to uphold the majesty of the law and the influences that make for peace and order and righteousness. If we sow the wind, we may expect to reap the whirlwind.

The following words from Judge Emory Speer, of Macon, Ga., strike the key-note of the situation:

"There will ever be, as there have been, crimes committed by individuals, many of them so atrocious that the story will stir a fever in the blood of age or make the infant sinews strong as steel. It is due, however, when we consider our vast territory and large population, to say that they are comparatively infrequent. Certain it is that these crimes, when committed, must be dealt with according to the methods of civilized peoples. The Constitution of the United States, and of the State of Georgia, provide that no person shall be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law. This is a fundamental principle of civilization, and however terrible the provocation, no people can shatter the basic principles of the social system in order to wreak a lawless vengeance upon a vicious individual without entailing upon everybody of every class the inevitable return of all of those calamities which civilization has labored for centuries to avoid."

SEASHORE CAMP MEETING.

Particular efforts are being made by the officers of the Seashore Camp Ground to make the twenty-eighth Annual Camp Meeting a great success. While success is desired and aimed at from every point of view—physical, moral, financial, etc.—a great spiritual upheaval is the particular goal, and if that can be attained, all will be well.

Hundreds of letters have been sent to our pastors in Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama advising them of the meeting and asking their aid and assistance. Bishops Wilson, Granbery, Duncan, Galloway, Hendrix and Candler have all written encouraging letters to the president, and while Bishop Galloway is the only one who will be able to attend, the prayers and good wishes of all are assured. Among the notable divines who will be present may be mentioned Bishops John C. Keener, Chas. B. Galloway, Dr. J. D. Barbee, and many others. Dr. DuBose and Dr. Hoss, of Nashville, are also expected.

The magnificent tract of land owned by our church on the Gulf Coast has been consecrated to the service of God, and thousands of souls have been saved under its historic tabernacle.

The growth of the camp ground furnishes a remarkable example of one of the great laws of sociology. Twenty-eight years ago it was founded purely for the purpose of having our people assemble by the sea to eat of the bread of life and drink of the living water. After the meetings were over, all returned to their homes. Gradually, however, it dawned on the minds of some that an ideal community could be formed where God-fearing, church-going people could spend several months of the year. To-day that idea has developed and crystallized, and now we have a small Summer town composed of individuals whose natures are very similar, whose minds are developed along the same lines, whose religious education is almost identical, whose Summer existence is not marred by anything harsh or discordant. A community where God's laws are respected by all—in fact, an organization such as theorists, philosophers and writers of political economy dream of.

But has not the pendulum swung to the extreme? First it was the camp meeting, pure and simple. Now, is it not merely a Christian community spending an easy and pleasant time during the Summer? Is the Word of God preached with the same force and power as of yore? Are souls converted and brought into the fold as in times gone by? We fear not! Then let all us bestir ourselves. It is time for the pendulum to swing the other way. Let the camp meeting be the event upon which to center our efforts. Let us look after the spiritual things. The physical side has been well attended. Thousands of dollars have been spent on the grounds. A magnificent artesian well has been sunk, a pier fourteen hundred feet long has been thrown out into the briny waters of the Gulf, a commodious and roomy hotel, with a frontage of one hundred and seventy-five feet, has been built, a large, comfortable two-story building has been erected for the preachers, electric lights have been placed all over the ground, and other improvements too numerous to mention have been introduced; but let us not lose sight of the great objective point; let us not forget that the primary purpose of the camp ground is the salvation of souls, and let us all focus our energies upon that great object; let our efforts be united, organized and systematic, and results beyond our expectations will flow therefrom.

CENTENARY COMMENCEMENT.

One hour before high noon on Wednesday, June 8, Centenary closed the most prosperous session since the war. The following young men were graduated: A. S. Lutz, W. L. C. Wailes, J. M. Pearce, George G. Zenor, G. D. Pickles, W. H. Pipes. There were thirteen young men students for the itinerancy and nine ministers' sons who attended the college during the session.

Everything about the college looked like it had taken on a new lease of life, preparing for the incoming century. The grounds and buildings are in fine condition. There were in attendance during the session one hundred and thirty-three pupils—more than at any session since the war. All the friends of the college were filled with enthusiasm for the coming session. The Board of Trustees appointed a committee to prepare a course of Bible study which shall embrace the four years' college course, each class in the college reciting a Bible lesson on the morning of the first scholastic day of the week.

The report of the president showed a fine religious condition in the student-body, there having been no need of disciplining a single student during the session.

There was the usual oratorical contest on Tuesday night. The medal was awarded to I. D. Wall, Jr. The four speeches delivered on that occasion were exceptionally good.

Dr. Monnger delivered the address to the two Literary Societies on Monday night, which was finished and scholarly, full of thought, entertaining to the very end.

Sickness kept the alumni speaker from filling his appointment on Tuesday morning. The society delivery of pins to their graduates was enjoyed for their usual extempore speeches; but this scribe had other work which prevented his taking part in these meetings. The financial showing was very encouraging to the Board of Trustees. There was regret expressed on every side at the absence of Bishop Keener, the president of the Board of Trustees.

The sermons on Sunday were highly commended.

There are several very promising young men who are studying for the itinerancy, and who will make successful ministers if there is no arrested development in their cases.

In the presence of a public dress parade on Sunday, a few weeks ago, at the State University, it is eminently fit for the Methodists of Louisiana who patronize that institution to know that we still are sending out religiously trained men from old Centenary. It stands for Christian education. At the State University during the session just closing there were forty Methodist boys who should have been at Centenary College, if their parents had stood to their vows to support their own institutions. Free tuition is the bait that caught these parents when really the cost at the State University with free tuition is more than the actual outlay at Centenary College. What we need is a good conscience on education. The same man who is very conscientious on other things will let free tuition determine the school his boy attends, or ten dollars difference in traveling expenses, or a few miles in distance—anything nearly, not once considering the character of the college, its religious influence, and many other things which should make up the count in selecting the place at which the boy's character is to be molded for life. When one will linger longer over selecting a dress coat than a college for his son, or let the boy get ten catalogues, and from these printed representations select his own college, there is a dereliction of duty, and absolute absence of conscience—appalling. The ministry ought to ring the changes on the absolute need of a Christian education, in the face of all State institutions, which from the very theory of our government must be irreligious. The cry must not be an education anywhere, anyhow, which now is going up on all sides, but it must be a Christian education at any cost.

THREE STARS.

CENTENARY COLLEGE.

The recent commencement at Centenary College was not only a most delightful one, but expressive of great and increasing prosperity. One hundred and thirty-three students were enrolled during the college year—a body of fine young men, representing all sections of Louisiana, and all full of the Centenary College spirit. Of these, nine are sons of Methodist preachers, and fourteen are studying for the ministry. Of the six graduates, one—Albert S. Lutz—is a promising young preacher, who will enter Vanderbilt for the B. D. degree at the Fall opening of that university.

Extensive improvements have been made at Centenary by the erection of two homes for professors, by work on the dormitories, and by repairs and additions to the main building. The property is now in excellent condition, the campus, with its buildings, presenting a beautiful and imposing appearance. The increasing attendance has created demand for additional facilities for dormitory and boarding-hall uses. These will be furnished during the Summer.

The faculty—a valuable one in every particular—was strengthened by the election of Mr. Robert Campbell (A. B., Emory) to the chair of French Language and Literature. Professor Campbell will also give instruction in Latin and Greek in the Preparatory Department.

President Cooper has wrought well. By every token he will matriculate, at the Fall opening, the largest class for many years. He is building well and wisely upon the solid basis laid by President Carter and his predecessors. He is full of energy and tact in enterprising and achieving new things. Centenary will enter the new century full of spirit, full of hope based on large success now and a glorious record, full of far-reaching plans for the young men of Louisiana Methodism. Like all our Southern colleges, this one also passed through a period of severe trial, but passed through it safely, guided by noble and wise men, to whom honor and gratitude is due. A period of prosperity has now been reached—a lasting period, we may be sure.

The Board of Trustees, the college body, citizens of Jackson, and visitors alike, regretted the inability of the president of the Board, Bishop Keener, to be present. His love for the institution, his wise counsel, his unfailing faith, and his unrelaxing zeal, have been forces for many years in the upbuilding of Centenary, and she is still dear to his heart, as he is to all who love her. The genial face of Professor Wiley, for so long a time in charge of the Department of Ancient Languages, and now emeritus professor, gladdened the eyes of his former students and his many friends as he mingled with the commencement throng. A noble man. Such men as these two constitute the glory of the State.

WM. H. LAPRADE.

PROF. N. A. PATTILLO, PH.D.

Prof. Nathan Allen Pattillo, Ph. D. (Johns Hopkins), who has just been elected professor of mathematics in the Randolph-Macon Woman's College at Lynchburg, Va., is a native of Alabama. He graduated with the B. S. degree from the Southern University, Greensboro, Ala., in 1887, and in 1890 received its A. M. degree. He was for two years assistant professor in the University. He was subsequently chosen professor of Millsaps College, Miss., but resigned after two years of highly successful service to take a three years' course in mathematics at Johns Hopkins University, where he received the Ph. D. degree in 1897. He was immediately elected professor of mathematics in the State Normal College in Alabama, which position he now resigns to come to the Woman's College at Lynchburg.

Dr. Pattillo was backed for the place by the Johns Hopkins University, the Southern University of Alabama, and Millsaps College, besides a host of influential educators, who commended his abilities as a scholar, his aptitude as a teacher, and his high personal qualities as a man.

Dr. Pattillo's wife is a niece of Bishop Keener.

TWENTIETH CENTURY EDUCATIONAL FUND.

LOUISIANA WILL BE IN LINE.

Plans are being laid and arrangements made for the gathering together of many preachers and laymen as possible at some central point. Bishop Galloway has promised to meet us, and we are waiting for him to name the day. As soon as the time and place is decided, due notice will be given. Let us pray for the meeting and plan to attend. May the Holy Spirit be present in much power to baptize all afresh for service! As soon as this meeting shall have ended, we propose to formulate plans for the raising within our own State that part of the "Fund" expected from Louisiana.

THOMAS B. CLIFFORD,
Conference Secretary of Education.

Ian Maclaren says a good and pertinent thing when he declares: "Once all the children were expected to be in their pews with their parents every Sunday. Nowadays even a ten-year-old child is allowed to have his likes and dislikes about the preacher and express his opinion as to whether he will or will not attend church." There has certainly been a great change among Christian parents in this important matter. It is a change for the worse, most decidedly. And the trouble is, parents do not make up to it until after it is too late to remedy the evil. The old form of parental government produced men and women of a very high order, but of the new form we hesitate to speak. Would that we could say it is an improvement on the old.—Central Methodist.

An exchange says that Dr. Andrew Bonar was out in Mr. Moody's garden at Northfield at early noon one day, talking with his host. Along came a band of happy students, who shouted out: "We've been having an all-night prayer-meeting; can't you see our faces shine?" Dr. Bonar turned to them and said, with a quiet smile and shake of the head: "Moses wist not that his face shone." This suggests a truth that lies deeper than most of the thought in our church life to-day. True piety never puts itself on the back. It never, like Jack Horner, cries, "What a good boy am I!"—Arkansas Methodist.

Half a century ago a few wild-looking men in Burmah appeared before a mission house. They were received, and found to belong to an interesting race now known as Karens. They were utterly illiterate and had been driven into the jungles by cruel oppressors. When taught the way of salvation a Christian community began to rise. Young Karens are in school, supported by their parents, and stand at the head of their classes. In the Woman's College at Lucknow is a young lady of that race whose grandfather was a wild man of the jungle. —Bishop Thoburn.

A deep shadow of gloom was cast over the commencement exercises of Millsaps College this week by the death on Sunday morning, the eighteenth instant, of Mrs. J. T. Hanner, wife of Prof. Hanner, one of the members of the faculty. Mrs. Hanner was the youngest daughter of President and Mrs. L. T. Fitzhugh, of Belhaven College. She was a young woman of many gifts and accomplishments, and of lovely Christian character. The funeral took place on Monday afternoon from the First Methodist Church, at Jackson, Miss., and was largely attended. EPWORTH LEAGUE DEPARTMENT.

"ALL FOR CHRIST."

REV. THOMAS B. CLIFFORD, Jackson, La., EDITOR.

Ere this edition of the ADVOCATE reaches its readers, the Mississippi Leaguers, in large numbers, will have turned their faces toward West Point.

It would be a source of great pleasure to this scribe to be present. It will be the first annual session we have missed, having been with them at the organization at Grenada in '91.

For the success of the meeting much credit must be given to Miss Vic Thompson, Tupelo, Miss., who has devoted much of her time for several months past in arranging programme for the Conference.

Tidings reach us that Bro. Joe Ramsey is lecturing to large crowds in Mississippi. At Corinth, on the fourth instant, the house was filled to overflowing. Fortunate the League that secures his services. The work will receive a fresh impetus wherever he goes.

It was our privilege recently to spend several hours with the genial and efficient presiding elder of the Shreveport district—Rev. Jno. T. Sawyer, D. D. He reports decided progress in League work in the bounds of his district.

As the result of the District League Rally recently held at Shreveport, several Leagues have been organized. We have positive knowledge of two: one at Keatchie—Rev. J. O. Bennett, pastor; and the other at Plain Dealing—Rev. M. Hebert, pastor. We would be glad to hear of others.

The Louisiana Avenue (New Orleans) Epworth League will contribute one hundred dollars toward the amount pledged at Crowley for "Specials." Knowing personally nearly every member of this up-to-date League, we are not surprised at their loyalty and liberality thus substantially expressed. May God abundantly bless each one of them!

That the work of the Epworth League has a firm hold upon the young Methodists of New Orleans was fully demonstrated by the large gathering Tuesday evening, June 13, at Rayne Memorial Church, the occasion being the monthly meeting of the City Union.

Every League in the city was represented; in some instances the delegation being so large as to impress the casual observer that, perhaps, they had attended in a body. In the absence of the president, the meeting was presided over by A. Sid. Daniels, Esq., of Algiers.

The report of the Tchonpitoulas Street League was particularly impressive. The fact was brought out that during one of their devotional meetings a man present, being powerfully impressed, asked for prayer, that he might find pardon and peace through believing.

Much time was profitably consumed in discussing the Epworth League Mission, at 2509 Tulane avenue. Arrangements were made whereby services should be conducted every Monday night by the different Leagues—in alphabetical order. Algiers will begin the work June 19, followed by Burgundy Street, June 26, etc. The Leaguers in each instance will be accompanied by their pastor, who will be expected to lead the service.

At the conclusion of the meeting the Leaguers present and their friends were invited into the Sunday-school room, where ice cream and cake was served by the young people of Rayne Memorial. The whole affair was both pleasant and profitable, and we departed feeling a sense of gratification in being permitted to attend.

WHY WOMEN ARE NERVOUS.

[British Medical News.]

The frequent cases of nervous prostration or utter collapse of the nervous system under which women "go all to pieces," as the saying is, have caused much thought and investigation on the part of physicians.

Certain inorganic substances are well known to cause various forms of nervous diseases which are readily traced to the poisons producing them. Further research leads to the belief that alum is a prevailing cause of so-called nervous prostration, for the symptoms it produces on the nervous system after its absorption into the blood are very remarkable indeed. Experiments physiologically made upon animals by O fila, Professors Hans Mayer, Paul Seim and others, show that alum frequently produces no visible symptoms for many days after its introduction into the body. Then follow loss of appetite and other alimentary disturbances, and finally a serious prostration of the whole nervous system. The most prominent physicians now believe that "nervous prostration" and many affections of the nerves from which both men and women suffer are caused by the continued absorption of alum into the system.

It is probable that many medical men are unaware of the extent to which salts of alumina may be introduced into the body, being under the impression that the use of alum in bread is prohibited. Alum, however, is still used surreptitiously to some extent to whiten bread, and very largely in making cheap kinds of baking powder. In families where baking powder is generally used great care should be exercised to procure only those brands made from cream of tartar. The alum powders may generally be distinguished by the lower price at which they are sold.

Mrs. H. M. Dear, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. C. R. Rencher, died at Enterprise, Miss., June 13, after a long and painful illness. She died trusting in the merits of her Savior for salvation.

BELHAVEN COMMENCEMENT.

The closing exercises of this excellent institution began on Sunday, June 11, with the commencement sermon preached by Prof. Thos. Carter, of New Orleans.

On Monday morning, after the meeting of the Board of Trustees, a very interesting program was rendered in the college chapel. This was the occasion of the annual senior debate. This feature was a success in the highest degree, and too much praise can not be accorded for the creditable way in which the contestants acquitted themselves and reflected honor upon the thoroughness of their training in English.

The annual concert, on Monday night, attracted a large and appreciative audience. The work done at Belhaven in music and elocution is especially fine. On this occasion two scenes from "A Midsummer Night's Dream" and Abt's "Cinderella" gave abundant scope for the young ladies to show the result of their studies in these great departments of culture. In every instance grace of movement, modulation of voice, and sympathetic expression were manifest—evidencing a high appreciation of the work in hand.

Tuesday was graduation day. The literary address was delivered by Dr. Venables, of Meridian, Miss. It was clear, forceful, highly entertaining, and supremely sensible. The degrees were then conferred and diplomas awarded by President Fitzhugh, and the fifth annual session was brought to a close.

In spite of baptisms of fire and pestilence, the college is growing steadily. The past year has been very gratifying. The attendance of boarders was up to the limit, and Bro. Fitzhugh is justly proud of the confidence the patrons of the college have in his management and in the ability of his corps of teachers.

The next session opens Sept. 27. A card directed to Jackson, Miss., will bring you the new illustrated catalogue showing the beauties and advantages of Belhaven. X.

NOTICE.

Those expecting to send their sons to Centenary College in September, and desirous of securing board for them in a private family, will do well to write at once to Mrs. T. B. Clifford, Jackson, La.

JACKSON DISTRICT CONFERENCE CHANGED.

Owing to the protracted sickness of Bro. J. W. Brown, the place of holding the Jackson District Conference is changed from Terry to Capitol Street Church, Jackson. The time remains the same, beginning Wednesday morning, July 12. All other appointments as announced in ADVOCATE.

Reduced Rates for Summer Trips.

Commencing June 1, and continuing to and including September 30, 1899, the Texas & Pacific Railway Company will sell round-trip Summer Tourist Tickets to points in Alabama, Arkansas, Colorado, District of Columbia, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, New York, North Carolina, North Dakota, Ohio, Ontario, Pennsylvania, Quebec, South Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia, West Virginia, and Wisconsin, at a considerable reduction in rates.

DON'T TAKE CHANCES.

Do not trifle with your morning cup of coffee. You require something to assist you during the long, uninterrupted day of work if you are to accomplish anything worth doing. We can not too strongly urge our readers, if they are in the least discontent with the coffee they are using, to give a single trial to Lion Coffee. From personal experience we know that it is one of the best brands of coffee ever placed on the market at low cost. Its price is within the reach of all. It is absolutely pure, and a single pound of it will make 40 cups. In buying it, be sure and get the genuine Lion Coffee. It is sold only in 1 lb. sealed packets with the head of a lion on the wrapper.

We call attention to the advertisement of Centenary Female College in this issue. This school is located at Cleveland, Tenn., and is one of the largest and best-equipped schools in the Southern States. Perhaps no school in our Southland enjoys more justly an excellent reputation for thorough work than Centenary College. The faculty is composed of men and women of large experience in their chosen profession. Its location is an ideal one. Being situated above all malarial and miasmatic fevers, and yet within easy reach of the entire South, it will naturally become in a large measure a school home for our Southern people. It is situated on the great Southern Railway, with no change of cars between New Orleans and Cleveland. Send for their new illustrated catalogue. Address Rev. D. Sullins, or Rev. J. A. Stubblefield, Associate Presidents.

CAMP MEETINGS.

The camp meeting at Sam Jones Camp Ground will begin Aug. 18, and continue a week. All trains on the Valley railroad will stop at the grounds. The association are improving the grounds and the accommodations every year. A day recently spent at the place gave assurance that the crystal waters never flowed more abundantly or beautifully from the two magnificent springs, and that the grounds were never more attractive. Even the glad birds charmed us with their songs.

W. L. C. HUNNICUTT, P. E.

Bethel Camp Meeting will begin Aug. 17, and last a week, as usual. No gate fees. To those who have seen this charmingly secluded spot, it needs no commendation as a place for a camp meeting. It is about nine miles from Centerville, on the Valley railroad, and ten miles from Woodville. Good hacks can be had at both places at moderate prices. W. L. C. HUNNICUTT, P. E.

The Hennington Camp Meeting—one mile from Crystal Springs, Miss.—will begin on Thursday, Aug. 17, 1899, and will continue through the twenty-fourth. All preachers, both local and itinerant, are invited to attend this meeting, and especially those of the Brookhaven district. The preachers will be entertained free of charge. We have secured one preacher and will secure another who will be expected to do most of the preaching. We expect to have a large and efficient choir. There will be delightful accommodations for those who attend. We want the preachers of the district to attend in full force. ROBT. SELBY,
For the Committee.

The first annual encampment of the Hollness Camp Meeting will be held in Cotton Valley, La., on A. L. and S. R. R., July 21-30, inclusive. Forty acres high dry land, free to campers; several good springs and spring branches and plenty of shade. We ask the earnest prayers of the Christian people everywhere, and cordially invite all to attend this feast of God's word, pure and simple. Special arrangements are being made for preachers of every denomination. Rev. W. W. Hopper, Meridian, Miss., will lead the meeting, with other assistants. Eating-house where meals and lunch can be had at reasonable prices. Grounds are adjacent to railroad with a clump of trees to obstruct view. A. L. and S. R. R. will sell round-trip tickets for one fare, and we are expecting to get similar reductions over connecting roads. Come and camp, or bring pillow and quilt and sleep under the tabernacle.

SPANISH-AMERICAN WAR PANORAMA
is one of the war books which is likely to be in continuous demand. It is a panoramic record of the triumph of Yankee Doodle. The eagle flaps his wings on every page, and "Old Glory" waves around and above every scene. Prominent officers connected with the war are here portrayed, as well as many of the "men behind the guns." Military life is pictured to the eye, from recruiting to guard mount and skirmish line. Nor is the Indian omitted. The company cook receives the attention due to his importance; the mess is shown; cavalry scenes are given; the hospital arrangements are depicted; the heroines of the Red Cross service are displayed; street scenes in Havana, Santiago and elsewhere are unrolled, the new citizens or subjects (which are they?) of Uncle Sam appear and disappear as the leaves are turned.
In a word, the gazer visits the new localities and sees the tumultuous new life, without the risk or expense of a sea voyage.
The Album is 5¼x8 inches, weighs 12 ounces, printed on finest coated paper.

We invite special attention to the advertisement of W. H. Clarke in this issue. We heartily commend Mr. Clarke to our readers as a high-toned, honorable man, who may be implicitly relied upon always to do the right thing. Those who need anything in his line can not do better than to place their orders with him.

SOCRATES died from a cup of poison administered by the hand of a friend. How many in this land have died by poisonous remedies given by friendly hands to combat diseases? It is quite a comfort to know that when giving DICKS' CHILLIFUGE, there is not a drop of poison in a bottle full of this beneficent remedy.

YOUR BOY.

You do not know what is in him. Bear with him; be patient; wait. Feed him, clothe him, love him. He is a boy, and most boys are bad. You think him so light-hearted, and fear he is light-headed as well. Remember he calls you father. When he played in your lap you fondly hoped he would some day be a great and useful man. Now that he has grown larger, and his young blood drives him into gleeful sport, and makes him impatient of serious things, rattling, playful, thoughtless, you almost despair. But don't be snappish and snarlish, and make him feel you are disappointed in him. He is your boy and you are to live with him. He bears your name and is to send it down the stream of time. He inherits your fortune and fame, and is to transmit them to generations yet to come.

It may be difficult to govern him, but be patient. He may seem averse to everything useful and good, but wait. No one can tell what is in a boy. He may surprise you some day. Hope. Let him grow. While his body grows larger and stronger, his mental and moral nature may extend and improve.

Educate your boy. You may think money spent in that way is money spent in vain. There is nothing in him; he has no pride, no ambition. You don't know. No one can tell what there is in a boy. Besides, there may be an unkindled spark, an unfanned flame, a smouldering fire, a latent energy, which the teacher's aid may stir, the association with books may arouse, develop, and direct, and thus start our boy a-going with such energy that no power on earth could stop him short of the top-most round in the ladder of fame.

If you can not educate him, let him educate himself. That will make him strong, a giant with whom none dare interfere. Such are the best men in the world. The greatest benefactors of the race have stooped their shoulders to bear burdens, have carried hands hardened with labor, have endured the fatigue of toil. Many such are in our minds now. Labor conquers all things. The old Roman was right. We see it in a thousand instances. Labor makes the man. No boy ever came to be a man, the noblest work of God, without labor. This is God's greatest law; there is a divine philosophy in it. Let your boy work; if he will not work, make him work. There is no progress, no development, no outcome, no true manhood without it. We must work.

Father, be kind to your boy. We know what a mother will do. Thank God, a mother's love, a mother's prayers follow us still; and the memory of her anxious tears shall never fade out during the succession of years

Finally, but not least, pray for your boy. God hears prayers. Do the best you can. Commit all you can not do to God and hope. Never despair, for no one knows what is in a boy.—Southern Farm.

TOWARD SODOM.

BY J. W. HALSON.

The Bible narrative of the separation of Abram and Lot contains a hidden lesson. The strife between the herdmen of Abram's cattle and the herdmen of Lot's cattle causes a division of the land between the two men; and Abram, with true magnanimity, allows Lot to choose his portion. Lot chooses "the plain of Jordan" because it was "well watered everywhere," and was "even as the garden of the Lord." The results of this choice were of far-reaching importance.

Everyone, early in life, has decisions to make. The kind care and watchfulness of parents and friends may for a while control in a measure the actions, but soon the day comes when each one must choose for himself. Shall the decision be like Abram's, to dwell "in the land of Canaan," or like Lot's, "in the cities of the plain," with the tent pitched "toward Sodom?"

Sin fastens itself upon its victims by degrees. First "toward Sodom" and afterward in Sodom; first the evil thought or careless action, and afterward the desperate crime. Lot could not have been induced to live in that wicked city upon his separation from Abram, but living near the city, and the temporal advantages he reaps from business relations with it, overcome his scruples, and we soon find him actually dwelling among that wicked people. Thus ever it is with sin.

The young Christian has his testing-point. Worldly pleasures and allurements tempt him to pitch his tent "toward Sodom." The fertility and beauty of "the plain," in comparison with the seemingly hard experiences in "the land of Canaan," are painted in the most glowing colors. Lot thought of no harm when he chose the fertile plain; and the young Christian who ventures to tamper with worldly pleasures is repeating the experiment of pitching the tent "towards Sodom!"

Perhaps he is inclined to shirk some religious duty. Business tasks cause him to occasionally omit private devotions; and he thinks this no great sin, for he can always be in the "spirit of prayer." He occasionally misses the Sunday-school, for he is "so tired," or he has promised his friend in the country a visit; he is late at the League devotional service, for the meeting comes at an hour when it is so pleasant to take an evening stroll; he misses the mid-week prayer meeting, for he had such a pleasant social engagement. He sees no special harm in these little derelictions, and scarcely realizes that he is pitching his tent "toward Sodom."

Lot's history would have been very different had he not turned aside "toward Sodom," for he would not so soon afterward be referred to as one "who dwelt in Sodom." These little deeds! These little omissions! Who can tell the cost? "Abstain from all appearance of evil," and pitch not the tent even "toward Sodom."—Exchange.

SECRET OF SUCCESS: HOW TO ATTAIN IT

Have a purpose in life. Always keep it before you. Most men, especially young men, may be very much what they please to be by learning to exercise their will, strongly and decisively—and holding to it. Whatever a man wishes to be, that he is or may become if he backs the wish by the power of his will.

At least ordinary opportunities are within the grasp of all. Strenuous labor and extraordinary application will surely make of even meager chances a remarkable success.

Nothing that is worth having or achieving can be had without persistent and courageous work. The man who adopts as his own the ancient Norse motto: "Either I will find a way or make one," and perseveres without swerving, shirking or faltering, will hardly ever fail of attaining his purpose.

The man who is unsuccessful in an undertaking usually fails because he did not put his whole mind, heart and soul into his work.

Pluck, energy, courage, determination and tenacity are but factors of will force. The mind that grasps them all and binds them together, using them wisely, yet fearlessly, always wins the fight, though it be opposed by scores of weaker wills. Opposition to such a will adds incentive for greater and broader action, and brings into the struggle an energy which the possessor of the will was himself unconscious of.

If a purpose is lacking, the will force is weak; if the will is weak, success is of necessity limited, the degree of the weakness being the measure of the limit.

Make everything bend to the accomplishment of your purpose. Depend solely upon yourself, willingly accept the intelligent assistance of others if it comes your way, but never wait for it. Keep going. You are then in a condition to receive the benefit of helps and opportunities as they offer.

When the man without a purpose comes in contact with a disagreeable task—and we all arrive there many times—he seeks to avoid its greater weight or shirk it altogether; but the man with an aim, with a goal in view which he intends to reach, don't shirk; he works, does the duty and passes on to other and more pleasant things, and is probably out of sight and beyond thought of the unpleasant duty before the shiftless fellow has finished planning how to avoid it.

Business men agree that the best employee is the man who expects to some time be an employer, and the surest way of convincing others of our ability to do great work is to do, and do well, whatever is given us, whether it be small and unaccompanied by praise or reward, or of more importance and better suited to our wishes and inclinations.

I remember having heard an employer ask his foreman if a certain workman was competent to do a piece of work which was needed in a hurry and which was a little out of the ordinary. The foreman replied, "He has never failed in anything I have given him, and he never finds fault." The task was given him, and he did it.

A man without a purpose is buffeted by the waves of caprice, envy and discontent, driven from one point to another as the winds of chance may decide, until all reckoning is lost, and he is compelled to drift with the tide of circumstances.

But the man with a purpose is anchored safe and fast, and can outride the storms of adversity and ill-fortune with the sense of security from harm, and a confidence that when the sunshine of opportunity breaks through the clouds of disaster that he can resume his voyage with crew complete and cargo intact.—Frank E. Mitchell, in Frank Harrison's Family Magazine.

DR. CUYLER'S SECRET OF LONG LIFE.

In response to an inquiry from a friend as to the secret of his excellent health and long life and vigor, that grand old man, Dr. Theodore L. Cuyler, wrote the following:

"Let me say that I have no claim to longevity, being only seventy-six; and a gentleman to whom I showed your letter playfully said: 'You are the youngest man in the house.' I have been actively engaged in the ministry for fifty-two years, preaching continually. I have never spent a Sunday in bed in my life. Under a kind providence I owe my vigorous health to a good constitution and a careful observance of the simplest laws of health. My only physician is Doctor Prevention. I avoid all indigestible food and all alcoholic stimulants, and have never smoked a cigar. I sleep soundly (after a bountiful bowl of bread and milk before retiring), and I never drive either body or brain after I am weary. My amusements are reading, walking, and lively chats with friends, and I find that 'old age is more a matter of temperament than of the almanac.'"—Selected.

FRESH-AIR CURE.

(Strongly Recommended as a Remedy for Consumption.)

It is a matter of common knowledge that the late Sir Audrew Clarke cured himself of consumption by living as much as possible in the open air. The principle involved has since been generally recognized by the medical profession, with the result that the old bad practice of keeping consumptives in warm, stuffy rooms has been almost entirely abandoned. It is fresh air which is mainly responsible for the cures worked at Winter resorts, where the patients spend fourteen hours a day out of doors, breathing cold, bracing mountain air, while they are exhilarated by bright sunshine. The result is that each diseased spot in the lungs is cut off from the healthy tissues by a ring of stretched cells across which disease germs can not pass, and so the malady is arrested until the strengthened body can overcome it.—Exchange.

LIKE A THIEF IN THE NIGHT,

Malaria creeps into the system and leaves a poison which saps its vitality until the well-known symptoms of CHILLS AND FEVER, INTERMITTENT FEVER, CONGESTION, BLOODY URINE, etc., will show their snake-like heads. Fortunately there is an antidote in DICKS' CHILLIFUGE, which absolutely exterminates Malaria in a few hours; so pleasant to the taste that children love to take it. It banishes fevers like mist before the morning sun; brings as a gift rose cheeks, health, happiness, and makes life worth the living.

OUR $1 OFFER.

Much has been said about reducing the subscription price of the ADVOCATE. The only way in which a reduction can be brought about is by an increase in the number of subscribers. In order to facilitate this result, we make the following offer: Until further notice we will take new subscriptions at the rate of $1 for eight months. When seven thousand five hundred new names have been sent in at this rate with the cash, we will extend the time four months longer, thus reducing the price to $1 per annum. When the extension is made, old subscribers will get the benefit as well as new ones, provided they first pay up all arrearages. Of course, no commissions can be given under this offer. Address

HARPER—Rev. H. H. Harper, son of J. U. P. Harper and M. L. Harper, and grandson of the Rev. Paul W. Harper, of sacred memory to many of Copiah's citizens, was born near Hazlehurst, April 4, 1873, and died at his father's residence, near Hazlehurst, Jan. 16, 1899. He was converted when a boy of sixteen under the ministry of Rev. Geo. Bancroft, and joined the M. E. Church, South, at Gallman, Miss. Not long after he joined the church he felt impressed that he should preach, but realizing his want of educational qualification and feeling his weakness, he did not yield at once. After struggling against the call to duty for several years, and fearing that his education was too limited for our church to grant him license to preach, and being persuaded that he could do more good in a church with fewer restrictions around its ministry, he joined the Presbyterian Methodist Church in 1896. In June, 1897, he was duly licensed to preach by the Quarterly Conference of North Union Church (Protestant Methodist); so he was a duly authorized minister of the gospel at his death. He was always a good boy. His father told me that if that boy had ever told a falsehood, he was not aware of it. He had very little encouragement in his Christian life, and especially in his effort to preach the gospel. His father said to me at the time of his son's death that the greatest regret of his life was that he had not encouraged "Dock" and helped him more in his Christian work. No one knew, except himself, and possibly his mother, with whom he talked freely, and who sympathized with him and encouraged him in his work, the conflicts he passed through, and the valiant fights he made to maintain his Christian integrity. He loved to read his Bible and sing. He enjoyed attending revivals, and spent most of the summer months in revivals, going from one meeting to another. I was with him for twenty-four hours before his death. He was rational until the last; he was very calm. He called each one to his bedside and bade them an affectionate farewell. This was one of the most triumphant deaths I ever witnessed. We have no doubts as to his eternal abode. His body rests in the cemetery at Gallman.

W. M. Williams, P. C.

DURR—Mrs. Elizabeth H. Durr was born in 1822 in the State of South Carolina, where she continued to reside with her parents for seventeen years, and while residing there she was happily converted unto God at the tender age of eleven years. In the year 1839 she moved with her parents to Meridian, Miss., where she united with the M. E. Church the following year; and there she met and was married to Col. E. A. Durr in 1839, and God blessed this happy union with seven children—four boys and three girls—three of whom survive her. The other four children and her husband preceded her to the glory world several years ago.

Sister Durr moved to Louisiana in 1869, and settled on the Grand Chenière, in Cameron parish, where she resided and continued to live a devoted Christian life until her death. She was in feeble health for three or four years, yet she endured her affliction without a murmur, and bore up under the weight with Christian fortitude. Age was seen making its way upon her brow, and time was plowing deep furrows in her cheeks. On the morning of May 20, 1899, God sent his flaming chariot, drawn by fiery steeds, with a convoy of angels, down from heaven to earth, and her gentle spirit was gathered in and carried through the pearly gates into the celestial city at the ripe old age of seventy-seven years. She died as she lived—in great peace.

To the bereaved and sorrowing hearts we say: "Weep not as those who have no hope," but look to the cross, and hear and take comfort from the words of Jesus, "I am the resurrection and the life: he that believeth on me, though he die, yet shall he live."

Her pastor, John G. Sloane.

SIMMONS—Thursday morning, May 18, the death angel entered the door of Bro. J. E. and Sister Lela Simmons, and took from their arms their infant son, Marion Howard, aged four months and seven days. The little corpse was interred in the Hillsboro Cemetery, this scribe officiating.

Little Edward, thou didst breathe the sweet odors of flowers wafted upon the breezes of but one Spring. Thou didst never tread upon the flowery paths of a Summer here; but we rejoice to know that though thy little body lies smouldering in the clay, thy spirit lives with the redeemed of God in the enmmer of eternal bliss, for "of such is the kingdom of heaven."

Our deep sympathy goes out for the bereft. May the comforting spirit of God be with them to soothe their sorrows, guide them through the trials of this life, and when life's journey shall end, give them a happy reunion with their loved one on the other shore!

T. J. O'Neil.

HESTER—Bro. Luke J. Hester was born Feb. 18 1807, in Walker county, Ga. In early life he moved to Butler county, Ala., and married. God blessed him with six children, three of whom preceded him to the land of the redeemed. Three are living to mourn the loss of a dear, aged father.

Bro. Hester moved from Alabama to Holmes county, Miss., and thence to Neshoba county, Miss., where he settled in 1838 and lived until his death, which occurred March 20, 1899. In his death the church has lost a true, loyal member, for he loved his church and faithfully sought its best interest. The county lost a true citizen, the neighborhood a devout neighbor, a true friend, and a maker of peace. When such men depart this life earth is made poorer, but our eternal home is made richer.

Take thy rest, thou good one;
Thou hast been a faithful son;
All thy work has been well done;
Enter the joys of the heavenly home.

P. H. Howse, Pastor.

Coffeeville, Miss.

BLANKS—Resolutions of sympathy on the death of Ruth Blanks:

Ruth Blanks, youngest daughter of Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Blanks, was born June 7, 1896, and died at her home in Birmingham, March 20, 1899.

God, in his all-wise providence, has plucked a little bud from the embrace of father and mother, and transplanted it in the home beyond the skies.

Little Ruth was among the first names enrolled on the list of "Buds and Blossoms," and the first called by the Father from among the little band to live with him in glory. Young as she was, she had performed her mission on earth, and "God took her."

Resolved, That the Meridian Auxiliary of the W. F. M. S. extend to the family its heartfelt sympathy, and point them to the One who alone can comfort them in this hour of sore bereavement.

Resolved, That a copy of this be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication, and a copy sent the family.

Mrs. S. M. Mellard, for Com.

PURNELL—Resolutions, passed by second Quarterly Conference, Meyersville charge, and by special request sent to the Advocate for publication:

Whereas, Our heavenly Father has removed from our midst Bro. Wm. Purnell, who died on Feb. 9 in Vicksburg after severe illness and months of suffering; therefore, be it

Resolved, That in his death the church has lost a strong support—one who has stood for the church for many years where few were found who would sacrifice everything for the cause of Christ.

Resolved, That in his death the community loses a citizen worthy of the respect and esteem of all. The Sunday-school cause feels painfully the loss sustained, as he was always interested in the welfare of the children. And that as husband, father and friend, his place can not be filled.

Resolved, That we offer our sympathy to his bereaved wife, sisters and sons, and pray that his mantle may fall on his sons.

W. H. Scudder,
J. P. Heath,
For the Conference.

WITT—On May 10, 1899, at Hays Station, Miss., the angel of death visited the home of Rev. and Mrs. R. F. Witt, and took from their loving embrace the gentle spirit of their infant son, Vernoo. Only fifteen short months he was given to gladden their hearts and shed the light of joy and hope around their happy home; but God saw best to take him to a brighter world, and after ten days of intense suffering and all that loving hands could do to stay the dread destroyer, the summons came, and as his precious life was slowly passing away, he closed his little eyes as if in gentle sleep, and waked

In the arms of Jesus,
Safe on his gentle breast;
There by his love o'ershaded,
Sweetly his soul will rest.

Anna P. Jones.

DAY—Mrs. Mary Day was born in Patterson, La., May 28, 1857. She was the daughter of Dr. William and Louisa Cisana. She joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1881 under Rev. R. S. Trippett. She was married in July, 1877.

Sister Day was a great sufferer for many years, but her faith in Christ was her comfort and refuge. She died in great peace at her mother's, in Patterson, La., May 13, 1899, surrounded by her mother, brothers and sisters, and many friends. The family are in deep sorrow, but they weep not as those who have no hope.

Sister Day left one son. She felt great anxiety about his spiritual condition. May this providence be sanctified to his salvation!

Jno. A. Miller, Pastor.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and, therefore, requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

FOR OVER FIFTY YEARS

Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup has been used for children teething. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for Diarrhœa. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

JOB EARNED HIS TITLE BY GREAT SUFFERING. Had he flourished in these days, his recourse for consolation would not have been the company of three nagging friends, but a bottle of DICKS' MUL-EN-OL, which has a wonderful power to dissipate the inflammation, cool the feverishness, and completely cure boils and carbuncles.

NAPOLEON LOST THE BATTLE OF LEIPSIC because of a fit of indigestion. One dose of DICKS' MUL-EN-OL would have given him instant relief, and the fate of the kingdoms of Europe been decided differently. It is really marvelous how quickly a colicky pain will vanish when a teaspoonful of Mul-en-ol in a wineglass of hot water is taken. Try it; you will never suffer from colic.

28th ANNUAL CAMP MEETING

Seashore Camp Grounds.

WILL OPEN (D. V.) ON WEDNESDAY, JULY 12, NEXT, AND CONTINUE FOR 8 OR 10 DAYS.

The Grounds are opened April 1, and closed Nov. 1, for occupying cottages and reception of visitors. Modern and ample accommodation have been provided for the multitudes that annually visit this refreshing and delightfully cool and bracing place of rest, free from malaria and contagious diseases.

The sea bathing is unsurpassed by any resort on the Mississippi Sound, while the supply of pure, sparkling drinking water is furnished by one of the finest of artesian wells, whose waters possess rare virtues.

The exhilarating sea breezes refresh the fatigued, and act as a tonic to the debilitated visitors from our smoke-enveloped and dust stifling cities and towns. Boats for sailing and fishing always on hand. The drives along the seashore present magnificent views, and are over ten miles in length. Visitors are not expected to arrive or depart on the Sabbath day.

The L. and N. R. R. Company will place on sale the reduced rate of fare during the season, from all points on their lines, and secure a corresponding rate from all connecting lines. Tickets will be placed on sale July 5 to 22, inclusive, and be good to return on until Aug. 31. Two daily mail trains stop at the camp grounds, besides the accommodation and excursion trains, during the entire Summer season. A fine hotel, with a frontage of 175 feet, equipped with electric lights and all modern conveniences, has been erected.

All itinerant preachers of the Southern Methodist Church will be admitted into the grounds and provided with lodging accommodations in Wesley Hall free of charge.

The usual entrance fee will be in force this season. No charge will be exacted for entrance on the Sunday of the camp meeting. A cordial invitation is extended to all who desire to attend the camp meeting and spend a while on the camp ground.

Persons wishing to secure accommodations before and during camp meeting, or rent cottages for the season, will please communicate with W. L. Via, superintendent Camp Ground (Biloxi, P. O. 42, Miss.) or any of the following officers:

J. A. WOODVILLE, President, New Orleans, La.
J. B. LEFTWICH, Vice-President, Mobile, Ala.
W. B. THOMSON, Treasurer, New Orleans, La.

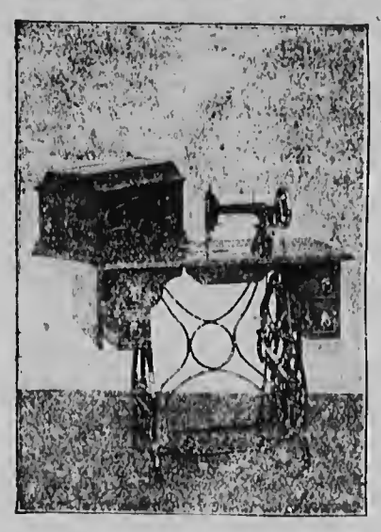
New Machine Offer.

By Far the Best We Have Ever Made.

Always on the watch for something good for our subscribers, we have succeeded in making arrangements whereby we can make a sewing machine offer which is far better than any we have been able hitherto to make. Read the following description and then read our offer:

No. 4 IMPERIAL.



THE IMPERIAL HIGH ARM SINGER will be found the perfection of mechanism as regards simplicity, durability and adaptability to the wide range of work embraced in the general family needs.

A Handsome, Light-Running, Lock-Stitch, High Arm Machine that will not fail to please the most fastidious. Embracing all the advantages with all desirable improvements of other first-class sewing machines, so simple in mechanism that the most inexperienced need no assistance in operating it. Book of Instructions with every machine. Any child can learn to run it.

Extra Set of Attachments also free with each machine, consisting of the following: One Tucker, One Foot Ruffler, One Set of Plate Hemmers, four different widths up to ¼ of an inch, One Binder and One Thread Cutter.

No. 3 Machine, drop leaf table, gothic cover, case of two drawers at one end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $24.
Our price, $14.75.

No. 4 Machine, drop leaf table, gothic cover, case of two drawers at each end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $25.
Our price, $15.50.

No. 5 Machine, drop leaf table, gothic cover, case of three drawers at each end, making seven drawers in all. Dealer's price, $26.
Our price, $16.25.

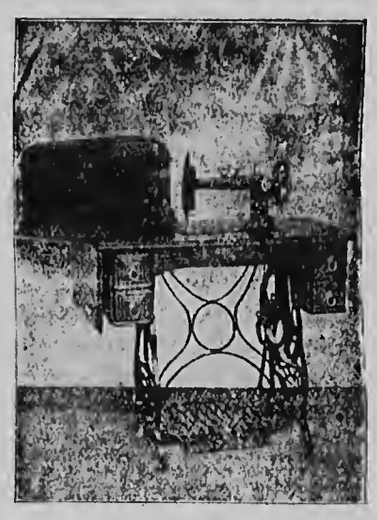
No. 4 Columbian.



EXCELLENCE OF THE COLUMBIAN.—All wearing parts are of case hardened steel possessing great durability, and by the turning of a screw all lost motion caused by wear can be taken up. All parts are fitted so accurately that the machines are absolutely noiseless, and as easy running as fine adjustment and best mechanical skill is possible to produce. No expense or time is spared to make them perfect in every respect, as every machine passes a rigid inspection by competent men before leaving the factory.

NICKEL PLATED.—The balance wheel and many of the fine parts are nickel plated, with other parts finely enameled and ornamented, giving it a rich appearance.

A Self Setting Needle and Self Threading Cylinder Shuttle are used in the Columbian High-Arm Sewing Machine. They are so simple that any one can easily operate them in a few minutes' time, as our Instruction Book is fully illustrated, showing how to do all kinds of fancy work with attachments.

Extra Attachments, in velvet lined case, sent free with each machine: 1 Tucker, 1 Ruffler with shirring plate, 1 Hemmer set (4 widths) and Binder, 1 Braider (Foot and Slide), 1 Thread Cutter.

ADDITIONAL ACCESSORIES.—Each machine is supplied with the following outfit: 1 Hemmer and Feller (one piece), 10 Needles, 6 Bobbins, 1 Wrench, 1 Screw Driver, Oil Can with Oil, Cloth Gauge and Thumb Screw, and a Book of Instructions. The Book of Instructions is profusely illustrated, and answers the purpose of a competent teacher.

No. 3—Drop leaf, Bent cover, case of two drawers at one end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $29. Our price, $17.

No. 1—Drop leaf table, Bent cover, case of two drawers at each end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $31. Our price, $17.75.

No. 5—Drop leaf table, Bent cover, case of three drawers at each end and center drawer, making a seven-drawer machine. Dealer's price, $33. Our price, $18.50.

The chief difference between Numbers 3, 4, and 5 is in the furniture, i. e., in the number of drawers. If you do not want to pay for the extra drawers, you need not do so. We sell these machines under a ten years' guarantee, by which we mean that if any part gives out by reason of any defect therein, the manufacturer will replace the same free of charge. Moreover, we allow the purchaser to test the machine ten days. If at the end of ten days you are not satisfied, you have only to drop us a postal card, and your money will be refunded.

OUR OFFER.

We will send any one of the above described machines at the prices named, and also send the Advocate free for six months. The only condition attached to this offer is that subscribers who are in arrears must first pay up all arrearages to date. It would be well to avail yourself of this offer at once, as we can not promise that it will last very long. Notice that you take no risk whatever. We do all the risking. Address

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

The firemen of the Copenhagen Fire Department have all been furnished with bicycles, in order that they may reach small fires as speedily as possible.

The first of the volunteers sent to the Philippines have started on their way homeward, and the balance will be forwarded to their homes as rapidly as transports can be provided for them.

Exports from the United States to Canada continue to increase, despite the legislation of two years ago intended to give special advantage to imports into Canada from the United Kingdom over those from the United States.

More troops for the Philippines is now the cry. The war has already cost thousands of lives of American citizens, and is said to require the expenditure of a million dollars a day. About $120,000,000 are said to have already been expended.

The Board of Directors of Wittenburg College, a Lutheran institution at Springfield, Ohio, has decided by an almost unanimous vote to admit women to the theological seminary, and, upon completion of the course, to confer upon them the degree of B. D.

In seven years' time, if the present programme is carried out, the Mikado will have at his disposal sixty-five ships, with an aggregate tonnage of 233,000; eleven torpedo-boat destroyers and 115 torpedo boats. The latter boats will have a speed of thirty knots an hour.

The Michigan Legislature has provided for the appointment of a commission to negotiate with railroad companies having special charters for the surrender of such charters and the incorporation of the companies under the general law. The desire is to make railroad legislation uniform.

Australian advices say that the officers of the British and American warships who have been fraternizing during the recent trouble in Samoa, have decided to erect a joint monument to the memory of the English-speaking slain in the various engagements. It is intended to erect a granite monument with the names of the British engraved on one panel and the Americans on the other.

A reciprocity treaty between the United States and Great Britain, in relation to trade between this country and the British colony of Barbadoes, was signed at the Department of State, June 16, by the representatives of the two governments. It is the first treaty framed under the Dingley law, and the first of the series of the treaties which the British colonies to the south of this country are seeking to effect.

Surrounded by a thousand of the enemy, six miles from re-enforcements, and with a thousand more insurgents moving rapidly down on their left to make their annihilation complete, the First Battalion of the Fourth Infantry, Major Bubb commanding, in all 300 Americans, fought their way back from Perez Das Marinas, three miles toward their military base at Imus, where the rest of the Fourth came to their support.

The recent advices from the Philippines have not been reassuring, and the conviction is becoming general that the authorities are keeping back a good portion of the news because it is even more unfavorable than appears on the surface. Although General Otis constantly reports great victories, the aggressiveness of the insurgents does not diminish, and the extent of territory which our troops dominate does not appreciably widen.

Although several days have elapsed since the French Chamber of Deputies forced the Cabinet to resign, by a vote of no confidence, practically no progress has been made in reconstructing the ministry. M. Poincare has abandoned the task, after a disconraging attempt to secure pledges of support, and it is now announced that Senator Waldeck-Rousseau has been called upon to reconstruct affairs and has accepted the task, as far as making an effort is concerned.

Under the most favorable circumstances it would be hardly possible for the government to increase its army in the Philippines up to the 35,000 limit before the first of August. About 6000 troops destined for service in the Philippines and included in the proposed 35,000 force are still in this country, and will not be able to reach the scene of action for five or six weeks. The officials of the War Department are making every effort, however, to expedite their departure, and to that end have arranged for the immediate preparation of the tranports "Sheridan," "Pennsylvania," "Zealandia" and "Valencia."

Dr. Zorn, the member of the German delegation to the International Peace Conference, who was dispatched last Friday by Count von Munster, the chief German delegate, after a conference with his colleagues, to inform Emperor William of the condition of affairs in regard to the Board of Arbitration question, has returned. It is said, however, that owing to the absence of the Emperor, Dr. Zorn was only able to consult with the officials of the German foreign office. Dr. Zorn is discreetly reticent regarding his mission, but it is understood he obtained the impression at Berlin that all hope need not be abandoned of effecting an understanding regarding the organization of an Arbitration Board by amalgamating the various schemes.

SOMETIME, SOMEWHERE.

BY ROBERT BROWNING.

Unanswered yet, tho prayer your lips have pleaded
In agony of heart these many years?
Does faith begin to fail? Is hope departing?
And think you all in vain those falling tears?
Say not the Father hath not heard your prayer;
You shall have your desire sometime, somewhere.

Unanswered yet? Though when you first presented
This one petition at the Father's throne,
It seemed you could not wait the time of asking,
So urgent was your heart to make it known;
Though years have passed since then, do not despair,
The Lord will answer you sometime, somewhere.

Unanswered yet! Nay, do not say ungranted—
Perhaps your part is not yet wholly done;
The work began when your first prayer was uttered,
And God will finish what he has begun,
If you will keep the incense burning there,
His glory you shall see, sometime, somewhere.

Unanswered yet? Faith can not be unanswered;
Her feet are firmly planted on the rock;
Amid the wildest storms she stands undaunted,
Nor quails before the loudest thunder shock,
She knows Omnipotence has heard her prayer,
And cries, "It shall be done," sometime, somewhere.

WHITWORTH COMMENCEMENT.

The commencement of Whitworth Female College for the session of 1898-9 closed last Wednesday, the fourteenth instant. It was a delightful occasion from beginning to end, furnishing abundant proofs of the faithful and successful work done by this famous institution of learning during the forty-first session of its existence.

The first of these exercises was held June 9 for the primary and preparatory departments. It showed skilful training of the little ones by Miss Enlah Mortimer, who has charge of these departments. It was manifest from the delightful manner in which all who took part in these exercises acquitted themselves that the little ones receive as careful training in Whitworth College as those who are in the regular college classes.

"Commencement Sunday" was one of the very best in the history of the college. Dr. W. C. Black, who had been engaged to preach the sermon, was providentially hindered from coming, but his place was admirably filled by Rev. H. Walter Featherstun, D. D. The text was taken from the eighth Psalm, verses 4, 5, and 6. The sermon was very fine, fully meeting all the demands of the important occasion, and was heard with rapt attention by an immense concourse of eager auditors. Dr. Featherstun felicitously portrayed the royalty of manhood, and the ideal manhood of Jesus Christ. There were many passages of rare beauty in the sermon.

Rev. R. Selby delivered the sermon to the Epworth Leaguers at 8 P. M. His subject was, "Woman, the Epworth League, and Christianity." The text was taken from the twenty seventh verse of the first chapter of James. This was Bro. Selby's initial effort on "commencement" occasions, but he acquitted himself so handsomely in this that it is more than probable that he will be in great demand for such work in the future. His sermon was unusually good. It was eminently appropriate, thoughtful, and eloquent. Praises are heard from many lips of his most excellent discourse.

The contest for the gold medal in elocution was held Monday morning. Misses Virgie Marshall, Lera Adams and Mary Chambers were the contestants. The last named won the medal. There were hundreds present to witness this contest, and all were delighted with the superior ability in oratory displayed by every one of these girls. The performance was in every detail eminently creditable to the college, and evidenced superior ability and faithful training of Miss A. H. Gilmore, who has had charge of this department during the past session, and will remain in charge next session. Miss Gilmore is, without doubt, the best elocutionist the college has ever had. It would be difficult to find her equal in any of the colleges of the land.

Monday evening was devoted to the annual debate between the Philomathean and Harvey Johnson Literary Societies, and the "commencement address." "Resolved, That it is conducive to good government to reward party service with public office," was the subject of debate. It was a weighty subject indeed for college girls to handle. There were many present to hear the debate who were nervously curious to know what girls who had been shut up for years in the class-room could say on a subject so vitally connected with the political machinery of our government, and so influential in shaping its destiny, and promoting or hindering its prosperity. Four superb specimens of intellectual and polished young womanhood appeared upon the forensic arena, and did valiant battle for the victory. Misses Ina Pope, Bessie Carruth, Maud Hoover and Annie Lee were the debaters. Misses Pope and Hoover represented the Philomathean Society, and argued the affirmative side of the question. Misses Carruth and Annie Lee argued the negative side for the Harvey Johnson Society. The debate was exceptionally good. These young ladies had prepared their papers with great care, and read them fluently, gracefully and forcefully. In this discussion it was evident that the debaters had closely studied the political history of the nation, and that they had remarkable familiarity with the spirit and genius of our government.

Whitworth College may well be proud of her literary societies that are doing such noble work in developing the girls in clear, strong thinking, and in ready and convincing utterance. This writer has on more than one occasion voted for men to represent him in the State Legislature who would be utterly unable to successfully debate with these college girls such questions as they had before them last Monday evening. The judges decided—not unanimously, however—in favor of the negative side, argued by the Harvey Johnson Society. There were many intelligent and thoughtful hearers of the debate who vigorously dissented from the decision. It was a splendid debate, and all the girls did surprisingly well.

At the close of the debate Dr. W. L. Weber, professor in Millsaps College, delivered a very fine address on Irwin Russell before the literary societies. Dr. Weber is a new man to the Brookhaven public, but his admirable address made for him a most favorable impression, and won him many warm admirers. He delighted the Whitworth people, particularly the girls, by paying the very highest praise to the Clionian, the college journal. He said it was the brightest college paper that comes under his eye.

The alumnæ anniversary was held Tuesday morning. Mrs. Lillie Wilkinson Thompson, president of the association, presided, and delivered a brilliant address of welcome to the incoming graduates. This was felicitously responded to for the class of '99 by Miss Margaret McCord. Miss Addie V. Marshall, secretary, read an interesting report. There are now living about 400 alumnæ of this grand old college, who are widely scattered throughout the State of Mississippi and adjoining States, and are filling prominent and influential positions in all the higher walks of life. In the afternoon this association held a meeting in the interest of their alma mater. Steps were taken for the endowment of a chair in the faculty of the college. English was chosen as the chair to endow. Plans were laid for a systematic and thorough canvass of the alumnæ of the State. A vice-president was appointed for each congressional district. Miss Addie V. Marshall, of the class of '74, was appointed in general charge of this work. Much good is hoped for from this movement in the enlargement of the work of Whitworth. The Executive Committee of the association will hold a meeting here early next week to give further study to the plans to be employed for raising the money needed.

The concert Tuesday evening was a very pleasant feature of the occasion. It was a grand treat to all lovers of music. Prof. C. B. Snyder, director of the conservatory, and his accomplished assistants, Miss Hunt and Miss Anderson, of the New England Conservatory, and Miss Johnson, of the Whitworth Conservatory, charmed the large and cultured audience with the exceptionally fine programme. Prof. Snyder is an artist of very fine ability, and has taken strong hold on the college by his earnest and able efforts to promote the interests of the conservatory. Miss Hunt, Miss Anderson, and Miss Johnson are eminently capable, and are diligent workers. It is fortunate that the college will retain them another year. Miss Anderson is the only one to leave. She has accepted a position in Waco, Texas. Mrs. C. B. Snyder, a vocalist of marked ability, rendered invaluable service in the concert.

The art department is under the management of Miss Virginia Hart, who is regarded by those who ought to be judges of such matters as the best art teacher the college has had. She is from the Art Institute of Chicago. Her work has the highest praise. That she will be retained another session by the college is exceedingly gratifying. The work done by Miss Mary Moreton, Miss Bessie Bailey, Miss Dudley McLaurin and Miss Mary Louise Daniels was of special merit. The medal was decided by drawing between Mrs. Anna Bowen, and Misses Mary Chambers, Bessie Bailey and Dudley McLaurin. Miss Chambers drew the lucky number.

"Commencement Day" drew an immense crowd of people, and was a glorious day in Whitworth's history. Eighteen bright young women received their diplomas as follows: A. B.—Misses Lucy Leroy Adams, Maud Hoover, Edna Haley, Margaret McCord, Ina Pope, and Josie Webb; M. E. L.—Misses Katie Bostwick, Bessie Cassedy, Bessie Carruth, Lovie Davenport, Katie Hill, Annie Lee, and Pearl Reed; B. D.—Misses Irene Clement and May Quick; B. M.—Misses Frances E. Kennard, Esther Priebatsch, and Stella Berry; in voice, Miss Frances E. Kennard. First honor was won by Miss Edna Haley, and second honor by Miss Lovie Davenport. The medal for music was won by Miss Esther Priebatsch, and the silver medal in class elocution by Miss Eleanor Johnson. The following members of the class won special mention as having made 90, and over, in their studies: Misses Leroy Adams, Pearl Reed, Ina Pope, Margaret McCord, and Josie Webb. Jimmie Allen was mentioned as having made the best average in the lower classes.

The most pathetic incident connected with all the exercises was the baccalaureate address by President Chambers. He appeared before the class leaning on crutches, and spoke to them with eyes full of tears. His brief address deeply moved the entire audience. President Chambers has been a very sick man for many weeks, being greatly afflicted with rheumatism. He was unable to attend all the exercises of the commencement.

Rev. B. F. Jones, president of the Board of Trustees, awarded the diplomas, and Dr. Featherstun announced the names of the honor pupils, and those of the successful contestants for the different medals.

The Board of Trustees held several important meetings during the commencement occasion. The Board decided to appoint, and did appoint, a committee to draft a new charter, to be presented to the next session of the Mississippi Conference, putting the college more fully in the hands of the Conference, and asking the Conference to elect the Board of Trustees, and by that means take formal and definite charge of the college. This is in line with Millsaps College's attitude to the Conference.

The Board decided to run the teaching and boarding departments of the college as two separate and distinct departments. Rev. J. W. Chambers was put in charge of the boarding department, and the Board will have absolute control of the teaching department. Rev. J. W. Chambers, A. M., will be retained as president of the college. The Board will meet next Monday morning to complete the faculty.

T. W. ADAMS.

MANSFIELD FEMALE COLLEGE.

Commencement week at Mansfield College began Wednesday evening, June 7, with an art levee, and ended with the graduating exercises Wednesday morning, June 14. Your correspondent was the only member of the Visiting Committee present, but a number of preachers were on hand, among them C P. Smith, J. M. Brown, R. P. Howell, M. G. Jenkins, W. T. Bolling, and W. F. Henderson. Rev. J. L. P. Sheppard, our pastor at Mansfield, was a host in himself and a host to the visiting brethren. Messrs. Vance, Wadley, Gwynn, and others whose names I do not now recall, were among laymen attending from a distance. The visitors and citizens of Mansfield made up a large and constant attendance upon the various entertainments so generously afforded by the faculty and students. Even the rains during the last two days kept no very large number from the exercises.

The programs demonstrated that we have near the centre of our State an institution affording broad culture, refined social conditions, and artistic finish for girls and young women who desire such advantages. Of course, it is not possible to judge accurately of the class-room work by an artistic and literary exhibition, but it is legitimate to infer from this the general character of all departments. It was a source of much pleasure to the somewhat fastidious ear of your correspondent to hear such rendering of piano-forte classics as would have done credit to almost any concert platform. Accuracy, clearness, delicacy of shading, correct phrasing, and a comprehensive grasp of the composition from beginning to end, were, in more than one case, a demonstration of able and painstaking instruction, and a revelation of talent. If one may judge by the Monday evening debate upon the relative influence of the poet and the orator, and by the graduating essays, the department of English is not behind that of music.

Of course, the great matter of a commencement occasion is the graduation. Interest centres in the young men or women who have then reached the boundaries that divide between two momentous epochs of life. At Mansfield this year Miss Sallie Brown received the degree of M. A., and Misses Minnie Sligh and Floy Calhoun that of B. A., which were conferred by the president, who then presented each graduate with a handsome Oxford Bible, commending his beautiful and fitting gift in the eloquent words, "And this will point you to the Lamb of God." Dr. Bolling addressed the graduates with good counsel on the practical view of the after-graduation life, and delivered a concluding exhortation to the people of Mansfield to enlarge and sustain the college.

The Alumnæ Association had invited no orator, intending to celebrate the anniversary by the use of talent within itself; but your correspondent was requested to deliver the lecture he had prepared for the literary societies before the alumnæ also—a request all the more agreeable, as the speaker's mother is an alumna of this honored institution.

Commencement orators were numerous. Besides Dr. Bolling, another of our recent acquisitions by transfer, Rev. C. P. Smith, was among these. His sermon, Sunday evening, to the Epworth League was practical and helpful. The commencement sermon by Rev. Waller E. Boggs, of Dallas, Texas, reached a high level. Bro. Boggs is evidently too much impressed by the general seriousness of life, and especially that phase of it that brings the minister face to face with an eager and receptive congregation largely made up of young people, to indulge in mere rhetoric; but his profound grasp of moral truth, delicate sensitiveness to the intellectual and social life of his own times, and large constructive powers, united in the production of a sermon that was deeply impressive and inspiring. I am certain that I was but one of a number who went away thinking.

There have been material advances made at Mansfield since last commencement. A large tank, waterworks, bath-rooms on every floor, and other conveniences have been placed in the main building. A new Assembly Hall has replaced the one built to be only temporary forty years ago, and which stood until last year. Chapel, dining-room, parlors and halls have been beautified, and it is proposed to renovate the whole interior.

The health of the students has been good—no serious sickness during the year. The generally happy, well-bred and pleasing appearance of the students, and the frictionless maintenance of discipline, impress an observer within the college walls.

The patronage has been good; the total number of boarders, 67; the enrollment of pupils, 100. Enlargement of capacity for boarders is to be made by the repair of the dormitories over the dining-hall. This enlargement will be apparently none too soon, as the prospects for an increased patronage next year are fine.

The meeting of the Board of Trustees was most satisfactory. The financial status of the college was found to be better than it has been for many years, and the character of the work done was commended. Prof. T. S. Sligh was re-elected president; Mrs. Sligh, vice-president; Miss Ruth Sligh, directress of music; Mrs. Caro Jules Penn, teacher of elocution and voice. Miss Birdie Edwards leaves to pursue a post-graduate course at the University of Missouri, and her place as principal of the Primary Department is taken by Miss Gussie Long. Miss Williams leaves regretted by all, and her place as teacher of painting and drawing is to be supplied. Misses Sallie Brown and Gay McCaslin have been added to the faculty.

Rev. J. L. P. Sheppard was re-elected president of the Board of Trustees, and was authorized to act as financial agent for the especial purpose of raising a sum of money sufficient to carry out the plans for improvement already referred to, and which are deemed necessary to the continued efficiency and well-being of the college. Bro. Sheppard has put so much time, energy, prayer, and eminently successful work into Mansfield College, that no one doubts that he will succeed in the present undertaking. But we must all help him.

The following resolutions were passed by the Board:

Whereas, The increased patronage and growing demands upon us for conveniences and facilities; And, whereas, The large dining-hall is in need of a new roof, and the main building in immediate need of repair; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Rev. J. L. P. Sheppard be authorized to act as financial agent for this institution, and that we hereby request him to raise a sufficient amount to meet the demands in the case.

And, whereas, The Board of Trustees of Mansfield College is highly gratified at the eminent success of the past session of the school; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we heartily endorse the present administration, and commend the school and faculty to all who may be seeking a Christian home in which their daughters may be educated in mind and heart.

FAITH HEALING AGAIN.

In a former article under the caption, "Faith Healing," criticised by Bro. J. M. Pugh, lately deceased, the only thing objected to was the precise thing to which I objected, and which called forth the strictures of my article. I showed the absurdity of praying for the recovery of the sick if we do not believe that God may answer such prayers. I further showed that to ask God to "bless the means used for the cure of the sick" avails nothing if he does not interpose his supernatural power. We must have faith in that degree over and above our confidence in the efficacy of the natural means employed before we begin to pray. I do not deny the efficacy of natural remedies even when administered by prayerless physicians to prayerless patients, but that does not prove that God may not, in answer to the prayer of faith with, or without, natural remedies, or in despite of wrong remedies, interpose his power for the cure of the sick. And what I said then I repeat now: There is no ground for prayer if we discard the supernatural. And, further, when we come to feel the need of prayer for such a purpose, our modesty ought to secure us against the irreverence of dictating to God the means he should employ in answering our prayers.

D. G. W. ELLIS.

A PROTEST.

MR. EDITOR: In behalf of the fraternal welfare of the Mississippi Conference and the peace of our beloved Zion, I protest against the needless flaunting of the term, "second-blessing," in the discussion of subjects wholly irrelevant.

Dr. Featherstun makes profuse reference to the "second-blessing" theory in defending his system of education. What relation has the "second-blessing" theory to the advisableness of his plan of education or any other? Is he discussing doctrinal theories or educational methods? ROBT. L. PHILLIPS.

Porterville, Miss., June 24, 1899.

BY W. F. B.

One of the features of the July Pall Mall Magazine is an exhaustive article on the various phases of modern architecture in Chicago by Mr. Peter B. Wight, a leading architect of that city. The paper is profusely illustrated by fine photographs of the most notable of Chicago's architectural triumphs. Other features are: A timely and instructive article on "Wireless Telegraphy—Its History and Development," by Mr. H. G. Marillier; the third of Mr. Higginbottom's "Silhouettes in Parliament," which he devotes to the Irish Nationalists; the second installment of Mr. F. C. Burnand's highly entertaining reminiscences of his early Punch days, and an article by Mr. W. E. Henley, in which he severely criticises the Daily Telegraph's recently published list of "The Hundred Best Novels."

Among the more important articles in Ainslee's Magazine, for July, are: "The Food We Eat—A Study of the U. S. Food Commission," by E. W. Mayo; "The Science of Handwriting," by Daniel T. Ames, the famous handwriting expert; Captain Leary, Governor of Guam, at Samoa; "A Search for Pirate Gold," and, further, a strong satire by some anonymous writer under the title, "The Literary Weather Bureau."

WHAT IS NECESSARY TO MAKE A SUCCESSFUL PASTOR.

BY REV Q. A. OATS.

(An essay read before the Preachers Meeting in Friar's Point, and published by request

This is a difficult question to answer, not because we may not well and readily know many things necessary to make a successful pastor, but because there are so many that can not be known and appreciated without diligent and prayerful investigation. It is also well worthy of our consideration that there are things that must effect the pastor's work and experience that language can not express, and that can not be comprehended by any mere mental process, and that can only be known by a higher spiritual intuition through direct personal communication with God.

The question well deserves a full and clear treatment as far as the thought can grasp and express the essentials, because of its supreme importance in the gospel system, in the salvation of the world. Especially is it needful to impress the duty of looking well into the subject as it bears upon the responsibility and personal salvation of the pastor himself. With this feeling your essayist has undertaken his task, relying on the Divine Master's assistance for success.

The first requisite, both in point of time and importance, is a soundly-converted heart, attended by a strong personal faith, and a sanctified and holy life. To this state should be added an intense desire for the salvation of all men, and an unmistakable call to the work by the Holy Ghost. This call should be so impressed as to cause the feeling to be so strong, "Woe is me if I preach not the gospel," that no relief may be found but in obedience. The response should be, "Here am I, Lord; send me," without regarding the sacrifices and labors that may be required, while he that is so called should look to God's promises and perfections for all needed grace and power, and for his reward.

We have not passed the age when we should believe in a special and clear call by the Spirit of God to the offices and work of the ministry in his church. The church that holds any other view, and admits any other practice, will be a barren sponse of the Lord, and the man who assumes the obligations and responsibility through any other motive will have an awful account to give and will find anything but an easy affair in the line of his self-imposed work.

A thorough and frequent self-examination by the pastor into his experience in these things is a necessity. They are to him as the merchant's stock in trade, who needs frequently to "take stock" to be sure of his standing. It will save him from the danger of falling into the spirit of a mere professional, and the character of an hireling in the flock of God.

There is no calling among men comparable to that of the pastor in the church of God. He is "unto God a sweet savour of Christ in them that are saved, and in them that perish: to the one he is the savour of death unto death, and to the other of life unto life." He stands between God and man as God's exponent of himself through Christ to man. As Christ is the only medium through which man may reach God, and through which God can bestow the gifts of his spiritual economy upon man, and as the only means of his salvation, the pastor's office is an exalted one, and its responsibilities of boundless reach, and awful. All that there is in God's moral and spiritual economy must reach our race through pastors as God's chosen vessels. They secure the sealing of the faithful to life eternal, and impress the seal of damnation upon the unbelieving.

The message the pastor gives the people needs to be molded in a clear, mental construction of revelation, suited to the state of the minds addressed. It is needful that he should not rise above their understanding, and, therefore, become a mere babbler in an unknown tongue; and it is needful that he should not underestimate their mental status, and fall below it, and, therefore, fail to give them the instruction they need, and possibly run the risk of giving them a low estimate both of himself and his office. But his message should also rise transcendently above a mere mental statement. He should intensely believe and feel its truth and power in his own heart, and let his heart speak to hearts, out of his own rich experience, that need similar experiences. He should be able to awaken in them a hungering and thirsting that will lead them to believe in and seek satisfaction when he has been filled.

The Methodist pastorate involves a full gospel ministry, and this we believe to be the sort the Bible clearly defines and demands. The pastor should be ready and apt to teach; should lead and feed the flock of God; should be a master in the Word, and preach it, declaring the whole counsel of God, and should be an evangelist, and in all respects "a workman that needeth not to be ashamed." There is a hurtful tendency in our day to limit the pastoral office to the mere duty of manipulating church machinery and taking care of the material interests. If the pastor should possess and exercise other gifts, advocates of this view look upon them as only secondary, and not essential. They do not think he should, of necessity, excel as an expounder of the Word and as a successful evangelist. To my view, this reverses the true order. It is usually expected that another class in the ministry should possess the real preaching ability, and the gifts and graces to do evangelical work, and the power to lead the people into higher states of spiritual life and experiences. It is not usually supposed necessary for this class to know anything about the government, training, and working of the church. It is not uncommon for them to disclaim all ability and calling to work of this character, and to claim a monopoly of the evangelistic office. When the church is to be lifted to a higher spiritual plane and sinners to be evangelized, the pastor is expected to arrange all machinery in due order, call this specialist, and then take a back seat, while the glorious affair is in progress.

The Bible incidentally recognizes two classes that it terms evangelists. One seems to have been a class of laymen endowed with gifts, and possessing faith and zeal, in the various congregations, who were utilized as aids to the pastor, either in teaching his large congregations, or in going out to destitute sections adjacent. In all instances these were only helpers under the pastor's direction. The other class—of whom, perhaps, Philip was the most notable specimen—went forth as preachers to distant sections entirely unevangelized, and without pastoral oversight. This is not the character of work our modern evangelist proposes to engage in. He claims no call when there is no evangelized congregations and pastors. According to this view, a full ministry can not be had without the two classes of men. Instead of this seeming unity and strength in the ministry, it is divisive, and weakens the force both of pastor and evangelist. The evangelist should be a pastor, and the pastor an evangelist—in fact, the office of pastor includes all there is in a gospel ministry.

This is not intended to imply that pastors may not be frequently in need of assistance; neither is it intended that every man is equally qualified for all pastoral duties. There are differences of gifts and qualifications that may always be expected among individuals in any class or calling. The wisdom and efficiency of our itinerant system is mainly in its securing the variety of pastoral gifts to the church by the law of change. This law corresponds with a natural condition of success and progress that has its manifestation in all natural processes.

The pastor should diligently fit himself to rule in the church as a wise leader, to be an efficient expounder of the Word, to do the work of an evangelist, and to lead his people into the experience, where they may know that which surpasseth knowledge, and be filled with all the fullness of God.

SEVENTH CHAPTER OF ROMANS.

The controversy over the two I's of Paul in this chapter is by no means of recent date. Of those who have held that Paul was describing the unregenerate under sin, we mention Augustine before his controversy with the Pelagians—after this he adopted the other view; Jerome, Abelard, Thomas Aquinas, Erasmus, Bucer, Musonius, Ochino, Faustus, Socinus, Arminius, Julius, Muller, Neander, Nitzsch, Hahn, Tholuck, Stier, Stuart, Krehl, Hengstenberg, Ruikert, DeWette, Ewald, Ernesti, Messner, Sohmid, Lechler, Kahnis, and Meyer. Of those who have held that Paul was describing the regenerate, are Luther, Calvin, Beza, and the orthodox school. Of the later writers Dr. Hodge is one of the boldest on this side of the question. He says: "There is not an expression, from the beginning to the end of the section (verses 14-25), which the boliest man may not and must not adopt. There is much which can not be asserted by any unrenewed man." Haldane says: "But as it is of the regenerate the apostle is here speaking—that is, as he is speaking of himself at the time of writing—it is necessary to apply it here peculiarly to the regenerate. Besides, as it said that he did what he hated, it must be here applied exclusively to the regenerate. Though an unregenerate man disapproves of evil, he can not be said to hate sin. This is characteristic of the unregenerate, and of such only. 'Ye that love the Lord, hate evil.' (Ps. xcvii, 10.) It is characteristic of the Redeemer himself, 'Thou hast loved righteousness and hated iniquity.' (Heb. i, 9) The following words are decisive on the subject, 'The fear of the Lord is to hate evil.' (Prov. viii, 3.) Some suppose that what the apostle says in this verse is to the same purpose with the noted heathen confession, 'Video meliora proboque, deteriora sequor.' ('I see what is better and approve of it. I follow what is worse.') But these propositions are not at all identical. The heathen confesses that he practices what he knows to be wrong, but his inconsistency arises from the love of the evil. Paul confesses that he does what is wrong, but declares that instead of loving the evil, he regards it with hatred and abhorrence."

Of this chapter Mr. Wesley says: "Paul, having compared together the past and present state of believers, that in the flesh (verse 5) and that in the spirit (verse 6), in answering two questions (is then the law sin?—verses 7; and is the law death?—verse 13), interweaves the whole process of a man reasoning, groaning, striving, and escaping from the legal to the evangelical state. This he does from verse 7 to the end of this chapter. I myself, or, rather, that I (the person whom I am personating till his deliverance is wrought), serve the law of God with my mind. My reason and conscience declare for God, but with my flesh the law of sin. But my corrupt passions and appetites still rebel. The man is now utterly weary of his bondage, and upon the brink of liberty. (Chapter viii, 1.) Now he comes to deliverance and liberty. The apostle here resumes the thread of his discourse, which was interrupted. (Chapter vii, 7.)"

Dr. Clarke says (verse 14): "I believe it is agreed, on all hands, that the apostle is here demonstrating the insufficiency of the law in opposition to the gospel. That by the former is the knowledge, by the latter the cure, of sin. Therefore, by I here he can not mean himself, nor any Christian believer. If the contrary could be proved, the argument of the apostle would go to demonstrate the insufficiency of the gospel as well as the law. The strong expressions in this clause have led many to conclude that the apostle himself, in his regenerated state, is indisputably the person intended. That all that is said in this chapter of the carnal man, sold under sin, did apply to Saul of Tarsus, no man can doubt. That what is here said can ever be applied to Paul the apostle, who can believe? Of the former, all is natural; of the latter, all here said would be monstrous and absurd, if not blasphemous. But it is supposed that the words must be understood as implying a regenerate man, because the apostle says (verse 22), 'I delight in the law of God,' and in this verse I myself, with the mind, serve the law of God. These things, they say, can not be spoken of a wicked Jew, but of a regenerate man, such as the apostle then was. But when we find that the former verse speaks of a man who is brought into captivity to the law of sin and death, surely there is no part of the regenerate state of the apostle to which the words can possibly apply. Had he been in captivity to the law of sin and death, after his conversion to Christianity, what did he gain by that conversion? Nothing for his personal holiness. He had found no salvation under an inefficient law, and he was left in thraldom under an equally inefficient gospel. The very genius of Christianity demonstrates that nothing like this can, with any propriety, be spoken of a genuine Christian."

I have given these conflicting opinions on this chapter that those who are interested in the great doctrine of regeneration might take them as a starting-point to study the Scriptures on this subject. If the descriptions of the regenerate state, as given in the Word of God, support the views of our church on this chapter, then let those claiming to be Methodist bold and teach none other; but if these descriptions support the Calvinistic view in the minds of any, then consistency demands of all such that they adopt that view, and, with Haldane, say, "Notwithstanding the struggle he describes, proving the power of the law of sin in the flesh, he asserts that, with his mind, he serves the law of God." It is, therefore, the old flesh that sins, and the soul is not responsible. METHODIST.

WHAT DOES IT MEAN?

Yesterday's issue of The Memphis Commercial-Appeal contained a dispatch from Oxford relative to the commencement exercises of the University of Mississippi, now in progress there. In that dispatch appeared the following announcement:

Among the drawing features of this year's entertainments is a grand open-air presentation of Shakespeare's "As You Like It" and "Taming of the Shrew," given by the elocution classes under the direction of Miss Sarah McGehee Isom. This entertainment will be given on the campus green Tuesday evening, June 20, and the novelty of open-air presentations of Shakespeare by high-class performers will draw an enormous crowd. Following is the programme to be presented:

Orchestra, Kahn Bros., Memphis
Oration—Shakespeare, Hugh Barr Miller, Hazlehurst, Miss.

"AS YOU LIKE IT."

Dramatis Personæ.

Duke Frederick—Robert Sultan, '99, Oxford, Miss.

Jacques—Latham Ray, '97, Carrollton, Miss.

Le Bean—Walter Gex, '99, New Orleans, La.

Orlando—James Edmonds, Bolivar, Miss.

Adam—John Kyle, Jr., '99, Oxford, Miss.

Amiens—Lee Russell, '99, Dallas, Miss.

Touchstone—Bradley Kimbrough, Oxford.

Oliver—Stark Young, Oxford.

Corin and Silvius—John Standifer, '99, Oxford.

Rosalind—Miss Annye Hardgrave, '93, University, Miss.

Celia—Miss Clara Burt, '98, Oxford.

Phoebe—Miss Sue Woods, '98, Jackson.

Audrey—Miss Mattie Harralson, '98, Vicksburg.

Hymen—Miss Annie Chandler, Oxford.

Foresters, Attendants, etc.

We should like to have a statement from the university authorities as to the significance of this announcement. Does it mean that the Methodists, Baptists and Presbyterians of Mississippi are being taxed to pay an elocution teacher whose appointed task is to make actors and actresses of our boys and girls? We were not aware before that the university had such a department—a department for equipping our young people for the stage. The Christian constitutency of the institution would like to know what all this means. Will some one who has authority to speak kindly give us an explanation?

SAM JONES CAMP GROUND.

MR. EDITOR: As has been our custom for several years, we ask the courtesy of a certain amount of space in your most excellent paper to expatiate on matters connected with the annual camp meeting at Sam Jones Camp Ground. At the semi-annual meeting of the association, in April last, it was decided to have the meeting begin on the eighteenth of August, and continue, as usual, ten days, but subsequently to that action of Sam Jones, the authorities of the "Bethel Camp Meeting Association" appointed their meeting to open on the same day as ours. We can not conceive the possibility that this action of the "Bethel" people was the result of unfriendliness on their part towards us; but the fact remains that for the two meetings to be held simultaneously would have the effect to curtail, if not cripple, the usefulness and success of both; hence the authorities of Sam Jones, with an earnest desire to advance the interest of the cause of God, and after consultation with the members and patrons of the association, have changed the time for Sam Jones to the twenty-first day of July, proximo, or one month in advance of the original time, by which change it is hoped to secure the earnest co-operation and attendance of our brethren of "Bethel," and that, after ours is over, those in attendance upon it may be so revived, blest and filled with the Spirit that they may return to their homes with such a spirit of divine power as will enable them to kindle revival fires upon the altars of every church in the district; and then, when "Bethel" comes to the front, a month later, there may be a regular pentecostal wave through all the land, and that every tent there and every heart may be full of the glory of our God.

Arrangements will be made with the railroads to secure the usual reduction in fare, and the stoppage of all trains at the camp grounds during the continuance of the meeting; and it is earnestly hoped that every tent on the grounds will be occupied, either by its owner or a tenant, and that the Divine Presence may overshadow the place, fill each heart, control each tongue, and be the main-spring of every thought and action there.

The usual arrangements and prices for the hotel and admission into the grounds will prevail this year. Parties desiring to rent cottages can do so at nominal figures, and visitors will find the place a healthful, delightful and pleasant one for the enjoyment of a few days of rest, the service and worship of God, and that brotherly intercourse that is so precious to the children of the Great King.

The association will be gratified if the editor will, occasionally, remind his readers of the approaching meeting, urge their attendance and earnest help.

Let all who truly love our Lord remember the meeting, and pray earnestly for its success whenever they approach the throne. Of course, all the preachers in the district and out of it are invited. More anon.

Yours truly, REX.

THE W. F. M. CONFERENCE.

Pursuant to agreement, the W. F. M. Conference met at Sardis, June 10-14. Many of the delegates were received in a drenching rain, but though they were thoroughly dampened, it did not seem to dampen the hospitality of the good people, who opened their carriages, homes and hearts to us, and kept them opened until the close of the meeting. Doubtless each guest thought that she had the model host and hostess, which implies that there are a good many models in Sardis. Bro. Kendall, with as much kindness and courtesy as he could have possibly bestowed upon ladies a half-century ago, was with the committee helping to assign homes.

The weather was so inclement that there was no service attempted on Saturday night, and when we looked out Sunday morning the thirsty earth was still absorbing the much-needed rain, and the clouds were tenderly and tearfully looking down as if to say, "You shall be satisfied." Nothing daunted, though, the delegates who had come to receive everything possible in the few days of their visit came out from many homes to hear Dr. Malone's fine sermon, which was replete with grand and uplifting thoughts, and many will carry them away to help them in future days. At the close of the sermon the Lord's Supper was administered, and we went away feeling that we had made a good beginning.

The afternoon was given to the children, and they were entertained by different persons. First by a sweet talk by Mrs. McIntosh, expressing her sympathy with them that their old friend, Sister Hargrove, who had labored with them so wisely and well, could not be with them. Then Miss Lily Whitman, who has offered herself as a missionary and been accepted, and will go to Cuba in the near future, talked with them. It was indeed touching to see one so young ready to say, "All, yes all, I give to Jesus," even to my country, my home, my loved ones. Another young lady, Miss Carrie Sue Foost, who is willing to go when needed, talked to them. Both young ladies are well educated and equipped for service.

Sunday night the annual anniversary exercises were presented to a crowded house. The vice-president, Mrs. S. M. Thames, read the annual address of the president, Mrs. George Lipscomb, who was absent. The corresponding secretary, Mrs. W. M. McIntosh, gave a lucid account of some of the doings of the Woman's Board in her own inimitable way, which could but help and bless those who heard. The address of welcome was given by Mrs. Friend, of Sardis, in a clear and earnest manner, and responded to by Mrs. J. W. Malone, and those who heard could scarcely believe that her beautiful paper was prepared after reaching Sardis the night before, the lady assigned that duty being much indisposed. There were a good many charming recitations given from visitors and home talent, interspersed with inspiring music from the choir, making all their debtors.

Monday, at 8.30 o'clock, the first business session was conducted by the vice-president, Mrs. S. M. Thames, who performed her duties with such ease and dispatch that no one not informed would have supposed that it was the first time she had presided. There were some little discussions over parliamentary rules. You see, the women want to do like the men, and be above criticism, but each affair was neatly tided over by the young gentlemen, Bro. Kendall and Dr. Wier, who were so kind in every particular.

The first session was opened with devotional exercises led by the vice-president, followed by a testimony service, and the quick and earnest responses told of loyal workers. The roll-call of officers showed that all were present except the president, auditor, and the Corinth district secretary. The report of the treasurer revealed the fact that we had fallen behind last year's collections; yet, remembering that some handsome specials added to our amount last year were lacking this, we felt that our cause had not languished. Reports from district secretaries proved that there were many faithful reapers still in the field who were anxious to bear arms in the name of Emanuel, and as reports came up from city and town, village and hamlet, even reaching out to the dear little country churches, we felt that the cause had been well represented, and must gather strength in days to come. Our corresponding secretary gave us delightful bits of news from the meeting of the Woman's Board from time to time. Our recording secretary, Miss Ella Grider, is due the thanks of the entire Conference for her faithful, expeditious, and intelligent service.

We wish we could mention all of the good things we heard, but they would form a booklet, and must be left out.

Aberdeen was the banner district; the Fannie Houghton the banner society. The Lula Lipscomb Workers, of Columbus, captured the banner offered by Mrs. W. M. McIntosh for the society having the greatest number of subscribers to the Little Worker, and the Pleasant Grove Juveniles the silver star offered by Mrs. Fant to the second number. Mrs. Lula Eichholtz, of Columbus, offered a banner for this year for the highest number of subscribers to the Little Worker. Grenada claimed the banner for the greatest number of Advocates taken per member.

The election of officers for the coming year resulted as follows: Mrs. I. I. Hoskins, president; Mrs. S. M. Thames, vice-president; Mrs. W. M. McIntosh, corresponding secretary; Miss Ella Grider, recording secretary; Mrs. J. F. Evans, auditor and editor. Only the Sardis and Columbus district secretaries were changed.

Durant was unanimously chosen as the place of meeting of the next Conference.

Mrs. George Lipscomb was elected reserve delegate to the meeting of the Woman's Board.

Some returned missionaries were expected and hoped for as visitors, but we find that this grand work is so deeply imbedded in the hearts of God's people that while they would enjoy, they do not absolutely need the presence of the returned laborers to keep the work going onward and upward until all creatures have heard the sweet story of Jesus and his love.

"THE PASTOR AND THE EVANGELIST."

In the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE, of June 8 and 15, instant, Rev. W. D. Bass has a six-column article under above caption, in which he labors to refute the force of five direct questions propounded in my article in issue of May 11 (ultimo), in which I replied to a complaint made by him (in issue of April 27, 1899) of mistreatment at the hands of the "Pastoral and Theological Society of Durant District." I, being secretary of that meeting, was requested by the brethren to send a "write-up" to the ADVOCATE for publication, and especially to mention the reference made to the "modern evangelist" during the last evening of the meeting. I did so as secretary of that society, and, Mr. Editor, I offer this rejoinder to Bro. Bass' conclusions in the same capacity (notwithstanding your mandate to "stop the discussion"). This is a proper rule of discussion.

If, as Bro. Bass says, I have "misrepresented the facts," I hold myself amenable to the proper courts and to that society, and invite investigation. In Bro. Bass' article the proof has not come forth. Bare statement without proof does not satisfy.

It is very strange and unfortunate that matters of great public moment should dwindle to personal wranglings. This need not have been so in this case had not Bro. Bass made it a personal matter by taking to himself what was only meant to be general, and to strike at that state of the church and the public mind which Dr. Hoss attributes to "burning strange fire on our altars" (in his leading editorials in an April issue of 1898), and refers to just such "methods" as were had under review before our society. "I most heartily agree with Dr. Hoss on this subject." So did the society, Bro. Bass to the contrary, notwithstanding. Now, he need not have assumed all this load; but Bro. Bass' greatest model—Rev. S. P. Jones—said, "It is always the hit dog that hollers."

So Bro. Bass condescends to make a personal matter of it, and accuses me of being "prejudiced against" him "on account of a few dollars." Now, I have never met him, and he truly says, "I have never heard him preach or say any of these things." I merely submitted questions indicating to him the reports and impressions prevalent here in Central Mississippi, where Bro. Bass' work has been of late. Those are common complaints, and had come directly or indirectly to the members of that District Preachers' Meeting. They discussed them without mentioning my name (except to assure the people of Sallis that no reference was made to Bro. McIntosh, who is an itinerant member of our Conference). Not one of us had been witness to Bro. Bass' methods, but were cognizant of a deplorable relapse of spiritual interest in our churches. Bro. Bass took the hint, and, really, even the "blowing of the wind could not make so much smoke, unless there were some fire." I have no prejudices against anyone, on any account; but I am jealous for the interests of our church, and am unqualifiedly opposed to any man or method that strikes at her polity, or would hinder the efficient working of our divinely-ordained and blessed itinerancy. God continues to bless the itinerancy!

Bro. Bass insists that he has "been tried in his absence," and that "every court under heaven provides for the accused to be heard in self-defense, except the mob-law." I again repeat that his name was not once mentioned in our society, which he is pleased to call a "mob," and never would have been mentioned in connection with it had he not sought notoriety by posing as a martyr. By his logic every citizen who might feel liable to indictment before the law has been "tried and condemned in his absence, without a chance for his life." For, suppose a circle of neighbors spending an hour discussing prevalent evils, and afterward some absent neighbor coming up and claiming to have been "condemned contrary to the law." That would be evidence of a legal mind with a vim! Well, the cases are exactly parallel.

If Bro. Bass has been martyred, it was at the hands of as intelligent and pious a body of ministers as the Southern Church affords. One of them a review contributor, another an ex-member of the General Conference—all of them respectable in religious circles. "Nothing against them."

Nor has anyone sought to slander Bro. Bass. If in anything I have wronged him, and it can be shown, I shall hasten to beg his pardon. It is not our "wrongs" always, but sometimes our "rights," that hinder us most. I am in position, however, to substantiate what has been said, and could have said more had I thought it proper.

I have great respect for some of the names he uses in his defense; but even the best of men can be mistaken.

If I have been "unjust, unkind, and unbrotherly, and slanderous in tone and spirit," as Rev. W. A. Bowlin says in his letter published in connection with Bro. Bass' last article, then I feel like I have very good company along with me, for I have received numerous letters since my inquiry was published containing unstinted endorsement. One says: "Anderson, you are on the right trail. . . . Just pour on a little more," etc. Another: "If you can stop his course in this Conference, it will be a good service." Again: "Those statements needed to be made public, and we are glad that you had the fortitude to give them out when occasion offered. The preachers will stand by you," etc. Yet another: "Keep your powder dry, and watch in the roar. I am not afraid of his coming up to the front."

I have written all of these things with much pain, and regret the necessity but I have not been quite martyred yet, and if occasion demands again, I can be depended upon to rise in defense of my church and her polity. I have not made, and shall not make, an untenable statements, or ask any important questions.

Bro. Bass appeals to the Bishops for a decision. To the Bishops let him go. He will find no encouragement there. The noted Georgia evangelist ran against a mountain of opposition, and has either been a law-breaker ever since, or has to have a new local preacher's certificate every time he moves his tent. Bishop Keener parlied long at Sardis in 1891 before he would grant an appointment carrying with it the idea of evangelizing, and yielded only because the financial circumstances of one of our colleges were involved. If Bro. Bass will propose a plain proposition to one of the Bishops, or to all of them together, and not hide his outlawed evangelist behind the legitimate local preacher, he will receive a plain denial of recognition.

Until our General Conference changes the plan of our itinerancy, I am for maintaining decency and order in status quo.

The Lord guide us, forgive our errors, and build up his kingdom as he always has done with the faithful.

"THE PASTOR AND THE EVANGELIST"—A CORRECTION.

MR. EDITOR: My question relative to Rev. W. D. Bass receiving $265 for three weeks' work, while the pastor received $261.20 for the entire year, was based on a mistake, and is unjust to all concerned; hence I think a correction very proper.

Two recent letters from the recording steward of the charge mentioned shows that the Record varies as follows: Ques. 9 of fourth Quarterly Conference, 1896, is answered, "For Ministerial Aid, $165." Ques. 26, of same date, is answered, in part, "For Ministerial Aid, $265." This latter, I concluded, was the "final report" by the pastor, as it often happens, some time after the close of the fourth Quarterly Conference, but it is only to see how the recording steward could have made the mistake unintentionally by writing a figure "2" instead of a "1," thus making a difference of $100 on the Record.

Very respectfully,
W. L. ANDERSON.

"SHUT YOUR ASHPAN."

A traveler writes: "I saw a significant sign painted conspicuously beside the track on an Eastern railroad. It read: 'Shut your ashpan.' I asked a friend in the car with me what the meaning of it was. He said: 'That is for the engineer. We are coming to a long wooden bridge, and the company didn't want any hot coals from the locomotive dropped on it. They might very easily set the bridge on fire!' Thinking over this caution, it occurred to me how many calamities the world would be spared if there were no hot, provoking words dropping around. I have seen a whole neighborhood set by the ears by a few words from an indiscreet talker. We are among very combustible stuff in the shape of men's angry passions. It would be well if we heeded the warning, 'Shut your ashpan.'"—Herald and Presbyter.

No man would think of maintaining a high speed encompassed with weights. The lads who run for a prize litter the course with garments flung away in their eager haste. There would be little difficulty in maintaining an intense and ardent spirit if we were more faithful in dealing with the habits and indulgences which cling around us and impede our steps. Thousands of Christians are like water-logged vessels. They can not sink; but they are so saturated with inconsistencies and worldliness and permitted evil that they can only be towed with difficulty into the celestial port.—Rev. F. B. Meyer.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. H. P. Lewis: "For the first time in over thirty years I find myself in charge of a young man's circuit. For the first time in many years the people of Yazoo circuit have for their pastor an old man. Some are pleased, and, I suppose, some are otherwise. Some of our young preachers—Ellis, King, and, perhaps, others—married here, and I want to say for the encouragement of others, there are other young women here who might be persuaded to join our Conference. There are many noble young people here of both sexes. So far they have treated this preacher with great kindness and respect. May the God of love and mercy watch over each one, and keep them from the snare of the fowler and the way of evil men! Our congregations are good. The best of order prevails, and good attention paid to the reading and expounding of the Word of Life. We have some good people here, and some who are not so good. Would that all our stewards, and others, were men of 'solid piety;' but they are not. I regret that 'family worship' is so much neglected here. How we need a revival of Holy-Ghost religion! I am spending this week with my family in Jackson. Commencement exercises of Millsaps College is on hand. I want to say here, for the information of all concerned, our two youngest boys, James and Osmond, have advanced more rapidly, and learned more here in eight months, than they have in all during the last three years. Do not be afraid to send your sons to Millsaps College. We are still in the boarding-house business, and we want at least twenty or twenty-five young men to come and board with us, who come here to study and acquire an education. God bless the faculty and friends of Millsaps College, together with the founder of the college."

Rev. D. P. Bradford: "East End, Meridian, Miss., is still moving on pretty well. Our Sunday-school, under the efficient superintendency of Bro. J. E. Watts, has never been better. The congregations comfortably fill the auditorium morning and night. We have had about sixty accessions during the year (since the middle of January). I find it here as elsewhere, however: if you wish to run your course smoothly, it is best to say but little about discipline, for when you begin to exercise it, you find but little support. We have been trying very hard to get our young people enlisted in church work, but in this we find great difficulty. Out of a membership of some three hundred, not a single young man will pray in public. After faithful pastoral investigation, I find not over one-half dozen young ladies in the church who profess to be religious. While the above is sadly true, we have some as good and truly religious people as I have ever been associated with. Many of these profess sanctification, and many others who are trying to live it, but do not profess it. We are having no friction on this subject, but trying to be more religious, and to get so far advanced in the divine life that our charity will help us to believe that others can enjoy as rich experiences as ourselves without making high claims. In other words, that the possession of a fortune is not contingent upon the publication of the fact."

OUR EXCELSIOR ART BIBLE.

In accordance with our motto, "Better and Better," we have gotten out a Bible which is superior to any hitherto offered. Besides the Holman self-pronouncing feature and all the Oxford Helps, it has the Combination feature, i. e., the revised version in foot notes, and also contains a number of magnificent illustrations, sixty-four New and Beautiful Full-page Phototype Engravings.

These Magnificent Illustrations represent the most important Scenes and Events in the Sacred Scriptures, and are the work of eminent artists. A large number of prominent Clergymen and Religious Journals have endorsed our Combination Edition of the Holy Scriptures and have given it strong recommendations.

In mechanical workmanship, printing and binding, these Bibles are superb, while at the same time our prices are very low.

No subjects are so well adapted for Illustration by Superb Works of Art as the Grand Scenes and Events described in the Holy Bible. And no other subjects have so occupied the Thought and Genius of the World's Greatest Artists.

The reader has all the most Important Scenes and Events of the Sacred Scriptures placed before him, and is delighted with the Artistic Beauty of these Unrivalled Engravings.

THE PRICE.

This magnificent Bible is catalogued by large Northern publishers at $6. We sell it to our subscribers for $3 on condition that they pay up all arrearages and pay their subscription a full year in advance.

THURSDAY, JUNE 29, 1899.

IS AN EDUCATION WORTH THE COST?

Never before, perhaps, in the history of the world has the power of knowledge been so generally appreciated as at present, especially among the citizens of this Republic. The people in no other country, unless it is the Germans, believe more firmly in education, or display greater interest therein, than do the people of the United States. American colleges and universities receive larger and more frequent gifts from our millionaires than do any other class of institutions.

But while a large proportion of our people seem to be thoroughly awake to the importance of education, there are not a few who fancy that education, except of the most rudimentary sort, is of little practical value in the battle of life, and can be dispensed with without serious loss. Some, because they have succeeded fairly well without college or high-school training, conclude that their children can do likewise; hence they are no friends to colleges. They forget, however, that the average intelligence of our population is constantly advancing, and that, in consequence, the ignorant will be at ever-increasing disadvantage as the years go by. When the educated and uneducated come into competition, the uneducated man is almost certain to be worsted, and, in many cases, driven to the wall. There is scarcely a single employment in which an education is not a decided advantage, be it farming, railroading, manufacturing, or any other. In fact, for the most lucrative positions it is absolutely essential. By increasing the bread-winning capacity of the masses, education does no little to lessen poverty and diminish petty vices.

"Thirty years ago," as Dr. W. W. Smith points out, "a man might put up prescriptions as a druggist's clerk for six months, and then turn himself loose on the community as a doctor. Or he might read law in a lawyer's office, and go at once to the bar for all the business he could get. But now all this is changed. The would-be lawyer or physician must now spend from three to four years in the study of his profession before being admitted to his degree, and prepared to run the gauntlet of the State Boards of Examinations.

A good education furnishes a handle, so to speak, with which to grasp the opportunities of life and turn them to advantage. It provides its possessor with a keen and trusty broad-sword with which to fight the battle of life successfully. It is stated that of the total population of the United States, only one-half of one per cent. is college bred. Yet from this small number 36 per cent. of our congressmen, 45 per cent. of our senators, 56 per cent. of our Vice-Presidents, 83 per cent. of the Supreme Judges, and 70 per cent. of our Presidents have been chosen. College men, as a rule, become the leaders of thought and action wherever they go.

It is a remarkable fact that of the fifty-six signers of the Declaration of Independence, forty-two had a liberal education. Whatever theories men may entertain with regard to equal rights, in no country will ignorance long be allowed to exercise control of affairs. Intelligence is sure, sooner or later, to assert its regal authority, and wield dominion over the ignorant and the incapable.

The fact that men like Ben Franklin and Horace Greely and Abraham Lincoln reached the top of the ladder without the benefits of college training is no conclusive argument against the desirableness of such training. These men of iron will, and others like them, have succeeded, not because of the lack of college education, but in spite of such deficiency.

The increase that culture makes to our capacity for enjoyment is not the least of its manifold advantages. The educated man has a multitude of sources of pleasure, inspiration, and instruction to where the uneducated has one. Nature speaks to him in a thousand ways, and in language eloquent with truth and suggestiveness. The past is an open page that he reads with eager interest, while the present, with its busy scenes, its mighty movements, and instant changes, is unfolded before him like a vast panorama.

Since the benefits of education are so numerous and splendid, no pain or expense should be spared for the attainment thereof. Says Mr. O. S. Marden: "Do you long for an education? Would you, if necessary, wear threadbare clothes in college, and board yourself? Would you, like Thurlow Reed, study nights by the light of a camp-fire in a sugar orchard? Would you be disheartened by Wilberforce's suggestion to a student of law, 'You must make up your mind to live like a hermit and work like a horse?' Do you love learning well enough to walk forty miles, like Abraham Lincoln, to obtain a book you could not afford to buy?"

AT MILLSAPS.

It was our privilege to attend the commencement exercises of Millsaps College, with the exception of those held previous to our arrival on Saturday afternoon. A report of the entire proceedings appear in this issue from the pen of Rev. M. M. Black. Owing to the prevalence of yellow fever at the opening of the session the enrollment was less than last year. The future is bright with promise. The indications are that the attendance at the next session will break all previous records. The work of both faculty and students is worthy of high praise. It would be hard to find anywhere so large a number of students with so high an average for satisfactory class-work and for general deportment. The sessions of the Board of Trustees were pleasant and harmonious. To Dr. J. W. Key, Bro. T. P. Barr and Bishop C. B. Galloway and their families we are indebted for cordial hospitalities. We are also under obligations to Bro. W. A. Gunning for a delightful carriage drive to all parts of the city in company with Bishop Candler.

THE MILLSAPS COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT.

The seventh session of Millsaps College has just closed, the commencement exercises having been held June 16 to 20, inclusive.

The first thing on the program was the Freshman Prize Declamation Contest, which took place in the college chapel Friday morning, June 16, the names of the participants being as follows: W. M. Buie, W. L. Duren, J. H. Grice, J. B. Howell, A. J. McLaurin, Jr.; W. T. Rogers, A. Thompson, and W. A. Williams. The speeches were all well rendered, several of them particularly so. The medal was awarded to Mr. W. L. Duren, who declaimed with fine effect "Mr. Bryan's speech before the Chicago Convention."

The champion debate which took place Friday night between representatives of the Lamar and Galloway literary societies was one of the most interesting features of the commencement. The young men who took part showed themselves to be excellent debaters, and their speeches aroused no little enthusiasm. The subject debated was a live one, and was thus stated: "Resolved, That the United States should adopt the policy of Territorial Expansion." The representatives of the Lamar Society were Messrs. T. W. Holloman and J. A. Teat, who spoke on the affirmative side. Messrs. J. B. Mitchell and J. T. McCafferty spoke on the negative in behalf of the Galloway Society, and argued so well as to win the decision of the judges. Mr. J. B. Mitchell was the fortunate winner of the medal offered by the two societies to the best debater.

The Sophomore Oratorical Contest for the Oscar-Kearney Andrews medal took place Saturday morning the declaimers being as follows: R. A. Clark, L. W. Felder, S. L. Field, J. B. Mitchell, R. P. Neblett, N. V. Robbins, Harry P. Sneed, H. O. White, and G. Q. Whitfield, the last-mentioned being the medalist. None of the awards, however, save in the case of the debater's medal, were announced until Tuesday morning. The declamations on this occasion were regarded by many as unusually fine. In the afternoon several young ministers took part in a hymn and Scripture-reading contest for the Gunning medal. The young men were deserving of a much larger audience than the one that assembled to hear them, the fact that the contest was in the afternoon having operated to keep many away. The offering of this prize is doing much to improve the style of reading of the ministerial students who attend the college. The committee awarded the medal in this contest to Mr. W. W. Holmes.

The commencement sermon, Sunday morning, was preached in the First Methodist Church, Jackson, by Bishop Warren A. Candler to a packed house, many not being able to get in. The Bishop chose for his theme, "The Mediation of Christ," using as a text Col. i, 8-10, and though he preached nearly an hour and a quarter, such was the charm of his eloquence that none seemed to tire in the least. It was one of the grandest and most powerful sermons we have ever heard. Humor and pathos, brilliance and depth of thought, originality and great fervor, characterized this splendid discourse, but, above all, it glowed with the light of love, and brought into wondrous clearness the fundamental truths of the gospel. Among other things, the Bishop showed that so-called "Christian Science," Theosophy, Spiritualism, etc., are but the reappearance in modified form of certain dangerous errors that Christianity had to deal with during the first two centuries of her existence. No mere synopsis, however, can do the sermon justice.

The sermon, Sunday night, before the Y. M. C. A. was preached by Dr. W. T. Bolling, of Shreveport, La., his text being the last charge of David to Solomon: "Be thou strong, therefore, and show thyself a man." (I. Kings ii, 2.) It was an exposition of the qualities which go to make up Christian manhood, and abounded in wholesome instruction, vigorous thought, and striking illustration. The Doctor is an orator of no mean order, and his sermon was greatly enjoyed by all who heard it.

On account of the serious illness of Mrs. Murrah, wife of the president of the college, the exercises Monday morning were held in the First Methodist Church instead of in the college chapel, the order of the day being a literary address by Bishop Candler, who was thus made to do double duty. The sermon, Sunday morning, had whetted the intellectual appetite of the Jacksonites for more of Bishop Candler's eloquence, and so he was a second time greeted by a large audience. The subject of his address was, "The Growth of Peace Sentiment in the World." It was a most masterly and pleasing presentation of this important subject, and was listened to with the keenest appreciation and the warmest enthusiasm. By an appeal to history and to the present trend of events he showed most conclusively that the glad day long heralded by prophet, sung by poet, and longed for by philanthropists, when war shall be no more, is not far in the future, but even now is almost at hand. In closing, he pointed out that commerce, education, and Christianity are the mighty forces which are swiftly and surely bringing about the abolition of war.

Tuesday was Commencement Day proper. First came four orations by representatives of the Literary Department, the speakers and subjects being as follows: H. T. Carley, "Socialism and Good Government;" A. W. Dobyns, "The Philippines—They Must Not Be Annexed;" J. T. Lewis, "The Philosophy of Life;" H. B. Watkins, "He Fell in Love with His Work." Mr. G. B. Power, the representative of the Law Department, then delivered an oration on "Conformity to Law the Condition of Success." As Mr. Power two years ago won the senior orator's medal, known as the Ligon medal, he this year generously waived the right of contending for same. The orations by the members of the graduating class were of a high order, and gave evidence of talent as well as of culture. President Murrah, in his usual impressive and felicitous manner, next delivered the baccalaureate address, which abounded in wholesome counsel and earnest exhortation. His wise and kindly words will not soon be forgotten by the class of '99. Then followed the conferring of degrees and diplomas. Those who received the degree of B. A. are: W. E. M. Brogan, H. T. Carley, A. W. Dobyns, H. A. Jones, E. L. Wall, J. P. Wall, H. B. Watkins. The degree of B. S. was conferred upon George Lott Harrell, and the degree of Ph. B. upon John T. Lewis. Following are the names of the graduates in law, twelve in all: Percy Lee Clifton, W. U. Corley, W. H. Fitzhugh, M. C. Foy, Garner W. Green, Robert S. Hall, R. E. Humphreys, H. V. Leverett, W. H. Livingstone, George B. Power, William W. Simontown, and Eugene Terry. If reports be true, the graduates just turned out are splendid fellows, and are, most of them, destined to make their mark in the world. The awarding of medals next excited the most eager attention, the speech of presentation being made by Bishop Galloway. The announcement that the senior orator's medal had been awarded to Mr. John T. Lewis was greeted with a tremendous burst of applause, and was the signal for a rush of the students to the platform, from which the victor was borne aloft in triumph by his friends. After several announcements, the benediction was pronounced by Bishop Galloway, and the session of '98-'99 was at an end.

During commencement a strong Alumni Association was formed, the following being elected officers: W. H. Fitzhugh (B. A., '97; LL.B., '99), president; R. B. Ricketts (B. S., '98), vice-president; H. A. Jones (B. A., '99), secretary and treasurer; J. T. Calhoun (B. A., '96), orator; W. B. Jones (B. A., '97), essayist.

According to the testimony of the faculty, the morale of the student body the past session has been most excellent. The young men of the college have been, as a rule, more studious and orderly than those of any previous year.

Seldom has any college commencement been rendered so sad as was this one by the death, on Sunday morning, of Mrs. Hanner, the lovely and accomplished wife of Prof. J. P. Hanner, and daughter of President Fitzhugh, of Belhaven College. None knew her but to love her, and though she has been translated to a fairer clime, she will ever live in the thoughts and affections of those to whom she was so dear.

We were surprised that so small a per cent. of the preachers of the patronizing Conferences were in attendance. The Methodists of Mississippi ought, it seems to us, to do all in their power to make this a big occasion.

No changes were made in the faculty, which is not a whit behind that of any institution of like grade in the South.

The next session of the college will open Sept. 27.

MUSEUMS OF INIQUITY.

There is great need in these days that the Commandment, "Thou shalt not steal," serve as a text in many pulpits. It is said of the late beloved Dr. J. B. Walker that one of his most powerful and effective sermons was on this Commandment.

In this day and generation, in the wild rush after wealth and the possible saving of a few dollars, some have consciences that will not stand in the light of the judgment day.

While crimes are being committed every day against individuals and corporations, there are none who suffer more than the railroads by reason of dishonest men called "scalpers," and those with a lack of self-respect who patronize them. The business of railway-ticket scalping is, in the language of one of the judges of the Supreme Court, "a fruitful source of crime," and the eminent jurist spoke knowingly.

While we are lifting up our voices against the common evils of the day, it is surprising how little has been said against these men who sell fraudulent goods and against those who purchase. The man who purchases a stolen article is no better than he who sells.

The business of ticket scalping offers a premium for forgery, deceit, and lying. The passenger who signs a name not his own on a railway ticket bought of a scalper is guilty of forgery every time he does it, and this is done many times every day in almost every city of the land. It is prohibited and prevented by law in Canada, in England, and in Europe, and an effort to bring about the same result in the United States is being made.

The following is a gist of the bill which will be presented to Congress:

"Section 1—Requires all ticket agents to show proper authority for sale of tickets, thus protecting the public against impositions of all kinds.

"Sec. 2—Restricts passenger officials from supplying transportation tickets for sale to other than authorized agents, and provides for the resale of transferrable tickets for personal use in prosecution of a journey.

"Sec. 3—Provides punishment for the railroad official or agent or other person who may violate the act.

"Sec. 4—Compels a proper and safe redemption of a whole or partly used ticket, and provides redress to aggrieved party in case of failure to redeem.

"Sec. 5—Provides that refusal on the part of railroad officials to promptly redeem tickets shall be a misdemeanor, and subjects them to fine and imprisonment.

"Sec. 6—Provides fine and imprisonment for counterfeiting or forging of transportation."

As right-thinking men, let us give this measure our hearty support; let us lend our sympathy and aid to those who are leaving nothing undone to bring about this much-needed reformation. J. W. A.

INIQUITY IN POLITICS.

Jackson, Miss., June 19, 1899.

There is talk here at the capital that the good people of the State ought to rise up in mass meetings, county by county, and condemn the order of the Hinds county Executive Committee, which allows other than qualified electors to participate in the primary election on July 1. This order of the county committee, which is violative of the laws and the Constitution—in flagrant disregard of the order of the State Democratic Executive Committee that none but qualified electors shall participate in the selection of the delegates to the State Convention—permits 815 persons to vote in the Hinds county primary, whose names were stricken from the whisky petition in Hinds county because they were disqualified, for failure to pay poll tax or otherwise, from voting under the laws and the Constitution.

It is charged that there is an office trust here at the capital, backed by a powerful whisky ring, which seeks to parcel out the offices, high and low, that belong to free-born Mississippians. It is said that its magnitude and alleged power are held as a menace over county and legislative candidates, who are sought to be coerced into silence, if not into becoming a part of this great octopus.

Bishop Galloway has reprobated in words that burn the allowing of disqualified persons to participate in the naming of officers charged with the enforcement of the law. The Baptist has cried out and spared not against this unrighteous order.

Dr. Searcy, the well-known editor of the Baptist, in conversation with the Picayune correspondent, this morning, said it was not improbable that the good people of the State—if the Hinds county committee did not rescind its order—will hold meetings in town and county, and protest by resolutions, and urge the people of the seventy-five counties of the State to rebuke the actors in this matter by defeating them in their respective counties.—Picayune.

[Believing that justice and righteousness should prevail in politics as well as in every other realm of human activity, we strongly condemn the action of the Executive Committee of Hinds county. If that iniquitous order is not rescinded, the good people all over the State ought to overwhelm with an avalanche of ballots every candidate who has any complicity in the affair. Tools of a rotten whisky ring ought never to be entrusted with official position.—EDITOR.]

GONE HOME.

Bro. J. L. S. Hill, an old and prominent member of the church in Okolona, died here yesterday (Sunday) morning, and was buried at old Wesley Chapel, near Houston. Bro. Hill was prominent as a man and Christian; often a delegate to the Annual Conference, and statistical secretary of that body. A more extended notice after awhile.

EPWORTH LEAGUE DEPARTMENT.

"ALL FOR CHRIST."

REV. THOMAS B. CLIFFORD, Jackson, La., EDITOR.

The West Point Conference was well attended.

We shall expect great things from the young Mississippians as the result of this enthusiastic gathering.

We hope to be able, in the next issue of the ADVOCATE, to give an account of the services conducted.

Herewith we publish a clipping from the New Orleans Picayune which furnishes information as to officers for the ensuing year:

"The State officers of the Epworth League were chosen last night at a late hour, as follows, and Vicksburg was chosen as the next place for holding the Conference: President, H. Walter Featherstun, Brookhaven, Miss.; first vice-president, W. F. Lagrone, West Point, Miss.; second vice-president, Miss Grace Loper, Wesson, Miss.; third vice-president, Mrs. G. H. Matthis, Columbus, Miss.; corresponding secretary, Miss Vio Thompson, Tupelo, Miss.; superintendent Junior Leagues, Miss Stella Boothe, Sardis, Miss.; associate editor for Epworth department in NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, Rev. H. G. Hawkins, Madison, Miss.; corresponding secretary and treasurer, D. T. Patton, Jackson, Miss."

We trust the Leaguers in New Orleans and on the line of the Queen and Crescent route will read and regard the announcement anent the Indianapolis Conference in our column this week.

The Burgundy Street (New Orleans) Epworth League entertained the Sunday-school scholars and their parents Tuesday night, June 20.

Those who attended were admitted only by printed tickets, which had been previously distributed with care. Refreshments were served in the basement of the church, addresses delivered on Sunday-school work, and delightful music furnished by the League orchestra.

It was estimated that between two and three hundred people were in attendance, all of whom seemed pleased and profited by what they saw and heard.

It is expected that it will arouse fresh interest and increase the attendance upon this already flourishing Sunday-school. Thus the Epworth League proves to be the pastor's helper in all the work of the church.

Much credit must be given to Morris DePass, Esq., president of the League, for the success of the undertaking. For many years he has taken an interest in League work in New Orleans, at one time having been president of the City Union.

A League with thirteen members was organized Sunday evening, June 18, at Kosciusko, Miss., by the pastor, Rev. W. T. J. Sullivan, D. D. Prof. Boyd, the efficient principal of the public school, was elected president, and we shall expect to hear of a large increase in members and interest as the days go by.

The Queen and Crescent Route announces a rate of $22.25 to the Epworth League Convention, to be held at Indianapolis. Tickets will be sold July 18 and 19, good to return until July 26. An extension until Aug. 20 may be had by depositing ticket with joint agent at Indianapolis on or before July 24 and making an additional payment of fifty cents.

NOTICE.

To the Members of the Shreveport District Conference:

BRETHREN: Since my last notice was written the schedule of the Shreveport and R. R. Valley R. R. has been changed. Train leaves Shreveport at 3 P. M. instead of 4 P. M.

TO THE PUBLIC.

It becomes necessary just at this time for the Methodist ministers of Water Valley to make a statement of facts for the information of the public:

1. As ministers, we stand committed to the righteous cause involved.

2. We reaffirm our endorsement of the service rendered us by the editor of Columbus Commercial.

3. We assure the public that Main Street Church is a unit, and that Wood Street, with minor exception, is true to our cause. There is no chasm created in our city Methodism as some believe.

4. The legal status and the policy for our advance forbid that we enter into a personal controversy, or that our friends in Water Valley commit themselves in public print.

5. The ground of our legal steps is not personal nor spiteful, but (1) to defend the oppressed poor; (2) to maintain the character of our Bro. Gibbs in the face of the slanderous attack made in the legal injunction.

(Signed) J. C. PARK,
W. S. LAGRONE,
E. H. ROOK,
M. L. BURTON.

PROTECT OUR FOOD.

The doctors inform us that alum is a poison, and that alum baking powders should be avoided because they make the food unwholesome. Prominent hygienists who have given the matter most study, regard these powders as an evil that should be suppressed by State action. In Minnesota and Wisconsin alum powders are not permitted to be sold unless they are branded to warn consumers of their true character, while in the District of Columbia the authorities have, under the direction of Congress, adopted regulations to prohibit the use of alum in bread altogether.

Are not the people of other States, as well as those of Minnesota and Wisconsin, entitled to warning of a danger which is apparently menacing them at close hand, and is not the whole country entitled to absolute protection, as the people of the District of Columbia are protected, by legislation which is entirely prohibitive?

Until we can have protection in the form of a statute, how can our State boards of health, State analysts or food commissions better serve the public than by publishing in the newspapers from time to time the names of the baking powders which they find to be made from alum?

Meantime, it will aid the housewife in designating the alum powders to remember that all powders sold at twenty-five cents or less per pound are of this dangerous class. Pure cream of tartar powders are usually sold at from forty-five to fifty cents a pound.

AN IMPORTANT CHANGE AT WHITWORTH.

In order to put Whitworth in line with the present policy of our church, President Chambers surrendered to the Board of Trustees all authority to select teachers and fix their salaries. It was his desire to surrender his contract in entirety, but the Board thought it best for the present that President Chambers should retain charge of the Boarding Department. The "farming-out policy" has ceased at Whitworth, and the trustees intend to devote its entire income to the strengthening of the faculty and providing increased facilities.

We will have other things to write you in this connection.

B. F. JONES,
Pres. Board of Trustees.

Reduced Rates for Summer Trips.

Commencing June 1, and continuing to and including September 30, 1899, the Texas & Pacific Railway Company will sell round-trip Summer Tourist Tickets to points in Alabama, Arkansas, Colorado, District of Columbia, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, New York, North Carolina, North Dakota, Ohio, Ontario, Pennsylvania, Quebec, South Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia, West Virginia, and Wisconsin, at a considerable reduction in rates.

International Epworth League Conference.

The International Epworth League Conference meets in Indianapolis, Indiana, July 20-23, 1899.

Louisiana should have a good delegation present. It will be stimulating and recreating to every Leaguer who avails himself of this extraordinary opportunity. I say extraordinary, because of the enthusiasm which 35,000 Leaguers will generate, and the cheapness of the trip, involving but a nominal expenditure of money, with all the comforts of modern travel.

The "Cotton Belt Route" has asked me to secure a delegation from North Louisiana, and has offered the lowest possible rates for tickets. The round trip for each delegate will cost $22 from Shreveport. These tickets will be extended to August 20 if application is made at Conference Railroad Headquarters at Indianapolis. The whole expense of trip will be about $40—not necessarily more!

I will be glad to correspond with any persons desiring to take this excursion. It is necessary to have 15 persons before we can charter a car. Let me hear from Leaguers at Homer, Arcadia, Ruston, Gibbs, Arizona, Lisbon, Mansfield, Coushatta, Minden, and Shreveport at once!

NOTICE.

To the Mississippi Conference Brotherhood—

DEAR BRETHREN: For eighteen months there had not been a death in our ranks, and hence no assessment. Now comes Assessment No. 21, on account of the death of Bro. J. M. Pugh, who has always been a faithful member, paying promptly all his assessments and dues. Let us make prompt payment of this assessment, and let us appeal to our several congregations for honorary members. It is a good time to increase our membership. Many of our laymen would join us if the matter was presented to them and explained.

GONE HOME.

Sister Grace, wife of R. C. Grace of our Conference, died on the seventh instant, and was buried at Plaquemine-Brulee on the eighth by the writer. She died in the triumphs of a living faith, even with praise on her lips. Let prayer be made for the sorrowing husband and relatives.

I. T. REAMES.

P. S.—This notice should have been sent earlier this week but for having been quite sick myself. I am thankful to be at my work again.

A Healthful Drink for Hot Weather.

This is the twenty-first season for that famous and healthful drink, Hires Rootbeer. The campaign has opened. The war against thirst is on, and of course Hires will reign supreme in an undisputed realm of its own. In all of these years it has stood proof against imitation and counterfeit, and now in its strength of full growth rises far above any serious competition.

Summer and Hires Rootbeer are associated in our mind as things inseparable. We look forward to that as a Summer beverage as we look for the rising of the sun. It has been of inestimable value to thousands of people, supplying them at once with a delicious, healthful and thirst-quenching drink, occupying the same place at the family table as tea or coffee.

Its growth has been rapid and remarkable, long since reaching proportions never dreamed of by its proprietors. One of its remarkable features is its trifling cost, one package may be converted into 5 gallons of this delicious, sparkling, temperance drink, containing medicinal properties of well-known virtue.

SPANISH-AMERICAN WAR PANORAMA

is one of the war books which is likely to be in continuous demand. It is a panoramic record of the triumph of Yankee Doodle. The eagle flaps his wings on every page, and "Old Glory" waves around and above every scene. Prominent officers connected with the war are here portrayed, as well as many of the "men behind the guns." Military life is pictured to the eye, from recruiting to guard mount and skirmish line. Nor is the ludicrous omitted. The company cook receives the attention due to his importance; the mess is shown; cavalry scenes are given; the hospital arrangements are depicted; the heroines of the Red Cross service are displayed; street scenes in Havana, Santiago and elsewhere are unrolled, the new citizens or subjects (which are they?) of Uncle Sam appear and disappear as the leaves are turned.

In a word, the gazer visits the new localities and sees the tumultuous new life, without the risk or expense of a sea voyage.

The Album is 5½x8 inches, weighs 12 ounces, printed on finest coated paper.

THREE GATES.

If you are tempted to reveal
A tale some one to you has told
About another, make it pass,
Before you speak, three gates of gold:

These narrow gates: First, "Is it true?"
Then, "Is it needful?" In your mind
Give truthful answer And the next
Is last and narrowest—"Is it kind?"

And if to reach your lips at last
It passes through these gateways three,
Then you may tell the tale, nor fear
What the result may be.

—Selected.

HOW CAN COMMON LIFE BE GODLIKE?

It is not the brilliant parterres of color in the flower garden which give its chief value to a farm. They are striking and beautiful, but far inferior in importance to the acres devoted to raising vegetables, the meadows reserved for mowing, the pastures set apart for grazing, or even the rough wood-lots which yield regularly their cords of fuel for the home or the market. So it is not the showy, exceptional events of life which determine principally its character and influence, but rather the spirit and aim which the performance of the often monotonous round of ordinary duties exhibits. Indeed, it is only rarely that he who fails to show fidelity in these proves to possess the energy, skill and good sense which emergencies peculiarly demand.

All this is according to the divine will and plan. Everybody instinctively distrusts a religion which does not shape and rule, at least so far as the evident motives behind them go, the common things of life, and is a religion of Sunday and the house of God alone. The Almighty has caused human life to consist chiefly of comparatively inconspicuous matters, and has bidden us dignify and ennoble them by illustrating in them our devotion to him. This is as merciful on his part as it is wise. Most men or women can not do great things, but must live always on the level plane of ordinary life. There, however, everyone, no matter how humble, feeble, or poor, can shine by loving loyalty to God in what we call little things. Thus each of us has as fair and full an opportunity to honor God and win his approval as anyone else.

Common life thus becomes Godlike when God's appreciative interest in it is comprehended and the honest effort is made habitually to sanctify it by living as we have reason to believe that Jesus would live if he were here in the flesh and in circumstances like our own. It must not be forgotten, also, that the most uneventful career, though outwardly it may appear actually insipid, is somewhat unlike every other, because of our inherent differences of individuality. God has implanted in everybody something of his own nature, and common life becomes Godlike as fast and as far as this inborn likeness is given room for development and is cultivated. It is only the morally blind, the stupid or the sorely depressed who seriously doubt that common life can be Godlike. It becomes such whenever and to the degree in which it reveals the Divine Spirit at work in a human heart.—Congregationalist.

UNLICENSED SPEAKING.

Few of us have such real things to talk about that we do not at times discuss the petty and ignoble. We profess to be interested in "the good, the beautiful, the true," and yet we turn aside from considering such ideal topics for petty criticism of the affairs of others.

"I never speak ill of anyone," said a lady, noted in her small world for harsh, personal onslaughts; "but, of course, I must tell the truth!"

And so, if it be actually true that her friend has a physical deformity or moral defect, she feels quite at liberty to allude to it.

Rogers, the poet, won a reputation for caustic speech, but he had a great distaste for the "small beer" of personal gossip.

"I wonder how the Blanks are able to keep a carriage!" a lady once said to him in his own house, and the poet at once turned to a servant to say: "Go to blank square with Mrs. Proctor's and my compliments, and ask how the family contrive to pay for their carriage."

It was a cutting reproof, but the object of it was a woman of good sense and good nature, and she acknowledged the lesson to be a deserved one.

Unlicensed speaking springs too often from a desire to be clever and witty. "When I was young," said a man whose tongue was dipped in gall, "I used to say good-natured things, and nobody listened to me. Now that I am old I say ill-natured things, and everybody listens."

But to speak even from the low plane of morality, where expediency reigns, it does not pay. To wound one's own self-respect for the sake of a brief applause is a poor investment, a losing game.

"Yes, I did think of retorting," said a young man who had suffered in silence over a brilliant, but brutal attack, "but somehow I didn't do it. I said to myself, 'You won't lose anything by remembering your own dignity.'"—Youth's Companion.

OUR FORMER YEARS.

We can never part from our former years. They are part of our lives and record, of our thinking and motives, of our aims and purposes, of our judgments and consciences, of our memories and musings, of our congratulations and remorse, of our joys and sorrows, of our trials and triumphs, of our defeats and victories, of our past and present circumstances and associations, of our homes and churches, of our pleasures and business, of our faith and hope, of our time and eternity, of our final judgment and heaven or hell. Indeed, they are so interwoven with everybody and everything and with ourselves, as to have become, to all intents and purposes, part of ourselves. How joyous, or sad, must this make us on the eve of a New Year!

Under such reflections, it is the part of holy wisdom and holy courage to turn towards the coming years, be they many or few—or if there be but one—and, as they are to become as much a part of ourselves as those which are past, see well to it that they are of such a high and holy and heavenly character as we shall be glad to meet and greet before the great white throne.—Christian Standard.

PREPARATION FOR THE SABBATH.

The Sabbath comes to us week after week with so fair a gift in its hand, so gracious a smile on its face, so divine an elevation in its heart, that it behooves us to make some preparation for so welcome a guest.

We do not fail to set our houses in order, and appoint our tables fittingly when friends whom we delight to honor are expected within our doors. There are days which we all keep with an extraordinary splendor, anniversaries, gala days, fete days. This seventh-day festival comes to us from God himself, the ever renewed expression of his gentle thought of us, his children. Can we do otherwise than greet it with joy and receive it with gratitude?

To prepare aright for the Sabbath we should lay our worldly cares aside. Even if the week has been full of disappointments, embarrassments and perplexities, we shall the better gain strength to enter on another wrestle with such cares and solicitudes, by bringing serenity and patience to the Sabbath. This blessed interlude is meant as a truce to the week-day strife and struggle. Let us take the full benefit of it, with thankfulness in our souls.

A good preparation for the Sabbath, and a practical one, is found in the study of the Sabbath-school lesson with the children. They will get more profit from the Scriptures if they study them intelligently, than if they merely skim them over, or go to the class without having mastered the golden thoughts embodied in the sacred text. A part of Saturday evening might advantageously be devoted to family Bible study in houses where the children are beyond the early bedtime period.—Intelligencer.

GRAND NATIONAL PRIZE OF 16,600 FRANCS AT PARIS

BE FRANK.

The Christian ought to be a thoroughly frank man. He can afford to be perfectly candid, open-hearted, utterly sincere. Being such, let him not for a moment seek to make it appear that when he commits a sin it is something else. It is to be feared that some Christians, in order to maintain a pet theory, are quite prone to call their sins mistakes. This is to shift the emphasis of responsibility. It is to disguise the real nature of the evil committed. It is to make a thing, an act, appear what it really is not. To call poison by some other name does not change the character of the thing itself. Let us be perfectly frank with ourselves and with others. Let us candidly acknowledge our sins. Let us be true to ourselves, true to facts, and true to the right meaning of things.—Exchange.

LIKE A THIEF IN THE NIGHT,

Malaria creeps into the system and leaves a poison which saps its vitality until the well-known symptoms of CHILLS AND FEVER, INTERMITTENT FEVER, CONGESTION, BLOODY URINE, etc., will show their snake-like heads. Fortunately there is an antidote in DICKS' CHILLIFUGE, which absolutely exterminates Malaria in a few hours; so pleasant to the taste that children love to take it. It banishes fevers like mist before the morning sun; brings as a gift rose cheeks, health, happiness, and makes life worth the living

ACKNOWLEDGE IT.

Alexander Pope wrote thus sagely: "A man should never be ashamed to own he has been in the wrong, which is but saying, in other words, that he is wiser to-day than he was yesterday." One of the hardest things for some people to do is to acknowledge that they have done anything particularly wrong. In a general way they will confess that they have not always done right, but when you point out some specific wrong they have committed, they refuse to own it. If, however, they be at last obliged to admit it, they will, quite likely, turn on you and say that you have done worse things. But this is unmanly. It is also unchristian. However humiliating it may be to us, it is greatly to our credit to frankly own our faults and profit by our failures. This is wisdom's way.—Exchange.

A mother, in bitter grief, bending over her dying child, was trying to soothe it by talking about heaven. She spoke of the glory there, of the brightness glowing all around, of the shining countenances of the holy angels; but presently a little voice stopped her, saying, "I should not like to be there, mother, for the light hurts my eyes." Then she changed the subject of her description, and spoke of the songs above, of the harpers harping on their golden harps, of the voices as the sound of many waters, of the new song which they sang before the throne; but the child said, "Mother, I can not bear any noise." Grieved and disappointed at her failure to speak words of comfort, she took the little one from its restless bed and enfolded it in her arms with all the tenderness of a mother's love. Then, as the little sufferer lay there, near to all it loved best in the world, conscious only as its life ebbed away of the nearness of love and care, the whisper came, "Mother, if heaven is like this, may Jesus take me there!"—Archdeacon Sinclair.

ALARMING.

Alcoholic stimulation, it has been stoutly asserted, will not thrive in competition with wholesome recreation and with the common use of light wines. Harper's Weekly, which can not be suspected of any sentiment in such matters, least of all of any cant, points to France as a melancholy demonstration of the falsity of the position. France is rapidly and alarmingly becoming a nation of drunkards, and yet nowhere are light wines cheaper or more abundant. Her sons and daughters are becoming inebriates, and yet nowhere has public generosity and private enterprise and benevolence provided more amusements and parks and other opportunities for the recreation of all classes. Even public sentiment despises a drunkard, and yet the men who helped make this sentiment are growing mandlin and bestial.

The degenerative effects of such habits are clearly seen in the decline of the morale and of the fecundity and physical strength of the nation. Children are fewer and less robust. Indeed, there is a startling increase of dwarfed and deformed children in ratio to the diminished total births. France is alarmed. At the crisis when she needs men, plenty of them, men robust in body and keen and patient in intellect, men of virtue and probity—she finds herself rocking fewer cradles, and the most of them occupied by the misshapen and morally obliquitous offspring of parents incapable of breeding men like those Napoleon led at Marengo and Austerlitz.—Western Advocate.

OUR $1 OFFER.

Much has been said about reducing the subscription price of the ADVOCATE. The only way in which a reduction can be brought about is by an increase in the number of subscribers. In order to facilitate this result, we make the following offer: Until further notice we will take new subscriptions at the rate of $1 for eight months. When seven thousand five hundred new names have been sent in at this rate with the cash, we will extend the time four months longer, thus reducing the price to $1 per annum. When the extension is made, old subscribers will get the benefit as well as new ones, provided they first pay up all arrearages. Of course, no commissions can be given under this offer. Address

OBITUARIES.

Obituaries of 200 words published free. For all words in excess of that number send one cent per word.

JOHNSON—Mrs. MATTIE A. JOHNSON (nee Moore) was born Aug. 13, 1839, and died April 23, 1899.

Sister Johnson was married to Dr. William H. Johnson, of sacred memory, who preceded her to heaven about five months. This marriage was consummated Sept. 29, 1863. To them were born four children—two boys and two girls. One son preceded the parents to the heavenly land. So half of the family have crossed over to their heavenly home. The rest are on their way.

Sister Johnson was a faithful member of the M. E. Church, South, at Paris, Miss., for thirty-odd years, always true to her church. The interest of the church was her interest. She was one of God's noble women, always on the side of right, outspoken against all wrong and immorality.

Never will this itinerant forget one cold, snowy day, driving to the gate of this hospitable home with wife and our little ones, cold and hungry; and how the good doctor and his big-hearted wife spared no effort to make us comfortable and happy. Their home was the preacher's home; liberal with their means; ever looking after their pastor and his family.

In the death of Sister Johnson the community has lost one of its best women, the church one of its best helpers, and the children as good a mother as ever lived to bless a home, and surely the preacher's loss is as great as any; but, thank God! our loss is her gain. This world is made poorer, but heaven richer.

Sister Johnson died in the full faith of our Christian religion. Just a few hours before her death I asked her how it was with her. She said she had made her peace with God some time ago, and all was well with her. She passed away as gently as a babe going to sleep in its mother's arms. "Oh, blessed sleep, from which none ever wake to weep!"

Sister Johnson leaves three children and many relations, with a host of friends, to mourn their loss; but, thank God! if we are faithful, we can all meet her in the "sweet bye-and-bye." Her pastor, R. P. GOAN.

ASHBY—WILLIAM C. ASHBY was born April 25, 1855, and died April 15, 1899. He joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1877 under the ministry of Bro. Finn, and was converted under the pastorate of M. H. Moore in 1888. He was always found on the side of truth and honesty. He loved his church and stood by its doctrines. He was a faithful and efficient steward.

About four years ago something like cancer of the bowels developed itself. From that time until his death he was almost a continual sufferer. He bore his suffering patiently, never murmuring or complaining, but was always resigned to the will of God. He often said that while his suffering was beyond description, that his joy and peace in trusting the Savior was greater than it all. It was a great pleasure to be with him. He often shouted and praised God when we would sing and pray with him, and as long as he had strength he would exhort all of his friends to lead godly lives and meet him in heaven. He would talk of dying as if he was going on a journey. His life, ever since he professed religion, corresponded with justice, mercy, and every good word and work. The church militant has lost a member and a pillar, but the church triumphant has received a blood-washed jewel. He has left a wife and eight children, and an extensive circle of friends, to deplore his loss. C. C. GRIFFIN.

ZINN—W. S. ZINN died of dropsy April 15, 1899, in Siste Spring, Miss., aged seventy years two months and twenty days; born in Georgia, near Milledgeville, Jasper county, and was removed to Pontotoc county with his parents while he was a small boy, and there remained a number of years. He was married to Miss Sophia Ann Goode in the year of 1852, on the ninth day of September. He joined the M. E. Church on trial when young, and about fifteen years ago joined at this place. Father has been a devoted Christian since. He held family prayers. He was always ready to administer to the wants of the poor and those in distress. A father, oh! so noble and good; a true husband and a companion for my dear mother, who has gone before. Father has gone to dwell with Jesus; gone to dwell with mother, brother, and sister, too. Father's dying testimony was this, "The Lord is with me;" then said, "Farewell," and handed his hands to us three children, and smiled a most beautiful smile, and then fell asleep in Jesus.

Oh, Father in heaven, sustain and help us each day we live to try to meet our dear parent who has gone on before us!

His daughter, MRS. WILLIE ZINN SHAW.

CALHOUN—Died at her home in Catahoula parish, La., in the seventy-third year of her age, on Sunday evening, May 14, 1899, MARY J., late consort of Dr. D. P. Calhoun. The deceased joined the church many years ago, and up to the time of her departure led a consistent Christian life. Being conscious almost to the hour of death, she expressed a readiness and willingness to obey the summons, saying that all was well with her. She bade her loved ones good-bye, pronouncing a benediction upon them, and quietly fell asleep in Jesus.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and, therefore, requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

Hall's Family Pills are the best.

Perhaps it were better for most of us to complain less of being misunderstood, and to take more care that we do not misunderstand other people. It ought to give us pause at a time to remember that each one has a stock of cut-and-dry judgments on his neighbors, and that the chances are that most of them are quite erroneous.—Churchman.

FOR OVER FIFTY YEARS

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used for children teething. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for Diarrhœa. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

He who is wise puts aside all claims which may dissipate his attention, and, confining himself to one branch, excels in that.—Goethe.

JOB EARNED HIS TITLE BY GREAT SUFFERING. Had he flourished in these days, his recourse for consolation would not have been the company of three nagging friends, but a bottle of DICKS' MUL-EN-OL, which has a wonderful power to dissipate the inflammation, cool the feverishness, and completely cure boils and carbuncles.

NAPOLEON LOST THE BATTLE OF LEIPSIC because of a fit of indigestion. One dose of DICKS' MUL-EN-OL would have given him instant relief, and the fate of the kingdoms of Europe been decided differently. It is really marvelous how quickly a colicky pain will vanish when a teaspoonful of Mul-en-ol in a wine-glass of hot water is taken. Try it; you will never suffer from colic.

28th ANNUAL CAMP MEETING

Seashore Camp Grounds.

Located on the Gulf Shore, with a frontage of 1,400 feet.

WILL OPEN (D. V.) ON WEDNESDAY, JULY 12, NEXT, AND CONTINUE FOR 8 OR 10 DAYS.

The Grounds are opened April 1, and closed Nov. 1, for occupying cottages and reception of visitors. Modern and ample accommodation have been provided for the multitudes that annually visit this refreshing and delightfully cool and bracing place of rest, free from malaria and contagious diseases.

The sea bathing is unsurpassed by any resort on the Mississippi Sound, while the supply of pure, sparkling drinking water is furnished by one of the finest of artesian wells, whose waters possess rare virtues.

The exhilarating sea breezes refresh the fatigued, and act as a tonic to the debilitated visitors from our smoke-enveloped and dust-stifling cities and towns. Boats for sailing and fishing always on hand. The drives along the seashore present magnificent views, and are over ten miles in length. Visitors are not expected to arrive or depart on the Sabbath day.

The L. and N. R. R. Company will place on sale the reduced rate of fare during the season, from all points on their lines, and secure a corresponding rate from all connecting lines. Tickets will be placed on sale July 5 to 22, inclusive, and be good to return on until Aug. 31. Two daily mail trains stop at the camp grounds, besides the accommodation and excursion trains, during the entire Summer season. A fine hotel, with a frontage of 175 feet, equipped with electric lights and all modern conveniences, has been erected.

All itinerant preachers of the Southern Methodist Church will be admitted into the grounds and provided with lodging accommodations in Wesley Hall free of charge.

The usual entrance fee will be in force this season. No charge will be exacted for entrance on the Sunday of the camp meeting. A cordial invitation is extended to all who desire to attend the camp meeting and spend a while on the camp ground.

Persons wishing to secure accommodations before and during camp meeting, or rent cottages for the season, will please communicate with W. L. Via, superintendent Camp Ground (Biloxi, P. O. 42, Miss.) or any of the following officers:

New Machine Offer.

By Far the Best We Have Ever Made.

Always on the watch for something good for our subscribers, we have succeeded in making arrangements whereby we can make a sewing machine offer which is far better than any we have been able hitherto to make. Read the following description and then read our offer:

No. 4 IMPERIAL.

THE IMPERIAL HIGH-ARM SINGER will be found the perfection of mechanism as regards simplicity, durability and adaptability to the wide range of work embraced in the general family needs.

A Handsome, Light-Running, Lock-Stitch, High-Arm Machine that will not fail to please the most fastidious. Embracing all the advantages with all desirable improvements of other first-class sewing machines, so simple in mechanism that the most inexperienced need no assistance in operating it. Book of Instructions with every machine. Any child can learn to run it.

Extra Set of Attachments also free with each machine, consisting of the following: One Tucker, One Foot Ruffler, One Set of Plate Hemmers, four different widths up to ⅜ of an inch, One Binder and One Thread Cutter.

No. 3 Machine, drop leaf table, gothic cover, case of two drawers at one end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $24.
Our price, $14.75.

No. 4 Machine, drop leaf table, gothic cover, case of two drawers at each end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $25.
Our price, $15.50.

No. 5 Machine, drop leaf table, gothic cover, case of three drawers at each end, making seven drawers in all. Dealer's price, $26.
Our price, $16.25.

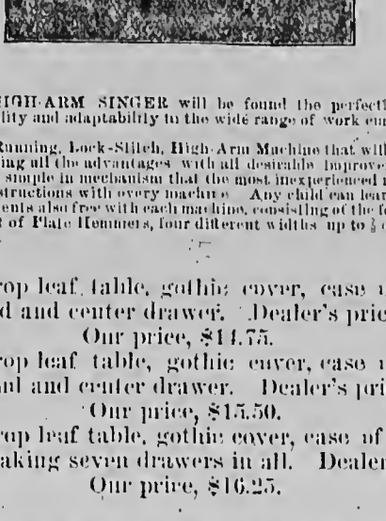
No. 4 Columbian.



EXCELLENCE OF THE COLUMBIAN.—All wearing parts are of case hardened steel possessing great durability, and by the turning of a screw all lost motion caused by wear can be taken up. All parts are fitted so accurately that the machines are absolutely noiseless, and as easy running as fine adjustment and best mechanical skill is possible to produce. No expense or time is spared to make them perfect in every respect, as every machine passes a rigid inspection by competent men before leaving the factory.

NICKEL PLATED.—The balance wheel and many of the fine parts are nickel plated, with other parts finely enameled and ornamented, giving it a rich appearance.

A Self Setting Needle and Self Threading Cylinder Shuttle are used in the Columbian High-Arm Sewing Machine. They are so simple that any one can easily operate them in a few minutes' time, as our instruction book is fully illustrated, showing how to do all kinds of fancy work with attachments.

Extra Attachments, in velvet lined case, sent free with each machine: 1 Tucker, 1 Ruffler with shirring plate, 1 Hemmer set (4 widths) and Binder, 1 Braider (Foot and Slide), 1 Thread Cutter.

ADDITIONAL ACCESSORIES.—Each machine is supplied with the following outfit: 1 Hemmer and Feller (one piece), 10 Needles, 6 Bobbins, 1 Wrench, 1 Screw Driver, Oil Can with Oil, Cloth Gauge and Thumb Screw, and a Book of Instructions. The Book of Instructions is profusely illustrated, and answers the purpose of a competent teacher.

No. 3—Drop leaf, Bent cover, case of two drawers at one end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $29. Our price, $17.
No. 4—Drop leaf table, Bent cover, case of two drawers at each end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $31. Our price, $17.75.
No. 5—Drop leaf table, Bent cover, case of three drawers at each end and center drawer, making a seven drawer machine. Dealer's price, $33. Our price, $18.50.

The chief difference between Numbers 3, 4, and 5 is in the furniture, i. e., in the number of drawers. If you do not want to pay for the extra drawers, you need not do so. We sell these machines under a ten years' guarantee, by which we mean that if any part gives out by reason of any defect therein, the manufacturer will replace the same free of charge. Moreover, we allow the purchaser to test the machine ten days. If at the end of ten days you are not satisfied, you have only to drop us a postal card, and your money will be refunded.

OUR OFFER.

We will send any one of the above-described machines at the prices named, and also send the ADVOCATE free for six months. The only condition attached to this offer is that subscribers who are in arrears must first pay up all arrearages to date. It would be well to avail yourself of this offer at once, as we can not promise that it will last very long. Notice that you take no risk whatever. We do all the risking. Address

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

The International Council of Women opened in London on June 26. The Countess of Aberdeen, president of the council, after cordial words of welcome, sketched the duties of the council.

For the first time since 1870 the Vatican party has obtained a majority in Rome in the municipal elections, and the fronts of the churches are fantastically illuminated nightly in honor of the success.

After nearly a week of negotiation and failure, President Loubet at last succeeded in reconstructing the French Cabinet. The new Ministry is headed by M. Waldeck-Ronsseau, a politician of some note.

Judge Thomas J. Semmes, one of the few leaders of the Confederacy who were left, one of America's greatest lawyers, who had been honored by the presidency of the American Bar Association, died in this city on Friday.

The trans-Caspian region of Asiatic Russia, which is under the administration of the governor-general of the Caucasus, Prince Bariatinski, is threatened with famine, owing to the prolonged drouth and a plague of locusts.

Count Munster, the head of the German delegation, has received Prince Hohenlohe's instructions, and Germany will withdraw her objections to the establishment of a court of arbitration, provided the obligatory clauses are expunged.

Governor Roosevelt shortened the sentence of John Howard, a convict in the Sing Sing prison, because the prisoner constructed two large pipe organs for the chapel, working two years on the job, and thus saving the State an amount of money estimated at about $5000. The organs were finished about two weeks ago, just as Howard's sentence expired, and he was released.

In accordance with the promise made by President Kruger to Sir Alfred Milner, British High Commissioner for South Africa, at the recent conference in Bloemfontein, capital of Orange Free State, the Transvaal executive has finally decided to increase the representation of the gold fields in the Volksraad. The government will probably give six members, instead of two, the present representation.

The remarkable growth in the exportation of manufactures has led to the preparation by the treasury bureau of statistics of a series of tables showing the value of each class of manufactures exported in each year during the past decade and the amount of each class sent to each country. By this process it is practicable to determine the trend of our foreign trade in manufactures, both as to the class of manufactures most demanded abroad and the countries which are proving our best customers.

The Navy Department has decided to utilize not only the small gunboats captured from Spain during the war, but also to refit the yachts and other small auxiliary steamers purchased during the early part of the war. These small vessels are to be used in patrolling the coast and harbors of Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippines, and to protect American interests in Central America and along the north coast of South America, where not too far removed from a base of supplies.

The rapid increase of Japanese immigration into Hawaii has attracted the serious attention of the Government, and several official inquiries have been set on foot to learn the extent of the invasion and how it can be checked. One official report from a United States inspector stationed at Honolulu states that 12,000 Japanese have arrived since the islands were annexed to the United States. He also reports that in his opinion the total population of Asiatics by the end of the present year will exceed the total population of all other nationalities.

The Supreme Court of Louisiana, in several cases of the State versus certain debenture companies, decided that the companies in question were engaged in operations that were not based on or in accordance with sound business principles; but that the money invested in them by persons ignorant of the methods in use was risked in schemes so unreasonable that there could be but a remote prospect of saving their investments, and that, therefore, the judgment of a lower court decreeing the forfeiture of the charters of defendant companies is affirmed.

President McKinley has decided to call for volunteers for service in the Philippines. It has been determined to form at least nine regiments, and possibly twelve. For the present the President deems nine or ten regiments enough, and it is understood this number is based on the representation made by General Otis, who is said to have recently amended his estimate of the force he will need in maintaining peace in the islands. There are now 23,000 regulars in the Philippines, and there will shortly be a re-enforcement of at least 7000. This furnishes General Otis with the army he desired in the earlier estimates from Manila. Lately, however, he has had occasion to revise those figures, and, under the influences of the more liberal estimates of General Lawton and other advisers, he has informed the Washington officials that the presence of 12,000 or 15,000 volunteers to supplement the force of regulars will be a safeguard.

You may say that your life is a failure,
Your future holds naught is sweet,
That the troublesome years bring little but tears
And always, always defeat.

Mistakes—aye, sins you call them—
May cover your past like a pall,
But the soul that is strong to outlive its wrong
Is the bravest soul of all.

You long to go forth in the battle,
But your feet are fettered quite;
Remember, who serve in the corps of reserve
May be able as those who fight.

You chafe to enter the races
For pleasure and gold and fame;
Yet many who win 'mid the plaudits' din
Find the prize but an empty name.

The toil that is yours seems fruitless,
Your days are weary and long;
But the lowliest duty may glow with beauty
When wrought with a cheerful song.

The world's best sweets are denied you,
You have tasted earth's cup of woe;
But who suffers to give that others may live
Has the noblest life, I trow.

Oh, let us, my friend, do bravely
The work that to us is given,
And smile in belief that what caused us grief
May keep us the closer to heaven.

The pathways we traverse are many,
And some are by the barrenest strand;
But with visions grown wide we shall wonder
we sighed,
For they led to the Beautiful Land.

Communications.

DR. FEATHERSTUN'S DEFENSE.

In answer to Dr. Featherstun's very frequent use of my name in his very personal article, called forth by my impersonal communication, I shall only say:

1. Bro. Featherstun! Bro. Featherstun! Bro. Featherstun! Bro. Featherstun! Bro. Featherstun! Bro. Featherstun! Bro. Featherstun! Bro. Featherstun! Bro. Featherstun! Brother Featherstun! Brother Featherstun! Brother Featherstun! Rev. H. Walter Featherstun! Rev. H. Walter Featherstun, D. D.! Rev. H. Walter Featherstun, D. D., ex-president of Kavanangh College!

2. So far as my religious professions are concerned, I have never yet replied to any fling or sneer which has appeared in the columns of the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE, or elsewhere, whether from the pen of layman or preacher.

3. I do not remember to have ever professed "the second blessing," although as a Methodist preacher, and bound by the doctrinal standards of the church, I do not assail the term which was first used by John Wesley, but I plead guilty to the fact that I have professed the experience of entire sanctification, or heart purity, obtained in answer to the prayer of faith twenty-five years after my regeneration, and that I preach the doctrine as taught by Wesley, Fletcher, Watson, Clarke, Asbury, Soule, Lovick Pierce, Winans, Key, and hosts of other strong, good men whom Methodism has delighted to honor; and am in thorough accord with our standard hymn book and with Mr. Wesley's "Plain Account of Christian Perfection;" but never have I claimed infallibility or greater holiness than my brethren.

4. It is not necessary that a man should profess entire sanctification in order to be uncharitable in his judgments; or to claim infallibility; or to charge with insanity one who may differ in opinion with him as to the best way and time in which to obtain the blessed experience; or to assert that insanity is in the blood, and one, or more, relatives had shown evidence thereof; or to violate a solemn compact.

As to my reference to failures in college presidencies, I have this to say:

1. My references were narrowed too much by him who had arrogated all to himself. He is not the only man who has assailed East Mississippi Female College. Who that heard has ever forgotten that speech before the Annual Conference at Jackson? or that before the District Conference at Morton in 1897? or at Lawrence in 1898? or at Summit in 1898? Or who has forgotten a letter from Brookhaven which appeared in the ADVOCATE a year or two ago? or another from a town on the North eastern railroad a short time before that? Or who has not heard of the declaration made publicly on a train between Meridian and Jackson to a trustee of East Mississippi College: "We intend to correlate the four female colleges, and I am to be president of them all, as Dr. Smith is in Virginia"? So, the special champion need not claim all the references in my former article as intended for himself alone, or called forth by his "farming-out" effusion. Neither need he bring in the name of a good woman, though she be a teacher in Whitworth.

2. If anything in my article could properly be construed with a charge of failure against Kavanangh College (and I admit that I was always under the impression, as were many others, that it was a financial failure), I beg pardon! "De mortuis nil nisi bonum"

As to the management of East Mississippi Female College, I shall not say a word. The Board of Education of the Mississippi Conference at the last session made a thorough investigation, and cordially commended the college and the worthy president. I have never had any difficulty in understanding President Beeson's figures, nor any reason for discrediting any of his statements; and yet I presume that he is not infallible, and really makes mistakes sometimes. Possibly he is mistaken in professing the experience of entire sanctification; and possibly the president of Whitworth was also mistaken when, in two periods of his ministry, he made a like profession.

It certainly required hard study to take the A. B. course in one year at Whitworth after taking the B. S. degree at East Mississippi Female College; or else there is but slight difference between the B. S. course at East Mississippi and the A. B. course at Whitworth. And the young lady referred to for the purpose of assailing the curriculum of E. M. F. College had only taken the B. S. course at that very excellent institution, and yet in one year thereafter she was granted the A. B. degree by Whitworth.

And as to the passing by the front of Central Church and going to a mission hall, I can only say, that while I might not have done that, yet I am not disposed to censure anyone who does not like to hear a sermon read, or gets tired of being invited to "get out of the church." I have not heard of Dr. Weems' complaining of any unwillingness to hear him.

Correspondence.

MONTEREY, MEXICO.

When, in September of '94, with the consent of my presiding elder, I left my appointment in the Louisiana Conference in order to re-enter school, it was with the expectation of returning to that Conference after having obtained a more thorough equipment for the work of the ministry. My plans, however, were not inflexible, and the last of December, '96, found me in this strangely new-old country, where the innovations of the present century mingle with the customs of the first.

Since my coming I have been in charge of the English-speaking congregation in Monterey, the largest city of northern Mexico, and probably the most progressive in the whole republic, and, on account of its commercial activity, is called "the Chicago of Mexico." Some two thousand feet above the sea level, and surrounded on every side by the most picturesque mountains, the city has an extremely beautiful location, and as one stands on the heights and looks down upon this city of flat roofed houses, the words of the Psalmist come to him, "As the mountains are round about Jerusalem." I never tire of the mountains. Whether as grim monster outlined against the sky in the night-time, or in the gray dawn, or in the mid-day glare, or wrapped in the purple shadows of the sunset, their beauty is sublime, and to the reverent mind an inspiration. The houses are built of stone, of one story, flat roofs, painted some light color, and, to the confusion of the stranger, they all look exactly alike. The very poor people live in huts made of cane, mud, pieces of wood, or whatever material is most easily secured. The average negro would disdain to use one of them for his kitchen. The streets are narrow and uncertain in their goings, but "plazas," or public squares, and parks abound, and their tropical growths are a constant delight to the native as well as the tourist. These plazas are the popular resorts. Here the civil celebrations are held, and to the plazas the people come in great numbers to listen to the regular concerts given by the military bands. The principal plazas have their weekly concert nights, and Zaragoza plaza has two. The music-stand is in the center of the plaza, and around the plaza almost continuously the crowd walks for two or three hours, the ladies and gentlemen going in opposite directions. I do not know who suggested this plan of "going in opposite direction," but it works admirably for the young people of opposite sexes who belong to "mutual admiration societies." The population is estimated at seventy-five thousand, and this includes a foreign colony numbering about two thousand. Three railroads enter the city, two from the States, the Mexican National and the Mexican International, and the third connects Monterey with Tampico on the gulf coast. There are two large smelters that employ at least four thousand men, numerous manufacturing plants, and a brickyard that is said to be the largest on the American continent.

To the west, on a high hill overlooking the city, is the famous Bishop's Palace, built by the Jesuits some three centuries ago, that has been prominent in several wars, and was captured by the American soldiers under General Taylor. Two blocks from where, to my delight, a Mexican house has been turned into an American home, are the ruins of the old Black Fort of which General Grant wrote in his memoirs. Few of its massive walls remain standing, and one might easily pass by without noticing it. A street cuts it in twain, and in either part a score, or more, families have found dwelling-places. When our troops were here in '46 the fort was outside of the city limits. To the northeast of the city, about three miles distant, is the large spring where our army camped before marching to attack the city. It is in the midst of a large grove of live-oak trees—those giants of our Southern forests from whose boughs the moss, the gray locks of the giants, hangs so gracefully.

The architecture of the fine old cathedrals of Mexico atones for the simplicity of the houses in which the people live. There are five of these magnificent structures in Monterey. The people turn toward them with something of the reverent awe that filled the heart of the Jew as he lifted his eyes to behold the temple. They are temples indeed, but temples without a shekinah. On special feast days I have seen the people, rich and poor alike, throng these churches from morning till night. What think you of a service in which there were seven distinct sermons preached by the same man? Each sermon was from twenty to thirty minutes long, and throughout the service the people, with few exceptions, were kneeling or sitting upon a bare cement floor. Those Methodists who can not even bow their heads in prayer might easily learn a lesson from such a scene. However, I shall not suggest that our preachers try to follow the example of the priest in preaching seven sermons during one service. If I were a Catholic, I am sure I should be thankful that the custom prevails only once a year. The texts, at any rate, were orthodox, being the seven utterances of our Lord while on the cross, and the sermons should have been full of the meat of the gospel, for there was a look of hunger on the faces of the people; and as I turned to go out there was a hunger in my own heart—a hunger for such an opportunity as the priest had on that day.

Protestantism, too, is well represented in Monterey. It may seem strange, but it is a fact, that there are as many Protestant as Catholic congregations in this city. The difference is in the size of the congregations. They number their people by the thousands; we number ours by the tens. There are five Protestant denominations working here—the Baptist, Presbyterian, Campbellite, Episcopal, and our own church. The Episcopal Church confines itself to the English-speaking people, our church has both an American and a Mexican congregation, and the other three confine themselves to the Mexican work exclusively. The Baptists have been here the longest. They have about two hundred and fifty members, and, besides, there is a congregation of thirty or forty that separated from them several years ago. They own a very neat two-story church, built of stone. The Presbyterians are not so strong. They have about sixty members and a well-located church. The Christians, or Campbellites, have no building and no organized church. They have a married missionary living here who conducts a night school for Mexican boys, and has a reading-room. He is also printing tracts in Spanish. The Mexican congregation of our own church includes seventy or eighty members, and it has a regular station preacher, a native. Our American congregation has at present forty-two members. Both congregations meet in the same building, as our church is a large two-story building and amply large. I do not know how many members the Episcopals have. They hold but one service a week, and I understand that their usual attendance does not exceed ten or twelve.

I hope to have the opportunity, some time in the future, of writing more definitely of our work, both in Monterey and in Mexico in general.

FROM THE DISTRICT.

MR. EDITOR: We were reminded, when we read our last in the ADVOCATE, of Solomon's "little foxes which spoiled the vines." By the omitting of one letter we were made to express just the opposite of what we wrote. "Here we have some 'praying' members, and hope for more." The types made us read "paying" members.

Since our last we have been to the extremes geographically, congregationally, and otherwise. From northern borders of Yazoo to southern limit of Rankin and into Simpson; from small congregations to crowded houses; from rich lowlands, the home of the sweet gum and pecan, to high, sandy hills, thickly set with towering pines; and the answers to question eight equally marked.

Union, on Fannin circuit: A large, unfinished house, erected nearly sixty years ago, and yet unceiled. Under the head of "miscellaneous business" a committee was formed to arrange time and place for a grand rally in interest of Twentieth Century Fund.

Our next was Harrisburg, on Steen's Creek circuit, Simpson county. New country, new people, new experiences. Large families. Small houses and cheapest lumber I ever heard of—$6 to $8 per thousand. With such supply of home labor and material every man might live in a palace. Here we learned of Dr. Featherstun's quarterly meeting, noted for its length.

A Sunday off! What a treat to one who has been taking things on the fly, and making short stops for six months, and hearing no one but himself! The occasion was the commencement at Millsaps College, with a day at Belhaven. At the latter place we enjoyed a unique, impressive address from Dr. Venable, of Meridian. Witty, thoughtful, and well delivered. A class of six young ladies received their diplomas at the hands of President Fitzhugh. Whether from my hunger, or from the genuine excellence, it seemed to me that I never heard such speeches from college rostrums as the contestants for the various honors gave us. Bishop Candler's sermon, on Sunday, was of the highest order; deep, full, and easily comprehended. His address on Monday was equally good, and some said even better. The sermon by Dr. Bowling to the Y. M. C. A. was a masterpiece. All in all, Millsaps surpassed herself. The evidences of the character of work done in her halls were unmistakable. But for the sorrow in the homes of President Fitzhugh and Dr. Murrah, our pleasure would have been unalloyed.

At Vaughan's we met rather a new and changed condition of affairs. It is no longer Bro. Golden alone, but he had brought another into the circle of the itinerants—herself out of an itinerant home. When one does so well as he it is in order to say, "Well done, good and faithful servant!" Quarterly Conference was held in a church erected a few years ago by the "Hard Shells," which, they failing to support, was bought by the Methodists, and here we met a congregation of not less than one hundred people. The elder did his best on foreign missions, and the preacher took up the collection, and reported also one convert for missions; also secured five subscriptions for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE.

Thursday, June 29, we are booked for an address before the County Sunday-school Convention at Pearl River Church, and on to Sonle Chapel to last meeting of the second round, July 1, 2.

The summing up of the quarter stands: Out 45 days; preached 61 times, besides conducting several prayer-meeting services. Bank account exhausted, and full work in protracted meetings mapped for our third. Fraternally,

T. B. HOLLOMAN.

ATTENTION.

To the Brethren of the North Mississippi Conference:

I presume that you have all heard of my election to the presidency of the Grenada College, and while I feel unworthy of the position, I shall devote the best there is in me to the work to which I have been assigned.

I feel like General Walthall, at the battle of Franklin, when General Hood told him he must head 30,000 troops to assist Forest; "that while it is one of honor, it is also one of great responsibility, and I will not force it upon you unless you are willing." General Walthall replied, "General, I never sought a hard place for glory nor an easy place for comfort; issue the orders, and I will do the best I can," and, with the consciousness of the justness of his cause, he led his troops and snatched victory from the very jaws of defeat, and made it possible for Forest's army to retreat across the Tennessee.

Brethren, I come not to make any boasts of what I am going to do, but the orders have been issued, and I propose to do the best I can, feeling assured that I will have the sympathy and co-operation of the brethren.

This is no time to divide our educational interests, and, therefore, it behooves every brother to be loyal to this, the only college owned by the North Mississippi Conference.

While I have about selected my faculty, I do not claim that "it is the best to be found anywhere in the South," though I believe it is an average one. A friend said to me the other day that "you must not have too many young teachers in your faculty," and my reply was, "and not too many widows and old maids."

While I am aware of the fact that the conservatism and the experience of the old are not to be discounted, I am also aware of the fact that the enthusiasm and the latest methods of teaching which belong to the younger are not to be ignored. One is not necessarily a good teacher because of her age; neither should one be discounted because she has less experience. The question is, Has she qualified herself specially for thorough work in her department? However, I am glad to state that I have been able to secure experienced teachers, who will be at the head of each and every department.

Our friends in Grenada have authorized me to put the building in thorough repair, and they would pay the expenses, and they are also willing to help in putting an addition as soon as practicable to the building. With the building put in thorough repair and nicely furnished, there is no reason why we can not offer as good inducements at Grenada as any school in Mississippi. The building is large, commodious, and well ventilated, and situated on a high plain, with a beautiful campus, above all malarial influences. I speak the truth when I tell you that the health record of the school for the last five years is equal to that of any of which I have any knowledge.

Believing that the brethren will give me their full support in carrying on this great work, I am,

Yours fraternally,

W. M. MCINTOSH.

MORE "ECHOES."

Since my last communication other reports have come to hand as follows: Rev. B. B. Sullivan, Carrollton circuit, two dollars. Rev. W. A. Clark, Booneville circuit, five and 90-100 dollars. Rev. W. D. Burroughs, Pleasant Hill circuit, eight dollars, and, "I am in full sympathy with this great movement. Have two other churches where I hope to secure larger amounts." Rev. A. W. Langley, Abbeville circuit, twenty dollars, and "will observe the day at four other churches." Rev. E. C. Sullivan, Cornersville circuit, forty-two and 25-100 dollars. Rev. C. C. Evans, Satartia, one hundred dollars, and "my people respond willingly to the call for the Twentieth Century Fund."

The Sunday-school at Carrollton has pledged one hundred dollars, and has in cash half the amount.

Rev. T. C. Wier, P. E., Sardis district, writes that all his preachers are in full sympathy with the work, and will observe the day.

Many preachers had planned to devote the month of June to this special work. I am daily expecting to hear from them. Will not every preacher who has not reported make a determined effort and acquaint me with the result?

Dear brother, it is in your hands. The responsibility once resting on others is now upon the pastors. How will you meet it? Please "make me tired" from now till Annual Conference keeping up with and tabulating reports of your successful work.

Some of the amounts reported above may appear small, but no amount can be small which represents prayer, work, and self-denial. It is all great in the eyes of "Him whose we are and whom we serve."

WHAT IS NECESSARY TO MAKE A SUCCESSFUL PASTOR.

BY REV Q. A. OATS.

The pastor should study to be a wise organizer of his members into working order, and, as a good leader, should inspire them to work by precept and example. Success often depends on united effort and a sense of mutual interest. The church may be aptly compared to an arch of many stones: if one stone falls, the arch must fall, and every stone must depend upon every other stone. The pastor, in a sense, is the builder of the arch, and his duty is to find a place for every individual to work, and assist and encourage him. One of the secrets of a good pastor is the finding a place for everybody to work, and keeping them all at work. To do this he needs to be a good judge of human nature, and to be controlled by wise judgment and great patience. An unemployed Christian can not thrive, and nothing strengthens and encourages men more than to have them to feel that they are usefully employed. It is not to be supposed that even the wisest and most faithful pastor can secure all in successful work. There will always be some who will not fit in any place. In this case the best he can do will be to prevent them from becoming hindrances and disturbing elements, in which he must be a law unto himself. He needs rightly to direct all into paths of usefulness, and to restrain misdirected energies and excesses. In all this he should avoid, as much as possible, all friction, and be careful not to make too strong an impression of his own personal peculiarities, and not to place himself too much in evidence. The pastor should be in his church a sort of concealed dynamo, or generating plant, imparting force and direction to the membership of his church. I have known some pastors who seemed ambitions to run everything. They would enterprise many things, and appoint men and women to all sorts of duties, but do it all they would, or so appear, from the pulpit to janitor's duties, including Sunday-school and all the women's societies. As much as possible everyone should be left to do his own work in his own way, and to feel all the responsibility for the success of his department, whatever it may be.

The pastor should be a good organizer of his forces, but he needs to be careful not to over organize. His plans should be as few and simple as the circumstances will allow. It is possible for a thing to be too highly organized for life, and a multiform and complicated organization will always weaken the body and hinder its highest usefulness. Some pastors are always organizing and enterprising till they have an organization for everything and everybody in several organizations; yet they never secure success in anything.

It is an excellent thing for the pastor to be able to enterprise, and try new ideas and new plans, and to be able to inject new thought and new life into his church. There is, however, much grave danger in this respect, and much harm has already been done by so many strange and new things that have caused it to be forgotten that there is anything old, and necessarily so. The old paths of truth are thus sometimes obscured and obliterated from the thought, and the people are led by a blind leader, and all go hither and thither as in a pathless wilderness.

It is really my belief that more real harm is done by an over-conservatism than by over-progressiveness, and that more pastors are in danger in this direction because the evil is less easily discovered and appreciated. New things strike us because they are new and out of ordinary observation and experience, and, if evil results, we readily connect the effect with the cause. On the other hand, when there is nothing new in the plane of the pastor, we are not strikingly impressed, and his failures often go unaccounted for, though they may be greater and far more numerous than the unfortunate innovations of his more enterprising brother. There are to-day many of the brethren piously lamenting the failures of the church, and charging them to enterprising brethren who are enterprising new plans and pushing them to success, while they are much more attributable to their own laggardness. This is a period when men must throw themselves into the active, pushing crowd if they expect to succeed. If the day was when men could go along old ways quietly and unostentatiously, and succeed, it has passed, so far as the business world is concerned, and the work of the pastor is not an exception. He needs, as much as any other, to be up to date.

This is a world of change. The change is a principle in life and growth. It is a vital principle in the physical, mental, and spiritual world. All men who have been agents in the progress of the world were violent innovators, but their innovations were wise. Christ and his apostles believed in new things, while the priests and the Pharisees shouted ruin because of them, and were the conservatives. Luther and Wesley were innovators. The pastor should not be afraid to try a plan or pursue a course because it is new, if he finds no other reason. It is not new principles or new truths that are needed. Some make this mistake, and many are in danger of it. Men need exactly the same elements of food to-day that they did thousands of years ago, but they require new ways of serving and preparing it. Prepared and served as it was to our forefathers, food would nauseate instead of being palatable, and in many cases would destroy our health, such has been the transformations in our physical condition. Men need the same gospel to-day they did a thousand years ago, but they require an up-to-date mode of serving it. In the same way the farmer who should decry innovations and new means and plans of cultivating his crops would soon present a very belated appearance, though he might declaim against innovators as enemies of farming. The pastor should study to be a resource-ful man, and to give his people variety; yet I must warn all against the temptation of priding themselves in being advanced men, and proclaiming themselves such to the world. Such men are usually objects of a just contempt, and are pitiable failures.

Again, let me warn against the popular danger of making innovations upon the true and orthodox principles of the gospel. Men need the same sort of repentance from sin they ever did, because sin has not changed its character; and they need the same crucified and risen Lord, and the same regenerating Spirit to save them from it. The preaching of a new gospel may attract for a time, and even permanently please a few light and insincere souls, but it will never satisfy the truly hungering and thirsting. It is easy to secure a cheap reputation by substituting inventions that offer men a brilliant and easy way to heaven, but it will pass like a Summer flower before the Autumn winds, and leave only a seared and lifeless waste, and desolate ruin.

GUAM, OUR NEW POSSESSION.

Ere these lines will be printed, four progressive young Californians will be on their way with a colony, forty strong, to colonize Guam, one of the Ladrono Islands, which fell into the hands of this government at the close of the Hispano-American War. This island was scarcely known in the United States till on the twenty-first of last June, when the "Charleston," en route to Manila, passed by and threw a few shells into the little town where the government is seated, soon bringing the handful of Spaniards stationed there to terms. The "Charleston" took the Spaniards aboard and carried them to Manila, where they remained as prisoners of war till after the signing of the protocol.

Thus we came into possession of this little island, which, indeed, is almost as fascinating as the haunts of a fairy. Guam is a small land, only a mere speck upon the broad breast of the Pacific; yet, if developed rightly, she possesses charms which no other land in the universe, perhaps, affords.

This group of islands was discovered by Magellen, sailing under the Spanish flag, in 1521. They were left alone in the broad, tranquil sea till a few years ago (1885), when they were partially settled by Spain, and placed under the jurisdiction of the Spanish government at Manila. The few people living there are separated from the rest of the world, never hearing any of its gossip. They may truly be termed "out of the world." Semi-annually only do they hear from the far-off shores, unless some merchant vessel should happen to pass, which is not often, for some of the islands are still infested by pirates, the very name "Ladrones" signifying "the land of robbers." It is said that when the "Charleston" stopped in the beautiful harbor and began to fire, the Spaniards, not knowing of the disturbed relations between their country and America, mistook the firing for a salute, and hastened to the shore to return it; but on their arrival they were somewhat chagrined to learn the startling and fateful news.

America, it is hoped, at an early date will connect the island with Manila, or Honolulu, by cable, and thus make it a more desirable abode for man.

Guam is a wonderful place, many peculiar things existing there found in no other part of the world. It, too, could be made a typical place for a home, as the climate is mild, the soil productive, and the scenery beautiful. There are homes in that bonny land where life is spent as pleasantly as could be, yet little labor is exerted in making it so. The bread-fruit grows there abundantly, cocoanuts flourish, and the palm-tree waves its graceful branches about in every forest. There is also a kind of nut which is eaten, shell and all, the shell being even more delicious than the kernel. The shell, though appearing hard, when bitten, crumbles off easily; but should any of our readers ever come in contact with one of these peculiar nuts, my advice would be, to eat it as soon as it is plucked from the tree, for in a day or so the kernel becomes as hard as a diamond.

There is also a very queer tree existing there, and there alone, the fruit of which, to the smell, is hardly tolerable, but to the taste it is very delicious. It ripens twice every month, and the islanders value it very highly.

There are many other very striking things in this wonderful land, but possibly the most wonderful, and the one which derives more notice from travelers, is a stone which predicts the weather for the Guamites. They lie scattered on every roadside, and when very cold weather is expected, the stone is as black as midnight; when hot weather is expected, the stone is of a brilliant red; when raining, it is pink, and when only cloudy, a deep blue. By this means the people of Guam may know exactly when to expect a change of weather. They also have a large, pretty flower which marks the noonday hour by opening its elongated petals rapidly toward the great luminary. When it is cloudy the flower droops its head in sorrow, mourning for the absence of the sun.

The people of the Ladrones are friendly and kind, though, of course, very simple. They are of Malay origin, are of a brown color, have small, sharp heads; small, dark eyes, and are very docile to their masters when treated kindly, but, strangely, their race has always been oppressed, yet they can hardly bear oppression. But treat the simple islander right—as I am sure all true Americans will do—and he will always be your friend, dying for you, if necessary.

These people do not profess Christianity, since Spain has never cared to enlighten them anyway, for fear of rebellion; but, thanks to the young Californians, one of their leaders, Charles L. McPherson, has proposed to tell them of the blessed Master, and to establish a Methodist Church in that far-away land. This certainly should have been done many years ago, but since the Americans had so much trouble by carrying the gospel to the Carolines, perhaps they decided to make no effort in the Ladrones. But now Guam is ours. Our own dear "Stars and Stripes"—emblem of freedom and religious liberty—waves over it, and we may now go to the poor, oppressed islanders and tell them the "beautiful story of old."

REV. JOS. L. SMITH.

MR. EDITOR: My father, Rev. Jos. L. Smith, passed to his reward June 5. He had been for three years in the Confederate Soldiers' Home, near Richmond, Va., a sufferer from spinal trouble. For thirteen years prior to that time his body had been wasting away. Under the strain his mind became affected, and he was removed to the Soldiers' Home, where every attention was given him which could have ameliorated his sad condition. In his lucid hours he was resigned to God's will, and looked for release from suffering. His mortal remains lie in Hollywood Cemetery. His soul has gone up through great tribulations. Sixty years old, his life had been checkered by war, teaching, preaching, and suffering—the greatest part suffering.

We, proud as we are of his military record—brave and daring in defense of the "Lost Cause," and was a brevet-captain of cavalry when the war closed—are yet prouder of the fact that ten of the best years of his life were given to the ministry in the Western Virginia Conference. No better record can be made than he made for absolute moral integrity—he never did an ignoble thing! He was a man of pure speech and courtly manners. He was possessed of a strong mind, and was a splendid scholar for one who was denied the advantages of a full collegiate course by the adverse fortunes of war.

As a preacher, he was a calm, cogent reasoner, analyzing the text until there was nothing left to be gotten out of it. He was an earnest Christian, professing little and living much. His life was an unstained outgrowth of the thirteenth chapter of First Corinthians—the best portraiture of his character. Humility was his crowning grace. God has taken him to himself. We shall meet him when life's fitful fever is over. God's grace is our present consolation.

Yours fraternally,

C. P. SMITH.

THE VICKSBURG DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Vicksburg District Conference convened in the Methodist Church at Utica, June 15, with Dr. E. H. Monnger, presiding elder, in the chair. C. F. Emery was elected secretary, and C. C. Evans assistant secretary. The following preachers were present: Revs. G. A. Guice, C. F. Emery, L. S. Jones, J. N. Ware, A. D. Miller, L. Carley, J. G. Cammack, C. C. Evans, H. L. Norton, A. F. Watkins, W. H. Van Hook. Absent: Revs. F. M. Keen, W. T. Griffin, W. W. Hurst, W. W. Cammack. The following laymen were present: D. X. Brown, W. C. Hicks, G. A. Parks, W. E. Harris, S. R. C. Bethea, C. N. Brown, C. Price, W. J. Bell. The following were introduced to the Conference: Rev. G. W. Bachman, of the North Mississippi Conference, representing the Publishing House; Rev. M. L. Burton, in charge of the Mississippi Orphans' Home; Rev. H. G. Hawkins, Conference Secretary of Education; Rev. W. L. Low, pastor of local Baptist Church.

The opening sermon was preached by Rev. C. F. Emery from Psalm xc, 12.

Committees were appointed by the chair on license to preach, on public worship, on the state of the church, on prohibition, and on Quarterly Conference Records.

Henry Thomas Carley, son of Rev. L. Carley, having passed an approved examination, was licensed to preach, and recommended to the Annual Conference for admission into the traveling connection.

The reports of the pastors upon the state of the church showed the district to be in a fairly good condition.

Miss Addie Purnell, secretary of the Woman's Home Mission Society, was introduced to the Conference, and gave an interesting account of the work done by this important department of the church.

The Committee on Prohibition in their report stated that there was but one wet county in the district, and rejoiced in the defeat of the recent attempt to introduce the sale of liquor into Hinds county.

Rev. M. L. Burton earnestly appealed to the pastors and to the members of the church to rally to the support of the Mississippi Orphans' Home. He stated that the claims of this institution upon all Protestant people do not seem to be fully realized, either by preachers or people. It has no endowment, and is wholly dependent for support upon the voluntary contributions of Christian people.

The following delegates were elected to the Annual Conference: W. E. Harris, C. N. Brown, C. Price, G. A. Parks, with W. J. Bell and T. A. Holloman, alternates.

A well-prepared paper on "Threatening Tendencies of the Present Times, and their Causes," was read by Rev. L. Carley, and provoked considerable discussion.

Rev. L. S. Jones, representing Port Gibson Female College, spoke in the highest terms of the work done by that institution, and urged its claims for public patronage.

Edwards and Port Gibson were placed in nomination as the place for holding the next Conference, and the latter was chosen.

The following local preachers were passed in examination of character, and their licenses were renewed: Revs. J. B. Blackman, J. O. Gilbert, M. J. Marble.

The Committee on the State of the Church in their report stated that there were but few Epworth Leagues in the district whose work, on the whole, has not been satisfactory. The growth of worldly-mindedness is to be deplored.

On Friday night an educational rally was held for the purpose of raising a collection for the Twentieth Century Fund. Addresses were made by Revs. A. F. Watkins, C. F. Emery, and H. G. Hawkins. A handsome sum was realized.

An interesting paper on the "Importance of the Sunday-school, and Its Main Design," was submitted by Rev. W. T. Griffin.

By request of the chair, Rev. H. W. Van Hook addressed the Conference on "Our New Possessions, and the Duty of the Church toward Them," which gave rise to an interesting discussion.

The preaching during the session was done by Revs. J. G. Cammack, L. S. Jones, A. F. Watkins, H. W. Van Hook, E. H. Monnger, and C. F. Emery.

The usual vote of thanks was adopted, expressing grateful appreciation of the hospitality of the good people of Utica, the kindness of the pastor, Rev. G. A. Guice, and the courtesy of the Picayune and Times-Democrat in publishing full reports of the proceedings.

Conference adjourned sine die at noon Saturday with the benediction by the presiding elder.

C. F. EMERY, Secretary.

WHAT I HAVE FOUND AT WHITWORTH.

I came to Brookhaven on Jan. 10, and since then my home has been the district parsonage, two blocks from Whitworth College, which two of my daughters have, during these months, constantly attended. I have all the while had the very freest access to all the departments of work. Having known the college well in its palmiest days during the administration of that king of educators, Dr. H. F. Johnson, I have used my opportunities, and have studied the work being done with a great deal of interest. Among other things of interest I have found the following of special importance:

1. Whitworth enrolled during the term just closed 198 pupils. One hundred and forty-five of these were in the regular college classes; the remaining 53 were primaries, "specials," etc. Over 120 of those enrolled were boarders. There has been no deaths in the student-body, and no serious illness. I never saw a healthier-looking set of girls in my life.

2. I have been able to look specifically into the work done by seven of the teachers, and never saw better work done anywhere. My own daughters are doing better here than they have ever done before. The senior class, by their papers read during the various exercises of the commencement, revealed the fact that they have been taught to think for themselves. The A. B graduates, in addition to analytical geometry, completed both differential and integral calculus—more, I am told, than is required in most male colleges. The work done in the natural sciences, in elocution, art, and music, and in English, I know to be very superior. Of other work I can not speak from my own knowledge, but have heard high praise bestowed upon most of it.

3. Every teacher in Whitworth College, save two, is a member of our church in Brookhaven, and one of the two intended to put in his letter, but has neglected to do so. All of them are consistent Christians. They all pay to the support of the church here. They teach in the Sunday-school, assist in the prayer meeting and the choir, and are active Methodists felt in the church life as forces that work for righteousness.

4. Whitworth has a Woman's Foreign Missionary Society and a strong Epworth League. She is thoroughly Methodist, unwilling to banish the regular "institutions of the church" and put into their places undenominational societies of uncertain value and questionable tendencies, as some colleges, alas! have done.

5. The commencement exercises throughout wore an air of scholarly dignity indicating that at Whitworth the essentials of education are stressed, and not the superficial ornamentals. The music and the elocution were fine, but vigorous grasp of intellect indicated that mathematics and the classics had been studied earnestly and honestly.

6. I attended on last Tuesday the largest alumnæ meeting I ever saw. Over fifty of Whitworth's alumnæ were present. It was a magnificent body of women. Ladies who had been married for ten, fifteen and twenty years rendered magnificent music, and presented thoughtful papers, while others old enough, but unmarried, and some younger, paid tribute to their alma mater in the coin current of intellectual products of various kinds.

7. I find Whitworth College in high favor with the people of Brookhaven—Jew and Gentile, Roman Catholic and Protestant—and, indeed, throughout the whole district. If she has any "enemies," I have not found them.

THE SECRET OF WOMAN'S SUCCESS.

BY MRS. J. T. GRACEY.

I consider myself very fortunate in being connected with a missionary society whose income has not decreased during the past few years, but has steadily increased. This society has raised within the past five years a little over one million five hundred thousand dollars, which is an advance of more than a quarter of a million dollars over the preceding five years. These results have been accomplished by the women in one of the most remarkable periods of financial depression this country has ever known, and at a time when some other missionary societies have fallen behind in their contributions. There has been also in the same time an advance in auxiliary societies, young people's organizations, members, etc. Moreover, there has also been a steady increase in the subscriptions to our four missionary periodicals, by which the society is sending missionary information into more than seventy-three thousand homes. Within the last five years ninety missionaries have been sent to foreign fields, against fifty-six in the preceding five years.

The contributing causes to these results have been various, such as a very complete organization; systematic, and not impulsive, giving; the little from the many rather than the large donation from the few; a free use of missionary literature; systematic study of all phases of work, both at home and abroad; the itineraries of returned missionaries, bringing the auxiliary societies in sympathetic touch with their representatives; the distribution of thousands of mite-boxes in the homes, gathering up the small amounts; giving special work to the individual or society who become interested in educational and spiritual lines, and the observance of a thank-offering day. The observance of this day has become very general, and since its inauguration, some fourteen years ago, over two hundred and thirty-three thousand dollars have come into the treasury through this channel alone.

The funds of this society are not only raised, but distributed by the women. The appropriation of all money is also made by them, so that they feel a measure of responsibility which is healthful. These are some of the reasons why the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the M. E. Church has recently taken no backward steps, and we believe that similar methods will produce similar results elsewhere.—Missionary Review of the World.

THAT PARSONAGE.

You have seen it. You were reminded of the proverb, "I went by the field of slothful," etc. (Prov. xxiv, 30.) How it got hold of you and made you think less of the man who lived there, even against your will. You enjoyed his sermons; you were charmed in his company; you respected his information and his general "get-up and git," and yet here is the place he lives, and if human nature is the same the world over, then the man that lives in that house is a thriftless sham.

Stand off and look at it. The preacher's family has evidently grown considerably since it was first built. There were originally only two rooms; now there are six. The windows are all shapes and sizes, and so are the doors. You see, in 18— the Bishop sent Bro. Youngman to this circuit, and before the end of the year he was married, and the work had to build a parsonage, as no one wanted to board the preacher and his wife. Bro. Skinflint sold the church his old place in the edge of town that had not been occupied for the last ten years. "The house is not worth much, but, then, there is enough good (?) lumber in it to build a house out of good enough for the preacher." (This is the third house built out of that lumber.) Bro. Youngman was no carpenter, but, as labor and money were scarce, he and one or two men—little or no better mechanics than he was—did the work. They used the old doors and windows (and nails) with their frames, although they had had to cut the walls down from twelve feet to ten feet. All went well until it came to the roof, for which they had no shingles. Bro. Rusticus came to the relief of the pastor by giving enough "rived boards" to cover the parsonage. They were some he had left over from covering his cotton houses last year, and there was no sale for them.

The fences, like the house, were built out of the old lumber, so were the makeshifts for out-houses. Everybody loved the young pastor; "he got along on so little."

Bro. Books was next sent to the charge. He built a little room off from the house for a "study." It was used also for a company room. He was a good workman, and made it look quite nice. A merchant gave a few rolls of wrapping paper, and he papered it over the rough boards; they shrunk and the paper cracked, but that made no difference.

The next pastor was Bro. Silvertongue, who had a wife, two children and a mother-in-law. He was "some pumpkins;" had been well raised, been to college and read Munsy and Drummond and Spencer in addition to the Conference course. Oh! how he could preach. The parsonage was too small and had to be enlarged, and for such a fine preacher nothing was too good; so two nice rooms were built.

He was followed by Bro. Bountiful with a wife (his second) and six children and his wife's old-maid sister. They had to have another room. He was not at all popular, and the people had written to the Bishop and presiding elder and told them so, and asked to be allowed to "swap" with Last Chance circuit for Bro. Newman, who had just entered the Conference and was "on trial." The change could not be effected, and so a new room had to be built. Bro. Bountiful and Sister Faithful, who always stood by the preacher, worked hard to get the material and some labor. The pastor and his boys did most of the work, and after many delays the room was finished, although it was not ceiled inside nor whitewashed outside.

There have been a number of preachers since, among them some good "piddlers," who have nailed on rotten pickets and propped up falling galleries and done such other odd jobs as would call forth words of approbation from that class in the church who are rich, but not toward God.

Look at the parsonage to-day. It is a miserably dilapidated shanty; fences down, steps gone, window panes dropping out, because the sashes are rotten, chimney cracked and leaning off from the house, line dropped down. One of the preachers built a front gallery, but made a bad job, and it is bent to fall down. The rats have undermined some of the blocks on which the house rests, and it has settled down here and there, so the doors will not close. A lady from a distant town comes to spend a few days at the parsonage. She tells the driver of the buss to "put her out at the Methodist parsonage." He does not know where that is. On general principles she tells him to "put me out at the shabbiest house in town." An idea strikes him; he seizes his whip, tightens the reins, and in a few minutes stops at the gate, and Rev. Goodman assists his guest over the shaky gallery to comparative safety from everything except rain and cold, inside the family room.

This house and its furnishing are in marked contrast with the house of the average members of the church on the work. The furnishing is the refuse furniture of the best circumstanced members. In only one respect does the furnishing of this house surpass that of the best homes in the town, and that is in good books, the property of the preacher.

It is said that the pigeon is fond of a nice, clean house; that it will leave an old house for a new one at any time. I heard the other day of a flock of pigeons that were very frolicsome, clean, and thrifty in a new house and gauze cage lately built for them. An old pigeon raiser in the party remarked that they would cease to thrive and lose their fine spirits if their cage was allowed to go to decay. I thought of the preacher and his family in "that parsonage," who had ceased to take interest in many things that once gave snap and joy to them and their associates; of their retirement from social gatherings and even church meetings; of their lack of enthusiasm and growing diffidence, and I said, "Who is to blame?"

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. R. M. Blocker, Lake Arthur, La., June 26, 1899: "After organizing a Sunday-school and prayer meeting at Mermentau, where Protestants had never been, we held a big tent meeting with glorious results, viz.: About 25 conversions—a few sanctified—family altars erected, and 15 accessions. A beautiful site has been donated on which to build a church. Assisted by the pastors, Riggs and Luster, we held a successful tent meeting at Vinton with even better results than at Mermentau for we had a greater number converted, and sanctified; yet not so many accessions. Ten acres of land donated for camp grounds."

Rev. M. M. Black, P. C., Gloster, Miss., June 26, 1899: "On the seventeenth instant we closed a week's meeting here which resulted in great good to the church. The lukewarm were revived, many were led to make a fuller consecration, and a much better state of feeling was brought about in the community, which, as some know, has been torn with strife and hatred. We gained one new member, nearly everybody in the community being already in some church. We were ably assisted by Dr. I. W. Cooper, president of Centenary College, whose sermons were searching, powerful, and full of strong meat; and also by Bro. A. S. Lutz, of the Louisiana Conference, who is a young preacher of splendid promise and deep consecration."

Rev. W. T. Woodward, Lecompte and White Chapel charge: "We held our third Quarterly Conference last Saturday and Sunday at White Chapel. The attendance was not as good as should have been, but we had a good time. Dr. Parker preached three soul-stirring sermons, and especially Sunday, at 11 A. M., was a feast of fat things. 'It was good to be there.' (Text, Luke xxiv. 46, 47, 48.) Our minds and souls were truly fed. As the preacher told of the deep things of God, the quivering lip, the flushed face and the tear-sprinkled eye revealed the fact of the presence and stately steppings of our God. Our collections for the year are pretty well up. Reported three new members, making to date a total of eighteen. Have secured several subscribers to the ADVOCATE, and will continue to do what we can. God bless and prosper the ADVOCATE."

CAMPTI.

Rev. J. J. Smylie, by the request of the preacher in charge of Wesley circuit, Rev. Geo. D. Purcell, began a meeting in Campti, May 30, 1899. With great power and earnestness Bro. Smylie preached the gospel of Jesus Christ for about ten days. Campti has indeed been hard to reach with the true gospel, but I believe Bro. Smylie has been instrumental in God's hands in breaking the chain that has so long bound it to Satan's kingdom.

Catholicism and the Jewish Church have been the dominating sects of the town for many years. We were glad that the Lord heard our prayers, and saw fit to give Protestantism a foothold there in the form of an infant M. E. Church, South, which was organized at the close of Bro. Smylie's meeting. There were a number of conversions, but we are not able to give it accurately. We had fourteen accessions to the church—nine by profession of faith. Seven of these retained their membership in Campti, and the others were transferred elsewhere on the same circuit. Others are expected to unite with the church in Campti by letter very soon.

Our second Quarterly Conference was held in Campti during the meeting, June 7. Dr. Sawyer was on hand, preached an excellent sermon at 11 A. M., and in the afternoon he presided over the Conference. The attendance of the membership of the Quarterly Conference was small, but some important business was transacted; among it the Building Committee for the new church was elected, and authorized to apply to the Church Extension Board for help in erecting a building. About $500 were raised, but more is still needed.

Sunday, June 18, while in Campti again, our hearts were filled with sadness by the death of Bro. T. L. Atkins. He and his noble wife were the strongest pillars of the church so lately organized. His heart had long been throbbing with a desire to see Campti brought to Christ, and a church organized there. He contributed very liberally to the cause, and was the chairman of the Building Committee. To mortal vision, it appears that his place will be hard to fill. We knew that all things worketh together for good to them that love the Lord, and believe God will provide some one to fill the vacancy. As we stood around his death-bed we felt that, though so young, Bro. Atkins has made an impression on the world that points it Christward, and has wisely chosen a part with the people of God. In losing Bro. Atkins from earth, we lose his wife from Campti—at least, for a time. His death is indeed a blow that is felt most seriously by Methodism in Campti.

Readers, if your heart is filled with love for Christ's cause, pray for Campti. Cry mightily unto God in behalf of the church just established there.

OUR EXCELSIOR ART BIBLE.

In accordance with our motto, "Better and Better," we have gotten out a Bible which is superior to any hitherto offered. Besides the Holman self-pronouncing feature and all the Oxford Helps, it has the Combination feature, i. e., the revised version in foot notes, and also contains a number of magnificent illustrations, sixty-four New and Beautiful Full-page Phototype Engravings.

These Magnificent Illustrations represent the most important Scenes and Events in the Sacred Scriptures, and are the work of eminent artists. A large number of prominent Clergymen and Religious Journals have endorsed our Combination Edition of the Holy Scriptures and have given it strong recommendations.

In mechanical workmanship, printing and binding, these Bibles are superb, while at the same time our prices are very low.

No subjects are so well adapted for Illustration by Superb Works of Art as the Grand Scenes and Events described in the Holy Bible. And no other subjects have so occupied the Thought and Genius of the World's Greatest Artists.

The reader has all the most Important Scenes and Events of the Sacred Scriptures placed before him, and is delighted with the Artistic Beauty of these Unrivalled Engravings.

THE PRICE.

This magnificent Bible is catalogued by large Northern publishers at $6. We sell it to our subscribers for $3 on condition that they pay up all arrearages and pay their subscription a full year in advance.

He who in poverty, or sickness, or solitude, can preserve a merry heart and a cheerful countenance, is a benefactor to society, a testimony to his God, and the best of all possible friends to himself.—Bishop Thorold.

A man who might carve statues and paint pictures, spending his life in making mock flowers out of wax and paper, is wise compared with the man who might have God for company, and yet shuts God out and lives an empty life.—Phillips Brooks.

He only is advancing in life whose heart is getting softer, whose blood warmer, whose brain quicker, whose spirit is entering into living peace. And the men who have this life in them are the true lords or kings of the earth—they, and they only.—John Ruskin.

You reap what you sow—not something else, but that. An act of love makes the soul more loving. A deed of humbleness deepens humbleness. The thing reaped is the very thing sown, multiplied a hundredfold. You have sown the seed of life, you reap life everlasting.—F. W. Robertson.

I know enough of gardening to understand that if I would have a tree grow upon its south side, I must cut off the branches there. Then all its forces go to repairing the injury; and twenty buds shoot out, where otherwise there would have been but one. When we reach the garden above, we shall find that out of those very wounds over which we sighed and groaned on earth, have sprung verdant branches, bearing precious fruit, a thousandfold.—Henry Ward Beecher.

FILL YOUR SPHERE.

The world is full of people who are anxious to fill any sphere of duty or service but their own. Their special niche in the great temple of the universe they fancy is too small and too obscure to call forth the faithful and diligent exercise of their powers and faculties. Because their horizon is circumscribed and their lot lowly, they conclude that it is useless to do their best, or to put forth any effort for the world's betterment. Imagining that if they were in loftier positions or easier circumstances they could accomplish something great and worthy, they slight present opportunities, and attempt nothing save the earning of their daily bread.

While a seemingly cruel necessity condemns the majority of men to laborious and lowly occupations, none ought to feel that he is useless, or that he is the mere sport of circumstance. If the Word of God be true, our heavenly Father watches over each life, no matter how insignificant or feeble, and cares for the smallest things. Has not the Master said that God takes care even of the sparrow? Every life, then, is included in God's plans, and he desires that both great and small, wise and unwise, shall honor and serve him. "Yea, God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise, and God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty; that no flesh should glory in his presence."

The world bestows little thought upon its humble toilers, and it honors them scarcely at all. Counting the common people as but little better than the beasts of burden, it reserves its adulation and honor for the rich and the powerful. But in the eyes of God the poorest and most despised of earth bear the impress of the divine image, and are worthy to receive glory, and honor and immortality through him who offered himself as a lamb without spot. To the weak and the obscure, no less than to the mighty, God offers the precious privilege of being co-workers together with him, and his Word declares that even the humblest service, such as the giving of a cup of cold water, shall not lose its reward.

While the world needs men of remarkable gifts and force of character to lead its movements and to direct its energies, the bulk of its tasks, both in Church and State, must ever be performed by ordinary men and women, or go undone. The switchman and the brakeman are just as necessary as the railroad president. The farm hand, the factory operative and the miner, despite the humble nature of their occupations, can no more be dispensed with than the air we breathe. What would an army be worth if it consisted only of officers and generals?

In God's kingdom the man or woman of one talent, of mediocre ability, is never left out of the account, or excused from service. Each, according to ability, is expected to bring forth fruit, glorify God, and bless the world. "Every tree," whether great or small, "that bringeth not forth good fruit, shall be hewn down and cast into the fire." But, alas! many, because they have but one talent, in their pride and folly go and bury it, as it were. Not having wealth, or high position, or large influence, or commanding eloquence, or some other fancied good, they sit at ease in Zion, and leave all the work of the Lord to be carried on by their fellow-Christians. Because their burden is not to their liking, they refuse to bear it, forgetful of the Scripture which saith, "Now ye are the body of Christ and members in particular." "If thy foot shall say, I am not the hand, I am not the body, is it, therefore, not of the body? And if the ear shall say, Because I am not the eye, I am not of the body, is it, therefore, not of the body?" There is much food for reflection in the following striking utterance of the saintly hymn-writer, John Newton: "If two angels came down from heaven to execute a divine command, and one was appointed to conduct an empire and the other to sweep a street in it, they would feel no inclination to change employment."

How often do the wheels stand still, or move almost at a snail's pace, not because our leaders have slackened their efforts, but because the rank and file of our membership fail to do their part, each shifting his burden upon the shoulders of his neighbor. Thus many pastors have to do the work of stewards, League officers, Sunday-school superintendents, etc., because those who ought to attend these things are lacking in conscience and zeal. Stewards and other official members also are frequently burdened with problems that would speedily solve themselves if the average church member would but half do his duty. What a number of unnecessary tasks mothers often have thrust upon them, unnecessarily, by the thoughtlessness of their children! What a vast multitude in the church are as if they were incapable of doing anything to promote God's cause, as if God had intended them to be mere ciphers, and so had excused them from all forms of Christian activity!

There is need just now that tremendous emphasis should be put upon the importance of individual effort, especially on the part of those occupying a humble sphere. We can never take the world for Christ until the countless thousands in the church who are possessed of but one talent are aroused to render faithful service.

As the "Expositor's Bible" well says: "It is just as imperative on the man with one talent, as on him with five, to do what he can. It is not modesty, after all, that is at the root of the idleness of those who hide their talent in the earth; it is unbelief." We may not be able to do much, but there is a striking lesson for us in the words of George William Curtis that "an engine of one cat-power, running all the time, is more effective than one of forty horse-power standing still." "It is noble," says some one, "to do your best." The grandest eulogy that can be spoken of any Christian is expressed in these words, "He hath done what he could." Fellow-Christian, are you bearing the burden Christ laid upon you? Are you faithfully filling the sphere God has assigned you? If not, why not?

LITERARY NOTES.

BY W. F. B.

The first number of the Southern Magazine—a magazine of high literary value—published at Manassas, Va., contains several articles that will be of interest to every loyal Southerner. It is with much gratification we welcome this new publication, whose success is assured from the high standard which marks the initial number. Prof. C. C. Kent, of the University of Virginia, contributes an excellent article entitled, "The Outlook for Southern Literature," from which we quote the following tribute which he pays the Crescent City and Tulane University: "The most peculiar city in our Union is New Orleans, La. It looks within its crescent more that is strange to other parts of our country, and incorporates more varied elements of life, than any city in our land. The lines of diverse natural equipments, varied trainings, strange experiences, cross more frequently—nay, are knit together more closely; and this constant contact of unlikes is exciting and inciting. It may not be that from such mixtures the best writing comes, but such writing of various kinds will, and must, come. The standards generally applied may be too rigid for this anomalous life, and standards may be sought to suit this composite city. In any event, New Orleans is giving us authors of sketches, poetry and novels, and the number of her authors will increase. It is a source of gratulation that Tulane University, representing a high order of scholarship and excellent literary taste, has had a marked influence in bringing the chaotic intellectual life of the city into order, and is counted a central point around which the literary element may rally." . . .

The July Ladies' Home Journal opens with "The Most Famous Little Town in America," which pictures many interesting spots in historic and literary Concord. There is a delightful view of social life in the Colonial days in "When Washington was Married," which brings to light many new, interesting facts. Ian Maclaren discusses the pulpit and the pew in an article on "How to Make the Most of Your Minister," and Katharine Reich writes of "The College-Bred Woman in Her Home." The fiction of the July Journal includes a continuation of Anthony Hope's serial, "Captain Dieppe," the conclusion of "A College Courtship," the second of "Of Peckham's Opinions," and a humorous portrayal of "The Valor of Brinley," by John Kendrick Bangs. "Entertaining in the Country," "How to be Pretty, Though Plain," are some of the practical features.

Mrs. John A. Logan writes in Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly, for July, a charming and sympathetic personal sketch of Mrs. McKinley, "The Gracious Lady of the White House." The number also contains an interesting article entitled, "Fighting Fire," by Hugh Bonner, late chief of the Metropolitan Fire Department of New York City. Rollin Lynde Hartt, the well-known author of "A New England Hill Town," writes delightfully about the "Girl Undergraduates" of Smith College. "The Outdoor Woman," by Mary Sargent Hopkins, and "Charmey," by J. M. Erwin, are seasonable Summer contributions.

The Methodist Magazine, published by Thomas D. Taylor, of New York City, contains a number of interesting articles. The issue for May-June, which is the third number of this applicant for the favor of the Methodist public, is handsomely printed and profusely illustrated. The first article, "The Planting of Methodism in Oregon," written by the historian of the Pacific coast, Rev. Dr. Harvey K. Hines, gives one a bird's-eye view of the superb heroism of those Methodist pioneers. "Our Methodist Presidents" is a well-written account of the religious side of four of our Presidents—Polk, Hayes, Grant, and McKinley. The author is a well-known newspaper man, Mr. D. D. Thompson, assistant editor of the Northwestern Christian Advocate, of Chicago.

In the July Coming Age, Rev. Herbert Newton contributes an article entitled, "The Progress of the Past Fifty Years." Mr. Charles Malloy, president of the Emerson Society, of Boston, continues his masterly interpretations of the poems of Ralph Waldo Emerson. Clara Kathleen Rogers, well known in England and America as the author of "The Philosophy of Singing," appears in a remarkable story entitled, "Dreaming True; a Dream of Science."

In the American Monthly Review of Reviews, for July, the editor reviews the work of our delegation at The Hague up to date, presenting the latest phases of the arbitration question. Among other topics discussed in "The Progress of the World" this month are "tariff trusts" as a political issue, the Dreyfus vindication, the war in the Philippines, the recent change in the civil-service rules, and the newly-elected college presidents. "Rosa Bonheur and Her Work" is the subject of an article by Earnest Knaufft. Reproductions are given of several of the famous French animal painter's works now owned in this country. Pierre de Conbertin writes on "Modern History and Historians in France." Mr. George Wharton James relates "A Pilgrimage to Some Scenes of Spanish Occupancy in Our Southwest."

The leading article in Appletons' Popular Science Monthly, for July, deals with the much-discussed question of the propriety of biblical criticism; the author, the Rev. David Spragne, takes the position that it is eminently proper if conducted in an honest and unprejudiced manner. "The Geology of the Klondike Gold Fields" is the title of a valuable paper by Professor Heilprin, of the Philadelphia Academy of Natural Sciences. Booker T. Washington contributes a most timely article on "The Race Problem in the United States." Acetylene, the new illuminating agent, which has come into use so rapidly during the past year, one of its many successful applications being as a bicycle lamp, is carefully described by Edward Renouf of Johns Hopkins University. Prof William Keith Brooks, of Johns Hopkins, contributes an article entitled, "Thoughts about Universities," in which he points out the true purpose of the university, and the way in which its graduates may enhance its usefulness.

At the New Orleans Preachers' Meeting, on Monday, seventeen accessions were reported for June, several charges not being reported.

Seashore Camp Meeting.

The first gun of the Seashore Camp Meeting has been fired, and the echoes are now reverberating throughout our Southern States. Multitudes are arriving daily, each train leaving its quota. Late Saturday evening a delegation of twenty-two strong arrived from Montgomery and Mobile. A delegation of sixty from one of the Mississippi towns is also hourly expected, one of forty having already arrived and installed themselves in the lower story of the hotel.

A very spiritual and touching sermon was preached on Sunday by Rev. W. G. Forsythe, of Biloxi, on the text, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself," and while at its close a sister informed Bro. Forsythe that she was one of those Christians who would never forgive an enemy, Bro. Forsythe does not despair, but is greatly encouraged at the outlook. This week he, together with Bro. Jones, will hold services every evening at 8 o'clock, and also cottage prayer meeting daily, preparatory to the opening of the camp meeting, systematic and careful preparations being deemed by them advisable.

The aid and assistance extended by the many friends of the camp ground, among whom may be mentioned especially the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, the Nashville Advocate, the Alabama Advocate, and the pastors of our church in Louisiana, Alabama, and Mississippi, is now beginning to show itself as witnessed by the great influx of our people. A NEW ENTERPRISE.

"The Southern Library, Book and News Association," is the name of an organization recently projected at Jackson, Miss., by Rev. C. H. Ellis, Rev. W. D. Dominick and Prof. N. J. Harris. It has been chartered and has begun operations. Its plan of work is commended by Bishop Galloway, Major R. W. Millsaps, Gov. McLaurin and many other prominent citizens of Mississippi. It will aim to found circulating libraries in the larger towns in Mississippi and other Southern States. It will also be headquarters for books and periodicals. We wish the movement large success.

BISHOP JOHN F. HURST.

We regret to notice in the secular press that Mrs. Hurst, the wife of Bishop John F. Hurst, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, has applied to the courts in Washington City for legal separation from her husband. She is the second wife of the Bishop, and at the time of their marriage, some five years ago, she was young, beautiful and wealthy. She was the daughter of Francis R. Root, of Buffalo, who made a great fortune in manufacturing stoves and in dealing in real estate. Mr. Root and his family were ardent Methodists, and they wished their family name to be associated with one high in the councils of the church. Bishop Hurst was some fifty years of age, and one of the great men of Methodism. The two were brought together by the Bishop's intimate acquaintance with and frequent visits to the Root homestead. He was a great favorite with the family. The Bishop and Miss Root were married at her father's death-bed, and in accordance with the dying man's wish. The bride inherited a great fortune, estimated at $80,000 annually. The couple took up their residence in Washington, in which city the Bishop had already inaugurated the great American Methodist University enterprise. Mrs. Root purchased a magnificent home for them in this city and fitted it up in great style. But the disparity between the ages of the two people, together with the sober, quiet tastes of the Bishop, did not conduce to the happiness of his young wife. There was no congeniality between them, and after the first few months of married life had passed, the two began to drift apart. This continued until a few weeks ago, when the Bishop, after a consultation with the Root family, concluded that the best thing to do under the circumstances was to permit his wife to quietly ask the courts to grant her a separation. All parties concerned deemed this the wise thing to do in the face of this unfortunate emergency. So he deeded back to her all the property which had come to them from her father's estate, and the divorce proceedings were quietly instituted. No scandal attaches to the case whatever, and no one censures the Bishop for the course he has pursued. He has acted the part of the thoroughly unselfish man in releasing his young wife from a bond of union in which she was very unhappy. There was nothing else for him to do; but the necessity which has brought the divorce proceedure about is a source of deep regret upon the part of all concerned. A Methodist Bishop is the highest official in the church, and though no blame is attached to this one on account of his trouble, yet the very fact that he stands divorced from his wife carries with it an air of humiliation not at all in keeping with the sanctity and high dignity of the eminent position he occupies in his church. A Methodist Bishop in the attitude of a divorced man, whatever the cause, does not look well to the multiplied thousands of members who have been taught from time immemorial to regard these high officials as pre-eminent models of propriety and leadership in the church of God. From this sad experience of the Bishop and his church our leaders in Zion ought to learn a lesson. They represent the church, even in their matrimonial alliances, and in such ventures they need to exercise more discretion and less sentiment. If an aged Bishop is so unfortunate as to lose his wife, he had better remain single, unless he can get the consent of his mind to select another one in keeping with his own age, and in sympathy with the great work to which the church has called him. However innocent he may be in his domestic infelicities, we do not want another divorced Methodist Bishop. We now have one too many in the person of Bishop Hurst, and we religiously indulge the hope that this unenviable and unique distinction will never come to another one of our General Superintendents. —Texas Advocate.

The watchword of this morning of the twentieth century should be, "Not sentiment, but service." Unpracticed sentiment, be it ever so pure, lofty and noble, is like the raindrop which is dissipated in the upper air, and never reaches the dry and thirsty land. It may assist in the formation of other raindrops, but the Master's will is not accomplished until service transforms the barren waste of sentiment, and thereby enables other souls to see into the joy and beauty of the holier life.—Rev. C. H. Beck.

EPWORTH LEAGUE DEPARTMENT.

"ALL FOR CHRIST."

REV. THOMAS B. CLIFFORD, Jackson, La., EDITOR.
REV. HENRY G. HAWKINS, Madison, Miss., ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

We gladly give space to the following communication from Mrs J. S. Parker, of Caseyville, Lincoln county, Miss., wife of the Rev. J. S. Parker, of the Mississippi Conference, and would be glad to hear from others concerning the work:

"We are engaged in an effort to organize Epworth Leagues all over this, the Caseyville charge, Mississippi Conference. We have a fine League at Bethesda, and at this point, and still another, a sufficient number of names to organize good Leagues. Last Sabbath nearly 20 names were secured here as a nucleus, and they seem eager to begin work. Circumstances prevented organization that day, but it will be attended to at an early date. My heart is in the work. Please publish this for the encouragement of other Leagues. I feel that in this work we solve the problem of how to get in touch with the young life of the church."

Our space this week is devoted to account of proceedings of the Mississippi State Conference, which convened in West Point, June 22-25.

MISSISSIPPI STATE LEAGUE CONFERENCE.

The writer was present at the opening of the State League Conference at West Point on the afternoon of June 22. After organizing by the election of Rev. R. A. Meek, of Starkville, chairman, and Mr. D. G. Patton, of Jackson, recording secretary, an opening consecration service was held, led by Joe M. Ramsey. He was introduced as "Reverend;" but he declined that appellation, saying that he was only a boy, and asking to be called "The Blind Boy Epworth League Lecturer." At the close of his talk nearly all of the large congregation present came to the altar or kneeled in the pews, praying for preparation. Much earnestness was evident and tears were in the eyes of many as they arose from their knees and grasped the hand of the blind.

Rev. T. H. Dorsey, of Cleveland, Miss., led the devotions of the evening session, the chief feature of which session was another address by Joe Ramsey. "Character Building from an Epworth League Standpoint" was the subject. This time, too, he was mellow, as well as thoughtful, and his words had effect. At the close of the address, by request, he told the story of his life, of how he had expected to be a lawyer, of the blindness that came at the age of fourteen, of how for a long time his mother and he would not give it up that he was blind, of the unimaginable horror of the next two or three years. An Epworth League was organized in his town in Tennessee, and they elected him president; why, he could not understand. At the end of a year the Tennessee State League Executive Committee asked him if he would leave the harness-making trade in which he was learning to earn a good living, and travel throughout the State as League organizer, with no guarantee of support. He accepted the new field, and now for several years has devoted himself in it.

When this writer left the Conference room at 10 o'clock the next morning Joe Ramsey was on the floor presenting a gavel which he had made with his own hand of the cedar of Tennessee.

"Up to the time of my departure the "blind boy" was the central figure of the gathering, with W. A. Hemphill, of Texas, attracting by his songs; but Bishop Galloway, Dr. DuBose, and Rev. P. L. Cobb appeared later; and already the committees were getting to their business, manned by such workers as T. Y. Ramsey, W. T. Sullivan, J. M. Morse, H. F. Tatum, W. D. Hawkins, H. T. Cunningham, W. O. Sadler, Mrs. Mamie Turner, Dr. Rosa Wiss, W. P. Bond, Miss Vic Thompson.

A host of Leaguers were there, and Rev. G. W. Bachman was enpplying singers and readers with books.

The writer read in the ADVOCATE and in the Times-Demoorat that he had been elected associate editor of League Department of NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE. He has already more work on hand than he can see daylight through; but he may undertake this for a while.

From inquiry, we learn that the decision was for the Leagues to devote their special funds raised to the purpose of paying the deficit that the two Annual Conferences of Mississippi have each year on the assessment for foreign missions.

A committee was appointed to report at the next State Conference on the advisability of holding in the bounds of each Annual Conference one year a League gathering for each Conference, the next year a State gathering for both Conferences, and so on.

The Mississippi delegation to the International Convention at Indianapolis will start from Jackson, Miss., at 7 P. M., July 18, leaving Meridian the same night, and joining the Alabama crowd at Birmingham. If as many as 18 will start from Jackson, the Q and C. will furnish a special coach there. The rate is one fare for the round trip, which is $19 40 from Jackson, Miss. It is said that 40 or 50 are planning to go from Mississippi, and the crowd will be greatly swelled in Alabama. All off for Indianapolis!

HENRY G. HAWKINS.

The fifth State Conference of Epworth Leagues in Mississippi was a grand success. The attendance was good, and a deep religious interest was manifested in each meeting.

The programme—"Twentieth Century Methodism, (1) Its Spiritnality, (2) Its Educational Feature, and (3) Its Missionary Impulse"—was thoroughly discussed. The speeches made and the papers read were of an unusual high order.

The music of the Conference was directed by Mr. W. A. Hemphill, of Midlothian, Texas, who was ably assisted by a male quartette from Millsaps College, and others of the best musicians in our State. Truly the music was an inspiration to all. Mr. Hemphill's solo, "Never alone," touched the hearts of both young and old, moving many to tears and strengthening many a burdened heart.

Rev. Joe M. Ramsey, of Viola, Tenn., was with us. His addresses, "Character Building from an Epworth League Standpoint," and "How to Make the League Go," were thoroughly enjoyed by all. We all feel stronger and better by having come in touch with this sweet-spirited Christian man.

Prof. Dinning, of Bostic and Dinning Training-school, Mt. Pleasant, Tenn., was a welcomed visitor to our Conference. We regret not to have heard all of his address. What we did hear was good, to say the least of it.

Bishop Galloway came Friday evening just in time to carry out his part of the programme. His address on "Christian Education," in connection with the "Twentieth Century Thank-offering," was a splendid effort, and will bear fruit in days to come. Mississippi will do her part in behalf of this movement. Our people and preachers are becoming enthused, and are girding themselves for earnest and active work.

We were glad indeed to have Rev. P. L. Cobb, of Nashville, Tenn., among us. He is an enthusiastic Epworth Leaguer, and rendered valuable assistance in many ways.

The sermon preached by Rev. R. G. Porter, Saturday, at 11 A. M., deserves special mention. It was strong, clear, forceful. We all enjoyed it—and it did us good.

Dr. DuBose arrived late Saturday afternoon, somewhat fatigued from travel, but gave us a most excellent address Saturday evening. Using a somewhat old expression, "He is the right man in the right place." It was not my privilege to attend the services Sunday, but feel safe in saying that they were well attended and profitable to all.

Several important subjects were discussed during the session. The plan to draw off the Leagues from all side issues and special pledges, and have them co-operate with their pastors in raising the full amount of the regular assessment, was thoroughly discussed and finally adopted.

A resolution expressing regret at the forced absence of our president, Rev. John A. Randolph, and assuring him of our sympathy and prayers in his work among the soldier boys, was adopted.

The next State Conference goes to Vicksburg. HAL S. SPRAGINS.

If your druggist does not keep it, a sample bottle will be sent by mail, free of charge, by writing Dr. Taber Mfg. Co., Peoria, Ill.

BEWARE OF FOOD SAMPLES.

Quite recently in New York two deaths occurred from poisoning by the use of powders sent to the victims by mail. In Leavenworth, Kans., the other day nearly every doctor in town was called to attend the children who had gathered up, eaten, and been made ill by samples of an article left at houses by canvassers for advertising purposes.

Alum baking powders have always been favorite articles for this sampling business. Yet there is nothing more liable to lead to danger than the practice of using the various samples of baking powder left at the door. They are presented by irresponsible parties, in appearance are not distinguishable from arsenic, and indeed, in Indiana some time since one package was found, after it had caused the death of the housewife, to have been mixed with that poison.

It is safer to refuse all samples of food or medicine offered at the door. Pure cream of tartar baking powders sell upon their merits, and are never peddled or sampled

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

The annual meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society was held in Sardis, June 10-13. Rev. J. W. Malone preached the sermon on Sunday morning from Matt. xxviii, 19, 20. In the absence of the president, Mrs. Geo. H. Lipscomb, Mrs. S. M. Thames, vice-president, presided with grace and ability. The following officers were present, filling their stations acceptably: Miss Ella Grider, recording secretary; Mrs. W. M. McIntosh, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Clara C. Fant, treasurer, and all but one of the district secretaries. The same officers were re-elected for the ensuing year, excepting Mrs. M. I. Haskins, who was elected president instead of Mrs. Lipscomb, who, for good reasons, declined re-election.

These women are doing great service for the spread of the gospel, and their work should be encouraged and aided by the pastors in every charge. They reported 97 auxiliaries, with 1,743 members; 68 juvenile societies, with 1,724 members; money raised during the year, $4,682 80 They send out two missionaries this year, viz.: Miss Witman, to Cuba, and Miss Sessner, to China. The Lord bless these women who labor with us in the gospel, and multiply their generation abundantly.

The people of Sardis were generous in their hospitalities for the occasion, and Dr. Wier, presiding elder; Bro. Kendall, pastor, and this writer did what they could in word and deed to aid the sisters in their noble work.

The first services were held in the new church in Winona last Sunday; the dedication will take place the first Sunday in July, with a sermon by Dr. W. B. Murrah.

I am now in Utica attending the sessions of the Vicksburg District Conference, and enjoying the courtesies and fellowship of the brethren. The attendance is small, but there are manifestations of life and good spirit in the body. I and Bro. C. N. Brown have a good home with Sister Lee at the hotel.

I go to-morrow to Jackson to be present at the commencement exercises of Millsaps College; thence home, and on to the Epworth League State Conference at West Point, where we are expecting a great meeting. So may it be.

Attention, Farmers!

Do you desire to secure hundreds of sample copies of agricultural journals, magazines, newspapers books, catalogues and circulars of the latest improved farm implements and machinery, and be kept posted on improved seeds and stock for two years or more? If so, send us your name with ten cents in silver and we will insert the same in the American Farmers' Directory, which goes whirling all over the United States to publishers, merchants and manufacturers. You will get more good reading matter than you could purchase for many times the small cost of ten cents. We want every farmer's name in the United States in our Directory at once. Address

LIFE SAVED BY SWAMP-ROOT.

The Wonderful New Discovery in Medical Science

SAMPLE BOTTLE SENT FREE BY MAIL.

Swamp Root, discovered by the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, is wonderfully successful in promptly curing kidney, bladder and uric acid troubles.

Some of the early symptoms of weak kidneys are pain or dull ache in the back, rheumatism, dizziness, headache, nervousness, catarrh of the bladder, gravel or calculi, bloating, sallow complexion, puffy or dark circles under the eyes, suppression of urine or compelled to pass water often day and night.

The mild and the extraordinary effect of the famous new discovery, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine, you should have the best.

Sold by druggists in fifty-cent and one dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root and a pamphlet that tells all about it, including many of the thousands of letters received from sufferers cured, both sent free by mail. Write Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and please mention that you read this generous offer in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

SPANISH-AMERICAN WAR PANORAMA

is one of the war books which is likely to be in continuous demand. It is a panoramic record of the triumph of Yankee Doodle. The eagle flaps his wings on every page, and "Old Glory" waves around and above every scene. Prominent officers connected with the war are here portrayed, as well as many of the "men behind the guns." Military life is pictured to the eye, from reciuiting to guard mount and skirmish line. Nor is the ludicrous omitted. The company cook receives the attention due to his importance; the mess is shown; cavalry scenes are given; the hospital arrangements are depicted; the heroines of the Red Cross service are displayed; street scenes in Havana, Santiago and elsewhere are unrolled, the new citizens or subjects (which are they?) of Uncle Sam appear and disappear as the leaves are turned.

In a word, the gazer visits the new localities and sees the tumultuous new life, without the risk or expense of a sea voyage.

The Album is 5½x8 inches, weighs 12 ounces, printed on finest coated paper.

Sent FREE to any address in the United States, Canada, or Mexico, for 12 cents in stamps or coin, to cover postage and packing. Copy may be seen at any ticket office of the Big Four Route.

SOCRATES died from a cup of poison administered by the hand of a friend. How many in this land have died by poisonous remedies given by friendly hands to combat diseases? It is quite a comfort to know that when giving DICKS' CHILLIFUGE there is not a drop of poison in a bottle full of this beneficent remedy.

A MERRY HEART.

Clear day or cloudy day,
Summer heat or cold,
A happy heart keeps holiday,
A merry heart is bold.
Though the wind of Fortune blow
Out of wintry skies,
Face it smiling as you go—
A merry heart is wise.

By and by the sun will shine,
Day must follow night,
Darkest hour is the sign
Of returning light.
God is in his heaven still,
Though the world denies;
And cheery courage waits on will—
A merry heart is wise.

Over rugged things we climb
To our best estate;
We shall stumble many a time,
But we conquer fate.
And we choose the better part
So that evil flies,
When we keep the dauntless heart,
The merry heart that's wise.

—Youth's Companion.

HOW WORRY KILLS.

We often hear of men who are said to have died of overwork, but it is safe to assume that in nine out of ten of such cases there had been no overwork at all. That too much work has killed some people is not to be doubted, but this does not alter the fact that work, pure and simple, is one of the rarest of all rare causes of death. The mischief is done by the worry which often goes with the work, and is mistaken for it.

We do not yet understand the process by which worry undermines the general health, induces disease of the heart, of the arteries, and of the kidneys, or kills a man before his time; but that it does do such things is a fact only too well established.

It is true that worry often leads a person to practices which are themselves injurious, such as over-indulgence in alcohol or tobacco, or perhaps the use of opium or cocaine or chloral; and disease and death are often attributable to the action of these poisons rather than to the effects of work or worry. But these will not explain the disaster in all cases.

It may be objected despairingly that, if worry is slow suicide, then almost none of us can escape. Very few men can be found who have no unfilled desires which they are striving to gratify, and who are so absolutely secure of the future that they may give literal heed to the biblical command to take no thought for the morrow.

But this forethought is not worry—at least it need not be worry—it is merely incertitude, prudent care for the future, or even slight anxiety. Harassing anxiety, impatient expectation, disproportionate fear of the unknown; this is worry, and this is what causes the heart to struggle, the kidneys to contract, the arteries to weaken, and the mind to fail.

No one who is not given to worry can conceive of the power which the habit gains over its victim. Such a one will freely admit the excellence of the advice not to worry, but he will add that it is impossible to follow it. This is true only in a measure and in a few cases. Barring instances of exceptional trouble, of extraordinary "hard luck," almost everyone can, by resolute determination, reduce his worry within living limits.—Youth's Companion.

GENTLE.

Among the many anecdotes told of William Augustus Muhlenberg, the well-known and greatly beloved philanthropist, there is one which illuminates a rare and especial grace of his character. In one of his many walks through Fifty-fourth street, while the hospital was in process of erection, he accidentally upset, stumbling as he did so, a pail of water which had been left in the foot-path of the then unpaved street.

Instantly an ugly-looking boy rushed up to the doctor and his companion, shouting roughly:

"I say, old man, what did you do that for? That water had to be fetched, I tell yer!"

"Why did you leave your pail in the path?" demanded the doctor's friend, indignantly. "And how dare you speak so to the gentleman?"

"Well, well! Never mind," interposed Doctor Muhlenberg, with his fine smile. "It is a pity the water is spilt. Will sixpence pay for getting some more, my boy?" handing the coin as he spoke to the ragamuffin, who seized it with a rough, "I s'pose so," and hurried off, probably much pleased with the bargain he had made.

This little incident is a slight illustration of the spirit in which Doctor Muhlenberg always bore an injury. He never failed to accept with the utmost gentleness a wrong that involved nothing beyond his personal discomfort or loss. His invariable answer to the remonstrances of friends who were anxious for his interests was:

"Don't trouble, only let us do right! The great thing is to do right!"

In a transaction by which he was unjustly deprived of a large sum of money, he expressed so much satisfaction at the peaceableness of the arbitration, and gave God such hearty thanks, that an uninitiated person would have supposed him to be a gainer rather than a loser by the transaction.

Yet all his biographers unite in saying that no looker-on could have felt that his course was the result of weakness. It was simply his carrying out of the command, "If any man will sue thee at the law and take away thy coat, let him have thy cloak also."—Selected.

WOMAN'S KINGDOM.

Even in the midst of this age which clamors for novelties and delights in changes of the most startling sort, we are not ashamed to confess our faith in the old-fashioned doctrine that woman's kingdom is pre-eminently the household. We can do this while at the same time unfeignedly rejoicing that woman's sphere has been so marvelously broadened in these later years. Now that women are found in all sorts of employments, so that it is much easier to say where she is not than where she is, there is far better opportunity than before for the permanent securing of "that holy household love that through our homes doth move." It is now not marriage or nothing, as a means of livelihood, nor are girls compelled to take the first offer through fear of coming to want. This is a very great blessing, in that it enables them to wait with modesty and dignity until the right one appears, and helps them to avoid that hideous, heart-rending tragedy—union in form and in flesh where there is no union in reality and in spirit.

But this modern offering to women of so wide a choice in occupations, and the emancipation that springs from it, should not be suffered for a moment to dim the brightness of the truth that her noblest function, her chief profession, still is to be a wife and mother. The idea must in no way be permitted to gain currency that there is something finer and higher in being independent and working out a career in some more public position. It would be a sad day for the world if any such notion became generally accepted. Let it be emphasized that there is no higher title than queen of the home.

What influences gather round and go forth from the fireside and the hearthstone! She who rocks the cradle really rules the world. The home is next the sanctuary in sacredness. It is itself a kind of sanctuary, consecrated with mother love. It is the cherished refuge from the storms of life and the best preparation for breasting those storms. "The love of mother," it has been said, "is the last cable that holds the youth to his moorings. Every other anchor drags, but while that holds he is almost certain to outride the wildest gales." It is the glory of the Anglo-Saxon race that it prizes its home. If the time comes when that word sounds less sweet to the American ear, or holds poorer meanings, the day of national decay and death will be perilously near. The hearthstone has well been called the cornerstone of the republic. It must be carefully laid, and then kept clean and bright, that happy hearts may cluster about it and give hearty thanks to God.

She, then, who more than any other makes the home, may fitly feel that in its keeping is a field for her fullest energy and greatest honor. There is certainly no place where influences so strong and permanent can be exerted. There is no work that requires higher qualities or reaps more glorious reward. The reason why there is so much left for philanthropists to do is because the home work is done so badly. The greatest reform is needed there, and only woman can accomplish it. Man may be the head of the family, but woman is the heart, controlling and diffusing its life-blood. Let her never be induced to depreciate the importance of the home, or be discontented with its burdens, or desert its duties. Let her count them the highest possible privilege and her supremest crown of rejoicing.—Zion's Herald.

LIKE A THIEF IN THE NIGHT,

Malaria creeps into the system and leaves a poison which saps its vitality until the well-known symptoms of CHILLS AND FEVER, INTERMITTENT FEVER, CONGESTION, BLOODY URINE, etc., will show their snake-like heads. Fortunately there is an antidote in DICKS' CHILLIFUGE, which absolutely exterminates Malaria in a few hours; so pleasant to the taste that children love to take it. It banishes fevers like mist before the morning sun; brings as a gift rose cheeks, health, happiness, and makes life worth the living.

PRACTICE LOVE.

We learn to love by loving. It grows by practice. Like everything else, it gathers strength through exercise. The more we keep at it, the easier and more natural it becomes. We can form the habit of looking at people with love, thinking about them with love, speaking of them in love, and acting toward them lovingly. Our deeds will react upon our thoughts, and our thoughts and feelings will prompt to action. So we may become steeped in love. It will radiate from us as the light from the lamps. We shall be charged with it as the battery is with electricity, and power will go out from us. So, instead of crying idly, "O for more love!" let us lay more stress upon the practice. If we continually use what we have, it will increase.—Christian Inquirer.

Very wise was the advice given by an experienced Christian who, in his religion, as in other things, was accustomed to exercise his common sense. A young man, in the days when it was beginning to be deemed a token of proficiency to question, and to magnify doubt, was speaking to an admiring circle of his difficulty to understand and reconcile certain doctrines of revelation. It appeared to him to justify his delay to become a Christian, if not to dismiss the whole matter as one of no personal concern. With ill-concealed impatience the veteran heard him through, and then said: "Young man, practice what you know, practice what you know; when you have done all that you know, you may begin to speculate in mysteries." Had the counsel been followed, probably the occasion to question never would have recurred.—Rev. E. P. Terhune, in the Christian Intelligencer.

Like flakes of snow that fall unperceived upon the earth, the seemingly unimportant events of life succeed one another. As the snow gathers together, so are our habits formed. No single flake that is added to the pile produces a sensible change; no single action creates, however it may exhibit, a man's character.—Jeremy Taylor.

COFFEE DRINKING AND BLINDNESS.

The efforts of the persistent use of strong coffee are most marked. They show themselves in profound mental depression, insomnia and severe headache. There is muscular weakness and trembling, irritability of the heart's action, with sensation of weight. A form of dyspepsia occurs, also, which is peculiar and persistent, as long as the agent is continued. When the coffee habitue undertakes to stop the inordinate use of the decoction there is constant fear of death, which is only relieved by resorting to the agent again. The face becomes sallow, the hands and feet cold. Erysipelas and other acute local inflammations are easily induced. The party who is a habitue to the inordinate use of coffee resorts to the use of alcohol also to preserve the stimulating effects. People suffering from neurasthenia and general nervous prostration are most likely to form the habit of the inordinate use of this beverage. In extreme cases of melancholia the mental depression becomes so great that suicide often follows. Snaitken, according to the Medical Review, says that the Moors are inveterate coffee drinkers, especially the merchants, who sit in their bazaars and drink continually during the day. It has been noticed that almost invariably when these coffee drinkers reach the age of forty or forty-five their eyesight begins to fail, and by the time they get to be fifty years old they become blind. One is forcibly impressed by the number of blind men that are seen about the streets of the city of Fez, the capital of Morocco. It is invariably attributed to the excessive use of coffee.—Sanitary Home.

OUR $1 OFFER.

Much has been said about reducing the subscription price of the ADVOCATE. The only way in which a reduction can be brought about is by an increase in the number of subscribers. In order to facilitate this result, we make the following offer: Until further notice we will take new subscriptions at the rate of $1 for eight months. When seven thousand five hundred new names have been sent in at this rate with the cash, we will extend the time four months longer, thus reducing the price to $1 per annum. When the extension is made, old subscribers will get the benefit as well as new ones, provided they first pay up all arrearages. Of course, no commissions can be given under this offer. Address

KIRKPATRICK—With grief and joy mingled we chronicle the death of one of the best women it has been our good fortune to know. In the early morn of May 6, 1899, Mrs. SALLIE M. KIRKPATRICK (nee Estes), after many months of patient suffering, swept out of mortality to the home of the soul, leaving a heart-broken husband and three little boys weeping, and refusing to be comforted.

Sister Kirkpatrick was born Feb. 23, 1863; professed religion at about fifteen years of age, and joined the Missionary Baptist Church. After her marriage to William Kirkpatrick, which was April 15, 1883, she joined the M. E. Church, South, in which she adorned the doctrines of Christ to the end of her mortality. It would be hard to find a woman more spiritually minded than she. She was ever ready to converse about religion, and strove to get the very best out of it possible. Religion was no loose garment, to be worn on occasions, to be put off and on at will, or for emergencies by her, but a divine reality, a principle lovingly courted every day. How bright her home was made by her bright Christian life! Such women are gems of the highest order. Our church and her community has lost a precious treasure. How she will be missed at Noxubee Church! Her devotional bearing was an inspiration to a preacher. Many preachers who have traveled the Louisville circuit will bear testimony with this pastor that she was one of the effective women who helped in the promotion of the interests of the church. She was a very hopeful spirit. Though ready for the change at any time, she never gave up to die until a few days before her death. Her memory is as ointment poured forth. She lives in our hearts, and with her we hope to live in glory by and by. She leaves an aged father, five brothers, besides her own precious ones at home, and a host of friends, as was attested on the day of her burial.

May the God of all grace help us all to meet her in our Father's great mansion house!

D. W. BAIRD.

WOOTEN—Mrs. LIDDIA ELIZABETH WOOTEN, the subject of this notice, illustrated the truth that good and great women are brought up in Christian homes. Her father and eldest brother, Revs. C. B. and J. B. Harris, typical Methodist preachers, and her mother a model of piety, we are not surprised to know that Sister Wooten was too strong to be a society woman, and too good to live for herself. We only pause here to call attention to the beautiful life of this sainted woman, because such a character is too great to be written by human pen. Rev. Amos Kendall knew her from childhood, visited her regularly during her last illness, and conducted her funeral services. He says: "She was a good woman; gentle, sweet-spirited, and kind. Her religion was of the genuine type. She always reminded me of her venerable father. She lived only as a Christian lives; she died only as a Christian dies. She was fully ready." Her husband says that "she was a conscientious Christian. She craved to live for her loved ones. She died perfectly resigned."

She was born in Marshall county, Miss., Sept. 19, 1845, converted and joined the Methodist Church at the Bush Arbor meeting, conducted by her father, Dr. Reed and Rev. E. Jackson in the Summer of 1860 at the same place where Harris Chapel now stands, near Lows Hill, Marshall county. Her first husband, W. J. Bowen, was the eldest brother of the writer. They were married in June, 1867. He died Nov. 20 of the same year. Her only child, Mrs. Maud Kline, of Memphis, Tenn., was by this marriage. In May, 1881, she married W. B. Wooten, of Sardis, Miss., where she died in great peace Feb. 18, 1899. She has left us the rich legacy of a Christian life. While we deeply sympathize with the bereaved ones, we rejoice with them in the hope that we will meet her in heaven.

CATCHINGS—Miss MYRA CATCHINGS, daughter of Mr. F. B. and Mrs. Mollie Catchings, was born at Georgetown, Miss., Oct. 13, 1877. She graduated at Whitworth College in the class of 1896. She was the oldest of seven children, and after the death of her mother and her return from school, previous to her father's second marriage, she had charge of the younger children and the elegant home, where a generous hospitality was dispensed. She filled well this responsible position. She joined the church when twelve years of age, and has been an active worker in the Sunday-school, and was our organist in the Georgetown Church. She held a large place in the esteem and affection of her kindred and all who knew her beautiful character. We laid her body to rest June 18, 1899, in the family cemetery on the west bank of Pearl river, in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends, and was one of the saddest funerals we ever attended. The loved ones do not sorrow as those who have no hope.

BODDIE—A good woman has died. Sister EMMA ROSA, wife of S. M. Boddie, departed this life Dec. 7, 1898. She was born Aug. 16, 1857; was the mother of seven children—all girls. Having lived a consistent Christian all her life, she died triumphantly. Our church has sustained the loss of a pious, devoted Christian.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh, being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials. Address,

JOB EARNED HIS TITLE BY GREAT SUFFERING. Had he flourished in these days, his recourse for consolation would not have been the company of three nagging friends, but a bottle of DICKS' MI'L-EN-OL, which has a wonderful power to dissipate the inflammation, cool the feverishness, and completely cure boils and carbuncles.

Regrets over the past should chasten the future.—Ellis.

NAPOLEON LOST THE BATTLE OF LEIPSIC because of a fit of indigestion. One dose of DICKS' MI'L-EN-OL would have given him instant relief, and the fate of the kingdoms of Europe been decided differently. It is really marvelous how quickly a colicky pain will vanish when a teaspoonful of Mul-en-ol in a wineglass of hot water is taken. Try it; you will never suffer from colic.

28th ANNUAL CAMP MEETING

Seashore Camp Grounds.

Located on the Gulf Shore, with a frontage of 1,400 feet.

WILL OPEN (D. V.) ON WEDNESDAY, JULY 12, NEXT, AND CONTINUE FOR 8 OR 10 DAYS.

The Grounds are opened April 1, and closed Nov. 1, for occupying cottages and reception of visitors. Modern and ample accommodation have been provided for the multitudes that annually visit this refreshing and delightfully cool and bracing place of rest, free from malaria and contagious diseases.

The sea bathing is unsurpassed by any resort on the Mississippi Sound, while the supply of pure, sparkling drinking water is furnished by one of the finest of artesian wells, whose waters possess rare virtues.

The exhilarating sea breezes refresh the fatigued, and act as a tonic to the debilitated visitors from our smoke-enveloped and dust-stifling cities and towns. Boats for sailing and fishing always on hand. The drives along the seashore present magnificent views, and are over ten miles in length. Visitors are not expected to arrive or depart on the Sabbath day.

The L. and N. R. R. Company will place on sale the reduced rate of fare during the season, from all points on their lines, and secure a corresponding rate from all connecting lines. Tickets will be placed on sale July 5 to 22, inclusive, and be good to return on until Aug. 31. Two daily mail trains stop at the camp grounds, besides the accommodation and excursion trains, during the entire Summer season. A fine hotel, with a frontage of 175 feet, equipped with electric lights and all modern conveniences, has been erected.

All itinerant preachers of the Southern Methodist Church will be admitted into the grounds and provided with lodging accommodations in Wesley Hall free of charge.

The usual entrance fee will be in force this season. No charge will be exacted for entrance on the Sunday of the camp meeting. A cordial invitation is extended to all who desire to attend the camp meeting and spend a while on the camp ground.

Persons wishing to secure accommodations before and during camp meeting, or rent cottages for the season, will please communicate with W. L. Vin, superintendent Camp Ground (Biloxi, P. O. 42, Miss.) or any of the following officers:

J. A. WOODVILLE, President, New Orleans, La.
J. B. LEETWICH, Vice-President, Mobile, Ala.

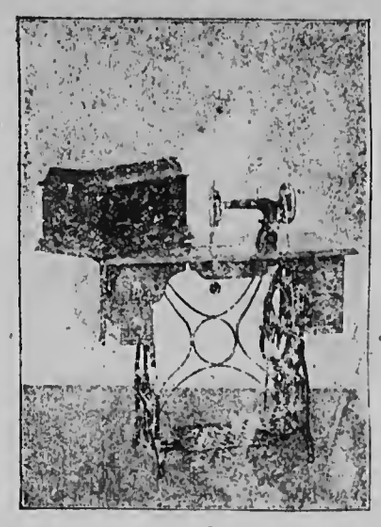
New Machine Offer.

By Far the Best We Have Ever Made.

Always on the watch for something good for our subscribers, we have succeeded in making arrangements whereby we can make a sewing machine offer which is far better than any we have been able hitherto to make. Read the following description and then read our offer:

No. 4 IMPERIAL.



THE IMPERIAL HIGH-ARM SINGER will be found the perfection of mechanism as regards simplicity, durability and adaptability to the wide range of work embraced in the general family needs.

A Handsome, Light-Running, Lock-Stitch, High-Arm Machine that will not fail to please the most fastidious. Embracing all the advantages with all desirable improvements of other first-class sewing machines, so simple in mechanism that the most inexperienced need no assistance in operating it. Book of Instructions with every machine. Any child can learn to run it.

Extra Set of Attachments also free with each machine consisting of the following: One Tucker, One Foot Ruffler, One Set of Plate Hemmers, four different widths up to ½ of an inch, One Binder and One Thread Cutter.

No. 3 Machine, drop leaf table, gothic cover, case of two drawers at one end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $24.
Our price, $14.75.

No. 4 Machine, drop leaf table, gothic cover, case of two drawers at each end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $25.
Our price, $15.50.

No. 5 Machine, drop leaf table, gothic cover, case of three drawers at each end, making seven drawers in all. Dealer's price, $26.
Our price, $16.25.

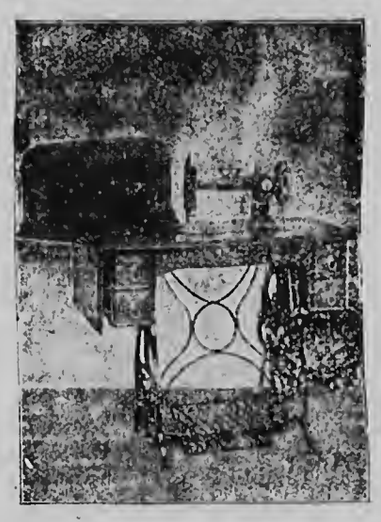
No. 4 Columbian



EXCELLENCE OF THE COLUMBIAN.—All wearing parts are of case-hardened steel possessing great durability, and by the turning of a screw all lost motion caused by wear can be taken up. All parts are fitted so accurately that the machines are absolutely noiseless, and as easy running as fine adjustment and best mechanical skill is possible to produce. No expense or time is spared to make them perfect in every respect, as every machine passes a rigid inspection by competent men before leaving the factory.

NICKEL PLATED.—The balance wheel and many of the fine parts are nickel plated, with other parts finely enameled and ornamented, giving it a rich appearance.

A Self Setting Needle and Self Threading Cyl. Per Shuttle are used in the Columbian High-Arm Sewing Machine. They are so simple that any one can easily operate them in a few minutes' time, as our Instruction Book is fully illustrated, showing how to do all kinds of fancy work with attachments.

Extra Attachments, in velvet lined case, sent free with each machine: 1 Tucker, 1 Ruffler with shirring plate, 1 Hemmer set (4 widths) and Binder, 1 Braider (Foot and Slide), 1 Thread Cutter.

ADDITIONAL ACCESSORIES.—Each machine is supplied with the following outfit: 1 Hemmer and Feller (one piece), 10 Needles, 6 Bobbins, 1 Wrench, 1 Screw Driver, Oil Can with Oil, Cloth Guage and Thumb Screw, and a Book of Instructions. The Book of Instructions is profusely illustrated, and answers the purpose of a competent teacher.

No. 3—Drop leaf, Bent cover, case of two drawers at one end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $29. Our price, $17.
No. 4—Drop leaf table, Bent cover, case of two drawers at each end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $31. Our price, $17.75.
No. 5—Drop leaf table, Bent cover, case of three drawers at each end and center drawer, making a seven drawer machine. Dealer's price, $33. Our price, $18.50.

The chief difference between Numbers 3, 4, and 5 is in the furniture, i. e., in the number of drawers. If you do not want to pay for the extra drawers, you need not do so. We sell these machines under a ten years' guarantee, by which we mean that if any part gives out by reason of any defect therein, the manufacturer will replace the same free of charge. Moreover, we allow the purchaser to test the machine ten days. If at the end of ten days you are not satisfied, you have only to drop us a postal card, and your money will be refunded.

OUR OFFER.

We will send any one of the above described machines at the prices named, and also send the ADVOCATE free for six months. The only condition attached to this offer is that subscribers who are in arrears must first pay up all arrearages to date. It would be well to avail yourself of this offer at once, as we can not promise that it will last very long. Notice that you take no risk whatever. We do all the risking. Address

HIRES

IS A

Temperance Drink.

It is prepared for temperance people, a multitude of whom believe it helpful to the great cause of temperance. Any one who states that HIRES Rootbeer is not a temperance drink either willfully misrepresents the facts or has not investigated the subject in an impartial manner. HIRES Rootbeer is a temperance drink. The leading chemists say so without qualification, and stand ready to prove their assertion. If there are any fair minded persons anywhere who have a scrupulous doubt as to the honesty of this claim, and will address THE CHARLES E. HIRES COMPANY, Philadelphia, they will be given every opportunity to satisfy themselves as to the ingredients, the nature, the character of HIRES Rootbeer.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

The physicians of Philadelphia have taken up the discussion of Christian Science healing, and will take steps to put a stop to the practice.

One of the women to visit the National Council of Women is a Chinese physician, Dr. Ida Kahn, who was educated at Ann Arbor, Mich., through the influence of American missionaries. She is now in China, engaged in professional work there.

The German delegates on Saturday's session of the drafting committee of the Arbitration Commission of the Peace Conference officially announced the assent of Germany to Sir Julian Pauncefote's proposal of a permanent court of arbitration.

The protest against a Government measure takes the form of revolution in Belgium, and Brussels was an armed camp on June 29. Rioters formed barricades and fiercely resisted the soldiers. Stormy scenes were enacted in the Chamber of Deputies.

There now appears to be a reasonable certainty that the Peace Conference will formulate an arbitration scheme, even if it succeeds in accomplishing nothing more. The stontest opposition which arbitration has encountered has come from Germany; but it is announced that Emperor William's consent has been finally obtained to a limited arbitration, provided such arbitration is not compulsory.

Notwithstanding reports to the contrary, it is the expectation of the authorities that the modus vivendi establishing the temporary boundary line between Alaska and Canada will be signed within the next few days. The conferences which have been held by Ambassador Choate with the British foreign office, while they have not resulted in agreement, have shown the practicability of a settlement of the controversy, and confidence is expressed that the matter will be determined very shortly.

It is said that no colored regiments will be organized for service in the Philippines. Any colored men enlisted will be assigned to vacancies in the present colored regiments of the regular army. The experiment of the War Department with colored volunteers during the Spanish-American War was not a happy one, and in spite of reports which come from the Philippines to the effect that the colored man is greatly feared by the Filipinos, the authorities are averse to running the risk of a repetition of the troubles of last year.

The situation in Belgium is very grave. Socialists and radicals, opposing the opposition, now demand universal suffrage, and will be satisfied with nothing else. All depends on what the Government will do. If they fail to bring in a bill granting universal suffrage, it is feared that there will be a revolution, with consequences of a far-reaching character. The Government is in a difficult position. By opposing the demand for universal suffrage, it may bring about a revolution which would sweep away the monarchy.

Prof. J. G. Schurman, of the United States Advisory Commission for the Philippines, returned to Manila on July 2 from a three weeks' tour of the Southern Islands. He takes an entirely hopeful view of the general conditions there. The intelligent and substantial citizens desire an American protectorate. The masses are awaiting the settlement of the war in the Island of Luzon before declaring themselves. They are chiefly anxious to be undisturbed. The president of the town of Santo Nicolas, in the Island of Cebu, said to Mr. Schurman: "We want peace, food and prosperity. We do not wish to fight. We would be neutral."

The first volunteers to be raised for service in the Philippines will be those of the skeleton regiments now being formed by General Otis. It is not believed there will be the least difficulty in obtaining these men. It is probable that some time will elapse before the troops of the provisional army are sent to Manila, but meanwhile they will be drilled and taught marksmanship in camp. It is estimated that three months are required to make soldiers of new recruits. The officers of the War Department think that the number of volunteers now coming home will make soldiers for the new recruits.

The rebels made a demonstration at San Fernando on July 1. They took advantage of the darkness and rain to make a sally against the north line, seemingly only for the purpose of annoying the Americans, as they failed to push their work. The American loss was a private of the Seventeenth Regiment killed and four wounded. The fighting began at 10 o'clock and the rebels expended quantities of ammunition. The Seventeenth Regiment, the Twelfth Regiment and the Iowa Regiment participated in the engagement, but did not advance beyond the outposts. After an hour the Filipinos fired rockets, apparently a signal to cease firing, but there were scattering shots all night long, which kept the Americans under arms.

LEMONS AS MEDICINE

They regulate the Liver, Stomach, Bowels, Kidneys and Blood as prepared by Dr. H. Mozley, in his Lemon Elixir, a pleasant lemon drink. It cures biliousness, constipation, indigestion, headache, malaria, kidney diseases, fevers, chills, heart failure, nervous prostration, and all other diseases caused by a torpid or diseased liver and kidneys. It is an established fact that lemons, when combined properly with other liver tonics, produce the most desirable results upon the stomach, liver, bowels, kidneys, and blood. Sold by druggists. 50c and $1 bottles.

The above is my report for the quarter closing June 30.

The collections for the domestic fund are coming in so slowly that I am forced to dole out mere pittances to our faithful workers who need help where large remittances are due and should be made. Unless we supply our Parent Board with cash needed now, a portion of what is paid in the Fall will have to go towards paying the interest on money borrowed to supply our lack of service during the Summer.

Preachers of the Mississippi Conference, does not the fault lie largely with us? Let us ask for the assessments now, stating the urgent needs for ready cash, and in many instances large amounts will be sent to your treasurer to meet these sacred obligations.

Read "A Hundred Years of Missions," by Dr. Leonard, and "Foreign Missions after a Century," by Dr. Dennis. Then preach a rousing missionary sermon, take a collection, and follow it with the Lord's Supper, and your people will be in better shape to undertake the revival work of the Summer. May God bless you all!

LAWLESSNESS.

The carefnl cbserver cf the algns of the times can nct fail tc see some evidences of the decline of the Re public, and a waning fcrce ln the chnrch. It is monrnfnl to see a great p-opie throw away permanent valnes for temporary gain in doliars and cents, and tc see a splendid gcvern nent going tc wreck fcr want of maintained cohesiveness based npcn law. The final analysis cf Christian ity is found in obedience to anthor ity, and neither the church or Chris tian civilization can be maintained on any cther fonndation. The wise man said, "Let ns hear the concin sion of the whole matter; fear God and keep his commandments, fcr this is the whole dnty cf man." Christ said, "He that keepeth my command ments, he it is that loveth me," and any departnre frcm the order of law puts in peril all the vaines cf civili zation lodged in Chnrch and State.

Ths greatest menace to these val nes is seen in the widespread and in creasing spirit of lawlessness, cr con tempt fcr anthority, which prevails in all sections cf the conntry, the diff rence in relation to sections being a difference cnly of the character of manifestation. Mob law is the manl festation in some sections, while combination of capital to ur just desi ng is in another, while both alike are destructive to law and order, and so destructive to the life of the gov ernment.

The people are growing restless, and seem everywhere inclined to take the law intc their own hands, and administer it in passion rather than in justice, and they attempt to make two wrongs constitute a right. For this widespread spirit of lawlessness there are causes, and it will be well to recognize and remove them, if possibie, in cider tc maintain our government and onr civilization. The primary cause is greed for gain, which seems to have caused the pec ple of the entire conntry to forget God, and scont any law which may interfere with their mad rnsh after the almighty dollar. This spirit of greed has caused men to lose confi dence in their fellow-men, and hence moral obligations are generally bnt little regarded. It has affected the bar and bench until many so-called lawyers, with only selfish end in view, use all the technicalities of the law to delay—if nct, indeed, to thwart—the just and speedy adminis tration of the law, nntil the people become wearied with protected crimi nals and cntrage the law, in the other extreme of mob administration of what they believe tc be justice. When the ccurts find ample grcnnd for upholding a tax npon the poor man's cottage home and its simple furniture, bnt declare unconstitn tional any tax npon the rich man's princely income, they so ontrage every sense of common justice that the masses are losing all confidence in the judiciary, and scout at the law in their mistaken zeal.

Another cause of lawlessness is found in the failnre of the executive officials to administer it. Every law on the statute book, ignored and not executed, becomes an additional ele ment of weakness in relation to all law, and yet there are laws on the statute books of every State which the officers, elected and sworn to enforce them, fail to execute If they have a right to refnse to execute one law, they have a right to refnse to execute all law; and if the people have the right to scont one law with impunity, they have the same right to scout all law, and they are rapidly learning to exercise this supposed right, as they are, being educated by the officials who allow them to ont rage some laws with impnnity.

The last grand jury in Caddo par ish made the following report:

"We have examined some fifty, or more, witnesses, and find the Sunday law openly and flagrantly violated throughout the parish as well as in the city, being sc bad in some sec tions that the best citizens say they will be compelled tc move their fam llies, nnless there is a decided im provement in the near fnture.

"The police claim it is the State's dnty tc enforce the law, and that the police regnlations prohibit their en tering saloons nnless called in, etc; hence they have nc personal knowi edge of what takes place here. We would respectfnlly ask that the city council amend its regnlations gov erning police, so as to permit these officers to enter all places violating the Snnday law, and arrest all par ties canght violating said law, and take the names of witnesses.

"Having completed our labors, we respectfnlly ask to be dismissed.

"J. B. NEWBY Foreman"

The Snnday law is absolntely ig nored and defied in the parish, and the police in Shreveport pay no more attention to it than if there was no snch law, while the State anthorities seem to take no notice of any viola tions of it. With snch condition, how can any sane man look for any thing else bnt increased lawlessness, which mnst end in final assertion of a higher law of self-preservation working ont in the gradual elimina tion of personal freedom and the gradnal centralization of power in government, nnder which the forms only of a republic will be observed, while monarchical conditions will practically prevail? Flatter our selves as we may, we will awake some day to the realization that the power of the Federal Government is snpreme, and the military force will exercise an authority destructive to States' rights and individnal freedom snch as is contemplated, and which we now enjoy nnder the Constitntion.

I am not now discnssing the ques tion of the good of a Snnday law, or of any other law, but simply affirm that it is the dnty of every citizen to obey, be he Jew or Gentile, and the dnty of every officer to enforce every law upon the statute book. If it is a bad law, snch enforcement will cause its repeal, and if it is good, will best secnre all the good there is in it to every citizen alike. In any event, onr only hope of liberty is in the law, and our only protection under law lies in the enforcement of every law without fear or favor. At least let ns think soberly, and in time to avert the dire results of lawlessness which are sure to come sooner or later, and come when no amount of regret will avail ns when it is too late tc remedy the results of onr folly.

W. T. BOLLING.

"JUDGE NOT, THAT YE BE NOT JUDGED."

In no spirit of adverse criticism, bnt with a love for humanity in gen eral as well as God's people in par ticular, I give you a few of my daily observations of Christian characters. First, I have observed that that sweet old Bible charity is not cultivated by all Christians as it should be according to Scripture teachings. I see this so clearly manifested in particular dnring protracted meeting. Remembering that God planned no two leaves alike, even on the same tree, how can it be expected that each child of God shall be called to the same work, shall feel the same experiences, shall act npon the same impulses as his co-workers? And yet there are many who are consid ered lukewarm by Christians who themselves are active workers in the church, because they know not the inner lives of these brothers and sis ters. At snch times it has occurred to me that there is a disinterestedness here shown through the lack of not enough charity. If you, who doubt another's love and faith, would, through your own kinship to the angels, steal gently into the life of him or her to work a miracle of per fect redemption through Christ our Savior, perhaps there might be re vealed to you strength that you may lean upon, where you thought to bear a burden.

In the years that have passed three little girls began their lives very closely together. Each had a rich promise of health and happiness. As the bright years winged themselves away, God's hand seemed to rest like a benediction over the little neigh bors as each Sunday morning found them in the house of God learning, in eager delight, the old Bible stories. It was no surprise in the little town when three young women consecrated their promising lives to the Master. One, whose voice was deep, sweet and clear, became the leader of the choir. She never failed to be in her accustomed place, and her highest ambition was to bring souls to God through her beautiful gift. And she sang with a will. Another saw not a sunny gospel, but, borrowing shad ows from the Dark Age, as it were—when to be a Christian was to defy the world and home—went about in meetings trying to save souls by pointing them to a happier life, which her doleful face and manners ever belied. A martyr, she would have been willing to close from her view forever the light of the glorious sun, to never again look upon the world, with all its allurements. She forgot the old ringing laugh which used to echo through the home and make sweetest music for those who loved her. And the little town began to feel the solemnity of her presence; but those who loved the sunshine, the birds and flowers, were shy of her, and dreaded that day to come when they must think as she did, for they remembered that sunny sprite, a few years their senior, whose nature was so wholesome, and whose merry eye won friends with but a glance. How could they long to change places with her? And, yet, who could deny that she was a Christian? And the last of the three made no outward show of her consecration after be coming a member of the church. But her loving heart went out in one con tinual yearning to "do something for Jesus to-day." Yes, every day she tried to do something in her home life for the Master. And many beau tiful fancies came to her as she culti vated her flowers in the glorious Spring. She wondered if God had a garden of flowers in heaven, and if his angels tended them. And she praised God for all things beautiful as the seasons came and went. She saw his omnipotence in everything. Her supreme moments were when the school children stopped to chat with her about the flowers she loved, for she associated the two in a harmoni ous blending of purity and freshness ere the hand of time had swept over them. And there were days when she poured out her loving Christian thoughts in little stories to the chil dren, with an intense longing that she—even she—might bring precious souls to Christ in this way through her pen-pictures. But she was shy among the bolder workers, and I have often known her Christian character to suffer by comparison during pro tracted service. But a few intimate friends knew of the spot so weedless in God's great field.

This morning, in church, many saw the three, but not with the under standing eyes of charity. I saw the three life-time friends meet after service. The song-bird appeared smiling from the fulness of her heart. She pressed very reverently the hand of the other, who looked so meek, and as though the sunny (?) gospel seemed to weigh her down. Here the last of the three joined them with such a rapt expression upon her face that I marveled. They walked on together some distance in silence. Then I heard the sad-eyed Christian rebuke the little writer for not talking to the sinners at the min ister's suggestion. And she said in conclusion, "'Let your light shine.'" A wistful light came into the other's eyes as she answered: "I have prayed very earnestly to know my true place in the vineyard. To-day I gave my best efforts, I think, as a Christian worker, in some character sketches for the children's paper, you know." Suddenly she said, forgetting her usual shyness: "You know that the meaning of the gospel is good news. I don't believe that I ever more fully realized it than I did to-day. Often, when Christians are gloomy after service, I have longed to feel in sym pathy, in touch with their deeper feelings, as it were. But this morn ing I feel that the Word of God is so powerful in its sunshine that the wicked world is bound to succumb to its very brightness. And I—is it wrong?—oh, I feel like laughing for joy! Do not misunderstand me," she said, "but it seems to me that my re ligion makes me almost too happy to-day. It seems I see God's love for us everywhere, and yet, unlike you two, I could not show my feel ings in service. It seems I can only tell my heart with my pen. I'm so shy in meetings. I hope I'm not mis judged." And as they turned off in another direction from the main crowd, I heard this remark behind me, "Her voice is certainly grand; anyone would gladly take her place if so gifted." It was a Christian girl who spoke. I thought if she only realized that the little song-bird often fulfilled her duty in the choir when she had to triumph over weakness to be able to do so, that her remark would have been more charitable. We all have talents. How many of us use them for the Master?

With prayer in my heart for the shortcomings of all, I cite you to a pertinent sentence in the Bible, "Judge not, that ye be not judged."

"WE MUST ENDOW OUR COLLEGES FOR WOMEN"

This is the significant title of a booklet written in 1897 by Rev. E E Hoss, D. D., and published by our General Board of Education. Dr. Hoss says, "We must." He is right. It is a matter that demands positive and prompt attention. He says: "The period is rapidly approaching—if, indeed, it has not already been reached—in which it will be impera tive upon us either to put our col leges for women on a broader and safer foundation, or else see them lose their commanding position, and possibly close their doors. Hereto fore the profits accruing from the boarding departments have been sufficient to supplement the salaries of professors and teachers up to at least a respectable point. But this will be so no more. Competitions have arisen such as our fathers did not dream of. In the Eastern States and elsewhere wise and generous philan thropists have given money without stint or limit to endow foundations which propose to do for the educa tion of girls all that the best colleges can hope to do for boys. Vassar and Bryn Mawr and Wellesley and the Baltimore College for Women, to say nothing of other institutions, are bid ding high for the brightest and best of our daughters. Free tuition, large scholarships, and access to all the means of culture, are actually urged upon the acceptance of those who are willing to take them and competent to stand the prescribed tests."

The State has gone into the work of higher education for women—whether wisely, or not, we need not discuss; but we must face the fact of the I. I. and C. at Columbus, and we must put a college on its level, or we must, soon or late, surrender to it. We may sit unconcernedly by and watch the contest for very existence carried on by our four unequipped collegettes in a field where there is just a living for one real college; but our very unconcern will rob us of all control or part in the education of our girls. Can our church afford to turn over the education of our girls to the State? Only the other day a cultivated layman, who has for years stood high among us, frequently a member of Annual and General Con ferences, and who was for years on the Board of Trustees of one of our colleges for girls, pleaded with me that we need no college for girls, but that it would be wise to abandon all of them, and send our girls to the I. I. and C. He sees that with our present method it will soon be im possible to maintain our colleges for girls, and he sees no hope for a change. Shall we accept his sugges tion? Never, never, never! But we must meet the issue.

Our General Board of Education, in its quadrennial report to the last General Conference, says: "As re gards our position touching institu tions for the education of our daugh ters, we need to do at our earliest opportunity much more than we have ever done. In times past indi viduals have owned and controlled the majority of our female colleges, but the day is, perhaps, gone when such private institutions can longer exist. One by one they are closing up, and of the new ones which are building, the majority, being project ed on insufficient grounds, must in evitably die. What the State is do ing in the matter of education affects particularly the patronage of our fe male colleges, and the education of our girls is not at present so well provided for as that of our boys. If we do not do more in this particular, and that at once, our girls will be educated by the State. State or sec ular education, as against Christian education, is bad enough for boys, but for our girls it will be deplorable. We believe that we ought to have schools for our girls equal in equip ment and facilities to any school now provided for our boys. We heartily commend movements now on foot among us looking to this end as a wise policy, and bespeak the support of our entire connection."

The Board that voiced these words was composed of Bishops Galloway and Hendrix, Chancellor Kirkland, Col. Cole, Major Millsaps, Drs. Ham mond, W. W. Smith, Bigham, Mc Lean, and others. They are all wise men of large experience, and most of them are practical educators. One of them is president of the only en dowed college for women in Southern Methodism.

Dr. J. D. Hammond, our General Secretary of Education, in a private letter to this writer a few days ago, says, "I have read your articles on concentration, and think your prin ciples are correct." As a matter of course, with us of the Mississippi Conference the endowment of a girl's college means concentration. It is wise. Let us face the issue, and set tle the matter at once.

H. WALTER FEATHERSTUN.

P S.—My beloved Bro. Mellen, in an article entitled 'Dr. Featherstun's Defense," replies tc mine of two weeks before. Nobody, who read mine, will suppose that his reply is in any sense an answer. He says that he did not mean me in his first. Ah, well; it needed explanation.

No, Bro. Mellen; Kavanaugh Col lege was not a financial failure. Money made there was subsequently lost. Something else needs explana tion: When Bro. Mellen was on the Meridian district he insisted that the boarding pupils of E M. F. C. ought to attend not only night service at Central, but prayer meeting as well. Why does he condone in Beeson what he so earnestly condemned in Anderson and Holloman? He hints that I have sneered. Possibly I have been too apt a pupil in my Bro. Mel len's school. I can not afford to an swer his cavil about my reading ser mons; nor can i consent to discuss whether or not President Beeson's influence over his boarding pupils caused them to dislike to attend church at Central, and prefer the novelties of the Mission Hall.

H. WALTER F.

AN ADDRESS.

To the Methodist Preachers and People of the North Mississippi Conference: Love and Greeting:

The Conference Board of Educa tion, in session at West Point, Miss., June 23, 1899, is moved to express to you a deepening concern and a larger sympathy for our great educational interests, and the need of increased vigor and purpose to support and de velop the institutions already estab lished. We refer you to the new law of our church (Discipline, pages 165-170) nnder which all our educational work is now to be done. A new era has dawned npon us; a true system of Christian education has been put in operation—the most conservative of material means and the most hope ful to scholastic enterprise. Nothing could be wiser than this adopted sys tem of correlated schools nnder spe cific control of the church.

Conference Boards of Education, which heretofore have had so little to do, are now embraced in this scheme of work, and are made co-operative with the General Board, and are as signed specific duties. This Board desires to fulfill its functions with fidelity, and to aid in every consist ent way possible in forwarding and maintaining our schools nnder the wise plan authorized by the church. Surely a high obligation rests npon us all to combine our means and en ergies in supporting the schools adopted by the Conference. Concen tration, not division; co-ordination, not segregation and competition, must be our watchword. In all this work we are seeking to wed the highest degree and strongest expression of spiritual life—of Christian thought—with a scholastic form and fulness to the best found in the secular world. In the presence of such a su preme achievement, local and per sonal considerations are of the least moment. Let us render a cheerful and loyal obedience to this vital principle. It was a wise plan which Mississippi Methodism adopted to have a college for the sons of the two Conferences. Reports that come to us from Millsaps College bring most gratifying accounts of the good work done by that noble and well-organ ized institution. Young men are be ginning to go out in increasing num bers from her halls to take their places amongst men, and to yield the blessings of Christian education. More and more are these young men coming forth equipped to reinforce the ranks of our itinerant ministry. Let us recognize the call of generous duty to bear that great school a due and liberal support.

With no less fidelity have we been served by our only Conference school for girls and young ladies, located at Grenada. With growing prosperity, and with a very remarkable record of the health of its inmates, that valuable school has done a great work in the education of our daugh ters, and has been a blessing to our Conference. We commend this school to your confidence, your liberality, and your patronage. We believe that with one mind and with undi vided effort we should patiently press this institution to highest possible development. We should allow noth ing to divert us from this purpose. We assure the trustees and the presi dent, the Rev. W. M. McIntosh, of our earnest co-operation to this great end. Our obligations to the Confer ence, and our bounden duty to our own system of educational work, bind us to this cause, and exclude all other considerations.

WHAT IS NECESSARY TO MAKE A SUCCESSFUL PASTOR?

BY REV. Q. A. OATS.

Every Methodist pastor takes a vow at the altar of the church to visit from house to house. This means that he should familiarize himself with the home-life of his people, and that he should avail himself of this as a means to cultivate them in spiritual things. The pastor needs to know his people in private as well as in public life, and they need the opportunities to know him in the same way. He should labor to secure, as far as possible, a state of mutual interests and sympathy between his people and himself. As I once heard one of our Bishops say to a class being admitted into the Conference, the "pastor should be a good mixer." It is essential that he should study to interest and please men, and to win their respect and love. There is much in common between the pastor dealing with adults and children, and all classes of men, and the teacher in secular schools. The teacher, to succeed, must have the respect and love of the pupils; so the pastor in his relations with his people. Men and women are only children larger grown, and the real human characteristics remain always the same. That the pastor may secure this condition with his people, he must himself be pre-eminently a lover of his people.

Love is a mutual principle. It requires love to beget love. If it finds no response in the party upon whom it is bestowed, it soon dies. Its true relation is to originate in the higher and find its response in the lower; hence we can only learn to love God because he first loved us.

The relation of the pastor to his flock places him in the higher relation, and makes responsibility to begin with him. It also becomes essential for him to be the aggressive agent in its manifestation, and to persevere in it, though he may not find the desired response. Not only should he love his people, but he should show his love for them in pleasant manners and kindly deeds.

At first glance it may seem hard, if not impossible, to love all classes of people and to show our love for them. This arises from confounding love with mere natural traits, as sympathy and affection, and anything that brings about natural affinity of interests. These are not only not love, but true love may often require us to ignore and sacrifice them, because they may be barriers to our highest obligations and duties to God and man. This is implied in the Bible doctrine of charity, which is the consummation of all virtues. It grows out of a right conception of God as our sovereign Father, and of man as a brother. This conception is one of the first-fruits of a mind transformed through faith and consecration by the power of the regenerating Spirit of God to a conformity to that good and acceptable and perfect will of God. It is a new conception, adverse to a natural state which conforms to the world. The highest and most perfect specimen of this transformation should be found in the pastor, who is supposed to give up all for his higher and holy calling, and to Jesus, the Supreme Shepherd, as his exemplar.

The pastor of all men should be an exemplification of the Master's spirit and command to return good for evil, and to pray for them that may despitefully use and persecute him. This means not only to help them in extreme need, but ever to seek opportunities to show them kindnesses. If this be required towards open and avowed enemies and opposers, how much less the excuse to refuse it to people who may be no more than apparently indifferent, or who may lead such a course of life as to render them unattractive. Mr. Wesley had this danger in mind when he wrote that General Rule for the Methodist Societies, which says, "We should do good to all men as we have opportunity," trampling under foot that enthusiastic doctrine that, "We are not to do good unless our hearts are free to it." It is not enough that this spirit should dominate the pastor's heart, but he should show it in pleasant manners and numerous social acts of kindness, as well as in the greater ones for which occasions may offer. A pleasant "good morning" to those we casually meet, and inquiries after their health, and any matters we may that will specially interest them—a hearty hand-shake, a bow across the street—will often prove mighty to break down barriers, and open the way for good that could never be effected in any other way.

The pastor may often feel himself disqualified for these things, and he may be induced to feel that they are too trivial for consideration, and may even feel contempt for the people demanding them; yet they are of sufficient importance to demand his effort and high consideration. He may learn many lessons of this from the children of this world, and wisely pattern after them. It is a great force-principle in the constitution of social economy, and the fact that it may be, and is, absent does not make it wise to ignore it. The successful business man, the politician, and even those who act as emissaries of the powers of darkness, have learned its force and utility, and study to use it to advantage. Paul recognized it, and put it into practice by becoming all things to all men, that he might save some.

The pastor needs to cultivate and utilize the social side of human nature. This has always been a necessity, but the demand is now more imperative than ever before, and is constantly growing more so. The conditions that effect men's thoughts and control their actions have changed. The time was, in the not very remote past, when there was a sort of reverential idea that was almost superstitious, with which popular thought invested the minister of the gospel, that helped him to get a serious hearing from the people, irrespective of his personal influence. As the people have freed themselves of this feeling, and learned to look on the pastor as a man endowed with no extraordinary mysterious virtues, this has passed away. When the feeling has not gone to the extreme of a bold irreverence, this is a good thing. While it deprives the pastor of a strong lever on the consciences of men, yet it enables them to get a clearer conception of Christ as their only Mediator and Savior, and a better sense of personal responsibility, by clearing away all the priestly glamour that formerly attached to the pastor's office. It also saves the pastor from arrogating priestly importance to himself, and assuming an arbitrary manner towards the people, and enables him to enter into closer touch and sympathy with them.

Formerly several things now past away combined to bring the people to the house of God, and under the influence of the preaching of the gospel. These places the pastor needs to supply, as far as he can, by his personal influence as well as other things. Then there was often a scarcity of other public places of association, and of other means to entertain during the Sabbath's cessation from the avocations and business pursuits of life, and men went to church often for the association and to pass the time. It is different now, and rapidly growing more so. Then there would have been loss of popularity by violating a public sentiment against secular pursuits on the Lord's day, and, besides, the mass of business pursuits could be given up on Sunday without a material sacrifice of interests. Now the popular sentiment against business on Sabbath days has become less, and in some instances has entirely passed away, and systems of business have so changed that leaving them for the house of God often requires considerable material sacrifice. This is a deplorable state of things that pastors have no power to prevent, and all they can do is to use their personal influence as far as they may to draw men in spite of the situation. Now there are opportunities of meeting congenial associates and to find entertainment much more satisfactory to the man of the world than the house of God. Only think of the attractions of public museums, operas, bands discoursing fine music, railroad excursions, Sunday newspapers, and other numerous things, many of which are far more vicious, all open to men on Sunday.

We have come to a period when the issue is a personal one. The work with men must be hand to hand and face to face. The pastor must meet these issues by personal work. He needs to cultivate what an old and remarkably successful pastor in our church aptly designates as "legology." I believe it would be well to have a special examination on this ology in our course of study. Certainly every pastor should conscientiously consider the problem, and consecrate all the native gifts he may possess, and strive, secure and cultivate those he may lack.

REV. JOSIAH M. PUGH.

Rev. Josiah M. Pugh was born in Gates county, N. C., Oct. 23, 1821. His parents were Henry and Ann Pugh. They died when he was young. When the estate was divided he determined to use his part of it in securing an education. He entered Washington College, Pennsylvania, and graduated from that institution in 1842. The year after leaving college he was converted at a camp meeting in Yazoo county, Miss., and connected himself with the M. E. Church. He began the study of law, and afterward the study of medicine, but, yielding to a conviction of duty, he turned to the ministry, and was licensed to preach in the city of Jackson, Miss., Oct. 31, 1846. At this time he was engaged in teaching. In 1844 he was elected tutor in Centenary College, then located near Brandon, in Rankin county, Miss. When this college was moved to Jackson, La., Dr. Thornton and Mr. Pugh established a school in Jackson, Miss., which was afterwards moved to Brandon, and finally, in 1851, to Sharon, and became Madison College. After Dr. Thornton's death Mr. Pugh became president of this school. Mr. Pugh was ordained deacon by Bishop Capers, Dec. 8, 1850, and elder by Bishop Kavanaugh, Dec. 2, 1855. He also became a member of the Mississippi Conference in 1855. In the year 1860, while pastor of our church in Jackson, La., he was elected to the chair of mathematics in Centenary College. In 1862 he was appointed presiding elder of Sharon district, and in 1866 he was made presiding elder of the Yazoo district. He served in this capacity seven years, and was faithful and efficient in the discharge of all his duties. On account of failing health he asked to be relieved of district work, and he was appointed pastor of Madison circuit. In 1872 he was elected president of Sharon Female College, in Madison county. He remained at the head of this school only one year, and was then elected president of Marvin College, Texas, and was transferred to the Northwest Texas Conference. In 1877 he was made president of Andrew Female College, and transferred to the Texas Conference, within the bounds of which that school was situated. But in 1880 he returned to his old Conference, and continued in the active discharge of his duties till 1894, when he was granted a superannuated relation. During these latter years he served Silver Creek, Enterprise, Amite City, China Grove, Daleville, Binnsville and Ocean Springs charges. He also spent much time in the school-room, for almost everywhere he went he combined the two vocations of preacher and teacher. He was a good teacher, and his services in this capacity were much in demand, but he never allowed anything to supersede his high calling as a minister of the gospel.

Mr. Pugh was twice married; first, to Miss Ione V. Thornton, daughter of the late Dr. Thornton, of the Mississippi Conference. She died Feb. 10, 1870, leaving one son. Then, on the nineteenth of June, 1873, he was married to Miss Nora E. Bass. Miss Bass was from Boston, Mass., but was in Texas teaching, and the marriage was celebrated at Waxahatchie, Texas.

In the matter of temperance Mr. Pugh has a good record. He signed the temperance pledge while at college, in 1841, and never violated it. He never learned to use tobacco, never swore an oath, never learned to gamble, never was drunk, and never drank any whisky. This is the account he gave of himself to a newspaper reporter in 1897. And he attributed his mental and physical vigor in extreme old age to the fact that he had always conserved his vitality, nor wasted himself in sinful and fleshly indulgences. His record as a Christian, as a teacher, and as a minister, is equally blameless. It may be said of him that his life, as well as his soul, was saved, and, dying, he left to his posterity the heritage of a good name.

He passed away at his home in Handsboro, Miss., June 9, 1899. He had great peace of mind, and perfect assurance, in view of death. His last audible utterance was, "We live in a sanctified age." This indicated his own spiritual state, and the hopeful view he had of the state of the church. His remains were brought to Yazoo City, and buried from the Methodist Church on Sunday morning, June 11, 1899. A high-toned Christian gentleman, holy in all manner of conversation, pure in heart and life, has gone to his reward in heaven.

Correspondence.

FROM "REX."

MR. EDITOR: Recurring again to the approaching meeting (twenty-first of July) at Sam Jones Camp Ground, I am advised by the Committee on Public Worship that strenuous efforts have been made to secure the attendance and service of some distinguished "gospeler" of the "evangelist" genus, but that said efforts have not produced any result, save a feeling of disgust at the mercenary character of some of these people who seem to be "evangelists" for "revenue only!" As a specimen brick, one of these gentlemen who snatch sinners from the "gall of bitterness and the bonds of iniquity" for a pecuniary consideration offered to give us six days for the slight allowance of $25 per diem and good provender, or $150 a week and "found!" How is that for zeal in the Master's cause? It took the Almighty six days to complete the work of creation, including man, but I do not suppose that it occurred to the divine mind that away down the corridors of time, along in the nineteenth century after the suffering and death of the Savior for the redemption from sin and eternal death of the human race, there would appear in the garb of a messenger of peace, glad tidings and salvation, a creature so utterly lost to the principles and teachings of the gospel of our Lord as to be able to make the payment of money a pre-requisite to the exercise of his powers in the direction of the salvation of humanity from sin! It is only in these degenerate days in which we live that such a thing as a money consideration was ever thought of by preachers of the gospel who were invited to attend and assist in the services at a camp meeting, and it is only the rule now in regard to these peripatetic gospelers who are in the business for the money there is in sight. Calling sinners to repentance at $25 a day and "good provender" savors entirely too much of making merchandise of holy things and the blood of the covenant a mercantile commodity. I thank God that Sam Jones has never yet, since I have been attending its meetings, been onrsed with this sort of dispensers of salvation at so much a dose, and I as earnestly pray that she may escape their visitations always. No matter how things appear, it is impossible to conceive that God's blessing will follow in the train of such men as these. They may get up a little furore, make a great deal of noise, and fool some people into a belief that they are converted, but it is "stony ground," where there is no depth of soil, and the first stiff wind of temptation that comes along uproots them, and they are withered, dead, and will be finally lost. But enough of these "wandering stars, these clouds without water." If they would all get a clear case of religion, and then die, the Christian world would be better off.

Happily there is abundant promise of consecrated, unmercenary ministerial help in sight to secure success, and this help comes from our own and adjoining districts, and from members of the regular itinerant force. These men are in the ministry, not for money, but for human souls, for whom their Master shed his own precious blood, and realizing the stupendous issues at stake, they are willing to toil and work, in season and out, early and late, if by these means they can compass the salvation of one soul. Some of them are eminent in pulpit, others in altar work, and, with a proper division of labor among them, their assignment to the work for which they are best fitted, there is no reason to fear a failure in the good results of the meeting. It frequently occurs in these meetings that after a moving and convicing sermon, and a call for sinners to come to the altar for prayers, that the preacher will turn to the choir, and say, "Bro. Smith, Brown, or Jones" (as the case may be), "please sing something," whereupon we are treated with a jingle to the tune of "John Brown's body lies mouldering in the grave," or some such trash as that, instead of some one of those old-fashioned Methodist hymns and tunes, such as: "Come, humble sinner," etc.; "Come, ye sinners, poor and needy;" "Sinners, the voice of God regard," etc., and lots of others that have swayed the multitude a thousand times, and been blest of God to the salvation of hundreds of thousands of souls that surround the throne of God to-day.

The one who is to conduct the altar service should be notified in advance of the fact, and, if he is a Methodist, he will select both hymns and tunes beforehand, and notify the leader of the choir that these hymns and tunes are to be sung, and no others. Spirituality is a back number in our churches to-day, and while there are other and graver causes for this state of affairs, the substitution of modern jingles, operas and minstrel airs for old-time hymns and tunes is a most important factor in this decadence. As these "song books" multiply, and the standard hymns and tunes are relegated to the rear, so, in exact ratio, old-time religion and vital godliness pass from the stage of action, and we are left with a form of righteousness and profound ignorance of its power.

Although I have written each year an earnest appeal to those ministers who have a "zeal for God, but not according to knowledge," and who continually forget that a camp meeting is not held for the discussion of a plurality of blessings, or doctrinal points of any sort, but simply, wholly, and entirely for the purpose of inducing sinners to come to God, I take the liberty to again remind these brethren that this sort of thing is out of place, and if they have any sense of propriety, they will abstain from all attacks on the second-blessing theory, and all defense of that peculiar belief. This request will be sufficient for those who attend the meeting with a desire to honor God and save men from their sins. Those who attend for other purposes will oblige the association by remaining away.

The grounds, and everything in connection with them, are in better condition than ever before. Good hotel accommodations, both eating and sleeping; a lunch-stand, where hunger can be appeased at all hours; the grounds clean and pleasant—everything, in fact, to invite the weary and heavy laden to come and rest their bodies, relax their minds, and save, or secure, a blessing for their souls. Come one; come all!

Yours truly, REX.

Mrs. W. H. Wall, of North Miss. Conference
Conference Officers of Mississippi Conference
Mrs. E. R. Kennedy, of Louisiana Conference

The W. F. Mission Society of North Mississippi Conference has come and gone, but the remembrance of it will linger long in the hearts of the people of our town. Sardis had the honor of having the fourth Annual Conference of this body, held in 1883. After nineteen years we note a wonderful growth, both in membership and money raised for the cause. Truly, God has blessed our efforts. As our president in Home Mission Society of North Mississippi Conference could not come, she asked your humble servant to extend "fraternal greetings" from the "twin sister" to her sister organization. As "our Father" thought best to lay his hand on me in sickness, Mrs. Addie Perry, of our auxiliary, kindly extended the greetings, which we append below.

"Madam President and Sisters of W. F. M. S.: I have been chosen to convey to you the 'fraternal greetings' of the W. H. M. S. of the North Mississippi Conference, and it gives me no little pleasure to be the representative of such a body. It is strange that the society which I thus represent is not the largest branch of mission work, for, doubtless, you are all familiar with that large and respectable class of people who claim that while they are not in sympathy with foreign missions, they are earnest advocates of 'home mission work!' To all of these we would say: The books of the Home Mission Society are always open for the reception of new members. It is a significant fact, however, that the history of this work shows that the best of the home mission workers are those who are most enthused in foreign missions also. This being the case, and the key-note of both societies being the extension of the work of Christ, it is with genuine pleasure that the Home Mission Society greets its 'twin sister' in Conference assembled, bidding her God-speed in the noble work in which she is engaged. Certainly nothing could have a stronger claim, or a warmer place in the affections of the people, than the extension of Christianity in our own home-land, where we behold verdure and beauty rivaling even the valley of the Nile. Then we are constrained to exclaim, 'The sun shines on no fairer.' When we look at our church-spires pointing heavenward from hill-top, hamlet and vale, we realize that this was done largely by the pioneers of the Methodist Church. In extending their work, we can realize something of what was done by our first home missionaries.

"'Not until the sun is old, and the stars are cold, and the leaves of the judgment book unfold,' will it be known what a factor in the civilization of these United States was the pioneer Methodist itinerant, bent on extending his church work, which, with him, was identical with God's work. The backwoodsman, with his rifle and shot-pouch, may have antedated him a few days, but by the time he got the clap-boards on his log cabin, and had smuggled in his little family, the preacher was on his trail singing Charles Wesley's hymns, reading his Bible, and passing his hat around for a collection.

"Madam President, I may not be a very good Methodist in practice, but I have the profoundest admiration for the genius and history of our grand old church. Its very founder was a home missionary, having 'the world for his parish,' and no one who keeps conscientiously to the principles of the Methodist Church can fail to be both a home and foreign mission worker. The little leaven sent forth from the parsonage at Epworth over one hundred years ago has well-nigh leavened the whole lump, as we find that other churches are following in our footsteps; have adopted similar ideas in mission work.

"The Home Mission Society has a work to perform than which there is none greater. Look at the heathenism among the mountains of Kentucky and Tennessee, to the thousands of Chinese and Japanese coming to our shores in California, and the Spaniards pouring into Florida, to say nothing of the poor Indians and negroes who are at our very doors. We must look well after the future strength and hope of the church, the lambs of the fold, the children of whom the Master said, 'Of such is the kingdom of heaven.'

"We all know, Madam President, this is a latitudinarian age. The church, to hold her own against the tide of worldliness, skepticism and indifference that have invaded it, has given a little here and taken on a little there, until sometimes the good old Methodist wishes to rise and ask, 'Where am I at?' I want to say, with all the emphasis I am capable of, that but for the children I should tremble for the future of our church. Look at our churches on Sunday, the empty pews, the indifferent fathers and mothers, our neglected family altars, our Sabbaths desecrated by secular pursuits, and the demands of a so-called fashionable society. Suppose the future of the church rested upon this foundation! There is but one hope: that is the faithful, careful nurture and training of our bright-faced boys and girls.

"One of the ablest and most successful cardinals in the Catholic Church gave this instruction to the seminary of priests to which he gave advice: 'First and foremost, make sure of the children! Give the church the children, and let the adults go where they please!' That was sound philosophy; and what are its results? Once a Catholic, always a Catholic. We have it in our power to achieve the same results.

"The Home Mission and Foreign Mission Society were called of God, and organized by the same General Conference of our church. They stand side by side as co-ordinate branches in the great work of soul-saving, having equal authority from the church and equal claim on its membership. The origin and conditions of our existence unite us with a peculiarly close tie, and we earnestly pray that the God of peace may draw us closer and closer together as the years go by, until every woman in our church shall be engaged in both lines of this saving of souls at home and abroad. Christ said, 'Go teach all nations, beginning at Jerusalem (at home), and going to the uttermost parts of the earth.'

Sickness has prevented me writing any for the past few weeks in this column, but hope to be regular after this. Yours in Christ,

THE TRAVAIL OF ZION.

Isaiah says (lxvi, 8), "As soon as Zion travailed, she brought forth her children." This was spoken when Zion observed the form of worship, but had lost its spirit. Then a man who would make a spiritless offering of an ox was as guilty as if he slew a man, and he who sacrificed a lamb without a sacrifice of heart offered an insult like unto the cutting off of a dog's neck, or the offering of swine's blood. Could such a charge be brought against the service offered in modern Zion?

There has never been in the history of the Jewish or Christian Church an awakening that has not been preceded by travail. Note a few examples: Israel in Egypt had suffered afflictions which crushed out all hope of human intervention. Young men bowed under the galling yoke of slavery, "hoary sires smarted under the ignominious lashes from the task-master," while mothers wept bitter tears for the babes torn from their breast to be thrown in the river. All joined in supplication to the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, who heard their cries, remembered his covenant, and delivered them with an outstretched arm.

Taking a long leap in history, we come to David, who founded his kingdom in religious throes. Does sacred literature furnish another example of such religious pangs and throes? He thirsted for God, for the living God. He panted for God as the famishing hart would pant for the water-brook. When his own sins pressed heavy upon him, he could not end a petition for himself without asking God to build up Zion. Yet David was only the mouthpiece of hundreds of others who yearned for the same results. You will remember the tender-hearted young King Josiah rent his clothes when the neglected book of the law was brought before him, and how his travail purged his kingdom of idols. Nehemiah heard from travelers how the walls of Jerusalem remained unbuilt, and of the indignities shewn the ashes of their fathers, and of the easy-going, profligate ways of his people. This became such a source of grief to his fiery spirit that the king detected it in his countenance, and Nehemiah became the instrument under God in regaining the city of his fathers.

Prior to the coming of Christ the twelve tribes, represented by a small remnant, cried day and night unto the Most High, and when their prayers reached the fullness of vehemence, and their expectation wrought in them the deepest agony of spirit, then the Messiah came. "The wilderness and the solitary place were glad for them, and the desert rejoiced and blossomed as a rose." In the upper room at Jerusalem the lonely disciples were in deep anguish over the separation from their Lord, but anxiously awaiting the promised Comforter—"each intent to receive the promised boon of the Spirit." He came, and three thousand souls were given to the church.

In the Reformation the lamentations of Luther in Germany were echoed from the hills in Switzerland, the canals of Holland, the green lanes of England, the palaces of Spain, and the dungeons of the Inquisition. In these throes a revolt was born which shook the Vatican from its foundations to its pinnacle.

Just prior to the Oxford movement there existed a condition which Isaac Taylor termed a "virtual heathenism." Blackstone said he had heard every eminent clergyman in London, and that there was no more Christianity in their sermons than in the orations of Cicero. Hannah Moore says she found only one Bible in the parish of Cheddar, and that was used to prop a flower pot. Samuel Bhair summed up the condition by saying, "In America religion lay a-dying." This sickening condition brought on a travail from which was born the Methodist Church, and through which a flood-tide of God's grace was given to all Christendom.

May we not be encouraged to believe that we are now in strong spiritual throes? May not the dark clouds which now appear in the church's sky be ready to break in blessings on our heads? Let us affirm that the church is now in travail, and see if the affirmation can be sustained. There is very much just now to humiliate the church, and the statement, "He that humbleth himself shall be exalted," is as true of a community of individuals as it is of a single soul. Our attention has been called more than once of late to facts touching the church that must humiliate every lover of our Zion.

In a proclamation recently issued by Governor Rollins, of New Hampshire, we note some striking statements. This proclamation has been the subject of much press comment—both secular and religious. The governor says: "The decline of the Christian religion, particularly in our rural communities, is a marked feature of the times, and steps should be taken to remedy it." He continues: "There are towns where no church bell sends forth its solemn call from January to January; there are villages where children grow to manhood unchristened; there are communities where the dead are laid away without the benison of the name of the Christ, and where marriages are solemnized only by justices of the peace." On Sunday after the issuance of the proclamation a Methodist minister of Boston stated that a presiding elder had written the governor, saying there were fifty-five towns in New Hampshire that had been twelve months without a revival. He continues: "Christian ministers found that among the towns of New England there were boys and girls fifteen and sixteen years of age who had never heard a minister of the gospel speak." "I heard urgent appeals for missionaries to be sent into barren fields in the New England States!" Governor Rollins says: "I found our farming population falling away from the old faith, and our young people growing up without religion."

This sounds very much as if some governor in the South had said it. Candor forces us to admit a state of affairs in our own border that should be a cause of alarm. My own charge, I take it, is not an exception to the rule. Thirty per cent. of our membership never attend service, and a larger per cent. are destitute of spiritual power. In a membership of one hundred and sixty I have not found one family altar. Not twenty per cent. bear witness to conscious salvation. The common impression is, that the church is a good institution—about on a par with Masonry or any other benevolent order.

Just now we, as Methodists, are brought face to face with facts that should, and do, humiliate us: A falling off in missionary collections, resulting in a retreat from points already occupied, and turning a deaf ear to the pleadings for the Bread of eternal life; and this, too, in the face of increased resources.

In spite of all efforts to account for a yearly decrease of more than ten thousand members, we must acknowledge the humiliating fact, and the humiliation should bring forth deep travail.

Every lover of the church who has confidence in the Spirit's power must be grieved at the subterfuges resorted to by some churches to atone for their loss of power; such as making a church a "soup-kitchen, with a chapel attached," or the using of Robert Elsmere as a subject for a sermon.

In a series of critical suggestions by laymen, Mr. William C. Conant, of New York, says: "Few will deny that we are in the most dangerous condition of the church—the highest temporal prestige, superabundant wealth and luxury, Laodicean self-satisfaction. As was said of Moab, so this generation hath been at ease from its youth, and hath settled on its lees, and hath not been emptied from vessel to vessel, neither gone into captivity; therefore, its (earthly) taste remaineth in it, and its scent is not changed."

But the best thing about all this is, the church begins to see its condition, and to-day many churches are clothed in sack-cloth, and they begin to tear away their formal garments, and their sadness will soon turn to joy, and Zion will rejoice over her increase.

I believe we now stand on the threshold of a new era in the church. What we need is a forerunner—a John the Baptist—to cry, Repent, repent! He will not be found among the dealers in pulpit pyrotechnics, or the "soup-kitchen" and social reform class. He will be a man who hears the voice of God and heeds; who is not afraid that he can't sustain the Bible, but knows the Bible will sustain him; who preaches Christ, not from hear-say, but from knowledge; who relies on the power of the Holy Ghost, and not on soup-kitchens and other clap-trap methods. He is coming, he is coming! Zion is in travail, and God guarantees her increase.

AN INQUIRY.

Believing, with all my heart, that the Bible is God's Word, and that it is the "power of God unto salvation to everyone that believeth," I long to see each individual possessing a copy, and reading it.

In very many Christian homes there is but one copy of "the Book of books," and that is the large family Bible, generally too inconvenient for use, and considered too valuable for children to handle it; consequently, they are deprived of reading it.

Doubtless, if we could search the homes all over Southeast Mississippi, especially along the G. and S. I. R. R., we would find many of them destitute of the Bible. Here there are so many newly-established homes, and so many young people who are just branching out into the world, and have no convenient opportunity of procuring a Bible; so they will try to live without it.

Surely, none of us are so wise that we do not need divine guidance, nor so strong that we do not need divine strength.

Bible reading is essential to the formation and maintenance of Christian character. Without it we live as strangers to God. Through prayer we talk to God, and through his Word he talks to us. All people and nations who are deprived of the Bible have wrong ideas of God and Christianity.

Catholicism withholds the Bible from the masses, but all other Christian denominations urge its circulation and study.

Our preachers, Sunday-school workers, etc., can evidently accomplish but little permanent good, unless the people are led to study God's Word. We can not do this without putting it into their hands.

On the Gulf and Ship Island railroad there are twelve towns between Hattiesburg and Gulfport, besides ten flag stations, which are really little towns. If there has ever been a Bible offered for sale in one of these new towns, I am not aware of it. Food, raiment and strong drink are sold, but no one sells Bibles. To my delight I found the "newsboy" on the train selling "Oxford Bibles" and beautiful "pocket Testaments," but they were extremely high.

I think it has been eight or ten years since a Bible agent visited this field. During this time many old Bibles have worn out, many young people have grown up, and many persons have moved in, which creates a necessity for a new supply. How are they to be supplied?

Does not the American Bible Society furnish Bibles cheaper than we can get them from any other source? Is there no chance for the above-named society to have a representative in this field, or to keep Bibles for sale in some of our destitute towns?

May God speed the day when the Bible will be in every home, and the guide of every life!

I have not written this article to start a controversy, but because I feel interested in building up Christ's kingdom on earth.

God graciously through his Spirit lighteth every man that cometh into the world and who desires the light of salvation in his soul. But if a man says he has this light while he lives in sin, he is either self-deceived, or else he is perpetrating a fraud on his neighbors.—Churchman.

If we think of Christianity as a religion, its central point is the incarnation. If we think of it as a gospel, its central point is the cross and the empty tomb, and both are necessary for an adequate conception of what has come to us through Christ.—Rev. A. T. Taylor.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. J. H. Bass, Webb, Miss., July 1, 1899: "We have held two meetings, in which we had good times. The church was revived, and sinners converted and taken into the church. Bro. W. D. Bass was with us in both meetings. I never heard clearer and more heart-searching preaching in my life. There was no slang or foolishness in it. Bro. Bass has been with me for the last six years in from one to three meetings each year, and I can truthfully say that I have never heard him use any slang or abuse, or throw mud of any kind. He puts his whole soul into the work, and I have always gotten more money for myself, and for other causes where he has helped me, than any other appointments on my charge. No pastor who wants help can do better than get him. My work is getting along splendidly. Everybody is kind. Our congregations are good. Our Sunday-schools are doing well, and we are almost out of debt on our church property. We are fearful of much sickness in these parts this warm season, as many are on that list now. May God bless all the brethren and the dear old ADVOCATE!"

Do you remember how you felt in the mornings when you were a boy? How good it was to begin a new day! How hungry you came to table! How tired you went to bed! How soundly you slept! Don't you find yourself saying sometimes, how I wish I could get up like that boy, eager for the day and feeling fit for it? And then don't you turn away with a sigh as if the wish were impossible of fulfillment, and start on the new day's journey tired at the outset?

It's not impossible to get back that glad boyish feeling again. It only means getting back health. Put your stomach in order and see how soon your sleep will be dreamless, your rest sound, your appetite hearty and your work a pleasure. The best remedy for all ailments of the stomach and nutritive organs is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Try it and join the great army of sick people made well by its use.

"The praise I would like to give 'Golden Medical Discovery' I cannot utter in words or describe with pen," writes James B. Ambrose, Esq., of 1205½ Mifflin St., Huntingdon, Pa. "I was taken down with what our physician said was indigestion. I doctored with the best around here and found no relief. I wrote you and you sent me a question blank to fill out and I did so and you then advised me to use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I took three bottles and I felt so good that I stopped, being, as I think, cured. I have no symptoms of gastric trouble or indigestion now."

Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of mailing only. Send 21 one-cent stamps for the paper covered book, or 31 stamps for the cloth-bound.

OUR EXCELSIOR ART BIBLE.

In accordance with our motto, "Better and Better," we have gotten out a Bible which is superior to any hitherto offered. Besides the Holman self-pronouncing feature and all the Oxford Helps, it has the Combination feature, i. e., the revised version in foot notes, and also contains a number of magnificent illustrations, sixty-four New and Beautiful Full-page Phototype Engravings.

These Magnificent Illustrations represent the most important Scenes and Events in the Sacred Scriptures, and are the work of eminent artists. A large number of prominent Clergymen and Religious Journals have endorsed our Combination Edition of the Holy Scriptures and have given it strong recommendations.

In mechanical workmanship, printing and binding, these Bibles are superb, while at the same time our prices are very low.

No subjects are so well adapted for Illustration by Superb Works of Art as the Grand Scenes and Events described in the Holy Bible. And no other subjects have so occupied the Thought and Genius of the World's Greatest Artists.

The reader has all the most Important Scenes and Events of the Sacred Scriptures placed before him, and is delighted with the Artistic Beauty of these Unrivalled Engravings.

THE PRICE.

This magnificent Bible is catalogued by large Northern publishers at $6. We sell it to our subscribers for $3 on condition that they pay up all arrearages and pay their subscription a full year in advance.

Life should be full of earnest work,
Our hearts undish'd by fortune's frown;
Let perseverance conquer fate,
And merit seize the victor's crown.
—Phoebe Cary.

I would not undervalue the cultnre of the intellect, hnt would exalt the cultnre of the heart—Frances E. Willard.

Three things are knows only in the following way—a hero in war, a friend in necessity, and a wise man in anger—Arabic.

He that can not forgive others breaks the bridge over which he mnst pass himself; for every man has need to be forgiven.—Lord Herbert.

Nothing raises the price of a blessing like its removal; whereas, it was its continnance which should have taught ns its vaine.—Hannah More.

The pleasantest things in the world are pleasant thoughts, and the greatest art in life is to have as many of them as possible.—Exchange.

"What shall I do then with Jesns who is called Christ?" is a qnestion which everyone of us mnst at some time in his life answer for himself.—Selected.

The constant dnty of every man to his fellows is to ascertain his own powers and special gifts, and to strengthen for the help of others.—John Ruskin.

Oh, it is great, and there is no other greatness, to make one nook of God's creation more fruitful, better, more worthy of God; to make some human heart a little wiser, manlier, happier—more blessed, less accnrsed.—Carlyle.

Religion in its pnrity is not so much a pursuit of all that is high and holy. Its fonndation is faith; its actions, works; its temper, holiness; its aim, obedience to God in improvement of self and benevolence to men.—Jonathan Edwards.

The Christian life is of all the pnrest, best and most convincing life. If one starts ont to be a soul-winner, and falls short in Christian living, how fntile will it be for him to attempt to influence others to a holy life.—Rev. F N Foster.

We ask God to forgive us for our evil thoughts and evil temper, but rarely, if ever, ask him to forgive ns for our sadness. Joy is regarded as a happy accident of the Christian life, an ornament and a luxury, rather than a duty—R W. Dale.

A man must not choose his neighbor; he must take his neighbor that God sends him. In him, whoever he be, lies hidden or revealed a beautiful brother. The neighbor is just the man who is next to you at the moment. This love of our neighbor is the only door out of the dnngeon of self.—George Macdonald.

Religion is a necessary and indispensable element in any great human character. There is no living without it. Religion is the tie that connects man with his Creator and him to his throne. If that tie be all snndered, all broken, he floats away a worthless atom in the universe, its proper attractions all gone, its destiny thwarted, and its whole future nothing but darkness, desolation and death.—Webster.

"ROCK CHRISTIANS."

In a strong and stirring article recently published in the New York Independent, Dr. Charles E. Jefferson, of New York City, points out as a radical and lamentable defect in the Christianity of to-day, especially in the cities, the lack of "rock-like" firmness. In this jndgment we believe he is eminently correct. His arraignment of the indolence and weakness of most church members is startling, hut true. The average Christian, he thinks, is "not wicked, bnt limp." "There is a painful lack," he remarks, "of the grit which made the Puritans invincible. Church members, with numerons and beautiful exceptions, are not made of the stnff of which heroes are made." To qnote more at length: "To those who know best the problems of our cities it is becoming increasingly apparent that if the cities of our republic are to be won and held for Christ, we mnst have a higher type of church member than the avergee Christian no win the field. And from this it must not be inferred that the average city Christian is a heathen man or a publican. He is neither so worldly, nor so aristocratic, nor so hypocritical as the rural caricaturist often represents him to be. Those who know him best know that he is a social, warm-hearted, honest, sensible man. The worst thing that can be said abont him is, that he is not strong enongh to stand the strain of city life. The city, like a giant, molds him to its will. It pushes the newspaper nnder his eyes on Snnday morning, and he is not strong enough of will to tnrn his eyes away. A friend drops in to see him Sunday evening, and he remains away from evening worship. There is a dinner on prayer-meeting evening, and his seat is vacant at the prayer meeting."

We would not charge that the church member of to-day is a sinner above the church members who have gone before; but if we mistake not, his piety is not of that robust type that refuses to compromise the truth, that scorns unnecessary self-indulgence, and wages vigorous war on iniquity. The average church member dotes on respectability and conventionality, on elegance and refinement. He does not like to be startled by nnusual plainness and pointedness in the pnlpit. He wishes his fellowmen well; he wonld he delighted to see the cause of Christ advanced, but he is too busy and too selfish to think much about the salvation of others. He recognizes, in a vague way, that the world is wrong, but he is unwilling to sacrifice his consolence or earthly interests, except in slight degree, in order that wrongs may be righted and righteonsness exalted. He adopts an easy-going gait, and looks scurly upon any who would jog him into a livelier pace. The Christian of the present, as a rule, means to be progressive, but he sadly lacks in aggression, in fighting qualities, in the pluck that shrinks not from difficulty and opposition; consequently, he is soon overcome of evil, and is astonishingly skeptical as to the power of the gospel to accomplish the world's reformation and renovation.

The indifference and timidity that characterize such a vast multitude in the church are sure signs of the decay of experimental religion, and in part explain the cause of our recent non-growth. We need men and women who not only approve the right, but also condemn the wrong, and are ready to stand by their colors. The millennium is still far in the future. The evils now to be fought and vanquished are no less gigantic or dangerons than those which previous generations had to fight so fiercely. If anything, they are more hold and destructive. The whisky curse, the gambling evil, social impurity, and Sabbath desecration, can never he put down by harmless and kindly, hut shrinking, apologetic, chicken-hearted Christians. The martyr spirit is, alas! too uncommon among us. Disciples sing with fervor the hymn, "I'll go with him all the way," bnt as soon as temptations or difficulties arise, they fall away.

Says Dr. Jefferson, with no little truth: "The members of our church, as a rule, are altogether flexible and obliging. They do not know how to strike hard, nor are they willing to stand their ground." Men and women of heroic spirit are needed now no less than they were in the days of Paul and Luther and Wesley. We need Christians who will put dnty before pleasure, principle before policy, godliness before gain.

The writer quoted above concludes by saying: "Of gentle Christians and affable Christians and kind-hearted Christians we have abundance. The church to-day lacks the one quality for which the Lord looks and waits. City Christians should stand like rock aronnd the Lord's day, beating back the social and industrial forces which are rolling in like a flood. Nothing bnt rock will save New York and Chicago, Boston and San Francisco, from the fate of Sodom and Gomorrah. Like rock, church members should resist all invitations of saints and sinners which wonld lead them away from the duties and the meetings of their church. If Christians are unwilling to fight for the mainteuance of Christian institntions and the progress of Christian ideals, who, pray, is going to save the world? The road to victory in these fair, well-spoken days is, as of old, by way of the cross. Without sweat and blood and sacrifice and obedience unto death there is no redemption possible for us or our republic."

Fellow-Christians, are yon rock-like in loyalty to God and in resistance of evil?

LITERARY NOTES.

BY W. F. B.

In the July Century Mrs. James T. Fields tells of a visit to George Eliot, and quotes nnpublished letters from the famons novelist. "Stevenson in Samoa" contains such reminiscences as might be expected from the story-teller's step-daughter and secretary. "The Making of 'Robinson Crusoe'" gives the true story of Alexander Selkirk, and his sojourn on Juan Fernandez. Victor Hugo as an Artist is the snbject of a paper by Le Cocq de Lautreppe, in which are reprodnced several of the poet's hasty sketches and more elaborate designs. Frank M. Chapman, the ornithologist, writes of Bird Rock, in the Gulf of St. Lawrence; Prof. Wheeler's "Alexander the Great" shows the conqueror in anger and in love, and Mr. Ford's "Many-Sided Franklin" is seen this month in his intimate and interesting relations with the fair sex.

Scribner's Magazine, for July, has as a frontispiece a fine wood engraving by Gustav Kruell. It is from a very rare daguerreotype of Daniel Webster, and accompanies Senator Hoar's paper on Webster, for which he has been collecting material for many years. James F. J. Archibald, the war correspondent, has been most of the Winter in Havana, and describes the reconstrnction in the government of that city by American officers. Another very practical article describes how the foreign mails are handled at New York. Mr. Stevenson's letters describe his invalid life at Bournemouth, where he occupied the famous cottage, "Skerryvore," and where he was visited by many eminent literary men. The fiction includes a story entitled, "The White Blackbird," by Bliss Perry; another of "Aunt Minerva Ann's" amusing chronicles by Joel Chandler Harris; a character study of old age by Mrs. Robert Louis Stevenson, and a fascinating instalment of "Q's" serial, "The Ship of Stars." James Whitcomb Riley contributes "The Enduring," a serious poem; the author of that famous poem, "The Lion of the Nile," after long years, makes another striking contribntion called "Nemesis."

In Self-Cultnre, for July, the half-tone pictnres are particularly well chosen and printed. The descriptive articles present fine views of "The Island of Santa Catalina," "The Smithsonian Institntion," and "Life on the Viga." Thoughtful papers on "The Race Problem at the South," by Dr. Goldwin Smith; on "The People and Politics," by the Hon. Boyd Winchester; on "The Dominant Sea Power," by Leslie J. Perry, give food for reflection on prominent snbjects of the day. An amusing paper by F. W. Fitzpatrick, entitled "Fashion's Slaves," with pen and pencil drawings by the author, criticises freely the vagaries of Dame Fashion and her feminine devotees.

The July Forum has a number of interesting articles. Among them are: "The Trust Problem and its Solution," by Ex-Senator W. A. Peffer; "Lord Rosebery and the Premiership," by H. W. Lucy, who contributes the weekly "Essence of Parliament" to Punch; "Was Columbus Morally Irresponsible?" by Prof. C. Lombroso, the eminent criminologist.

McClure's Magazine, for July, opens with a very instructive account of the antomobile as it is seen to-day. Another article that gives information of extraordinary interest is Prof. Simon Newcomb's account of the tremendous problems that just now press npon astronomers for solntion. This article is illustrated from some of the most remarkable of the recent telescopic photographs, especially of the Milky Way, showing clearly stars that the human eye, even with the aid of the strongest telescope, has never seen. A biographical sketch of Rudyard Kipling by his friend, Prof. Charles Eliot Norton, the only authorized account of Kipling's life ever given to the public, is another interesting contribntion. Miss Tarbell's account of "Lincoln's Great Victory in 1864" supplies new illnstration of the immense hold that Lincoln secured, by his wisdom, shrewdness, kindness, and honesty, on the faith and affection of the people.

In the July number of the Critic, Othon Guerlac writes on the late French dramatist, Francisque Sarcey. Frederick Dickson continues his series of articles entitled, "Thackeray's Contributions to Punch." The usual interesting and instructive notes by the editors are of importance to those desiring to keep posted npon current literature.

THE BOOK AND PERIODICAL UNIVERSITY.

Some of us, especially those not privileged to attend college, are liable to underrate the master-teachers and professors of learning that come to our homes from day to day, and sometimes make their abode in our libraries.

Young man, young preacher, what university wonld you attend? Whose lectures wonld you hear? Snppose you preserve those six lectnres by Bishop Hendrix, published recently in the Nashville Christian Advocate, and reread and study them, and keep them for future reference. They might impart more and more lasting good to your mind and heart than many get from an entire session at college. "The word is nigh thee"; wisdom is within the reach of all. Books, magazines and newspapers are turning the world into a great university, where almost everything is taught, and where almost everything may be learned. How much a man may learn often depends more upon the receptive capacities of his mind than upon the source of instruction. A cup will dip no more out of the ocean than out of a spring. Many are deluded in attending colleges and universities. Twenty-five dollars' worth of books, judiciously selected and faithfully studied, wonld profit many a young man more than $250 or $500 expended in attending a college or a university. We need not pay so much simply to learn how to study. Prepare yourself for college before you go, or if you never go to college.

As for myself, I wish I had four pairs of eyes and forty hours a day to read all the good things that come in my way.

W. L. C. HUNNICUTT.

NOTE FROM "GILDEROY."

I have written no line or word for the press on the Gibbs-Wagner controversy in Water Valley. The effort to twist what I said on the school question into that controversy is a perversion and a falsehood.

R. G. PORTER.

Ripley, Miss., July 10, 1899.

RESOLUTIONS.

The following resolutions were introduced at Sardis District Conference, adopted, and requested for publication in NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE:

Whereas, Our church has but recently been freed from an embarrassing debt upon its missionary appropriations; And, whereas, We learn that the collections for this cause to date have not been sufficient to meet current expenses, which would seem to force upon the secretaries the necessity of incurring other liabilities; And, whereas, We deem such a policy unwise, unbusiness-like, and hurtful to the general interest of the church; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we urge the pastors, one and all, to use the greatest endeavor to raise, as early as possible, the full amount of their foreign missionary assessments, and forward same promptly to the treasurer.

Resolved, That if, after faithful effort, the collections are not sufficient to meet the demands of the foreign work as enterprised in the judgment of this body, it would be wiser and better to require the missionaries in the field to accept a pro rata share of the funds on hand, and await further collections for balance of salary, rather than that the church should be again burdened with debt.

J. D. CAMERON,
J. H. SMITH.
W. W. MITCHELL.

HE DIED WITHOUT IT.

In one of Birmingham's hospitals last week there died a man without a loved one, a friend or even acquaintance to speak a word of sympathy or cheer to his hungered soul. In his pockets, after death, all that was found was a card, on which were the following lines:

"Do not keep the alabaster boxes of your love and tenderness sealed up until your friends are dead. Speak approving, cheering words while their hearts can be thrilled and made happier by them; the kind things you mean to say when they are gone, say before they go. The flowers you mean to send for their coffins, send to brighten and sweeten their homes before they leave them. If my friends have alabaster boxes put away, full of fragrant perfumes of sympathy and affection, which they intend to break over my dead body, I would rather they would bring them out in my weary and troubled hours and open them, that I may be refreshed and cheered by them while I need them. I would rather have a plain coffin without a flower, a funeral without a eulogy, than a life without the sweetness of love and sympathy. Let us learn to anoint our friends beforehand for their burial. Postmortem kindness does not cheer the burdened spirit. Flowers on the coffin cast no fragrance backward over the weary way."—Tuskaloosa Times.

A NOBLE CHARITY.

Philadelphia is following the example of New York in the noble charity of supplying the poor with sterilized milk. In New York City infant mortality was reduced 20 per cent. in the localities furnished with this milk. In one of the poorest parts of Philadelphia the Sterilized Milk, Ice and Coal Society supplies four pounds of ice for one cent and six ounces of sterilized milk for the same sum. The opportunity to buy in small quantities the very best is a great blessing to people of very small means. Many a little child's life has been saved by sterilized milk, and the poor appreciate the incalculable boon. This charity appeals to the benevolent, and should be established in every large, crowded city of the United States.—Christian Intelligencer.

Difference of opinion prevails as to the outcome of The Hague Conference, many taking the position that nothing practical will result from it, but there seems to be a growing disposition among the governments represented to favor the principle of arbitration in some form. All may not now be gained that was hoped for, but a start has been made, and future conferences will do much to stay the hand of war and to prevent its wastes and ravages.—Presbyterian.

The true minister of the gospel looks for the results of his preaching more in the changed lives of his hearers than in the short-lived and often meaningless expressions of approval heard at the close of the service.—Recorder.

The heaviest words in our language are the two briefest ones, yes and no. One stands for the surrender of the will, the other for denial, one for gratification, the other for character.—Theodore T. Munger.

BIG DIVIDENDS.

A thonghtful pastor picked up a boy in the ontposts of his circuit, gave him a start in his primary studies, and then made it possible for that boy to go to one of our best schools. That was a contribntion to the twentieth century enterprise that will bring in larger dividends than many gilt-edge securities of men who think little of the possibilities of their investments. Let the church put her money into boys and girls, and they will bring in large returns, in the highest, noblest estate of consecrated womanhood and manhood.—Southern Christian Advocate.

We are in receipt of a private letter from Rev. H. R. Singleton, the following extract from which will be read with interest by his numerous friends in this section: "We have just closed a great meeting, conducted by Rev. J. B. Culpepper, of our church. All the churches, save the Catholic, took an active part. Over 350 took the W. C. T. U. pledge, and will organize that association. Over 150 have organized a Y. M. C. A. These two orders represent the best class of our citizens. All the churches are revived, backsliders reclaimed, and many members have been and will be received. I will receive my third class on Sunday next, making about 100 members in all since January. All departments of church work have taken on new life, and the outlook is brighter than for many years. I have secured and moved into a new parsonage, nicely furnished and very convenient—one of the best I have occupied. Of course finances will be in full."

EPWORTH LEAGUE DEPARTMENT.

"ALL FOR CHRIST."

REV. THOMAS B. CLIFFORD, Jackson, La., EDITOR.

REV. HENRY G. HAWKINS, Madison, Miss., ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

The League recently organized at Keatchie, La., notice of which was given in our columns, was the result of the earnest, persistent labors of the pastor, Rev. J O. Bennett.

We make the above statement because some supposed that it was the result of the District League rally. The League dates its organization some weeks prior to the League meeting held in Shreveport.

It still remains true, however, that Leagues recently organized in many places were evidences of influences set in motion during meetings held in the various districts. Let the Leaguers hold district meetings where possible.

The Burgundy Street (New Orleans) Epworth League recently pledged five dollars for "specials," and have already paid seven dollars and fifty cents. They will devote themselves during the remainder of the year in assisting in raising the "regular" collections "in full."

Would it not be a great thing for the Mississippi, North Mississippi and Louisiana Annual Conferences to report "everything in full" at their approaching sessions? We verily believe that the efforts of the Leaguers properly directed could bring such things to pass.

We hereby extend the right hand of editorial fellowship to the Rev. Henry G. Hawkins, of Madison, Miss., who, at the instance of the State Conference of Epworth Leagues in Mississippi, is appointed associate editor of our department for the next twelve months. He may consider himself a member of the "craft." We judge him "worthy and well qualified," and promise him plenty of room for the exercise of his gifts.

INTERNATIONAL EPWORTH LEAGUE CONFERENCE.

The Mississippi delegation to the International League Conference, to be held at Indianapolis, July 20-23, will assemble at Meridian on the evening of July 18. Leaguers may leave Jackson on 7 P. M. train, July 18, and join the crowd at Meridian.

The following are the reasons why the Committee on Transportation to Indianapolis chose the Queen and Crescent route:

1. There was an invitation to join the Alabama and Georgia Leaguers at Birmingham, Ala. They had representatives at the Mississippi State League Conference bringing the invitation.

2. The scenery along the Queen and Crescent route is so much better than that of the other roads.

3. The time required for the trip is shorter. It is via Meridian, Birmingham, Chattanooga, Cincinnati.

The meeting will be in progress at different points in the city the same hours, viz: The Tent, Tomlinson Hall, Opera House, and sometimes at the churches. A great variety of live subjects are on the programme, and speakers from all the good walks of life and from all sections of American Methodism. There are patriotic concerts and various inviting intellectual and spiritual feasts.

The programme takes up nearly two pages of The Epworth Era. About the first name on it is Gov. James A. Mount, of Indiana; the last is Rev. G. J. Bond, of Halifax, Nova Scotia. HENRY G. HAWKINS.

EPWORTH LEAGUERS, ATTENTION!

At the last State League Conference a Constitution was adopted which requires that a district secretary be appointed for each presiding elder's district in the two Conferences. This secretary is to be appointed by the president upon recommendation of the district. These secretaries ought to be appointed at once, that our State work may be organized and pressed forward without hindrance or delay. Let the Leaguers, especially the presidents of the various Leagues in the various districts, write to me their recommendations within ten days from date of this issue of the ADVOCATE. More anon.

THE MILLSAPS LAW CLASS.

Chancellor H. C. Conn this morning received notification from the Judges of the Mississippi Supreme Court that the law class of Millsaps College, which stood examination at Raymond during the first week in June, had all successfully passed without exception.

The class was composed of Messrs. Green, Clifton, Fitzhugh, Power, Watkins, Livingston, Hall, Leverett, Terry and Simonton, and they all made very high averages. Accompanying the notice is granted license to practice law within the State of Mississippi.

This is the third law class that has graduated from Millsaps College, and it makes a total of thirty-nine graduates, none of whom have failed to secure license to practice. The attorneys of Jackson regard it a most remarkable record and a fine compliment to Millsaps College and Judge Edwin Mayes, the instructor in law.

The class of '99 are now on the lookout for places to hang their shingles.—Clarion-Ledger.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

I am just home off a two weeks' tour, during which I attended the State Epworth League Conference at West Point, the Aberdeen District Conference at Tupelo, the Corinth District Conference at Inka, and the Columbus District Conference at Pheba, all of which I enjoyed very much. These occasions of reunion and communion draw us nearer together in Christian fellowship and service. The cordial greetings and kind words of the brethren are encouraging to one engaged in special connectional work.

Bishop Candler is a great force in a District Conference, both in the chair and in the pulpit, as was evidenced at Inka. His wise counsels and four powerful sermons made profound impressions upon all who heard him, and will doubtless bear much and abiding fruit. He greatly endeared himself to preachers and people who were present. The Conference at Inka will long be remembered for its inspiring and uplifting effect.

The Conferences at Tupelo and Pheba were good to the use of edifying. Presiding Elders Wyatt and Burroughs performed their functions well, and all present conspired together to make the occasions pleasant and profitable. As the several secretaries will furnish synopsis of proceedings, I forbear further details.

Last Sunday was a great day for Winona Methodism; the new church was solemnly dedicated to the worship and service of God in the presence of a large congregation, after an excellent sermon by Rev. J A. Bowen, of Columbus. Led by their faithful pastor, Rev. Geo. H. Lipscomb, many of the devout ones were glad that morning when it was said, "Let us go up to the house of the Lord," and they returned to their homes rejoicing because of the "new house," the glory of which is greater than that of the former.

Rev. J M. Massey, pastor of Sturgis circuit, is very sick with fever. Many prayers are being offered for his recovery. The wife of Rev. S. B. Myers, of Tupelo, is also quite sick. We hope and pray for her speedy restoration to health. Capt. J. T. Lay, a prominent member of our church, died very suddenly at his home in Winona on last Sunday night. By his contribution of $4,000 the building of the new church in Winona was made sure, the total cost of which was nearly $11,000.

SHREVEPORT DISTRICT.

Our second round terminated with the District Conference session, held at Coushatta, June 29-July 2. There has been advance on most all lines and on most every charge, the delightful session of the District Conference being a fitting culmination of the work of the preachers during the quarter. The utmost good feeling prevailed throughout, and Sunday night a splendid closing service was had, with two bright conversions, and very many Christians and others giving their hand to signify that they had been greatly blessed during the Conference session.

At 11 A. M., of Saturday, Rev. J. S. Sanders preached on the baptism of power, his sermon receiving the signal endorsement of the Holy Ghost, who fell in refreshing and strengthening power upon preachers and people. Every morning session was preceded by a prayer service, in which our church, her people, interests, and the Twentieth Century Movement, were made the special subjects of our petitions.

The Sunday-school and Epworth League hours on Thursday yielded very much of value to those whose labors are in these attractive fields of work.

The Educational Meeting, on Friday night, was a grand occasion, and so also was the Missionary Meeting on Friday afternoon. The magnates present were on the field, and sound principles, strong thoughts, pleasing rhetoric, scintilating oratory, and a collection, all entered into those brilliant occasions.

Dr. Cooper, of Centenary, and President Sligh, of Mansfield, were with us, and divided the honors with our home orators, Dr. Bolling and Rev. John L P. Sheppard.

On Saturday, Rev. J. O. Bennett read a most excellent paper on missions, and Sunday, at 3.30 P. M, Rev. P O. Lowrey discoursed entrancingly to the children. The love-feast, at 9:30, was led by Rev. R P. Howell, and was a spiritual feast indeed.

Miss Lizzie Paxson, of the Woman's Missionary Society, and Mrs. Hutchins, of the Home Mission Society, addressed the Conference.

All the preaching was first-class—scriptural, incisive, practical, conscience-probing and heart-reaching, each aiming for immediate results.

The host of the Conference was Paul M. Brown, who made royal provision for us all. We sympathized greatly with the people of Coushatta charge in having to give up this valuable man of God. With his accomplished wife and interesting family, his lot is to be cast soon in the Baton Rouge district, where he will take under his wise management the Johnston Collegiate Institute. We are pained to have him go, but we feel sure that he will save and establish that school. He will leave multitudes of friends whose prayers will follow him to his new and most difficult field of labor for God and souls.

The preachers of the Shreveport district are a consecrated band of workers, and they went back from Coushatta strengthened of God for labors more abundant.

INTERNATIONAL EPWORTH LEAGUE CONVENTION,

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., JULY, 1899.

For the above occasion the Q. and C. Route will sell on July 18 and 19 round-trip tickets from New Orleans to Indianapolis at the very low rate of $22.25, limited to return July 26, with privilege of extension to leave Indianapolis on or before Aug. 26, provided tickets are deposited with joint agent at Indianapolis on or before July 24, and upon payment of 50 cents extension fee.

The Q. and C. Route offers to delegates and visitors attending this Convention unequalled service and facilities. Train leaving New Orleans daily at 7:30 P. M. arrives at Cincinnati next evening same hour, thus making twenty-four-hour schedule, carrying Pullman buffett sleeper; direct connection being made in Cincinnati with the C. H. and D. R. R. for Indianapolis, arriving at the latter point 10:35 P. M.

This line has been selected as the official route by the Leagners of Mississippi and Alabama, and the delegates from these States will go on same train, which leaves New Orleans at 7.30 P. M.

SPANISH-AMERICAN WAR PANORAMA

is one of the war books which is likely to be in continuous demand. It is a panoramic record of the triumph of Yankee Doodle. The eagle flaps his wings on every page, and "Old Glory" waves around and above every scene. Prominent officers connected with the war are here portrayed, as well as many of the "men behind the guns." Military life is pictured to the eye, from recruiting to guard mount and skirmish line. Nor is the ludicrous omitted. The company cook receives the attention due to his importance; the mess is shown; cavalry scenes are given; the hospital arrangements are depicted; the heroines of the Red Cross service are displayed; street scenes in Havana, Santiago and elsewhere are unrolled, the new citizens or subjects (which are they?) of Uncle Sam appear and disappear as the leaves are turned.

In a word, the gazer visits the new localities and sees the tumultuous new life, without the risk or expense of a sea voyage.

The Album is 5½x8 inches, weighs 12 ounces, printed on finest coated paper.

WRITE IT.

[Miss Frances E. Willard recommended every young person to learn and speak these verses:]

Write it on the workhouse gate,
Write it on the schoolboy's slate,
Write it on the copybook,
That the young may often look,
"Where there's drink, there's danger."

Write it on the churchyard mound,
Where the rum-slain dead are found;
Write it on the gallows high.
Write for all the passers-by,
"Where there's drink, there's danger."

Write it in the nation's laws,
Blotting out the license clause;
Write it on each ballot white,
So it can be read aright,
"Where there's drink, there's danger."

Write it on our ships that sail,
Borne along by storm and gale;
Write it large in letters plain,
Over every land and main,
"Where there's drink, there's danger."

Write it over every gate,
On the church and halls of state,
In the hearts of every band,
On the laws of every land,
"Where there's drink, there's danger."

FRETFULNESS.

Did you ever sit down and deliberately reflect upon what is the greatest trouble in this world? what is the source of its greatest daily unhappiness? I have, and it seems to me that what are thought to be our greatest trials are often truly blessings in disguise.

Poverty, ill-health, and even the sorrow of death can be so consecrated and borne that after awhile we can thank God for having given them to us. They leave no bitter memory behind when they have left us. Such things are not always our greatest troubles; but there are certain ways of behavior, manifestations of traits of disposition which some of us have which drive the sunshine from our homes and clouds the heavenly blue for every heart which loves us. Take, for instance, that unfortunate habit of fretfulness which is the besetting sin of some young girls. Did you ever stop to consider, my dear frownie face, who are so clever with your fingers, and have such a nice taste in the making of pretty things and in the pleasant arrangement of a room, that you spoil the charm of your whole morning's work when you say to mama, just as papa and the boys go off to business: "Oh, dear! how those men do litter things about. I just have to clean up after them always the instant they leave the room."

You may work, to use your own expression, your fingers to the bone, to keep all things neat and tidy, and to make home pleasant, but it never will be pleasant as long as you live in such a spirit. Papa and the boys are glad when you go away for a visit, and even mama—though she misses your efficient help—heaves a sigh of relief, to think that for a week or two she will not have to excuse your sharp tongue to your brothers, or to try to keep them from exasperating you.

You are surprised, are you not, my poor frownie face, that I should speak to you in this cruel way, when, as you say, you are "always doing something for somebody?" "Yes, you are," said Tom when you made that remark in his presence the other day, "and then you are always telling of it afterward." "Love vaunted not herself," my child.

Did you never observe how catching this habit of fretfulness is? It is worse than the measles. The other morning, for example, when you came down stairs and found Tom's muddy tracks all across the hall and over the sitting-room carpet. Perhaps you remember what you said to him, and what he answered in return. Your father, who was glancing over the paper, heard you both, and it disturbed him more than usual because his heart was full of business cares, so there was a sharp note in his voice as he reproved Eugene with unnecessary severity for leaving the door open, and Eugene, being irritated, slapped Peggy because she joggled him as he was passing the water at the table. Then you scolded Bridget because the plates were not hot, and so it went on—it was like an endless chain. After breakfast mama retired to her room with a headache, and the others went off to school and to business each in a bad temper, and you were left to wrestle with the sitting-room fire alone. It was a miserable day, and you thought everybody was to blame but yourself. Now I am going to show you, partly, how far-reaching the effects of your cross morning were, for I can never trace for you all the mischief that was done; it is only in part that I can bring it before your eyes.

To begin with, your father went away irritated, and he did not conduct his case in court in that calm and equable manner which is usual to him, so the other side gained an advantage which he found it hard to retrieve. To your mother, who is burdened with many cares, it was like the "last straw" to which the proverb alludes—she went to bed sick; she could endure no more. Tom's carelessness was not improved by your reproof, and he went away with a feeling of downright hatred toward you in his heart. The children set off for school cross and miserable, instead of being happy and light hearted. Bridget was out of tune all day, and it took many long hours for each one of your family to recover the serenity which you had disturbed by your irritating words.

I know that you sometimes have a little feeling of wonder in your heart, which is perhaps not altogether unmixed with jealousy, when you see how much fonder your friend Sunny Eyes' home people are of her than yours are of you. Sunny Eyes' brothers are always hanging about her and frolicking with her. Sunny Eyes' little sister trots after her all day long, and Sunny Eyes' father and mother are quick with their appreciation and caresses. And yet you are sure that Sunny Eyes does not work as hard for her people as you do for yours. I think you are right about that, but I wish you could realize that it is not only what we do, but what we are, that counts. Sunny Eyes is that delightful creature, a good-natured girl. She is more than that, she is positively merry. She laughs easily; she makes a good deal of fun as she goes along. It is surprising how delightful such a disposition is in the family, and when you add to it an unselfish spirit, you have a combination which makes a person a blessing indeed.

Now this world is just as full as it can hold of little irritations, little trials, little annoyances, and they touch us on every side of our nature by the express will of God, and if we allow them to disturb us, and to cloud the serenity of our spirits, we are frustrating the very purpose for which God sends them to us; for he wants us to meet them and to conquer them, and realizing their pettiness, to rise above them. We can do it if we follow in the footsteps of our Master; none of these things troubled him, though he was continually beset by all sorts of petty annoyances. "Be of good cheer," said Jesus, "I have overcome the world."—Eleanor A. Hunter, in Christian Work.

DUTY TO ONE'S SELF.

In a certain household located in northern New England, a house set among rugged hills and dimpling valleys, there lives a woman whom the angels write upon the roll of their saints. Her life is one of unremitting toil hard, unrequited, and unrecognized. The people around her, relatives by marriage, are incapable of appreciating the rare heroism of her life, the sweet beauty of her constant, uncomplaining devotion to her daily duty.

I do not think she has an ideal. She is too simple and straightforward, and much too busy, to think about how her conduct impresses others. She spends day after day, year after year, in caring for childhood and tending querulous old age; and through a weary and monotonous life, filled with drudgery, she keeps the sunny sweetness which distinguished her as a girl. It never occurs to her, either, that she is to be pitied or admired, or that she is doing anything extraordinary.

But her self-abnegation is making her young daughters thoughtless of their mother's rights and claims. They are surprised when she occasionally expresses a wish for a change of scene or a new gown, or hints at being included in some projected party of pleasure. Her husband accepts her unremitting service as his due, and seldom puts himself out to show how much he thinks of it and of her. Indeed, it has become to him like the commonplaces of the sky and earth and air, and he takes it in the same way, as a matter of course, and will never acknowledge what it is to him till one of these days it is gone. Even then it will not be evident to him that his wife died of devotion to him and his, a martyr to too great disregard of self, too unstinted outpouring for her family.

Dear sisters, there are some of you who need this reminder. God asks of you an account of one soul of his fashioning entrusted by him to your care. For the talents he entrusted to you he will exact a full report at the end of the day. You have no excuse for squandering yourself, your precious wife, you beloved mother, you faithful daughter or sister. I know a woman growing thin and gray—a woman who toils strenuously in an exhausting profession, earning her salary in the literal wearing out of her strength—and twice in the last five years she has bestowed every penny of her savings on a strong, but indolent relative, a man who has never had force enough to take care of himself, but who does not scruple to take advantage of her weak unselfishness. Is she praiseworthy? Is she not rather responsible to a large degree for his pettiness and his disgraceful lack of manly chivalry?

Depend upon it, that each of us owes a plain duty to herself. This duty includes a proper care for our physical well-being, a taking whatever belongs to us, in consideration from others, in time and in leisure, and a recollection that we are God's children, and as such entitled to our share of what God meant us to have. Too much of the altruistic spirit and attitude may rebound unfavorably, and harm rather than help the very persons it hoped to elevate and broaden.—Mrs. M. E. Sangster, in Congregationalist.

COURAGE TO THE FRONT.

It often requires a good deal of stiff, sterling courage in a young man or woman to quit the old associations and stand forth before the world as an uncompromising follower of Christ. And just because it requires such courage, many long hesitate to assert all necessary courage and make all needed sacrifice.

In one of his bold and stirring sermons Dr. Maclaren says: "I wonder how many young men, to whom these words are addressed, have pluck enough in them to come out on Christ's side? I do believe that many young men do not want an easy life; they would rather have a hard time and a stern battle. We have brave spirits among us still, who like to lead the forlorn hope and are not afraid. I challenge such to come and serve my Master, fully and thoroughly, and they shall have a rough time of it; but they shall have glory and honor and immortality as their reward."

There are, doubtless, many such young men, and women, too, in our land, and they should be urged and encouraged to break away from the evil ties which have long bound them, and take a strong stand for Christ and his truth. But let no one tell them that in becoming Christians they shall have any right to expect a life of unruffled ease, of dulcet delight from beginning to end. Far too many in the churches are simply smelling the roses of the garden of the Lord. We want more who, having courage to come out from the world, will have courage also to hold to the front the banner of Christ without faltering.—C. H. Wetherbe.

Unless your religion changes you, makes you honest in business, pious behind counters, temperate at dinner tables, loyal to your country, affectionate to your family, neighborly in your community, conscientious at the ballot box, patient in affliction, humble, cheerful and hopeful everywhere and always; unless it links you in brotherhood with the poorest of God's children; unless it leads you on errands of mercy to hovels and hospitals and prisons, as well as to cushioned pews and sacramental boards; unless you live Christ on week days as well as worship him on Sabbath day, then we had better take a look into our religious life and see if it will stand the judgment of the Lord Jesus.—Southern Churchman.

OUR $1 OFFER.

Much has been said about reducing the subscription price of the ADVOCATE. The only way in which a reduction can be brought about is by an increase in the number of subscribers. In order to facilitate this result, we make the following offer: Until further notice we will take new subscriptions at the rate of $1 for eight months. When seven thousand five hundred new names have been sent in at this rate with the cash, we will extend the time four months longer, thus reducing the price to $1 per annum. When the extension is made, old subscribers will get the benefit as well as new ones, provided they first pay up all arrearages. Of course, no commissions can be given under this offer. Address

LIKE A THIEF IN THE NIGHT.

Malaria creeps into the system and leaves a poison which saps its vitality until the well-known symptoms of CHILLS AND FEVER, INTERMITTENT FEVER, CONGESTION, BLOODY URINE, etc., will show their snake-like heads. Fortunately there is an antidote in DICKS' CHILLIFUGE, which absolutely exterminates Malaria in a few hours; so pleasant to the taste that children love to take it. It banishes fevers like mist before the morning sun; brings as a gift rose cheeks, health, happiness, and makes life worth the living

CAPT. S. C. BAINS.

"The noblest lives are those to duty wed,
Whose deeds, both great and small,
Are close-knit strands of an unbroken thread
Where love ennobles all.
The world may sound no trumpet, ring no bell;

Capt. Samuel C. Bains was born in Tuscaloosa county, Ala., Jan. 15, 1821, being the youngest of four children. His father, the Rev. James Bains, was a Baptist minister who at first resided in South Carolina, but who removed to what was then the Chootaw Nation in Mississippi in 1827. Capt. Bains was at first a citizen of Holmes county, where he resided until 1859, he then became a citizen of Choctaw county, where he remained for three years, and he then moved to Valden, Carroll county, Miss., which was from that time his home. He was thrice married; the first time to Miss Lucy Paulding, to whom one child was born, which died, with its mother, at an early age; the second time to Miss Henrietta Sample, to whom eleven children were born, six of whom are now living; and in 1874 to Mrs. Florence Peebles, who, with the two sons born to her, survives her deceased husband.

In 1861, when the tocsin of Civil War sounded, Mr. Bains, then in the prime of life, raised a company of one hundred and forty men, which was known as the Valden Artillery. Of this company he was made captain, and did valiant service throughout the war. He was in the battles of Shiloh and Corioth, and in the siege of Vicksburg, where he was taken prisoner. He was subsequently exchanged, and was in the siege of Mobile.

At the close of the war Capt. Bains engaged in the mercantile business, at which he was a decided success. In 1888 he retired from business, and thereafter lived quietly at home with his family. Until about two years ago he was remarkably well preserved physically, but suddenly it was discovered that that awful malady, Bright's disease of the kidneys, had fastened itself upon him. From that time his decline was steady. He faded gradually from existence like an Autumn sunset. The feeble fire of life burned lower and lower, until at last it flickered and went out. Throughout his illness he was patient, trustful, and resigned. Loving forms bent tenderly above him to soothe his suffering brow, and to perform for him the sweet ministries of affection. The end, which came Sunday morning, May 7, 1899, was peaceful. "God's finger touched him, and he slept." The whole community followed his remains to the cemetery, loving tributes were paid to his memory, and his grave was literally covered with flowers.

Such, briefly told, are the leading events of a long, noble, and useful life. It is impossible within the narrow compass of an obituary notice to discuss intelligently a character like that of Capt. Bains. I can only speak very briefly of a few of his most prominent traits. Perhaps his most striking characteristic was his unswerving adherence to what he conceived to be right. He was the embodiment of that old Latin saying, "Mild in manner, resolute in conviction." His ways were gentle and kind, but in a matter of right or wrong, he was fixed and immovable. He abhorred that which is evil, and held fast to that which is good. He stood uncompromisingly against vice of every form, and when wicked men sought to fasten evils upon the community, though all others might be silent, his voice never failed to ring out in condemnation. He would form no truce with the powers of darkness, but with drawn sword and flashing eye he ever stood a brave and fearless champion of the right. He would have suffered martyrdom rather than sacrifice the truth. Scores of young men who were saved from moral bankruptcy and ruin by his watchfulness and courage will rise up in eternity and call him blessed.

Capt. Bains was an exemplary Christian. He was a consistent and active member of the M. E. Church, South. For many years he was a faithful, conscientious Sunday-school teacher; always punctual, always at his post. He believed in the Bible as the inspired Word of God. He accepted its doctrines, lived its precepts, and proved its promises. The moral element in him was strong. Duty was his watchword, and to him the voice of conscience was imperative. I have not known a disciple of the Master who had a more complete mastery of himself.

But, after all, it was, perhaps, in the family circle that our deceased friend was at his best. His home life was beautiful beyond description. Not a jar or jostle; order everywhere; love beaming from every face; each one considerate of all the others; kindness in every voice. Such homes are all too rare in this world of ours. Among his sons the deceased seemed more like an elder brother than a father. He exercised authority, to be sure, but so gently was it done that those who obeyed were unconscious that they were yielding obedience. It was more like taking the advice of an older and more experienced friend. He gained and kept the confidence of his boys, and no higher tribute can be paid his memory than to say that he has left eight sons behind, and that there is not one of them who is not orderly, moral, and upright.

But this happy home circle is now broken. Its honored head, which constituted its concentripetal bond, has passed away, and those who remain are enveloped in the dense gloom of sorrow. But this circle may be re-formed to abide forever beneath the cloudless skies of the eternal city. God grant that it may be so.

R. A. MEEK.

MRS. MELISSA M. COFFEE.

A letter from Bro. and Sister E. J. Guice brings the sad news of the death of this Christian lady. She passed away at their home in Franklin county, Miss., June 8, 1899.

Mrs. Coffee was born June 7, 1826. At what age she was born from above we are not informed, but we think early in life. She was a matured Christian, full of faith and good works, thirty-one years ago, when we first became acquainted with her. Her maiden name was Guice. Her husband, Rev. Nathan Coffee, was at one time a member of the Mississippi Conference. He died many years ago, as did also their only son, and now they all sleep side by side in the cemetery at Fayette, Miss.

Mrs. Coffee was a consistent and useful member of the church, and was loved and revered by all who knew her.

As I write these lines memory is fresh of the many saints of God who flourished on the Fayette circuit in 1860, when I was there, a boy preacher, the assistant of Rev. H. F. Johnson, of precious memory. They were all kind to me, but none more so than Sister Coffee and her saloted husband. They are nearly all gone now, but I shall meet them again in a better world. If the younger generation of Methodists on that circuit measure up to the standard of their predecessors, the church is safe in their keeping. W. B. LEWIS.

O'QUIN—THOMAS JEFFERSON O'QUIN was born Oct. 11, 1830; married Jan. 18, 1852, to Miss M. L. Vause. On the morning of April 18, 1899, he started out to enjoy a morning's walk. He was gone only a short time when his devoted wife began to be uneasy. When they began looking for him, he was found at the back gate dead. How sad to give up our much-loved and honored citizen! No one knew him but to love him. He was very quiet; loved to stay at home. He read a great deal. Yes, he has gone, but we will ever cherish his memory, and endeavor to emulate his virtues.

Bro. O'Quin was a soldier and a grand citizen. After the war he bought a farm and built a creditable home; reared a nice family, the youngest of whom he lived to see grown. He leaves a devoted wife, four sons, one daughter, and a number of grandchildren, all of whom loved him dearly. To them we extend our profoundest sympathies. No one knew him but to receive some good from him. We have stored all this in memory's casket; far too much could not be said of him. While we are grieved, yet we are comforted, expecting some day to meet him where pain, labor and sorrow are no more. A FRIEND.

FISHER—FLORENCE FISHER, the infant daughter of Bro. Ernest Fisher and Sister Ada Fisher, fell on sleep June 3, and was laid to rest in the cemetery at Edwards.

God, for his own all-wise purpose, required the return of this bright jewel that had brightened the home of the bereaved parents for two short years. She was their only child, and her winning ways and beautiful face will be sadly missed; but how happy ought they to feel that she is safe from the trials of this world, is now happy in the presence of the blessed Savior! She will ever be as a shining light in their earthly pathway, drawing them heavenward. Thus is the love of God often made manifest. He knows best. C. F. EMERY.

HOLMES—In memory of Miss MARY HOLMES, who passed from earth to heaven. She was a member of the Methodist Church from childhood. She was a Christian, lived and died one, beloved by all—all her friends and loved ones. We will miss thee, dear one; we know that.

Calm on the bosom of thy God,
Fair spirit, rest thee now.
E'en while with us his seal
Was on thy brow.
But, oh, a brighter home than ours
In heaven is now thine own.

A FRIEND.

JOB EARNED HIS TITLE BY GREAT SUFFERING. Had he flourished in these days, his recourse for consolation would not have been the company of three nagging friends, but a bottle of DICKS' MUL-EN-OL, which has a wonderful power to dissipate the inflammation, cool the feverishness, and completely cure boils and carbuncles.

NAPOLEON LOST THE BATTLE OF LEIPSIC because of a fit of indigestion. One dose of DICKS' MUL-EN-OL would have given him instant relief, and the fate of the kingdoms of Europe been decided differently. It is really marvelous how quickly a colicky pain will vanish when a teaspoonful of Mul-en-ol in a wineglass of hot water is taken. Try it; you will never suffer from colic.

Our price, $15.50.
No. 5 Machine, drop leaf table, gothic cover, case of three drawers at each end, making seven drawers in all. Dealer's price, $26.
Our price, $16.25.

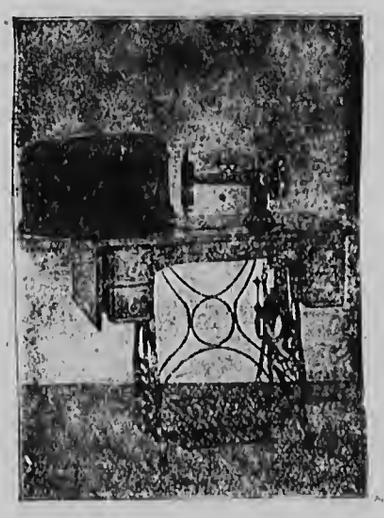
No. 4 Columbian



EXCELLENCE OF THE COLUMBIAN.—All wearing parts are of case-hardened steel possessing great durability, and by the turning of a screw all lost motion caused by wear can be taken up. All parts are fitted so accurately that the machines are absolutely noiseless, and as easy running as fine adjustment and best mechanical skill is possible to produce. No expense or time is spared to make them perfect in every respect, as every machine passes a rigid inspection by competent men before leaving the factory.

NICKEL PLATED.—The balance wheel and many of the fine parts are nickel plated, with other parts finely enameled and ornamented, giving it a rich appearance.

A Self Setting Needle and Self-Threading Cylinder Shuttle are used in the Columbian High-Arm Sewing Machine. They are so simple that any one can easily operate them in a few minutes' time, as our Instruction Book is fully illustrated, showing how to do all kinds of fancy work with attachments.

Extra Attachments, in velvet-lined case, sent free with each machine: 1 Tucker, 1 Ruffler with shirring plate, 1 Hemmer set (4 widths) and Binder, 1 Braider (Foot and Slide), 1 Thread Cutter.

ADDITIONAL ACCESSORIES.—Each machine is supplied with the following outfit: 1 Hemmer and Feller (one piece), 10 Needles, 6 Bobbins, 1 Wrench, 1 Screw Driver, Oil Can with Oil, Cloth Gauge and Thumb Screw, and a Book of Instructions. The Book of Instructions is profusely illustrated, and answers the purpose of a competent teacher.

No. 3—Drop leaf, Bent cover, case of two drawers at one end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $29. Our price, $17.
No. 4—Drop leaf table, Bent cover, case of two drawers at each end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $31. Our price, $17.75.
No. 5—Drop leaf table, Bent cover, case of three drawers at each end and center drawer, making a seven-drawer machine.
Dealer's price, $33. Our price, $18.50.

The chief difference between Numbers 3, 4, and 5 is in the furniture, i. e., in the number of drawers. If you do not want to pay for the extra drawers, you need not do so. We sell these machines under a ten years' guarantee, by which we mean that if any part gives out by reason of any defect therein, the manufacturer will replace the same free of charge. Moreover, we allow the purchaser to test the machine ten days. If at the end of ten days you are not satisfied, you have only to drop us a postal card, and your money will be refunded.

OUR OFFER.

We will send any one of the above-described machines at the prices named, and also send the ADVOCATE free for six months. The only condition attached to this offer is that subscribers who are in arrears must first pay up all arrearages to date. It would be well to avail yourself of this offer at once, as we can not promise that it will last very long. Notice that you take no risk whatever. We do all the risking. Address

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

A drinking fonntain is to be erected in Brooklyn by the W. C. T. U. of that city as a momorial to the late Frances E. Willard.

Admiral Cervera and the other commanders of the Spanish fleet destroyed in the battle of Santiago, whose conduct has been the subject of inquiry by special court-martial, have been acquitted and formally liberated.

A London capitalist has offered to construct at Southend a huge sea wall, at a cost of $3,000,000, and asks in return permission to use the tidal force for working a generating plant to supply London with electricity.

It is reported that the Czar of Russia is very much disappointed at the evident failure of the Peace Conference. Disarmament has proven entirely unacceptable to all of the powers, and arbitration has been about the only subject upon which there has developed a remote prospect of agreement.

Plans for the Dewey celebration have been outlined at a meeting of the committee in New York. It has been decided practically that there shall be a two-days' celebration and land and naval parade. Admiral Dewey will pass under a large triumphal arch to be constructed either in City Hall Park or Madison Square Park at a cost of $10,000.

Although no definite settlement of the differences existing between the British Government and the Transvaal authorities has yet been arrived at, the situation wears a decidedly more pacific aspect. The firmness of Lord Salisbury's Government has convinced the Boers that Great Britain would use force, if need be, to compel the recognition of the just rights of the outlanders in the Transvaal.

Never before in the history of the country, according to the calculations of the financial journals, has so great an amount of money been distributed as was disbursed in the shape of dividends and interest payments upon July 1, just past. Although there is no way of accurately aggregating the amount of these disbursements, it is believed that they were in the neighborhood of $150,000,000.

According to the latest advices from Washington, all efforts to arrive at a temporary arrangement or modus vivendi as to the Alaska boundary have failed, and, as a result, the whole question remains in a most unsatisfactory shape. Owing to the peculiar circumstances of the case, delay in arriving at a settlement is actually dangerous, and a temporary agreement is absolutely essential to a proper maintenance of law and order on the border-land.

After a couple of months of negotiations, the Peace Conference, now sitting at The Hague, has finally formulated its arbitration proposals, and has adjourned in order to afford its members an opportunity to consult with their respective Governments before finally adopting the arbitration plan. While, therefore, completed as far as the members of the conference are concerned, the arbitration plan is not yet final, as it is yet liable to changes to be made by direction of the different powers represented.

Emperor William's visit to the French training-ship "Iphigenie" at Bergen, on Thursday, and his cordial exchange of telegrams with President Loubet were received with great enthusiasm. As one paper puts it, it promises to be the turning-point in the world's history. At the opening of the Kiel Canal his majesty went on board one of the French ships, but in the present instance it is maintained the Emperor set foot on the deck of a French vessel, which is equivalent to French soil, by the express invitation of her commander, who was acting upon instructions from his Government.

Governor Foster will call the General Assembly in special session, to meet on Tuesday, Aug. 8, and close on Tuesday, Aug. 22. The business which is to be put before the Legislature on this occasion is to be, first, to authorize the city of New Orleans to organize a Sewerage and Water Board to construct and administer great public sanitary works, and in this connection, through the aid of a constitutional amendment to that effect, to permit the issuing of bonds based on a special tax, the proceeds of which are to be used in the construction of the public works so provided for. In addition to local matters, the Legislature will be asked to carry into effect Article 281 of the Constitution, authorizing various cities, towns and drainage districts of the State to levy special taxes and issue bonds for works of improvement and protection from floods, and for sanitary purposes.

The end of the greatest flood ever known in the Brazos valley, Texas, is now in sight. The crest of the water is now within fifty miles of the gulf and the fresh water is pouring through many small channels to the salt. The water has spread out over the low lands on the coast and the Brazos is now over fifty miles wide, extending half across Brazoria county in one way and will soon cover the whole length of 150 miles. The people are now getting their heads together and are deciding on their together and are deciding on their plans. The response to the appeal for help has been most liberal, but it can be only temporary; the destitute people are farmers, big and little, and will have to provide for themselves for twelve months after the charity has been expended.

LEMONS AS MEDICINE

They regulate the Liver, Stomach, Bowels, Kidneys and Blood as prepared by Dr. H. Mozley, in his Lemon Elixir, a pleasant lemon drink. It cures biliousness, constipation, indigestion, headache, malaria, kidney diseases, fevers, chills, heart failure, nervous prostration, and all other diseases caused by a torpid or diseased liver and kidneys. It is an established fact that lemons, when combined properly with other liver tonics, produce the most desirable results upon the stomach, liver, bowels, kidneys, and blood. Sold by druggists. 50c and $1 bottles.

Mozley's Lemon Elixir

Cured me of sick and nervous headache, I had been subject to all my life.
MRS. N. A. McENTIRE, Spring Place, Ga.

Mozley's Lemon Elixir

Cured me of indigestion and nervous prostration. I got more relief, and at once, from Lemon Elixir than all other medicines. J. C. SPEIGHTS, Indian Springs, Ga.

Mozley's Lemon Elixir

Cured me of a long-standing case of chills and fever, by using two bottles.
J. C. STANLEY, Engineer E. T., Va. & Ga. R. R.

Mozley's Lemon Elixir

Cured me of a case of heart disease and indigestion of four years' standing. I tried a dozen different medicines. None but Lemon Elixir done me any good.

NOTICE.

To the Preachers in Charge in the Forest District—

DEAR BRETHREN: Please see that new Quarterly Conference Record Books, edition of 1898, be procured on your circuits. The old records will not do. They can not contain the Minutes required by the Discipline of 1898. And be sure that the Church Registers and Records of Church Conferences be presented at the third Quarterly Conference. And, I beg of you, be ready to answer Questions 17 and 18 as the law expects them to be answered.

Yours faithfully,

PAINT TALKS, XVIII.

HOW TO SELECT A PAINT.

The many inquiries received from consumers since the publication of these "Paint Talks" was begun, show not only that the public are interested in the subject, but that information upon the matters discussed was much needed. Buyers appear to have learned, by costly experiment, that "strictly pure white lead" is not a durable paint material; but beyond that point they are all at sea.

Many correspondents who have followed the series and are persuaded of the reasonableness of the arguments advanced, write to inquire who manufactures the kind of paint described. As I have shown in preceding articles, it would be obviously unfair, in such a series, to mention one manufacturer at the expense of all the rest. The fact is that all the leading paint manufacturers produce combinations of zinc and white lead, zinc and barytes, zinc and silica, or mixtures of zinc, lead and barytes, silica or gypsum, which answer all the requirements of a lasting and economical paint and are in every respect superior to straight lead.

Unfortunately, as already pointed out, the old time lead corroders got the trade into the bad habit of calling all white paint "white lead," and all the old combinations which have made their reputations under that designation still come upon the market as "lead."

Manufacturers generally are glad to inform buyers as to the components of their products, and if the buyer knows what he wants the nearest manufacturer can probably furnish it.

In selecting a white or a tinted paint, therefore, the consumer should primarily demand a paint containing a fair proportion of zinc white (say from one-third to three-fourths lead), pure linseed oil, and no naphtha. With such a specification to start from he can open correspondence with the manufacturers in his vicinity and receive full information as to quality, price, quantity required, etc. For as soon as manufacturers are convinced that buyers are informed regarding the comparative usefulness of the several paint ingredients and, know that the inquirer is unprejudiced, they will frankly give full information and valuable advice.

Shall not the Lord of all the earth
In everything do right?
Why should I murmur or complain,
Whether he bless or smite?

I see but little of his plans,
And can not know what's best;
I'll claim his precious promises,
And trust him for the rest.

If he should scatter all the hopes
That I have nursed for years,
And spoil my little harvest store
That I have gleaned with tears;

'Twill be because he knoweth best
The things that should abide;
So I'll accept his sovereign will,
Whether he bless or chide.

LETTER FROM "GILDEROY."

It is too hot to write, to read, or to ink hard. Thinking is hard, hot rk when well done. Bishop Cand dug deep and plowed close to the rn at our District Conference at ka. He knows how to get at the lk in the cocoanut. He was overly xious to know everything concern- g the work and the workers. He pt on pumping till he found out. e "chap-logic" method of reaching nclusions was taking, amusing, and nderfully impressive. The points made were clear and as keen as a zor. They were pointed, pungent, netrating prods that went to the re of things. His preaching was riptural, practical, expository, hor- tory, and filled with the power of e Holy Ghost. His sermons were g and strong, and yet I heard no rd of complaint about long ser- ns. The interest rendered the ple insensible of the flight of e. If Bishop Candler preaches erywhere as often, as strong and as g as he did at Iuka, his preaching ys will soon come to an end. No man being, no steam engine, can t long under pressure of that kind. e "keepers of the house will trem- , the strong men bow themselves, wheel will break at the cistern, d so will the pitcher at the fount- ." The Bishop is solidly built, d was put up as if meant to stay , but the heat and hard work will ake the framework of his physical nhood.

In some sections the Mormons and Second-Day Adventists are sow- down the land with papers, tracts d books. The Mormons and the ventists both claim to have special d superior revelations from God. is makes them inspired interpre- of the Bible, and, in special revc- ions, superior to the written Word God. In some sections some achers and some people, full of thusiasm, but lacking in wisdom, im to have inspired interpreta- s of God's Holy Word and special velations from God. The funda- ntal tenet of their system and ching is exactly the same as that the Mormons and Adventists. In way, without knowing it or in- ding it, they are preparing a peo for Mormonism and Second Ad- tism. Both claim a hearing and and a surrender for one and the e reason—special revelations of truths from God, and revealed authoritative interpretations of written Word of God. Beware the leaven of Mormonism and of nd Adventism. New fads in logy are, generally, old errors amped and presented as new hs. For my own part, I shall d on the revealed and written of God as against all new reve- ns and inspired interpretations, ther by Mormons, Adventists, tists, Methodists, Presbyterians, hat not. The underlying princi- is a gross error, subversive of the h of God. The Mormons and the ventists have just as much right ew and better revelations, and to ired interpretations, as have some tists, some Presbyterians, and Methodists. I pitch all books, phlets and tracts into the fire claim to have new revelations inspired interpretations of God's Holy Word. I want no man or woman in my pulpit who claims to be wise above what is written in the Bible, or claims to give an inspired interpretation of God's Holy Book. All such teachers are dangerous, and they are either open or covert enemies of the truth of God. Some of these teachers do not know it, and do not intend it, but they are cleaning up the ground and preparing the land for the seed-sowing of Mormon elders. If I am not mistaken, this matter demands more than a passing notice. It is worthy of very serious consideration.

In some sections the drouth has been long and severe. In other parts the seasons have been favorable, and the crops are fine. GILDEROY.

FAITH IN THE SEED SOWN.

Mrs. Florence Keiser Nance, who, it will be remembered, sailed for China about a year ago, writes an interesting personal letter giving her impressions of that mission field. We take the liberty of publishing the letter in part. Mrs. Nance writes from Shanghai, China:

A novice on a mission field is the better prepared to understand the work if she is without opinions entirely. I fancy most of us meet the Chinese with the feeling of superior beings, to whose ideas of every-day life and manner of social intercourse, as well as words, the inferior must come before he can stand on a plane with us; and that day is an auspicious one when we realize that the one thing we came to them for is to bring the knowledge of Christ. Having this, the veneer of custom which overlies and holds down every desire or ambition in a man for honest, genuine communication of thought or feeling must wear away.

I surprise myself every now and then by discovering in myself a feeling of warmth akin to love for some of these women I had expected to tolerate and make half-sisters of. They are so eager to know—know anything. Their little circumscribed lives so soon become evident to them when they come in contact with women whose opportunities for development are colossal beside their own. One must come face to face with the deformities of paganism to appreciate the graces of Christianity.

One grows impatient with the necessity of spending so much time in "loosening the tongue," so evident is it that the little one may know of the true life may be of inestimable value to the multitude around. This first lesson in patience stands the missionary in good stead—for future trials, I fancy. No matter what the ultimate capacity of a seed may be, nor how much of vitality it may in itself contain, we can not expect phenomenal growth if it is planted in a soil grown barren by years of non-cultivation, or weed-growth. Not only must we wait with patience for the signs of growth, but even after germination and visible signs of future vigor are given, constant care must be given our young plant, lest the old possessors of the soil, firm-rooted and wide-branched, crowd the interloper out of place. If this is true of a seed, it is just as true of the tiny particles of Christian truth which the servants of God are striving to plant in this great rank wilderness of weeds. One must have faith in the quality of seed sown, and be not lacking in vigorous attention to the infant plant.

I was talking with Bishop Wilson, soon after my arrival in China, full of disappointment at the seeming meager results of the work so faithfully done. His reply made me ashamed of myself and my narrow view. "You should see what the results of twenty years of such labor has been. I never felt so strongly encouraged to press on." And since then I have found out that those who know the work best are also those in whose hearts failure or discouragement seem to have no place.

You know of the recent meeting of the Educational Association in Shanghai, and have, doubtless, received a report of the proceedings. Those engaged in educational work find great pleasure and no little benefit in these triennial gatherings. What struck me especially was the fact that church differences seem of such minor importance in this essentially Christian organization. In this respect I was reminded of the Student Volunteer meetings.

Following closely this assembly was the Y. M. C. A. Convention—a three days' session held in the Anglo-Chinese College. As a power for good this body of young men is beginning to tell in China. Young life out here, as at home, is, or can be, full of eager, earnest enthusiasm.

In fact, when once one's eyes are opened, it is easy to find compensations enough for so-called "sacrifice" of self and ambition to work in China, and I am glad to be numbered among those who are willing and happy to spend a life in such service in the Orient.

"4—ADDITIONAL ECHOES."

Carrollton reports two more dollars, received from a gentleman and his wife now residing beyond the limits of Mississippi. To a circular letter they responded cheerfully. Rev. J. S. Oakley, P. E., reports thirty-six and 25-100 dollars from Durant. Rev. R. A. Burroughs, P. E., writes enthusiastically of the success of the rally at the Columbus District Conference. "Dr. Sullivan preached a great sermon. Plans are well laid for raising the full amount, four thousand six hundred and sixty-eight dollars. I believe all of it will be provided for by the meeting of Annual Conference." Rev. A. F. Watkins observed Twentieth Century Education Day at Vicksburg, using the programs furnished. He writes: "Amount received, one hundred twenty-one and 50-100 dollars. Of course, this is only the beginning of my effort. My plan is to continue the work by dividing my roll into ten smaller rolls of from forty-five to fifty names each; give these to my most active and intelligent Leaguers, and ask them to work up the lists for all they are worth. I feel confident of the success of the movement here."

Of course! That degree of faith, and that wise plan faithfully carried out, will succeed anywhere. Vicksburg is now engaged in building a twenty-thousand-dollar church. Let other Mississippi cities and towns take note of this. Let all pastors take note of the methods used by Bro. Watkins. He belongs to the "first class" described by Dr. Pritchett. I urge every preacher to read Dr. Pritchett's letter, and note his earnest words and wise suggestions. May his heroic faith and enthusiastic zeal become contagious! If any Mississippi preachers are in "class two" or "class three," let them at once secure a "transfer" to "class one."

More than one hundred preachers have not reported to me. Will they not do so?

We must prepare for a "Twentieth Century Education Rally" at our Annual Conference sessions next Fall. If any charge fail to report, we will lack that much of being prepared.

J. R. BINGHAM.

Carrollton, Miss., July 17, 1899.

CORINTH DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Corinth District Conference met in the Methodist Church at Iuka, Miss., June 29, 1899. Bishop W. A. Candler presided. All the pastors were present except Bro. Foust, who was kept away by sickness. About forty lay delegates were present. The presiding elder, Rev. T. Y. Ramsey, reported the district to be strong in resources, though these resources are largely undeveloped. There are eighteen charges and over seven thousand members, yet more than half the charges receive appropriations from the Board of Missions, and the finances are badly behind. The Bishop inquired closely into these conditions, and none present will ever forget how he expressed himself as to the cause. Bro. Ramsey has met the issue squarely as it is, and is urging the pastors to preach the fundamental doctrines of the church. If his sound advice is faithfully carried out, and if the laymen will co-operate, the district will soon be in better condition.

The report on spiritual conditions revealed the fact that there had been only sixteen conversions so far during the year; that many of our people are unconcerned about the church, and that a very low spiritual standard exists all over the district.

Bishop Candler preached four times, and his sermons were just such as might be expected from him. As a great preacher, his superior can not be found, and his greatness is in spiritual power.

Rev. G. W. Bachman was present with a choice line of books, faithfully looking after the work committed to him.

Rev. M. L. Burton, manager of the Orphans' Home, was present; preached and secured a handsome sum for that institution.

Rev. W. M. McIntosh, the newly-elected president of Grenada Female College, made a fine impression on the Conference. He is very popular in this section, and no man in our Conference could have been called to take charge of this growing school who will add more to it than he. Our preachers and people may be relied upon to stand by Grenada.

Bro. Shumaker and his good people entertained us in regular Iuka fashion, and that means more than any adjectives can describe.

The next session goes to Booneville. J. M. BRADLEY, Sec.

Booneville, Miss.

COLUMBUS DISTRICT.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON TEMPERANCE.

We are as much as ever convinced of the ensing and blighting influence of the saloon, and of the great duty of our church which stands as the ever-vigilant sentinel of all those issues which shape the destiny of our State and make for the salvation of our people. We congratulate the brethren on the fact that up to this time our church has given forth no uncertain sound in this section of our country; but wherever the red flag of the saloon has flown in this district it has been hauled down, and the banners of Christian temperance raised in its stead. Who will haul it down? No open saloon in Columbus district, and a growing sentiment against it; and not only in this district, but all over the State, slowly, but surely, the enemy has been forced to yield, until only a few strongholds are left, and they are tottering.

But while we have these things for congratulation and thanksgiving, we would call attention to the fact that the fight is not done. As the century draws to a close the enemy is rallying his forces for our final struggle. Already the attack has begun in Hinds county, where is located our beloved institution of learning, Millsaps College. It is true that the enemy has been twice repulsed in their petitions by the narrow margins of three and nine, but they have not given up the fight. On all sides they are marshaling the base, the godless, the lawless; they are using the political conventions; they are leaving no stone unturned. Bishop Galloway and the good people of Jackson are doing all they can, but we must arouse to the sense of the danger of our college, and in token of the fact that we recognize that the fight is not with Jackson alone, but with every Christian citizen of the State, that we are thoroughly aroused, and that our interest is now centered upon them; and be it

Resolved, That we, in District Conference assembled, do express our heartfelt appreciation for the heroic work that is being done, and our willingness to aid by our influence, by our voices, and by our prayers.

Resolved, That we do not relax our vigilance in our own district, but redouble it, so that we may clear the harbor for the twentieth century without a gallon of whisky on board. May God help us and bless us in this work!

M. E. TUMLIN,
R. E. V. YEATES,
J. B. MITCHELL.

BATON ROUGE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Baton Rouge District Conference of the M. E. Church, South, met in the Methodist Church in Zachary, La., July 5-9, 1899. The Conference was presided over by Rev. R. W. Tucker, presiding elder of the district, who will this year close a four years' term on this district, during which time he has greatly endeared himself to the preachers and laymen of the district.

The session of the Baton Rouge District Conference, which closed Sunday, July 9, was one of deep interest, perfect harmony, and great spiritual power. The attendance of the citizens of Zachary and the surrounding country upon the sessions of the Conference and the preaching services was inspiring to the Conference and to those of us who had the pleasure of preaching to them.

All the preachers of the district were present except one, with a fair attendance of local preachers and lay delegates. The preaching was of the highest order, such as is heard from Methodist preachers baptized with the Holy Spirit, filled with a consuming desire for the welfare of Zion and a burning love for the souls of men.

The Missionary Institute, which was held in connection with the Conference, was a decided success, and the speeches made and papers read were full of thought, fire, and truth, calculated to beget missionary enthusiasm and put new life into the missionary work of the district.

Rev. I. W. Cooper, D. D., president of Centenary College, was with us part of the time, preaching twice to the delight and benefit of all who heard him. Under the wise and able leadership of Dr. Cooper, backed up by the hearty co-operation of the preachers of the Louisiana Conference, the success of Centenary is assured.

One young man, L. H. Walker, who is a student at Centenary College, was licensed to preach.

Rev. D. E. Kelley was recommended for admission on trial and for deacon's orders.

Rev. J. L. McManus, J. A. Tillery, T. D. Lipscomb and Newton Felder were elected delegates to the Annual Conference.

St. Francisville was selected as the place for holding the next session of the District Conference.

This account of the Baton Rouge District Conference would be incomplete without some kindly mention of the Conference host, Rev. T. J. Upton. To him, in large measure, is due the pleasantness of our late session. He is this year finishing a four years' pastorate at Zachary, having won and retained the love and respect of all classes.

RESOLUTIONS.

MR. EDITOR: I send you for publication a short account of the Baton Rouge District Conference; also accompanying resolutions, which were, by a unanimous vote of the Conference, ordered published in the ADVOCATE:

Whereas, By limitation of the law of the church this year will close the present period of service of the presiding elder of this district; therefore, be it

Resolved, By this District Conference, that we recognize in Rev. R. W. Tucker a faithful, diligent, self-denying, successful presiding elder.

Resolved, We appreciate his zeal and devotion to our Lord and Master, and the demonstration he has made among us of his fidelity to every interest of our beloved Methodism. He has been a pain staking and wise administrator, and the church has prospered under his care.

Resolved, That we pray that the blessings of our Father in heaven rest on him, his family, and his work.

(Signed) N. J. ROBERTS,
C. C. MILLER,
F. S. PARKER.

And then:

Whereas, At the last General Conference of the M. E. Church, South, which was held at Baltimore, Md., an act was passed to establish, or adopt, and to correlate into one system church schools; which shall be linked and united in the Christian education of the boys and girls of our Southland; And, whereas, At the session of the Baton Rouge District Conference, which was held in Greensburg, La., in May, 1896, the Johnston Collegiate Institute was adopted as a church school, and that said action of said District Conference was ratified at the session of the Louisiana Annual Conference which was held in Ruston, La., in December, 1896; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, the members of the Baton Rouge District Conference, do hereby recommend to the Louisiana Annual Conference at its next session that the Johnston Collegiate Institute be recognized as a prospective church school, and that it be adopted and correlated as such whenever its debts are paid, and transferred by title to the M. E. Church, South.

Resolved, That we heartily endorse the action of the Board of Trustees of the Johnston Collegiate Institute in their election of Rev. Paul M. Brown, of the Louisiana Conference, to the presidency of the school, and we do hereby recommend it to patrons as a high-grade school, the object of which is to prepare pupils for our colleges and universities.

COLUMBUS DISTRICT, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Whereas, In the economy of Methodism the administration of our presiding elder, Rev. R. A. Burroughs, will terminate with this Conference year; And, whereas, By the wise, patient and laborious discharge of the grave responsibilities of the office he has endeared himself to the ministers and laymen of his church, as well as to the entire citizenship of our district, it is, therefore, by this District Conference,

Resolved, That we fully appreciate our dear brother for his labor in our midst, for his fearless discharge of duty under all circumstances, for his uncompromising loyalty to God and the church; and that while we deeply regret that he can no longer serve us as presiding elder, bowing submissively to the powers that be, we trust that it may be the wisdom of our Bishops to continue him in this capacity in another field.

Resolved, We do thank God for sending Bro. Burroughs among us, and, with united hearts, invoke Heaven's choicest blessings upon him and his dear family; and in whatever fields of duty he may be called to labor, may he feel that the hand of God is guiding him to a life of yet greater usefulness.

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread upon the minutes and a copy of same sent to NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE for publication.

MEN.

BY J. G. HOLLAND.

God give us men! A time like this demands
Strong minds, great hearts, true faith and ready hands;
Men whom the lust of office does not kill;
Men whom the spoils of office can not buy;
Men who possess opinions and will;
Men who have honor; men who will not lie
Men who can stand before a demagogue
And scorn his treacherous flatteries without winking—
Tall men, sun crowned, who live above the fog
In public duty and in private thinking.

WHAT IS NECESSARY TO MAKE A SUCCESSFUL PASTOR?

BY REV. Q. A. OATS.

Of all men, the pastor should know and master himself, because there is more involved in the consequences of his conduct than with men of any other class. He should carefully consider his weak and deficient points, and give them the cultivation they need. He should not so pride himself in the stronger and more efficient as to suppose they will make up for all lack in others. He should strive to be a well-rounded character, and symmetrical in all the parts. Everyone is in danger of abnormal development in one respect, while there may be abnormal depletion in another. One may find that he possesses a genius for association and making friends, and he may be deceived by thinking that this will make up for deficiency in study and strong preaching, for which he may not feel a natural adaptation, and can not accomplish them without much distasteful labor, and will, therefore, give all he can to social work; another may have no taste for social work, and but little adaptation, while he loves his study, and delights in the preparation and delivery of masterly discourses, and this may lead him to undervalue his social obligations, while he prides himself in his superior mental work, and concludes that it should over balance his lack in social work. The one of these brethren needs to cultivate on the mental side of his nature, leaving the social side to take care of itself, and the other needs to cultivate social powers and efficiency, leaving his study to his natural inclinations. This thought will apply in many other respects to natural inclinations and disinclinations of the pastor.

Many preachers, by following an unwise course of self-cultivation, become deformed and repulsive to the public they seek to win and influence. The very things they pride themselves in and give their special attention is made their ruin. Some preachers cultivate an idea of doctrine, or moral question, or plan of work, till they become hobbyists. To become a hobbyist is to be a failure; therefore, let us avoid being hobbyists. The hobbyist usually becomes so extreme in one thing as to be unfitted for all others, and loses his influence for any good on the line of his hobby by disgusting and driving the people from him, it differs not how important it may be, and he usually blocks the way for others to deal with it. I have known some men to make a hobby of temperance till they could not preach about anything else, and would preach a rabid temperance sermon in any place and any hour, though there might not be an intemperate individual in the whole section of country. I have known others that would preach on baptism, though there might not be anybody in miles who disagreed with their views.

Some pastors become chronic church builders, and they must build wherever they go, or they have nothing to do. I have heard of some who had to build, though they had to divide a membership of only fifty and build only a mile away, or they would have a new church pulled down to remodel on a different plan. Build they must, because they have lost all conception of other needs, and have lost all ability to do anything else. These are extreme presentations, but they clearly point out a real danger.

The pastor should never conclude himself specially and peculiarly adapted to one thing or one line of work, and specially unadapted for others, and, therefore, decide that he may excuse himself from making an effort to cultivate in himself the things that are lacking, and form efforts to succeed in the unpleasant and laborious duties. The more he realizes the lack, the more heroic and determined should be the efforts to succeed. It must be admitted that no man can do all things equally well and with equal facility, and we shall always find ground to exercise a charitable judgment toward men for unavoidable deficiencies, and to excuse them, but this does not justify their self-excusing. This thing of liberally excusing ourselves is one of the most dangerous and ruinous evils. The pastor should feel called upon to do the work needed, let the effort and sacrifice cost him what they may. Be instant in season and out of season.

While it is the duty of the pastor to cultivate social qualities, and to be pleasant and kind to everybody, he should have a care not to lower the dignity of a true gentleman or the highest standard of Christian character in such efforts. To be guilty of such a course will defeat the end aimed at, and destroy the confidence of the people in his religion, to say nothing of the effects on his own soul. In a recent conversation with an intelligent, but unconverted young man, who was in the late volunteer service, he spoke of the conduct of some of the chaplains, saying that the chaplain of his regiment was a most companionable fellow, and was exceedingly liked by all the boys. He said he would joke, swap stories, smoke, play checkers, roll billiards, and sometimes take a toddy with the boys, and was an all-round jolly good fellow, but that they had no faith in his religion. This lack of confidence had a serious illustration: One of the boys was very sick in the hospital, and told his doctor that he wanted the services of a minister of the gospel. The doctor told him he would send his chaplain, but he replied: "I do not want him. I like him as a friend and companion, but I want a man now that I believe has got religion." Could any comment on a gospel minister have been sadder?

It is a truth that pastors are tempted to cultivate personal popularity at the expense of the confidence and respect of those of whom they seek it. They are usually rewarded with a sort of cheap temporary popularity that may sometimes bring them compliments, valuable gifts, and may be a strong petition to the Bishop to return them to their charges. This popularity usually fades, and in the process of soberer thinking turns to contempt. If the pastor is forced to choose between popularity and the respect and confidence of the people, which sometimes occurs, he should choose the course securing the respect first, last, and all the time, and at any cost and sacrifice.

The pastor should be ready to rebuke sin in private and in public, and he should do it in plain terms. He should not fail to declare the whole counsel of God as he finds it both in the law and the gospel. No doubt there is too much tendency to treat sin as a trivial matter, and to hide its hideousness, and to make religion an easy affair, and preachers need to guard against the temptation; yet there is a danger on the opposite extreme that many fall into. It is to indulge coarseness and splenetic vituperation. It seems that some preachers have been seduced into attempting to manufacture a cheap reputation for candor and bravery by using their pulpits for such coarse and ungentlemanly conduct. There is nothing more cowardly than to fall behind the deep respect and reverence people hold for the pulpit to say things that could not dare be said anywhere else. It is an evil that may easily befall any preacher before he is aware of it. Such a course will soon destroy all respect for the ministerial calling, and make it an object of contempt.

The pastor should never be intentionally personal in his public discourses, especially when, by so doing, he may make the subject of it a conspicuous object of attention. This fault requires being closely guarded against. The way to deal with parties guilty of vicious and unconscious sins is always in private, and should always be done in the spirit and manner of love. It will seldom happen in such cases that reproof will fail to be kindly received, and in most cases will bear good fruit. I have known a pastor to be troubled with a number of young people afflicted with the ball-room mania who would make them a subject of special attention in every discourse. This was giving them much more attention than they deserved, and in most cases made them worse, and the pastor lost all influence over them. It would have been far better to have dealt privately with them. It usually does little good, and often much harm, to constantly harp any one theme, or against any one evil.

COLUMBUS DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The twenty-ninth session convened at Phebe, Miss., July 4, 1899.

The first day was devoted to education and Twentieth Century Fund. Many strong speeches were made, and Dr. W. T. J. Sullivan preached at night, emphasizing education to the delight and instruction of his hearers.

The business of the Conference was taken up on the morning of the fifth, with our popular presiding elder, R. A. Burroughs, presiding. (I use the word "popular" advisedly, as words of regret were to be heard on all sides that under the Discipline he could not be with us longer, and a strong resolution expressing regret and recounting many good services he had rendered the district was passed.)

Reports show the district to be well to the front in all its departments of work. Spiritual condition good. Most of the charges show an increase of members. Temperance cause, Sabbath observance and educational interests strongly emphasized.

Fourteen of the fifteen preachers engaged on the work, Revs. W. A. Rainey and A. P. Leech, and the largest lay representation we have had in years, were present.

Rev. G. W. Bachman, our working colporteur, and Revs. R. T. Nolan and J. W. Roper favored us with their presence.

The good people of all denominations of Phebe entertained the Conference to its entire satisfaction and to their credit.

It is unnecessary for me to say that we had good preaching when I tell you Revs. S. M. Thames, M. E. Tumlin, M. L. Burton, J. A. Bowen and E. S. Lewis did it.

Delegates to Annual Conference: J. T. Senter, W. V. Connell, E. N. Yeates, and S. C. Frazier. Alternates: E. C. Leech and T. J. Mitchell.

The Conference will meet at Brooksville next year.

Mr. Editor and Sisters of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Mississippi Conference:

I feel constrained to write and tell you something of the proceedings of the twentieth annual session of the W. F. M. S., Mississippi Conference, which convened in the progressive little city of Hattiesburg, June 24-28. The attendance was not what we wanted, but surpassed our expectation. Our prayer is, that the Seashore district will derive as much benefit from our meeting as they gave us pleasures and blessings. The hospitality of those Christian people was unbounded, and surely not one delegate present but felt and realized in her soul, "Tis the old-time religion that makes us love one another."

The Conference, as a body, and the recording secretary, in particular, missed the inspiration of the presence of our beloved sisters: Sudie H. Parker, E. D. Jones, and Addie Purnell. This is the first Conference the secretary has attended at which these dear sisters were not present; but when she remembered that their prayers for her would ascend to the throne of divine grace, she felt "strong in the Lord."

Saturday evening we held a consecration service, and Sunday morning we listened to one of Bro. B. F. Jones' best sermons. We know it was one of his best, because all those dear people gave us the very best they had, and Bro. Jones was certainly no exception. Time and space forbid my giving a synopsis of this grand sermon preached from Isaiah xiii, 4. How we wished the rain had not prevented the whole of Hattiesburg hearing that sermon.

Twice within six months have Bro. and Sister B. F. Jones been the host and hostess of the W. F. M. Conference, and so royally have they performed their duties that we felt it a great temptation to accept the invitation to be their guest again next year.

On Sunday afternoon we held a memorial service in memory of our beloved sister, Kate M. Watts, of Meridian, and of Sister Beall, of Moss Point. Sister Drake, of Bay St. Louis, conducted this meeting. Suitable papers and resolutions were read, and the touch of "sorrow (nature) makes the whole world kin" was manifest in this meeting; yes, the presence of the Lord was in our midst.

Sunday evening—ah! this was "Welcome Evening"—and surely nobody ever received such greetings as were voiced by Mrs. Drake, secretary Seashore district; Miss Thrash, Miss Bostwick, Miss Self, and our own Bro. Jones. On behalf of the Conference, Mrs. W. H. Jones, of Vicksburg, responded in a gracious and appreciative manner.

Monday morning the president called for the reports from auxiliaries. Mrs. Reese Price, president of that wide-awake Enterprise Auxiliary, made a fine record. She reported that Mrs. Sue Taylor, widow of the late Capt. S. T. Taylor, so well known to all Mississippi and Alabama Methodists, had taken through the Enterprise Auxiliary a scholarship in a day-school in Sung-kiang, China, to be known as the "Sue Taylor Scholarship." Our lamented Sister Beall, of Moss Point, left a beautiful ring to the Moss Point Auxiliary, to be sold, and the proceeds used as that auxiliary might direct. They decided to take a scholarship in the day-school at Saltillo, Mexico, the same to be known as the "Eliza Wood Beall Scholarship."

Bros. Drake, Meadow and Simmons, of the Mississippi Conference, were with us. Not soon will this body forget Bro. Drake, who knows so well how to say nice things, and is not chary in saying them.

Monday evening Miss Addie Marshall, our president, made her annual address, which was good, and showed she had kept well up with the work, and while she was not satisfied with the results, we were all inspired to renew our efforts and to pray for better returns another year. Miss Sallie Smylie, the corresponding secretary, made a very good report of the year's work, and of the Woman's Board of Foreign Missions. Little Miss Evie Rivers, of Meridian, delighted the audience with a beautiful recitation. Miss Mary Andrews, our faithful treasurer, made her annual report. Mrs. W. H. Jones contributed one of her beautiful recitations to the pleasure of the evening. Miss Henstise, of Mobile, sang sweetly that dear, familiar hymn, "Abide with me." What a privilege it is to honor the Lord with our talents!

Tuesday morning was also given to reports from auxiliaries and district secretaries, and this work being finished before the hour for adjournment, we proceeded to elect officers for the next year. The result of the election was as follows: President, Miss. Addie Marshall, of Brookhaven; vice-president, Mrs. A. A. Foote, of Hattiesburg; corresponding secretary, Miss Sallie Smylie; recording secretary, Mrs. Chas. R. McQueen; treasurer, Miss Mary Andrews; auditor, Mrs. Jas. A. Gulley. District secretaries: Vicksburg district, Miss Scott Phillips; Seashore district, Mrs. J. P. Drake; Forest district, Mrs. T. L. Mellen; Jackson district, Mrs. W. L. Fryant; Natchez district, Mrs. Jno. A. Guice; Brookhaven district, Mrs. H. Walter Featherstun; Meridian district, Mrs. D. E. Phillips.

Tuesday evening brought to full fruition the hopes, the prayers and the loving labor of five long years of work in behalf of one of God's handmaidens, who, in her quiet country home, heard the voice of need from the foreign land, and, with "full purpose and endeavor," said, "Here am I; send me," and offered herself to the fostering care of the W. F. M. S. of the Mississippi Conference. Being accepted by them, she went on her way to college, winning everywhere the loving respect of schoolmates and teachers, all of whom count it their gain to have known Lelia McNemar. The blessings of God have been upon her health and upon her study, and she comes to the work with all the natural sweetness of a Southern girl, deepened and strengthened by the spirituality that speaks through the earnest eyes and the loving smile that lights the pure face as she tells of her preparation for her life-work, and thanks the friends who have been God's instruments in helping her to the end so long loved and wished for.

Our Bro. Drake, in beautifully choice words, presented to the Conference our missionary-elect, Miss Leila McNemar, of Edwards, Miss. In her modest way she expressed her appreciation of all that had been done for her, and saying that "she knew the value of the clouds as well as of the sunshine that had come into her life."

As she concluded, Miss Marshall asked the audience to come up and give Miss McNemar "a handshake and a God-bless-you." The response was unanimous, and few were the eyes that were dry as they looked upon this consecrated young woman who had so unswervingly held on her way to the end she had in view for the glory of the Lord. She wished always only to be allowed to work for the Master, leaving the choice of the field to those who knew best about such things, echoing in her heart and practicing in her life the sentiment of the song so beautifully sung by Miss Genevieve Cochrane, "I'll go where, go where, you want me to go, dear Lord."

Wednesday morning the reports from the committees were called for. This finished the business of the Conference.

The grand social feature of the Conference was a reception at the palatial home of Bro. Jno. A. McLeod, a broad-shouldered, six-foot Methodist, whose heart and pocket-book are proportionate with his size. (Ah! Bro. Black, I could tell you more about this reception than I dare write.)

Mr. Hall, the mayor of the city, addressed the ladies most felicitously.

Little Miss George and other dear little maidens captivated all hearts with their recitations.

Our thanks are due Bros. and Sisters Jones, Tatum, McLeod, Foote, Warren, Turner, Hawkins, Carter, and others, for a most happy session of the Conference. We can only say, Thank you, and God bless you.

MOLLIE MCQUEEN,

To the Members of the W. F. M. S. of the North Mississippi Conference—Greeting—

DEAR SISTERS: Since, by your choice and not my own volition, I occupy the place of editor for your body, it seems mete to crave your assistance; hence I take this time and method to earnestly request your help. Write me bits of personal experience in this work for the Master; items of intelligence bearing on the subject gleaned from other sources—in a word, anything that will serve to interest our women and stimulate them to greater vigor in service that should evoke the best that is in our lives, namely: the taking of the world for Christ. In "union is strength," and in the lack of it, the converse of times, if not invariably, proves true; therefore, my sisters, officers and members, I ask your co-operation, for with it we may hope for the success of the column so kindly granted us by our ADVOCATE, and without it we may reasonably expect only failure. Give the help of your pens, at the same time praying that its contents may be blessed in the strengthening of many who are weak, and arousing many who are now indifferent.

My own weakness in this new duty is plainly felt, but by the prayerful aid of my sisters the column may be so conducted that you will not feel ashamed to see at its head the name of

MRS. J. F. EVANS,
Valden, Miss., Editor.

NOTICE.

To Ladies of North Mississippi Conference:

I desire to state that the Minutes of the annual meeting of the W. F. M. Society of the North Mississippi Conference have been in the hands of the publisher for the past three weeks, and circumstances unforeseen have retarded the work. I thought to have the Minutes out by July 1, and sincerely regret this delay, which was unavoidable. We will have the Minutes ready to send out in about one week. I have done all in my power, but the printers could not possibly hurry the work more.

Asking your patient indulgence, also your pardon, for thus keeping you waiting, I am,

Truly, MISS ELLA GRIDER,
Sec. W. F. M. S.

Home Mission Society.

EDITORS.

Mrs. W. H. Wall, of North Miss. Conference
Conference Officers of Mississippi Conference
Mrs. E. R. Kennedy, of Louisiana Conference

Dear Sisters of the Home Mission Society of the North Mississippi Conference:

In taking up the work where our dear friend, Mrs. Featherstun, laid it down, I naturally find myself confronted by many difficulties. Hence, in the very beginning, I would beg your kind indulgence and sympathy, and your prayers, that the work may not cease to prosper, even as in former years.

There are several matters to which I would call your attention, the first of which is, that North Mississippi is placed at very great disadvantage by your failure to report what you are doing. Our annual report, as contained in the June number of Our Homes, is imperfect in the highest degree, while I compiled it just the best I could from the data sent me by the district secretaries. Nor can I censure this faithful band for the failure. The trouble lies beyond—in the auxiliaries themselves. You can not answer the questions properly unless you use the Wolff Record Books. These have been carefully prepared, and certainly the price asked for them brings them in reach of all. Please let us bring about a reform right here. Let every auxiliary corresponding secretary and treasurer who has not one of these books order one at once from Mrs. R. K. Hargrove. Study the questions, and by Sept. 1 you will be ready to send in reports that, from their minuteness, shall gladden the hearts of your district secretaries, and show exactly how you stand. Do not hesitate because your society may not have done well, and you feel discouraged about it. Perhaps, when we learn all about it, we may be able to help you. So be sure to send in your reports.

Then, as to our organ, Our Homes. How could fifty cents be more judiciously expended than in a year's subscription to this paper? You can not fail to become interested in this work if you read Our Homes every month. Could you only meet its sweet-spirited editor, you would at once give her a warm place in your heart. See that you have a whole-souled, energetic agent in your auxiliary, and that she watches every subscription and seeks for its renewal, so that not one may be lost, and at the same time secures as many new ones as possible. At the recent meeting of the Board in Dallas the paper was made entirely dependent upon its subscription list to meet all expenses. Read what the editor has to say in June Our Homes. Our president pledged us for fifty new subscribers. How many of these can your society furnish? Only one hundred and thirty-five in our entire Conference! Notwithstanding the heat, let us see what we can do for it during this quarter. If there are any complaints of irregularity in receiving the paper, investigate them fully, and have the fault removed. Remember, if one paper at an office is received, all should be, as they are all sent in a single package.

Lastly, I wish to mention the action of our H. M. Board in reference to the Twentieth Century Fund for education, and beg to refer you once again to the June Our Homes for a full explanation of what was done. (You see how indispensable that paper is to a complete understanding of our work!) The women of North Mississippi must not lag in this forward movement, but, stimulated by the suggestions of our leaders, go bravely forward. Our part of the $10,000 must be raised. Who will be first to send in a contribution?

Praying the richest blessing of the Father upon each one of you, I am,

Yours faithfully,

MRS. J. B. STONE,

MORE CHILDREN'S DAY REPORTS.

I have to-day (July 11) received from Rev. W. T. Griffin the following list of Sunday-schools that have reported to him since June 22 to July 8. This does not include those that may have reported to Thomas Monnt, treasurer of Board. Bro. Monnt early in the year moved from Vicksburg to New Orleans, where he remained for some time. Some time ago he went to Nashville, where he has since resided. Because of his unsettled condition, instructions were published in the ADVOCATE for all Sunday-schools to send Children's Day money to W. T. Griffin, in order to prevent confusion. I am sorry that some of the brethren have not observed these instructions. Of course, the money sent to Bro. Monnt will come up all right in the end; but to prevent confusion for the present, we thought best to have money sent to Bro. Griffin. Brethren, please observe these instructions. His address is Mayersville, Miss. Send your Children's Day money to him at once. The time for receiving reports to go in the Year Book has been extended from July 20 to 27. All schools reporting to Bro. Griffin after that day will be too late to be credited in the Year Book, but will be duly acknowledged through the ADVOCATE. A report from Bro. Monnt will be secured in time for a list of all the schools sending money to him, to appear in our annual report, which will be published in the Year Book. This is the second report from Bro. Griffin.

AN AUTOBIOGRAPHY.

BY A. PARSONAGE.

I was born in the State of Mississippi, United States of America, some time since the Flood. I have forgotten just how old I really am; but, suffice it to say, I am something less than four thousand years old. As to my ancestry, I never had any. I was the first of my tribe.

I realize to-day as I have never realized before that I have been a disgrace to civilization and enlightened Christianity—not of my own choosing, however. During all my long existence (for I can not be said to be alive and healthy) I have made loud profession through my guardians to give protection and comfort; but I have been a constant disappointment to my friends. The truth of the matter is, my friends have been few, my only ardent supporters have been those who were dependent on my shelter, and several of these have "loved" me so fondly as to severely "chasten" me. Such abuse and the long neglect by those who profess to have my interests at heart have rendered me uninhabitable to those of pride and respectability.

My feet and limbs are either diseased or broken, my body is feeble and full of germs, my head is hoary, my hat is full of holes, my eyes are sunken in their sockets, my spectacles are broken, and the waters of time are fast undermining my very foundation. My face was never powdered, and my whole complexion is dingy and rusty. I have heard talk about paints and brush, but I have never seen them.

One of the greatest reproaches is my size. I have not grown one cubit since the long-ago day of my birth. The only compartment I possess of comfortable dimensions, and in which there is a fire-place, is combined from year to year into sleeping department, company room and pastor's study. This engenders untold inconveniences to both pastor and family.

On opening my doors for successive years preachers have found no possessed with or absent of the following furniture: (I could tell by their looks that they were used to comfort and better things, but it was the best I could offer them. The preacher and his family would suffer had they not brought with them a few household effects.) One old rickety writing-table and one wash-stand, both home-made out of rough dry-goods boxes; kitchen and dining-room tables home-made, and out of the same material; two rusty wash-pans, "more holy than righteous;" no bowl and pitcher; four knives and forks, old enough to have carved "Job's turkey," and bought at fifty cents a dozen; four broken or cracked cups and saucers, two rusty iron tablespoons, three dishes, four teaspoons, etc. (It is a source of much amusement to me, as well as sorrow, to watch the pastor's wife when company comes.) Six dining room chairs with bottoms out or falling to pieces. These are the only chairs I possess, and they are carried every day from "sitting-room" to kitchen, from kitchen to dining-room, from dining-room to sitting-room, and from sitting-room to gallery, and from gallery to bed-rooms.

The pastor comes in after several days' visiting and preaching weary and exhausted, and the wife loans him the only rocking-chair, to rest (which is falling to pieces), and in which she nurses the little ones. One bedstead is up to date, but the other two show scars of many a hard-fought battle. My cooking-stove, burcan, etc., answer the purpose, but on opening my doors the pastor finds me destitute of many conveniences. The garden fence, fowl-house, stable, etc., on my premises are rottening and falling to pieces; but those in whose charge I am never speak of making new ones.

I exist in a territory in which there are many well-to-do members of the church and in a town worth hundreds of thousands of dollars. In fact, the pastor to whom I am now giving shelter preaches to five hundred Methodists, many of whom make loud profession to sanctity. With few exceptions, they all live in good houses and comfortably supplied with furniture. My custodians have been often informed of my needs, but they pass me by with few words of sympathy and no material expression of friendship.

"At this poor," neglected "rate" I can exist but a few more years at best. I always feel sorry for the pastor and family who come depending upon the comfort and conveniences which I am unable to give. I overheard a conversation recently, in which I learned that the pastor asked at the Quarterly Conference for an increase in salary, so as to personally supply my defects; but one of the stewards objected to raising the salary above four hundred dollars for fear "he would be preaching for money." It pains me greatly in my old age to know that the pastor is neglected as well as myself. If he has a good home, he can better suffer a shortage in salary; or if he gets a good support, he can supplement the defects at the parsonage. In some way I have learned that where members neglect the comforts of the parsonage, they neglect the preacher, too, and their profession to sanctity is spurious. And I regret that my warders are so far behind the times as to expect the Conference to send them a "good preacher" from year to year, when they are negligent both of his home and support. Selah!

SUNDAY TRAINS.

Now is the time to accomplish effective work to bring about prohibiting the running of freight trains on Sunday, and the working of men in railroad shops and yards all day Sunday.

At the last session of the Legislature there was an act before the House to prohibit the running of freight trains on Sunday, which was defeated by only three votes, and there was very little agitation of the subject beforehand. A new Legislature is to be elected this year, and every Methodist preacher should interview every candidate for representative and senator in order to ascertain his views upon the subject, and urge all his voting members to do the same, so they will know for whom to vote, and send men to the Legislature who will be in favor of this reform. If they can not be seen personally, then address them a letter, and urge this reform upon them.

FROM BRO. KILGORE.

MR. EDITOR: As I have received many inquiries as to the condition of my wife's health, I will say that her condition seems somewhat improved: still she is yet confined to her bed most of the time, as she has been for nearly seventeen weeks. Much of this time she has been quite low, and several times her physicians have given her up entirely; still she has survived, and we can not tell how long she may yet be spared to us. Will the readers of the ADVOCATE please pray that she may finally recover?

I have not been able to leave home to do any work at all since March, and have only engaged in one meeting during the entire year. This has all been a very great affliction to me, but God's grace has so far sustained me, and I will still trust in him.

Fraternally, E. G. KILGORE.

Egypt, Miss., July 11, 1899.

The religion of Christ is not a dismal thing. There is nothing that so lessens life's burdens and fears. It offers infinite peace and comfort and hope. It finds the sorrowful and dries their tears. It whispers truest consolations into the ears of the suffering. It teaches men glad endurance and inspires them with cheerful courage. Do you know the blessedness of being right with God? You can not unless you have been to Christ's cross. Do you experience the rapture of Christian service? It is impossible unless you are busy in his vineyard. Seek to gladden and strengthen the early years of the children, do your best to relieve someone's heavy burden, help some poor fellow to a better life, and you shall discover the most rare and exquisite gladness, you shall learn what the very joy of heaven is like. It is very significant that in St. Paul's list of the fruits of the spirit, while the first place is given to love, joy stands second. When a man has been forgiven and restored, he finds the only perfect and abiding joy that can be found on earth. Brought up out of the horrible pit, out of the miry clay, his feet set upon the rock, his goings established, he learns the new glad song of praise unto God.—Rev. G. E. Young.

I have now disposed of all my property to my family. There is one thing more I wish I could give them, and that is Christian religion. If they had that, and I had not given them one shilling, they would have been rich; and if they had not that, and I had given them all the world, they would be poor.—Patrick Henry's will.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. C. C. Griffin, P. C., July 12, 1899: "We have just closed a very fine meeting at Galloway, assisted by Bro. N. J. Roberts, of the Louisiana Conference. Results: seven additions to the church, four infants baptized, church greatly revived. Bro. Roberts is a plain, practical and forcible preacher."

Rev. W. G. Backus, P. C., Meridian, July 8, 1899: "Last Friday night we closed a glorious meeting at Poplar Springs—one of my churches. The whole church greatly revived, backsliders were reclaimed and fully fifteen were converted; eleven accessions to our church and several to other churches. Some of these were young men and women of considerable promise to the church. The Sunday-school, Epworth League and prayer meeting, as a result of this meeting, are taking on new life. Glory to God for the victory! Bro. C. M. Crossley did the preaching, and his work was thorough and honored of the Holy Spirit."

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Enpora, July 8, 1899: "We have just closed a successful meeting at Enpora. We gained a signal victory. The different churches were greatly revived. A large number were reclaimed. Six joined our church, and there will be more to follow. We are indebted to Rev. R. P. Neblett, one of our Millsaps' boys, for efficient help in the song service. He is the first representative for Millsaps College I have seen in the field. He did good work for this institution. He is a fine advertisement. Bro. McIntosh dropped in and secured three girls for Grenada. Bro. McIntosh will succeed with our school. Bro. W. C. Harris gave us an excellent sermon. He came over to try our springs and regain his health. Bro. H. P. Crowe preached to the delight of all our people. His noble character is a forcible sermon within itself. He will be long remembered by the people of Eupora. The Lord is blessing us in all our work."

No Lady Would Do Such a Thing.

No lady would take her watch when out of order, to the first person who displayed the sign "Watches Regulated and Repaired." But she would carefully enquire for a man whose acknowledged skill entitled him to take in charge the delicate mechanism.

How much more careful should a woman be, when she herself is disorderded, not to entrust the delicate and complex mechanism of her being to the first man or woman who displays the sign "Medical Advice Given." No sign is to be trusted which says "Medical Advice Given" and stops there. Medical advice can be given only by a physician. An accredited physician will put his title with his name. Suppose a sign reads, "Medical Advice Given by a Man." What woman would not instantly say, "The fact of being a man doesn't qualify him to give medical advice. He must be a physician to do that." But suppose the sign reads: "Medical Advice Given by a Woman." Is not the fact just as patent that being a woman does not qualify her to give medical advice. The woman must be a physician to do that. Medical advice given by an unskilled woman is just as dangerous as if given by an unskilled man.

In inviting sick and ailing woman to consult him by letter without charge, Dr. Pierce points to an experience and practice of over thirty years, devoted specially to diseases peculiar to women. In that time Dr. Pierce and his associate staff of medical specialists have successfully treated more than half a million women. All correspondence is treated as strictly private and sacredly confidential. Letters are promptly answered, and the answers are mailed in perfectly plain envelopes, without any printing upon them. Write without fee and without fear to Dr. R. V. Pierce, chief consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y.

OUR EXCELSIOR ART BIBLE.

In accordance with our motto, "Better and Better," we have gotten out a Bible which is superior to any hitherto offered. Besides the Holman self pronouncing feature and all the Oxford Helps, it has the Combination feature, i. e., the revised version in foot notes, and also contains a number of magnificent illustrations, sixty-four New and Beautiful Full-page Phototype Engravings.

These Magnificent Illustrations represent the most important Scenes and Events in the Sacred Scriptures, and are the work of eminent artists. A large number of prominent Clergymen and Religious Journals have endorsed our Combination Edition of the Holy Scriptures and have given it strong recommendations.

In mechanical workmanship, printing and binding, these Bibles are superb, while at the same time our prices are very low.

No subjects are so well adapted for Illustration by Superb Works of Art as the Grand Scenes and Events described in the Holy Bible. And no other subjects have so occupied the Thought and Genius of the World's Greatest Artists.

The reader has all the most Important Scenes and Events of the Sacred Scriptures placed before him, and is delighted with the Artistic Beauty of these Unrivalled Engravings.

THE PRICE.

This magnificent Bible is catalogued by large Northern publishers at $6. We sell it to our subscribers for $3 on condition that they pay up all arrearages and pay their subscription a full year in advance.

THURSDAY, JULY 20, 1899.

The waves of time may devastate our lives,
The frosts of age may check our failing breath;
They shall not touch the spirit that survives
Triumphant over doubt, and pain, and death
—Celia Thaxter.

To outlive one's usefulness is a calamity.—Tilton.

This world is given as a prize for the men in earnest.—F. W. Robertson.

Experience shows that success is due less to ability than to zeal. The winner is he who gives himself to his work—body and soul.—Charles Buxton.

Every great and commanding movement in the annals of the world is the triumph of some enthusiasm. Nothing great was ever achieved without it.—Emerson.

Be not disturbed by infidelity. Religion can not pass away. The burning of a little straw may hide the stars, but the stars are there and will reappear.—Thomas Carlyle.

When you come down from the summits, you do not come away from God. There is no task in life in which you do not need him. The work-bench needs his light as truly as the cloister.—Phillips Brooks.

Nothing else is so contagious as enthusiasm; it is the real allegory of the lute of Orpheus—it moves stones, it charms brutes. Enthusiasm is the genius of sincerity, and truth accomplishes no victories without it.—Lord Lytton.

Timidity is a disease of the mind, obstinate and fatal; for a man, once persuaded that any impediment is insuperable, has given it, with respect to himself, that strength and weight which it had not before.—Dr. Johnson.

Let us be content to do little, if God sets us at little tasks. It is but pride and self-will which says, "Give me something huge to fight, and I should enjoy that; but why make me sweep the dust?"—Charles Kingsley.

Intercession is the very safety-valve of love. When we feel that we really can do nothing at all in return for some remarkable kindness and affection, how exceedingly glad we are that we may and can pray.—Frances Ridley Havergal.

A vice will never turn to a virtue, but a virtue may turn to a vice—as when frugality, abnormally developed, becomes parsimony. Virtues, like rapidly growing vines, often need as much attention as vices and diseased vines.—Exchange.

There come to God's children hours of transfiguration, in which the heavens are opened, the ground is suffused with glory, and Christ, our Head and Savior, shines out royally before us. And these momentary glances into the invisible world are the most precious part of a man's life.—Beecher.

If there be nothing celestial without us, it is only because all is earthly within. If no divine colors upon our lot, it is because the holy light is faded on the soul. If our Father seems distant, it is because we have taken our portion of goods and traveled into a far country to set up for ourselves, that we may foolishly enjoy rather than reverently serve. —James Martineau.

EXALT THE GOSPEL.

It is marvelous how prone the world is to imagine that the chief need of the world is something else than the gospel. Philanthropists and reformers, as a rule, seem to expect more beneficent results from humanitarian schemes and legislative enactments than they do from the leavening of society with divine truth. The socialist fancies that the best way to lift the masses out of poverty and degradation is to bring about an equal distribution of wealth, so that none shall either be poor or rich. By the abolition of wealth and aristocracy he would, he thinks, rid humanity at one stroke of all its ills and vices. But suppose the dream of the socialist could be realized! How long would such a state of things continue? In a marvelously short time the property of the indolent and incapable would pass into the hands of the thrifty and industrious. The selfish and the cunning would soon out-wit and defraud the unwary, while the extravagant, like the prodigal son, would quickly "waste their substance in riotous living." As Dr. Alexander Sutherland, of Toronto, Canada, well says in his book, "The Kingdom of God and Problems of To-Day:" "If one thousand could be taken at random from any rank or all ranks of society, and started with absolutely equal chances to-day, at the end of twenty or thirty years their positions would be as diverse as actually exist under the present social system. The fact is, success in life depends not half so much upon having precisely equal chances with other people as upon the energy and persistence with which we seize and utilize the chances we have." So long as the majority of men are actuated principally by self-interest, may we look for a continuation of social ills and deplorable inequalities of condition. In the Golden Rule, not in socialism is the solution of the problem of poverty.

There is no question that much of the gross iniquity which abounds in the slums of our great cities would be driven out if the surroundings of the unfortunates who dwell there were made wholesome and pleasant, and their wages more satisfactory. But it needs to be remembered that while some are the helpless victims of circumstance, a large per cent. of those who experience the bitterness of life in the slums are brought to that sad state by intemperance and indolence. Improved environment makes life more comfortable, but it by no means follows that the beneficiary thereof will become moral and industrious. We would not for a moment depreciate the efforts of those who seek to purify the dark spots in the cities by the erection of comfortable tenements, the securing of employment for the unemployed, and the relief of dire poverty. Nevertheless, we must not expect the immoral, the vicious and the shiftless to become wholly transformed by such means. Unless altruistic efforts are followed up by mission work—by the proclamation of the gospel—they can but result in failure.

Elegance, wealth, and ease do not avail to make men righteous. On the contrary, they but furnish additional opportunities for sinful gratification and selfish living. As Bishop Candler bluntly expressed it, "Your American gentleman in evening dress needs the gospel as much as the African savage in no dress." Corruption in high life, though gilded and enticing in its forms, is as deep-dyed and notorious all over the land as is the flagrant wickedness that shows its impudent face among the lower classes. Gentility and culture have never been able to refine away lewdness, debauchery, covetousness, and ungodliness.

Not by "the foolishness of preaching," but by means of intellectual culture, material prosperity, and civilization, bringing in their train of lofty advantages and superior environments, do many hope to render government secure and life worth living. Thus do they expect the golden age to be ushered in. Proclaiming an earthly gospel, they neither inspire hope for the future nor lift men out of the mire of iniquity.

Christianity is the only force that can put a moral basis beneath society, and purge away corruption. Nothing less than the gospel can give the guilty conscience peace, or restrain the evil within. Bishop Galloway, in "Modern Missions," cites the following remarkable test made by Bishop Colenso in Africa as to the effect of civilization without Christianity: "He selected twelve Zulu lads, and took them into his service, using every possible art and influence upon them, except the gospel. Christian teaching was rigidly excluded. When the time expired, everyone returned to barbarism, leaving his European clothes behind him. Soon afterward the Bishop went over to the American Mission, and left a note for fifty pounds, with this statement: 'You were right, and I was wrong.'"

Christ's chief mission to earth was not to better men's circumstances, not simply to do away with poverty and ignorance and disease, but to establish a kingdom in the hearts of men. He came to transform the inner life, not merely to make men more comfortable outwardly. He realized more fully than any of us ever has, that true blessedness is not a matter of condition, but of character, for "as long as there are inequalities in human character, they will," as Henry Watterson says, "show themselves in human condition." The true regeneration of society, then, is not to be thought of save through the spiritual regeneration of the individuals composing it.

A form of Christianity that pays little heed to the physical wants of man, that fails to do works of charity, is not of the New Testament pattern. The numerous eleemosynary institutions of modern times are all the glorious fruitage of the gospel of Christ. But while Christianity has a grand work to perform in this direction, her permanent duty is to the souls of men.

As the editor of the Richmond Advocate forcefully says: "Our up-to-date reformer hugely enjoys poking fun at the old-time preachers who tried to persuade the poor to take the gospel on an empty stomach. The gospel is all right in its place, we are told, but what the poor fellow in the slums needs is a plenty of good food and good clothing, and a coat of whitewash, and some pretty lace curtains, and some flowers in the window, to elevate his moral ideas. That is to say, the way to make a man good inside is to make him respectable outside. By no sort of miracle will a healthy body produce a healthy moral nature. Take a degraded wretch out of the slums and put him in anything you please; and, if you do not put something in him, he will be a degraded wretch still. A Fifth avenue parlor will not transform him; he will only transform the parlor. What he needs, first of all, is not new surroundings, but a new idea, that will eventually make his surroundings new."

SOME RESOLUTIONS.

At the Jackson District Conference, held last week, the following resolutions were passed:

Resolved, By the Jackson District Conference, now assembled at Capitol Street Church, in the city of Jackson, that articles that are personal in nature and polemic in spirit, such as some that have recently been published in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, are exceedingly offensive to Christian readers of our Conference organ, and that we earnestly request Dr. Black, the editor, not to publish any more such articles, and that the secretary of this Conference furnish Dr. Black a copy of this resolution for publication.

(Signed) R. J. JONES,
W. B. LEWIS,
L. A. MAGRUDER.

Resolved, That we do re-commend and recommend the Nashville Christian Advocate and the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE most heartily to our people for necessary light upon church affairs, and to our pastors as powerful instrumentalities and coadjutors. J. WILSON BROWN,
F. M. WILLIAMS.

In regard to the first of these resolutions, we desire to say that we are heartily glad it was passed. Had we been present at the District Conference, of which we are a member, we would have voted for it. Articles such as these resolutions refer to are not to our taste, or in accordance with our sense of propriety. We have published them because brethren insisted that they had a right to use the columns of the Conference organ as a medium for the exchange of thought and sentiment. Believing that this resolution voices the sentiment of our best people, not only in the Jackson district, but elsewhere, we shall hereafter exercise our editorial prerogatives a little more freely.

A NEW BOOK.

CORNER-STONES OF FAITH; OR, THE ORIGIN AND CHARACTERISTICS OF THE CHRISTIAN DENOMINATIONS OF THE UNITED STATES. By Rev. Charles H. Small, B. D. M. A., Member of the American Historical Society. With specially contributed statements from eminent divines answering the question, "Why I am of the faith I am."—Introduction by Rev. John Henry Barrows, D. D., LL.D., president of the World's Parliament of Religions and Haskell Lecturer, Chicago University, on Christianity in India and Oriental Countries.

It tells briefly the story of the American churches from their colonial origin to their present strength, with portraits of Christian founders and leaders, and views of historic buildings, scenes, and notable modern structures. It gives in a single handy volume the facts which one wishes to know about his own church, and the distinctive beliefs and usages of the churches around him. The impartial story by its able author is strengthened by specially contributed papers from eminent living leaders of the respective churches answering the question, "Why I am of the faith I am."

This is a very readable and instructive book, and will perform an excellent service in bringing the various denominations to a better understanding of each other. It will help to break down bigotry, and thus will be promotive of the cause of Christian union. The volume is beautifully printed and bound, and is adorned with two hundred and twenty fine illustrations. In size it is crown quarto, and contains 469 pages. Price: Cloth, $2; half morocco, $3; full morocco, $4. E. B. Treat & Co., publishers, 241-243 W. 23d St., New York.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Rev. M. A. Thurman has been changed from the Pleasant Grove circuit to the Whitestown circuit, and Rev. Geo. W. Hiveley, local preacher, has been appointed preacher in charge of the Pleasant Grove circuit.

Rev. J. W. Tinnin, appointed at the last Conference to the Whitestown circuit, has withdrawn from the ministry and membership of the M. E. Church, South, surrendering his credentials.

VICTORIA IN SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

It is not generally known that some twenty years ago Queen Victoria conducted a Bible class in Buckingham Palace. When the court is staying in London there are many servants in the palace, and as a considerable number of these are married and have children, Her Majesty formed a Bible class for the special benefit of the little ones. This novel Sunday-school was held in one of the Queen's private rooms, and sometimes quite a large number of children were present. Her Majesty conducted the class herself, and many of the children, now grown to be men and women, look back with intense pleasure to the time when they had for their Sunday-school teacher none other than the Queen of England.—Christian Herald.

A CHURCH THAT WILL HOLD.

Doctor Van Dyke tells the following: "A man came into my study the other day from one of the vacant churches on Murray Hill, and said: 'I wish you would recommend a minister for our church.' I said: 'I can recommend a dozen.' He seemed rather bluffed at that: thought that was a large number, and said: 'Won't you suggest a name?' And I went on suggesting one name after another. I suggested one man, and he said: 'I understand that man has not got a very strong voice.' I suggested another. 'Well, I understand that man wears a black cravat in the pulpit.' Another man. 'Well, I understand he is not a very good reader.' And another man. 'Well, I understand that man has a very stiff and formal delivery.' Finally, he said: 'Well, what we want in our church is a minister who will draw.' 'Oh, no, my Christian friend, what you want is a church which will hold. You haven't got it. Twenty congregations passed through your church in the last twenty years, and they have passed through because you have not had a church which would hold. You want a church which will hold the people when they get into it. The minister can not hold. Success depends not half so much upon the minister as upon you, the church,'"—Selected.

THE "PURE LIQUORS" FALLACY.

Another persistent fallacy that should be hunted to death because it is itself dragging so many to death, is the idea that it is chiefly because liquors are "adulterated" that they are harmful. On my speaking to the eminent Dr. Janeway, of New York City, of the adulteration of intoxicants, he answered swiftly and intensely, "The worst thing ever put in drink is the alcohol." It is not fusel oil that fuddles and intoxicates, nor is it cocnlus indicus or any other of the motley crew sure to hide wherever alcohol makes his rendezvous. These may injure the man who drinks, but they do not madden him and so drive him to injure others. Every schoolboy knows it is the alcohol that makes a man break his wife's head and heart. The drugs may hurt a man's liver, but it is the alcohol that fires his lust. The drugs may kill the drinker, but it is the alcohol that makes him kill others.—Twentieth Century.

A GOOD EXAMPLE.

When General Grant was in Paris the President of the Republic, as a special token of respect, invited him to a place in the grand stand to witness the great racing which occurs in that country on Sunday. It is considered a discourteous act to decline such an invitation from the head official of the Republic. Such a thing had never been heard of, but General Grant, in a polite note, declined the honor, and said to the French President, "It is not in accordance with the custom of my country or with the spirit of my religion to spend Sunday in that way." And when Sabbath came that great hero found his way to the American chapel, where he was one of its quiet worshipers. Such reverence for the Lord's day is greatly needed now in this country, as elsewhere.—Religious Telescope.

He that idly loses five shillings' worth of time, loses five shillings, and might as prudently throw five shillings into the sea.—Benjamin Franklin.

NOTES.

The postoffice address of Rev. R. C. Grace has been changed from Branch to Rayne, La.

Our handsome new church at Boyce, La., will be dedicated on the first Sunday in August by Dr. I. W. Cooper.

In our editorial, of last week, the types made us say "sacrifice conscience," when the wording should have been, "sacrifice convenience."

We were in error in stating in our last issue that Bishop Galloway had given an address at Clarksdale, Miss. We should have said Clarksville, Tenn.

Rev. J. Wilson Brown, of the Mississippi Conference, who has been in ill health for some time past, has recovered and resumed the duties of his pastorate.

Under date of July 10, Rev. J. H. Barrentine writes: "Our dear brother, J. M. Massey, who has been quite ill from slow fever, is much better. I think, with close attention, he will soon be himself again."

Dr. I. W. Cooper writes that he confidently expects an enrollment of 225 pupils at Centenary next session. About thirty young ministers and twenty sons of ministers have signified their intention of attending.

Dr. J. H. Kirkland, of Vanderbilt University, has been elected president of the Board of Missions in place of Col. E. W. Cole, deceased. Col. Cole's place on the Vanderbilt Board of Trust has been filled by the election of his son, W. R. Cole.

The Nashville Advocate records the death of Dr. G. E. Kelsey, of Red Bank, Miss. Dr. Kelsey had been for many years a leader in our Zion, filling many important positions in the church, and always measuring up to a high standard of efficiency.

Rev. J. T. Sawyer writes: "I have made changes in the Shreveport district as follows: H. W. Bowman, from Mooringsport circuit to Coushatta circuit; M. G. Jenkins, from Logansport circuit to Mooringsport circuit; and Reuben S. Collier, to supply Logansport circuit."

In the absence of Dr. Bolling, who expects to be in Kentucky at that time, Dr. I. W. Cooper will occupy the pulpit of First Church, Shreveport, on the fifth Sunday.

From a private letter from Rev. J. A. Bowen we quote as follows: "We have had 131 accessions to the church, 100 additions to the Epworth League, and 200 added to the Sunday-school work this year."

Rev. H. G. Hawkins has been elected to fill the chair of English in Whitworth College. This arrangement gives Whitworth College a true man and an excellent teacher of several years' experience. We congratulate Whitworth and its patrons on this acquisition to its faculty.

At this writing the Seashore Camp Meeting is still in progress. The attendance is reported as larger than for many years. Some one, we suppose, will send in a report. Bishop Galloway preached twice on Sunday to the delight and edification of the large audiences present.

Under date of July 15, 1899, Rev. T. B. Clifford writes: "As you are already aware, I have been assisting the pastor, Rev. W. H. Benton, in a meeting near Zachary, La., during this week. Several have professed conversion, and thirty were at the altar last night asking for prayer and desiring salvation. The meeting will continue till Sunday night. It is a good community, and has given to the church a good preacher—Rev. R. W. Tucker, now presiding elder of Baton Rouge district."

At the recent primary in Lowndes county, Miss., J. T. Senter, editor of the Columbus Commercial, was elected to the Legislature at the head of the ticket. The Columbus District Conference also elected him as a delegate to the Annual Conference. Our readers will remember that it was Bro. Senter who first turned on the light in regard to the villainous assault upon Bro. Gibbs. Since that time he has valiantly kept up the fight in behalf of Bro. Gibbs' cause. This double endorsement is the answer which good people make to the furious attacks that have been made on him by certain Mississippi papers.

Under date of July 14, Rev. J. A. Leech, writing from his home at Minter City, Miss., says: "I write to ask the prayers of our brethren. We buried our eighteen-year-old daughter (Elma) in Friendship Cemetery, in Columbus, Miss., last Sunday morning. She died in sight of the glory-land; asked us not to grieve, but to meet her in the sweet by-and-by. Edwin, my eldest son, and Ethel, my second daughter, have both been very near the gate of death. Thanks to God and good nursing, they are improving. This is a new experience to us. We have learned more of the blessings of the gospel we have been trying to preach for sixteen years. We sorrow because we miss her; yet we rejoice because we will meet her again. My postoffice address for the next thirty days will be Columbus, Miss."

We sympathize deeply with our brother in his affliction, and bespeak for him the sympathies and prayers of his ministerial brethren and of his numerous friends.

The following, from the pen of Rev. R. W. Vaughan, will be read with painful interest. Let fervent prayer be made that the life of this faithful itinerant may be spared to the church.

Rev. C. F. Staples, of the Lanesville circuit—that devout and faithful servant of God—is in deep affliction since the twenty-third of April. He and his family have been bedridden. He was taken with a severe case of measles; then his wife and two children. His baby died (he lost a child only a few months before). His other child—a bright, healthy boy—lingered for eighteen days between life and death; is now in a convalescent state, but in a pitiable condition. Bro. Staples and family are now with his brother, J. C. Staples, at Downsville, and he is wrestling with a case of continued fever. His low state of health will barely permit a long spell. Brethren, he needs your sympathy and encouragement. Pray for him. He begs his charge bear with him until God stays the hand of affliction.

ROBT. W. VAUGHAN.

P. S.—We have just closed a gracious meeting here. Had a goodly number of conversions, and some accessions. The pastor was alone in the meeting.

TWENTIETH CENTURY FUND.

DR. HAMMOND: With yonr odi-torial permission I will state two or three facts, and of them predicate as many suggestions tonching tho work in which wo aro all intorested, and for which your paper speoially stands.

In my goings to and fro I find that the sentiment concerning the Twentieth Centnry Fund, among both preachers and people, varies in abont the following degrees:

(a) There are those who are perfectly confident that there will be no failure—that the church is going to fully vindicate both her ability and integrity before God and men.

(b) There are others who are in gore donbt abont the whole matter, who see many "lions" in the way, bnt who are still "hoping" for the best.

(c) There is still a third class (and its name is legion), tho members of which have predicted failnre from tho beginning, who are preaching it from every house-top, and practicing it in all their relations to the enterprise. This is fact nnmber one.

Explanatory of this state of affairs I further find: That the men of the first class have pnt their hearts and hands and money all into this business. Hence snccess is to them an assured fact. (This is tho secret of their confidence.) That the men of the second class have invested little of thonght or prayer or effort or money in the movement (acting tentatively even in what they havo done); hence their skepticism. That the men of the third class, having pnt absolntely nothing into the nndertaking, and intending to pnt nothing, find their conclnsion and justification in infidelity as to its success. This all constitntes fact nnmber two.

Before I make my snggestions, yon will allow the statement of an honest, earnest conviction on my own part that the church is going to raise at least two millions of dollars for this fnnd. She can not afford to do less. Her place among the churches, her interest in the world of lost sonls, to say nothing of her obligations to God and her loyality to Christ, demand it.

I suggest, first, that the work of raising this amonnt mnst be done by the preachers.

After the Board of Edncation has perfected and pnblished its elaborate plan of canvass; after the bishops and doctors have delivered their "wonderfnl" addresses at the varions centers of wealth and influence; after the newspaper correspondents have exhausted their stock of adjectives in describing the immediate prospective results of these public demonstrations—after and beyond and above all these, if the work is done, it mnst be done by the preachers. The history of the Methodist Church is in proof that the preachers—the rank and file of the itinerancy—make or mar its every nndertaking.

I suggest, secondly, that in doing this work each preacher intelligently, prayerfully, in the trne spirit of the occasion, and with set pnrpose, in the fear of God, to succeed, make a thorough canvass of his entire membership, beginning with the yonngest and poorest, giving good reasons why each should give, and why each should give proportionately to his personal obligation to God.

I snggest, thirdly, that this canvass be not conditional upon the "revival" for which we are praying, bnt that it be made the condition for the revival we so much need in both pnlpit and pew. It is neither wise nor scriptural to expect a blessing before we have done onr duty. God's order is, "Give, and I will ponr you ont a blessing." Let the giving be done humbly, thankfnlly, cheerfnlly, liberally, and, God's word for it, the revival will come gloriously and without stint. This, of conrse, means give yourselves first; then the balance is easy.

I have had occasion to take part in the canvass, so far, only in an incidental way. I have seen little of the practical working of yonr plans in the older and richer Conferences. In following my own line of work I have been with the brethren of the Indian Mission Conference at three points, and you may be glad to know that of the $12 900 of this fnnd assumed by the Educational Board of this Conference, $10,000 is now in sight at these three points. The preachers of this Conference can easily make this amonnt $20 000.

Trnly, J. H. PRITCHETT.

"WHO'S TO BLAME?"

In repiy to the above inquiry at the close of the article concerning "That Parsonage" (signed E G. Williams), the following is in order: Did Bros. Yonngman, Booke, Silvertongue, Bonntifni, or any one of the "nnmber of preachers since," ever attempt to organize a "Woman's Home Mission Society"? Possibiy that partionlar parsonage is occnpied by one of the 105 preachers in the Mississippi Conference who continne to report, "No Home Mission Society in my charge." If only half the preachers had organized, snch a pictnre of a Methodist parsonage wonld never have appeared in the colnmns of yonr paper. One hnndred and five preachers in the Mississippi Conference without Parsonage Societies. "Who's to blame?" Bat let ns hope "That Parsonage" is not in the bonnds of the Mississippi Conference. One more question: Is there a "Parsonage and Home Mission Society" in the charge to which Mr. E. G. Williams belongs. If not —"who's to blame?" A. P.

Is Not Recommended for Everything.

But if You Have Kidney or Bladder Trouble, It Will Be Found Just the Remedy You Need.

Kidney trouble preys upon the mind, discourages and lessens ambition: beauty, vigor and cheerfulness soon disappear when the kidneys are out of order or diseased.

Kidney trouble has become so prevalent that it is not uncommon for a child to be born afflicted with weak kidneys. If the child urinates too often, if the urine scalds the flesh, or if, when the child reaches an age when it should be able to control the passage, and it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, depend upon it, the cause of the difficulty is kidney trouble, and the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs. This unpleasant trouble is due to a diseased condition of the kidneys and bladder and not to a habit as most people suppose.

So we find that women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble and both need the same remedy. The mild and the immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It is sold by druggists, in fifty-cent and one dollar sizes. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also pamphlet telling all about it, including many of the thousands of testimonial letters received from sufferers cured. In writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., mention NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

SPANISH-AMERICAN WAR PANORAMA

is one of the war books which is likely to be in continuous demand. It is a panoramic record of the triumph of Yankee Doodle. The eagle flaps his wings on every page, and "Old Glory" waves around and above every scene. Prominent officers connected with the war are here portrayed, as well as many of the "men behind the guns." Military life is pictured to the eye, from recruiting to guard mount and skirmish line. Nor is the ludicrous omitted. The company cook receives the attention due to his importance; the mess is shown; cavalry scenes are given; the hospital arrangements are depicted; the heroines of the Red Cross service are displayed; street scenes in Havana, Santiago and elsewhere are unrolled, the new citizens or subjects (which are they?) of Uncle Sam appear and disappear as the leaves are turned.

In a word, the gazer visits the new localities and sees the tumultuous new life, without the risk or expense of a sea voyage.

The Album is 5½x8 inches, weighs 12 ounces, printed on finest coated paper.

Sent FREE to any address in the United States, Canada, or Mexico, for 12 cents in stamps or coin, to cover postage and packing. Copy may be seen at any ticket office of the Big Four Route.

SOCRATES died from a cup of poison administered by the hand of a friend. How many in this land have died by poisonous remedies given by friendly hands to combat diseases? It is quite a comfort to know that when giving DICKS' CHILLIFUGE there is not a drop of poison in a bottle full of this beneficent remedy.

Home Circle.

"GENUINENESS."

"He is a bright man, but I feel that in all he says there is a ring of insincerity," said one friend to another when a man of brilliant parts was mentioned. To be condemned by such an utterance, if it be true, is condemnation enough. It brings one up standing before the great truth—that life's best inspirations come from souls that we believe to be real. To sit down in the presence of one whose convictions sway his actions, whose every deed carries the whole man with it, is one of life's most restful experiences. Like "the shadow of a great rock in a weary land," is the coming upon a real soul. They strip our own life of its unreality. We become, for the moment, honest and sincere ourselves. The show and tinsel of our life look mean. Our best professions seem cheap. We go out from such persons as one goes from God's presence after an hour of honest prayer, saying, "I want above all the reality of thy character revealed in me."

We may fear to be positively genuine, lest it might stand in the way of success. We remember that the gold and silver in our pocket—the "current coin of the realm"—have their alloy of baser metal, and that it is this very alloy that hardens them into serviceability and gives them as currency the stamp of success. Therefore, we conclude that to the sterling qualities of character we will add something of cunning and worldly wisdom. Integrity of soul and unflinching fidelity to truth need something, we think, to float them. Integrity must be pushed to the front by artifice. Absolute honesty needs something of cunning added to get it recognition. The soul, we say, needs the body, boney and fleshly, as the agent; so the high qualities of manhood need the lower in order to bring them into current recognition and success. Summed up in one common phrase, it sounds like this, "You must be willing to be a little wicked if you are bound to succeed."

Every man has times when these thoughts come to him. He says them over to himself, but he wounds his Christian manhood when he does so. "A little meanness is necessary," we say. But the soul revolts at the statement, and will not believe the lie. It feels instinctively that God wants it to be genuine, first of all. It recognizes that success is subordinate to character, and that the latter, and not the former, is life's highest achievement. Every man feels that the most difficult task that daily confronts him is to hold his soul calmly, unwaveringly, to genuineness in thought and action, and not to be led astray by those standards of life that make conspicuousness the measure of success, and mere position the test of ability and worthiness.—Exchange.

LOVE BLOSSOMING TOO LATE.

There is a great host of weary men and women, toiling on through life toward the grave, who most sorely need, just now, the cheering words and helpful ministries which we can give. The incense is gathering to scatter about their coffins; but why should it not be scattered in the hard paths on which their feet to-day are treading? The kind words are lying in men's hearts unexpressed, trembling on their tongues unvoiced, which will be spoken by and by, when these weary ones are sleeping; but why should they not be spoken now, when they are needed so much, and when their accents would give such cheer and hope? The flowers are growing to strew on their graves; but why not cut them now to brighten dreary lives and dark paths? Many a good man goes through life plain, plodding, living obscurely, yet living a true Christian life, doing many a quiet kindness to his neighbors and friends, yet seldom hearing a word of commendation or praise. The vases filled with the incense of affection are kept sealed. The flowers are not cut from the stems. One day you stand by his coffin, and there are enough kind things said to have brightened every hour of his life, if only they had been said at the right time. There are enough flowers piled upon his casket to have kept his chamber filled with fragrance all through his years, if only they had been sent day by day. How his heavy heart would have thanked God, if in the midst of his toils, burdens, and struggles, he could have heard a few of the words of affection and approval that are now wasted on ears that hear them not! How much happier he would have been in his weary days if he had known how many generous friends he had! But, poor man! he had to die before the apprehension could express itself. Then the gentle words spoken over his cold form he could not hear. The love blossomed out too late.—J. R. Miller, in Interior.

Folded at rest are the dear little hands;
And you miss their soft pressure to-night;
Folded for aye are the silken fringed lids
O'er the eyes, with their glorious light;
Folded and still are the tiny white feet
That so playfully tripped by your side;
Folded and mute are the sweet, smiling lips
Of your sunny-faced darling that died.

TEMPTED BY DEGREES.

John Newton says Satan seldom comes to Christians with great temptations, or with a great temptation, or with a temptation to commit a great sin.

You bring a green log and a candle together, and they are very safe neighbors; but bring a few shavings and set them alight, and then bring a few small sticks and let them take fire, and the log be in the midst of them, and you will soon get rid of your log. And so it is with little sins. You will be startled with the idea of committing a great sin, and so the devil brings you a little temptation, and leaves you to indulge yourself. "There is no harm in this," "no great peril in that;" and so by these little chips we are at first easily lighted up, and at last the great log is burned. Watch and pray that ye enter not into temptation.—Exchange.

NOVEL-READING.

The young people who read the greatest quantity of novels know the least, are the dullest in aspect and the most vapid in conversation. The flavor of individuality has been burned out of them. Always imagining themselves in an artificial relation to life, always content to look through their author's glasses, they become as commonplace as pawns upon a chess-board. "Sir, we had good talk!" was Sam Johnson's highest praise of those he met. But any talk save the dreariest commonplace and most tiresome reiteration is impossible with the regulation reader of novels or player of games. And this is, in my judgment, because God, by the very law of mind, must punish those who kill time, instead of cultivating it. For time is the stuff which life is made of, the crucible of character, the arena to achievement; and woe to those who fritter it away. They can not help paying great nature's penalty, and "mediocre," "failure," or "imbecile," will surely be stamped upon their foreheads. Therefore, I would have each generous youth and maiden say to every story-spinner, except the few great names which can be counted on the fingers of one hand: I really can not patronize your wares, and will not furnish you my head for a football, or my fancy for a sieve. By writing these books you get money, and a fleeting, unsubstantial fame; but by reading them I should turn my possibility of success in life to the certainty of failure. Myself plus time is the capital stock with which the good heavenly Father has pitted me against the world to see if I can get some foothold. I can not afford to be a mere spectator. I am a wrestler for the laurel in life's Olympian games. I can make history; why should I maunder in a hammock, and read the endless repetition of romance? No, find yourself a cheaper patron.—Frances E. Willard.

WHERE HAPPINESS IS FOUND.

Happiness is never found by searching, but finds its own resting-place where it abides. How much of your time and mine has been wasted in searching for happiness? We have sought it in books, in society, in the effort to make money, and in a thousand avennes, and yet, though we could almost have it in sight our hands stretched out to grasp it—yet it has eluded us like the "will of the wisp" of the fable. The truth is, the very search for happiness renders it invisible and intangible. The slightest taint of selfishness in us drives it far away. I know the power that makes happiness abide in our hearts, and when there, the home, the fireside, are radiant with beauties which are its children. The spirit which, in entire forgetfulness of self, seeks the good of others, is the only means of making happiness our friend and companion. Let no question of this arise in your heart, but recall to your mind the happiest people you have known, and you will find, without exception, they are those who have contributed the most to the happiness of others. It is true in the family, in society, in the world at large, and, above all, in the church, that the happiest people are those who contribute most to the happiness of others—and it is contributed very slightly by wealth or any of our environments.—Atlanta Constitution.

"Good-by, God, we're off for a vacation," said a little girl in her prayer just before starting with her parents for her Summer outing. Unconsciously she voiced the sentiments of a great number of good people up and down the land to-day. People who are good because it pays to be so at home, but who think vacation means letting down the bars into the broad fields of selfish indulgences, and giving free rein to all the sinful passions of the soul. They would frown down any immorality at home, but away from home, the restraint of public estimation, they leave their religion, and sometimes their self-respect, behind.

"No God beyond here," announced a sign on a country road leading to a godless settlement within the limits of this county. That inscription might be placed upon the conscience of some men when departing from their home associations.—The Church Visitor.

If our religion means anything, it means composure, heroism, serenity, loyalty at all times and in all places. It must be able to stand the strain put upon it, if it is to recommend itself to the world.—Rev. Garrett Wychoff.

EFFECTS OF ALCOHOL.

Alcohol is one of the worst things to imbibe when it is necessary for the body to withstand great cold or fatigue. An eminent physician, in giving advice to a party of young men who were setting out for Klondike, said: "If you want to get the most out of yourselves in the land of the Yukon, let whisky severely alone." The Arctic explorer, Nansen, showed that those who drank alcohol could not bear the northern cold, and no one of his staff was allowed to partake of it. Another illustration of the undesirability of using alcohol in trying latitudes is given by Dr. Lesser, who notes that, as an experiment, a number of regiments in the English army while in the Soudan received certain quantities of alcohol, while other regiments went without. The result showed that the latter could bear the strain of long marches far better and were better preserved than those to whom spirits were given. Dr. Lesser also remarks that he has found alcohol injurious to digestion and deleterious in septic conditions. The results of the investigation and observations at Red Cross Hospitals are striking and suggestive, and are receiving the careful consideration of the medical profession.—Exchange.

More sleep, with more regularity in taking it, is a prime need of our exhausting modern life. People talk of giving rest to their minds; but it is not likely that the mind itself ever tires. The brain, or some overworked tract of it, may need repose; and it seems a well-established physiological fact that this central organ literally undergoes repair and renewal during sleep. The slowing down of the blood permits the deposit of nutritive particles, just as the slowing of a river permits it to drop its sediment. There is wisdom as well as wit in the Quixotic saying: "Blessings on him that first invented this same sleep!"—Youth's Companion.

OUR $1 OFFER.

Much has been said about reducing the subscription price of the ADVOCATE. The only way in which a reduction can be brought about is by an increase in the number of subscribers. In order to facilitate this result, we make the following offer: Until further notice we will take new subscriptions at the rate of $1 for eight months. When seven thousand five hundred new names have been sent in at this rate with the cash, we will extend the time four months longer, thus reducing the price to $1 per annum. When the extension is made, old subscribers will get the benefit as well as new ones, provided they first pay up all arrearages. Of course, no commissions can be given under this offer. Address

LIKE A THIEF IN THE NIGHT,

Malaria creeps into the system and leaves a poison which saps its vitality until the well-known symptoms of CHILLS AND FEVER, INTERMITTENT FEVER, CONGESTION, BLOODY URINE, etc., will show their snake-like heads. Fortunately there is an antidote in DICKS' CHILLIFUGE, which absolutely exterminates Malaria in a few hours; so pleasant to the taste that children love to take it. It banishes fevers like mist before the morning sun; brings as a gift rose cheeks, health, happiness, and makes life worth the living.

ESTHER MAY HEALEY.

A note from Bro. James Healey, dated June [illegible] brings this sad intelligence: "Our darling, Esther May, died this morning a little before eight o'clock. She had been sick nearly two weeks. We had two good physicians and good nurses, but they could not avail."

Most deeply do we sympathize with our dear friends in this bitter bereavement. She was born in Lake Providence, La., May 13, [illegible] and on Nov. 6, 1898 we dedicated her to God in holy baptism. She was so lovely in her sweet, guileless manner on that occasion that its memory will not soon fade away. Honor is laid upon us when God withdraws his gifts. He then deals with us as with friends. If we did not know him, he could not expect us to trust him. We must be strong and pure of heart before he can reveal himself to us; "and it is in straying weather," it is under these trials of faith and courage, that we grow pure and strong. How wonderfully does our heavenly Father work! We never knew a truer man than James Healey, nor a better woman than his good wife, and the death of their first child called forth the real respect and love of the community for these noble Christian workers. C. B. RIDDICK.

KERSH—The subject of this sketch, D. G. Kersh, was born in Orangeburg district, S. C., Dec. 5 1822, and emigrated to Rankin county, Miss., in 1834, where he remained till his death, Aug. 7, 1898. He professed religion and united with the M. E. Church when he was very young, of which he lived a consistent, useful member until the Master thought proper to call him away from the labors of the church below to the rest and joys of the church triumphant. On the twenty-ninth of February, 1852, he was happily married to Miss Mary M. Ormond, who, with one son, remains to mourn his absence. He went out as a volunteer in the Confederate Army in 1863, where he made a good, faithful soldier during the remainder of the war.

Bro. Kersh was not what is usually called demonstrative in professions of religion, and yet he was demonstrative in the true sense of that term, showing his faith by his works. He was an uncompromising devotee to the Christian religion as he understood it to be taught by the Bible and the Methodist Church. He was a man of very few words, but many deeds never ready to say much, but always ready to do whatever was required of him; and as he was an industrious, thrifty business man and a man of means, the church always found him a strong supporter, and his neighbors found in him a friend in time of need. The extent of his liberality was measured by what he conceived to be his Christian duty.

Bro. Kersh loved the church, loved God and his people. The preacher always found a hearty reception at his house, and there was nothing, in his estimation, too good for the preacher to enjoy. In addition to paying his assessments, he took pleasure in slipping to the parsonage with a little bagful of something that he thought the preacher would appreciate, and that would be of substantial benefit to him and his family. The first few years of his married life, like a great many others, he failed to have family prayers. Meditating on this fact while in the army, he resolved that when he returned home he would establish a family altar, and live in the discharge of this duty also, which he did, and kept it up as long as he lived.

A good man has been taken away from the earth, the church has lost a worthy member, the family a loving and beloved husband and father, the country a good citizen, and the afflicted and needy a kind friend.

Knowing that he was nearing the shores of eternity, and that it would not be long till the Master to whom he had devoted the labors of a long life would call him hence, he had all his business matters arranged, so as to be ready at a moment's warning to leave the world. He said nothing about his religious condition, but his life and death testify to the fact that he had peace with God. He came in about noon complaining that he felt unwell, and about the close of day, without suffering, fell asleep in the arms of Jesus. Full of years and of good fruits, he slipped across to the other shore to join the friends that are over there, and await the coming of those that are here. May God help us all to live so as to meet him on the other shore! LOUIS KENDALL.

CALHOUN—Died at her home, Eutaw, Catahoula parish, La., Mrs. MARY CALHOUN, the wife of Dr. D. P. Calhoun, aged seventy-one years.

Mrs. Calhoun was married twice. She was the widow of S. Oswalt Decar, formerly of Concordia parish. She was the mother of six children by her first marriage. Only one survived a daughter, Emma Oswalt, who remained with her mother during all her sickness. She was baptized in 1878 by Rev. Stewart. She lived and died a Christian. She was buried in the Oswalt graveyard beside her five children, Rev. Broom officiating. She died a happy death. Her daughter remained with her to the last, praying and pointing her home to God. We mourn for thee, dear friend, but thou art happy in heaven. L. L. C.

Vidalia, La.

BOUCHER—ROBERT BOUCHER, the fifteen-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Boucher, was drowned in the Tombighee river, opposite the Riverside Mills, Columbus, Miss., Tuesday afternoon. He and a number of smaller boys were in bathing, and being unable to swim, he was holding on to a log projecting over the water, playing. In an unguarded moment he lost his hold and went down. The water at this point being about fifteen feet deep, he was unable to get out, and in the presence of his frightened companions went down to rise no more. The boys gave the alarm, and people hurried to the scene. Mr. W. F. Price, after repeated efforts, secured the body and swam to shore.

By this time quite a crowd had assembled. Dr. Brownrigg was summoned, and he and sympathizing friends worked faithfully for an hour, or more, and did everything possible to bring him back to life, but were unable to do anything for him. He was placed in a hack and, on account of the serious illness of his mother, was carried to the home of his grandfather, Rev. A. P. Leach. The news was a great shock to his parents, and when it was told his mother, she became unconscious, and a physician had to be summoned.

The funeral was held from the residence of Rev. A. P. Leach yesterday morning at ten o'clock, the services being conducted by Rev. J. A. Bowen, and the remains interred in Friendship Cemetery.

HORTON—JAMES S. HORTON was born in Chesterfield county, S. C., Feb. 4, 1843, and died at his home in Red River parish, La., March 21, 1899. He was reared by Christian parents. He was happily converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, at the age of fourteen. His life as a member of the church was beautifully consistent up to the last. As a Sunday-school superintendent, he was faithful to his duty. He enjoyed religion, and was regular in his attendance upon the means of grace. He willingly did all he could for the cause of Christ. He was a kind, loving husband and father, bringing his children up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord.

His death was very affecting and triumphant. He knew several days before his death came that he must go. He only dread was leaving his family. Requesting them to meet him in heaven, he sang several hymns and prayed. For some time before his death he was delirious, but even in this condition he repeated passages of Scripture, sang and shouted the praises of God. He died singing, "Praise God, from whom all blessings flow."

Bro. Horton leaves a wife and eleven children. May God bless them, and may they be faithful to the end! is my prayer.

GEORGE D. PURCELL, P. C.

MURPHY—Died in Sabine parish, La., June 10 1899, little ROLLIE WARREN WILKERSON, son of Rev. H. C. and Sister Jessie Murphy. He was born May 23, 1893, making him one year and seventeen days old at his death.

Little Warren was a precious child, and all was done by his parents and his attentive physician that could be done, but the good Lord seen it to call him home. Dear parents, weep not. Be faithful, and you will meet your babe again in the sweet bye-and-bye.

MONTGOMERY—THEO BENTHUM, infant son of W. A. and Mary M. Montgomery, was born in Whitestown, Miss., July 25, 1898, and died Sept. 29, 1898.

Theo was a beautiful child, the light and joy of the home. Its life was short, but it accomplished a great mission. Heaven seems nearer and dearer since Theo has gone there to live. How inspiring the thought that though our loved ones can not come back to us, we can go to them! Blessed hope! J. W. TINNIN.

HICKMAN—WM. TINNIN HICKMAN was born Nov. 30, 1897, and died June 7, 1899.

He was seriously sick for nine days. He was named for Rev. J. W. Tinnin, a former pastor. May God comfort the sorrowing hearts! C. MCDONALD.

No. 5 Machine, drop leaf table, gothic cover, case of three drawers at each end, making seven drawers in all. Dealer's price, $26.
Our price, $16.25.

No. 4 Columbian

EXCELLENCE OF THE COLUMBIAN.—All wearing parts are of case-hardened steel possessing great durability, and by the turning of a screw all lost motion caused by wear can be taken up. All parts are fitted so accurately that the machines are absolutely noiseless, and as easy running as fine adjustment and best mechanical skill is possible to produce. No expense or time is spared to make them perfect in every respect, as every machine passes a rigid inspection by competent men before leaving the factory.
NICKEL PLATED.—The balance wheel and many of the fine parts are nickel plated, with other parts finely enameled and ornamented, giving it a rich appearance.
A Self Setting Needle and Self-Threading Cylinder Shuttle are used in the Columbian High-Arm Sewing Machine. They are so simple that any one can easily operate them in a few minutes' time, as our Instruction Book is fully illustrated, showing how to do all kinds of fancy work with attachments.
Extra Attachments, in velvet-lined case, sent free with each machine: 1 Tucker, 1 Ruffler with shirring plate, 1 Hemmer set (4 widths) and Binder, 1 Braider (Foot and Slide), 1 Thread Cutter.
ADDITIONAL ACCESSORIES.—Each machine is supplied with the following outfit: 1 Hemmer and Feller (one piece), 10 Needles, 6 Bobbins, 1 Wrench, 1 Screw Driver, Oil Can with Oil, Cloth Gauge and Thumb Screw, and a Book of Instructions. The Book of Instructions is profusely illustrated, and answers the purpose of a competent teacher.

No. 3—Drop leaf, Bent cover, case of two drawers at one end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $29. Our price, $17.
No. 4—Drop leaf table, Bent cover, case of two drawers at each end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $31. Our price, $17.75.
No. 5—Drop leaf table, Bent cover, case of three drawers at each end and center drawer, making a seven-drawer machine.
Dealer's price, $33. Our price, $18.50.

The chief difference between Numbers 3, 4, and 5 is in the furniture, i. e., in the number of drawers. If you do not want to pay for the extra drawers, you need not do so. We sell these machines under a ten years' guarantee, by which we mean that if any part gives out by reason of any defect therein, the manufacturer will replace the same free of charge. Moreover, we allow the purchaser to test the machine ten days. If at the end of ten days you are not satisfied, you have only to drop us a postal card, and your money will be refunded.

OUR OFFER.

We will send any one of the above-described machines at the prices named, and also send the ADVOCATE free for six months. The only condition attached to this offer is that subscribers who are in arrears must first pay up all arrearages to date. It would be well to avail yourself of this offer at once, as we can not promise that it will last very long. Notice that you take no risk whatever. We do all the risking. Address

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Great activity is apparent through the Alabama iron district.

A great loss of life occurred by an explosion of gas in a coal mine at Kyushu, Japan.

Col. Wm. Preston Johnston, president of Tulane University, died at Lexington, Va., on July 16.

The president of the Rennes court-martial has decided that fresh charges can not be made against Dreyfus.

Senator Morgan, of Alabama, advocates the nomination of Gen. Fitzhugh Lee for the presidency by the Democrats.

The employees of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company have struck, claiming the management has broken its agreement as to hours.

Nearly 1,000,000 feet of cypress lumber, valued at $100,000, were burned in a yard of the New Orleans Cypress Company last Saturday.

Natives of the Kiso-Chon district of China are offering serious resistance to the building of the German railroad, and have had a sharp conflict with German soldiers.

There have been serious fights between Frenchmen and Italians near the border. Two Frenchmen were killed at Aubagne, and on the Island of Crete there were a number of fights.

The Anti-Imperialist League of Boston has made an alliance with negro leaders in the North, and an uprising of the negro race against the administration and the Republican party is being organized.

The Baldwin Locomotive Works has received an order for thirteen locomotives from the State railroad of Finland, seventy-nine from the Chinese and Eastern road, ten from the French State railway, and others for England and Russia.

United States Consul Smith, of Victoria, B. C., is said to have forwarded to the American Government a memorial from R. E. L. Brown, an American mining engineer, requesting the Government's intervention to secure Brown's claim against the Transvaal Government for damages resulting out of the well-known Witfontein case, in which Brown secured a judgment for $1,812,000.

The fact that the celebration of the national holiday in France has passed without disturbance is an evidence to everybody that the new Ministry has safely passed through a most difficult crisis and has matters well in hand. The great review of the garrison at Paris, and the minor reviews at the various military posts throughout France, passed off without hitch or unpleasant occurrence.

An order to General Brooke directs him to appoint two census supervisors in each military district of Cuba, for the purpose of taking a census of the qualified voters of the island. After the census is completed arrangements will be made for the election of municipal governments all over the island, after which the question of a general election on the island to decide upon the form of government desired by a majority of its voters will be taken up and settled. It is possible, although not yet decided, that annexation may be voted upon when the general election is held.

Secretary Hay has received all of the protocols of the proceedings of The Hague conference. Included among the papers is the draft of the arbitration and mediation treaty, which is regarded as the most important achievement of the conference. As there is occasion for the utmost haste in completing the work of the conference, our Government has concluded not to depend upon the slow-going mails to communicate to its delegates approval of their work, but will by the cable empower them to sign the protocols in the name of the United States. The treaty will, of course, be required to be submitted to the Senate for its approval.

The American newspaper correspondents in the Philippines have entered a protest to General Otis against the military censorship exercised over the telegrams sent away to the newspapers in America. The correspondents declare that false news, or views so colored as to be utterly misleading, is the only sort allowed to be sent, and that the American people are wholly misinformed of the situation in the islands. The correspondents aver that the American authorities have not got the military situation well in hand; that the Filipinos are not demoralized and are not ready to surrender, and that the American volunteers are not ready to any great extent to re-enlist.

Though seven months have passed since the signature of the treaty of peace between the United States and Spain containing this provision, Spain has taken no action, so far as the authorities have been advised, looking to the release of the Cubans and Filipinos imprisoned at Fernando Po and at other Spanish penal prisons. Minister Storer, at Madrid, has been instructed by Secretary Hay, at the instance of Senor Quesada, the representative of Cuba in Washington, to call the attention of the Spanish Government to the provision of the treaty cited above, and to request that the Cubans and Filipinos still in confinement be granted their liberty without further delay.

LEMONS AS MEDICINE

They regulate the Liver, Stomach, Bowels, Kidneys and Blood as prepared by Dr. H. Mozley, in his Lemon Elixir, a pleasant lemon drink. It cures biliousness, constipation, indigestion, headache, malaria, kidney diseases, fevers, chills, heart failure, nervous prostration, and all other diseases caused by a torpid or diseased liver and kidneys. It is an established fact that lemons, when combined properly with other liver tonics, produce the most desirable results upon the stomach, liver, bowels, kidneys, and blood. Sold by druggists. 50c and $1 bottles.

Mozley's Lemon Elixir
Cured me of sick and nervous headache, I had been subject to all my life.
MRS. N. A. MCENTIRE,
Spring Place, Ga.

Mozley's Lemon Elixir
Cured me of indigestion and nervous prostration. I got more relief, and at once, from Lemon Elixir than all other medicines.

Mozley's Lemon Elixir
Cured me of a long-standing case of chills and fever, by using two bottles.
J. C. STANLEY,
Engineer E. T., Va. & Ga. R. R.

Mozley's Lemon Elixir
Cured me of a case of heart disease and indigestion of four years' standing. I tried a dozen different medicines. None but Lemon Elixir done me any good.

GOD'S PROVIDENCE.

BY MARGARET E. SANGSTER

"God's Providence is mine inheritance!" I read
The quaint old legend on a rainy day,
When gray and thick the clouds hung overhead,
And mists were folding close about my way.

God's Providence! Then, wherefore should I fear!
My Father's love is roof and bar for me.
Forever, since my Father holds me dear,
His goodness shall my guard and shelter be.

Another, heaven-endowed with worldly gain,
May count his wealth and gaze his acres o'er;
May reap his harvest fields on hill and plain,
And heap in barn and bin his fragrant store.

And I may own no inch of tilth or foot
Of fallow in this great wide earth I tread;
Yet am I rich, and need no pledge to boot,
Save God's clear stars above my lifted head.

God's Providence is mine inheritance. Come loss
Or change or grief, whatsoe'er God send,
All things shall work for blessing, and the cross
Be gladly borne if shared with Christ, my Friend.

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL TEACHER AS A LAY PREACHER.

BY MRS. J. M. WYATT.

(Read before the Aberdeen District Conference at Tupelo, and voted by the "brethren" to be published in the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE.)

There is in the world to-day an army vaster than any Spanish aims ent, mightier than the British navy, braver than the Grand Army of the American Republic; a great moral and religious host moving under the banner of Christ against the combined forces of evil; its officers the divinely-appointed ministry of the church, its soldiery the thousands of consecrated Christian workers in our Epworth Leagues and Sunday-schools. fully panoplied in the whole armor of God—the girdle of truth, the breastplate of righteousness, the shield of faith, and the helmet of salvation—they march forth to victory, their feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace, their strong right hands brandishing the sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God. Thus equipped, what may not this valiant, consecrated host accomplish in the name and by the might of the great Captain of our salvation? Wonderful are the possibilities of conquest, glorious the hopes of victory to be achieved by this united army of Christendom. But each private must be heartily pledged to this service; heart, mind, and energies glow with zeal and enthusiasm.

Each Sunday-school teacher is, or should be, just such an earnest, faithful soldier of the cross, for in the conversion and salvation of the world stands side by side with the teacher; in some respects secondary to that divinely-commissioned agent, other particulars occupying a position even more advantageous for winning the hearts, directing the thoughts, and moulding the character of the young. It is universally conceded that one age is determined by conditions existing in the preceding; that one generation, in a large measure, gives character to the next. These are only new ways of expressing the old, old truth, "The child is father to the man." No more condusive proof of this fact could be desired than that furnished in God's own Word by the ever-recurring and elevated emphasis laid upon the discipline and instruction of childhood. Solomon the Wise sounded the key-note to the whole situation when he said, "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it." Our Savior felt the weight of his divine authority in those tender, beautiful words, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of God."

Realizing the importance of this early religious training of the young, the churches, more than a century ago, originated and established what they called, to them the very best, most efficient way of accomplishing this much-to-be desired end—the instruction and conversion of youth; and this time-honored institution of our fathers—the Sunday-school—has lived, grown and flourished for more than a hundred years, enlarging in its scope, improving in its methods, and increasing in usefulness from decade to decade; keeping pace with the progress of the great world as it spins forever through the ringing grooves of change.

Since the Sunday-school is such a potent factor in the ultimate success of the church, it is a self-evident fact that the teacher becomes a very important agent in the salvation of the world. This is manifest for many reasons. First, because the ages of childhood and youth are the highly responsive, plastic periods of life. Then ideas are easily and deeply rooted, thought is quick and active, the heart tenderly responsive to divine truths. The soul of an innocent child is like some sweet, upturned flower drinking the fragrant dews of heaven, and expanding in the mellow warmth of its skies. It weaves its silken texture, borrows its brilliant hues, and distills its delicate perfumes silently, imperceptibly, from the subtle forces of nature. Even so the child's unfolding character takes distinctive form from those early educative influences exerted by parent and teacher, for their work should be truly complementary, the one to the other. Unfortunately, however, in too many instances the Christian Sunday-school teacher has to eradicate the training of godless parents, and hence becomes, in a very marked degree, the spiritual guide, the model, the good shepherd to these tender lambs of the church.

One of the most dangerous tendencies of this age is the failure of parents to take their children to the regular Sunday services in the house of God, thus removing them from the magnetic circle of holy influences emanating from the sacred desk; heedlessly depriving them of the rich spiritual food there dispensed by the faithful pastor, who is yearning for souls as his hire. In this condition of affairs, then, the teacher's influence is even more telling on child life and character than that of the preacher, because of the immediate personal contact, the intimate, affectionate social relations existing between the ideal Christian teacher and his pupils. The daily life of such a teacher will lend weight to his teaching. In everything his loyalty to the church and his devotion to its great Head should be manifested. He should illustrate all the Christian graces in his inner life, and show forth that supreme love to God and his fellow-man which are the unmistakable signs of the new creature in Christ Jesus. Both by example and precept will the wise teacher point the responsive heart of childhood to the "Lamb of God who takes away the sins of the world." By example he will constantly reveal the beauties of a life "hid with Christ in God"—a life replete with the righteousness, peace and joy welling up from a heart where Jesus sits enthroned. No more exquisite setting can be given to this gem of truth than the following lines from Goldsmith:

"And as a bird each fond endearment tries
To tempt its new-fledged offspring to the skies,
He tries each art, reproves each dull delay,
Allures to brighter worlds, and leads the way."

The teacher who conscientiously discharges this sacred obligation is a lay preacher, in the fullest sense of the word—one of whom our Father demands great things, because into his charge have been entrusted sacred responsibilities. For "unto whomsoever much is given, of him shall much be required."

We teachers are stewards of one, two and five talents, respectively. God forbid that any of us should bury our Lord's gift, and return it unto him void of interest and increase. It is ours to preach to our pupils in our daily lives a gospel of love, peace, and good-will, accentuated and emphasized by a prayerful, spiritual manner of teaching on Sundays. It is ours to study child-life in its nature, needs and environments, and to bring ourselves into closest, sweetest, tenderest touch with these young minds just fresh from the hand of God; ours to turn their worshipful reverence to a loving Creator "in the days of their youth, while the evil days come not, nor the years draw nigh, when they shall say, I have no pleasure in them;" ours to visit our pupils in their homes, in every particular sustaining to them the same relation which the pastor sustains to his flock; ours to share their joys, enter into their golden hopes and youthful plans, and sympathize with them in all their childish disappointments, sorrows and cares. Never was the injunction to "Rejoice with them that do rejoice, and weep with them that weep," more binding than it is to-day upon the Sunday-school teachers of Christendom. By no means can we more successfully grapple to us the hearts of the young, as it were, "with hooks of steel." It is ours to feel and practice that divine charity which "beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things." It is ours to pray for and with our pupils, laboring personally for the conversion of each of the precious, blood-bought souls entrusted to our tutelage.

Oh, that we, as a great army of teachers, were as keenly alive to the gravity of the situation and the sacredness of our responsibility as we ought to be, as soldiers of the cross and embassadors of our King! Then how soon would the world be brought to the feet of Jesus! How soon would "every knee be made to bow and every tongue be made to confess that Jesus is Lord to the glory of God the Father!" How soon would the weight be lifted from our faithful, overworked pastors, who now feel too keenly and too much alone the burden of souls, which it is our duty—nay, rather, our glorious privilege—to share with them! Let us strike hands with these godly preachers all over the land, becoming fully their associate lay workers; let us pledge them our unwavering support and hearty co-operation; let us teach and emphasize in our classes the truths which they expound from the pulpit. Then, indeed, shall we hasten the coming of that glorious day when all the sainted hosts of earth and heaven shall join the grand class of the redeemed, and sit down at the feet of the great Teacher, Christ Jesus. There shall we learn the everlasting truths of God, recite the lessons of eternity, and sing its triumphant songs, the glad refrain of which shall ever be:

"All hail the power of Jesus' name;
Let angels prostrate fall;
Bring forth the royal diadem,
And crown him Lord of all."

SOUTH CAROLINA LETTER.

South Carolina Methodists are becoming enthused over the Twentieth Century Fund. I am glad that our great church is taking hold of this subject with an earnestness commensurate with her task. Indeed, we face a crisis. Emerson once said that America was another name for opportunity. This is pre-eminently true at this juncture of our history. The new century will afford us opportunities such as we have never known before. If we are prepared for these, the church will witness a forward movement unparalleled in the history of the world. On the other hand, if we rush forward into these fearful opportunities unprepared, we shall experience a failure and a retrograde movement that will stand for ages as a perpetual monument of our folly and neglect.

South Carolina Methodists are beginning to realize the absolute need of Christian education. The competition in our State is waxing fiercer and fiercer; but with all the inducements offered by the State, I believe that the preachers have it in their power to turn the tide in favor of our own institutions of learning.

Our colleges have all had their commencement exercises. Wofford College has closed a prosperous year, and the evidences are that next will be a still more prosperous one. Dr. Carlisle, the honored and loved president, still lives to bless the institution with his wise counsels and sanctifying influence. It seems a pity that such men have to grow old and die. Did I say die? Dr. Carlisle will never die. He may cease to move about among us in person after a while, but he will live as long as a Wofford boy lives, or Wofford College has a history.

The Columbia Female College has had a good year. Dr. Rice, the active and able young president, is making a strong fight to establish the college on a broad and lasting foundation. May he have success!

At the late session of our Conference the Williamston Female College, of which Dr. S. Lander is the honored president, was admitted as a Conference institution. Some of our people are fearful of the effects of a divided patronage, while others think it a wise step. Time only will demonstrate which is the correct theory. No one, however, doubts the ability of Dr. Lander as an educator. His long and successful career is sufficient evidence on this point.

In political circles South Carolina mourns the death of a governor. Gov. W. H. Ellerbe, our former Chief Executive, died some weeks ago. He had been from youth a member of our church. It so happens that the present governor, Col. M. B. McSweeney, is also a Methodist. In fact, we Methodists seem to be in the swim now. May we have sense and religion enough to use wisely and well our opportunities!

Now, I had many things to write when I started, but to record all would extend this communication beyond endurable limits for this hot weather. I mean that it would be unendurable to you and your readers. In fact, I have learned to cut everything short this kind of weather. I preach short sermons, pray short prayers (public), make short talks. By that means I hold my congregations even in the most trying weather.

More and more do I appreciate the weekly visits of your paper to my home. May God bless you in your noble work, and may he graciously sustain you while you toil on in the midst of many discouragements! It takes grit, grace, and gumption to make an editor. May you possess these in great measure!

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

In compliance with an invitation of the pastor, Bro. W. W. Williams, I spent three days, embracing the second Sunday in this month, in Oakland. It was quarterly-meeting occasion, and Presiding Elder Morehead was in place, as usual, diligently performing his ministerial and official duties. After supplying the church with song books, and the people with such good books as they would have, I left the protracted meeting in progress, the pastor being assisted by that noble helper, Rev. W. M. Young.

After spending two days at home, Thursday, the thirteenth, I ran down to Goodman to meet an engagement with the Holmes County Sunday-school Convention, and to spend twenty-four hours with former parishioners and friends. On arrival I was taken in charge by Bro. W. S. S. Harmon, with whom and his charming family I had a delightful home, as in former days. Other former pastors of "old Richland circuit" will join me in expressions of great joy in seeing this brother so worthily walking in the steps of his noble father, the late M. L. Harmon, who was a pillar in the church, and one of the best friends a preacher ever had. May the succession continue for all generations to come!

On Friday evening I ran up to Ackerman, and was met at the depot by Rev. R. M. Evans, and conducted to the parsonage, where a needed night's rest was much enjoyed.

Saturday Bro. Cochran came with conveyance for me and the books to go ten miles to Antioch Church, whither I had been solicited by Pastor W. L. Anderson to spend a week in a meeting, the which has been done to my delight and, I hope, to the profit of many. Bro. Robert A. Clark, student in Millsaps College, was present, and rendered effective service, both in and out of the pulpit. The meeting was conducted on the sensible plan for country churches, of having all the services in the daytime, with dinner on the ground, thus giving preachers and people the benefit of a full night's rest, which is essential for health at this season of the year. The meeting closed yesterday with seventeen accessions to the church on profession, several family altars pledged, a goodly number of books and church papers put in circulation, and much good in other respects doubtless accomplished.

I am now in Ackerman; will aid in a meeting a few miles from here a few days; attend the District Conference here, 27-29 instant, and then return home for a few days of rest with the loved ones.

The protracted-meeting season being on, it is in order for our pastors to see that the churches and homes of the people are supplied with our song books in sufficient quantity for "all the people to sing, not one in ten only." The standard "hymn book" and the "Young People's Hymnal" are so cheap that there is no reasonable excuse for not having an ample supply, especially of the word editions. I have a good stock of each on hand to supply the demands. Send me your orders, and let us put them in circulation.

JACKSON DISTRICT.

That we might suit the convenience of the lay members of the District Conference, we appointed the session to embrace the leisure time of the farming and other interests—July 12-15—and yet the representation from that branch was less than twenty-five per cent. The place of convening—Capitol Street—is the most accessible point on the district, entailing the minimum of time and expense to all.

That no pastor might have the excuse of absence from his pulpit, we arranged to finish the work by Friday afternoon at latest; yet one pastor came not at all, and two others looked in upon us for only a little while, and took their departure without one word of report from their works. Brethren, why this?

Dear brethren, suffer a word of exhortation. One-half, and more, of the Conference year has passed, and we have just entered upon the third quarter. A careful review of the work to the close of the second quarter develops the fact that not a single pastor had, at the time of holding the second Quarterly Conference, received one-half of his salary. One had received 43 per cent.; no other exceeded 33 per cent.; several 25 per cent. only; five less than 20 per cent., and two of these only about 12½ per cent.

Now, my brethren of the stewardship, it is with you to remedy these conditions. Your pastors are dependent upon you. The economy and education of our church make this your duty. Few will pay except as you call upon them. One strange feature appears: The pastors concerning whom I have heard the kindest expressions from the people are the lowest in scale of receipts. Who is to blame? With families to support, and no time for anything outside of their ministerial work, your representative among the people—some of these "your servants for Christ's sake"—have not received as much as the wages of a common day laborer. The average clerks in the crossroad stores have received far more.

Brethren, remember these men of God among you. Honor yourselves and the Lord by honoring them. How some of them have fed and clothed their families I know not, and yet a more cheerful, uncomplaining set I have never met. That you may have no doubt as to their sincerity, they murmur not; "they seek you, not yours." And yet he who boasted this declared that the laborer was worthy of his hire. "Muzzle not the ox that treadeth out the corn." Your pastor may not be all you desire. On the other hand, are you perfect? He may not be as diligent as you think he should be. Have you met all of your appointments and promises?

Let me say, my brethren, that the amount promised is the minimum, and in some cases is too small; therefore, do not fail to meet these claims in full.

I believe the pastors on the Jackson district are as good and faithful men as can be found anywhere, and it is with you to hold up their hands and encourage them as your leaders. Will you do it? During the five months that remain let the motto of everyone be, "My fullest duty," and our district will stand at the head.

Please suffer one more word: Many of our Quarterly Conferences are too poorly attended. Whether intentional or not, to be absent from these meetings is to discredit the pastor and show an indifference toward the work which is discouraging.

Hoping that my brethren will take what I have written in love, and praying God's blessings upon all the work and workers of the church, I am,

Yours for Christ's sake,

T. B. HOLLOMAN.

A WHOLESOME EXAMPLE.

The Quarterly Conference of the First Methodist Church of this city, the official body of the church, and authorized to speak for the church on all matters, being its governing body, has adopted the following resolutions commending Mayor Todd for suppressing the blind-tigers in Jackson:

"Whereas, For some time past the local-option law has been so flagrantly, openly and defiantly violated in the city of Jackson without any apparent hindrance on the part of the officers of the law, and inasmuch as it was evident that this spirit of lawlessness had begun to permeate the social fabric of our community to that extent that the lives and characters of our young men were being seriously affected, and the enforcement of law a farce, the officers themselves were fast becoming subjects of ridicule and disrespect; therefore, be it

"Resolved, That we hail with delight the successful effort now being made by our mayor, John W. Todd, to enforce this law, and we feel that we but voice the sentiment of every good and law-abiding citizen in Jackson when we are thus seriously affected, and promise him our earnest co-operation and support.

"Resolved, That we believe that Hon. John W. Todd has demonstrated in the last few days that the local-option law can be as easily and as effectively enforced as any other law in the code."—Daily Picayune.

We commend the example of Mayor Todd to those charged with the enforcement of law everywhere.

COURAGE.

It is not they that never know
Weakness or fear who are the brave:
Those are the proud, the knightly few
Whose joy is still to serve and save.

But they who, in the weary night,
Amid the darkness and the stress,
Have struggled with disease and blight,
With pitiful world-weariness:

They who have yearned to stand among
The free and mighty of the earth,
Whose sad, aspiring souls are wrung
With starless hope and hollow mirth:

Who die with every day, yet live
Through merciless, unbrightened years,
Whose sweetest right is to forgive
And smile divinely through their tears:

They are the noble, they the strong,
They are the truest, the trusted ones,
And though their way is hard and long—
Straight to the pitying God it runs.

WHAT IS NECESSARY TO MAKE A SUCCESSFUL PASTOR?

BY REV Q A OATS.

(Concluded)

There is an unfortunate mistake indulged in by some pastors that consists in themes, expressions and allusions that deal with indelicate questions in a flaunting and coarse manner, that, in many cases amounts to blatant vulgarity. The pulpit should always be a model of refined and pure manners and speech. While this is a dangerous tendency, yet there is danger on the other extreme. A false idea of delicacy may lead the pastor to ignore existing evils that deserve plain and positive treatment in his pulpit. It can not be questioned that things are allowable and sometimes necessary in the pulpit that would not be before any other promiscuous assemblage. In such cases the pastor may find a morbid squeamishness that will cause an unjust cry of alarm over a thing mentioned in the pulpit, or alluded to, that is so prominently practiced as to cause no sense of shame anywhere else. I have serious doubts of the practice in some pulpits of preaching sermons to men only, and to women only, when the other sex is excluded, and the intention is to deal with things in a way not suitable in a mixed audience. I have yet to know of a condition of evil that would not bear treatment in all sufficient plainness before a promiscuous audience when due care was taken in the use of terms and manners of expression. Let no man conclude that the special liberties of the pulpit constitute a license for impure speech and coarseness.

In pastoral work there are many difficulties and dangers to be guarded against. There is always need of serpentine wisdom and dove-like harmlessness. The eyes and ears should, in the main, be well open, and the tongue under control. He should be desirous of knowing all that may enable him to work wisely; yet there are always many things it would be best for him not to know. It is a real virtue to desire ignorance of evils we can not remedy, and especially so when they would place barriers in the way of doing men and women good. In my personal experience I have found myself materially hampered in my dealings with people in my charges by somebody having unwisely related to me unfortunate things regarding them. The pastor should always discourage such informers. There are things, however, he needs to know for his own protection, and information regarding them should be thankfully received.

A pastor should never repeat harmful things among his people, however worthy they may be of his confidence. I have known of some pastors becoming in this way veritable newsmongers, while utterly unconscious of their fault.

The pastor should wisely guard against becoming a partisan in family and neighborhood troubles, and to do so will often require the utmost diligence and skill. He will always find one side more to blame than the other, and his sympathies will naturally go out to the injured party, and the temptation will be great to unnecessarily display them to one or both sides. He should be a peacemaker, yet, in attempting it, he needs to be master of the most delicate skill; otherwise he is in danger of doing more harm than good. I have known more than one pastor to do absolute harm, and ruin his own influence, by over-anxiety and unwise efforts to settle difficulties among his people. The pastor should always be wise enough to discern possibilities and impossibilities, and to know when, where, and how to act.

Pastural visiting, to be a success, should be studied as a science. It is possible to be a numerous visitor to little or no purpose. There is danger, on the one hand, of making the visits too much of pleasant social affairs, and on the other all formal, and unpleasantly religious. He should never neglect to be pleasant and entertaining, and may often win his way to great good in being interested in the business enterprises, and in the modes of pleasure pursued by each member in the home, and he should never forget that his supreme duty is to lead them to Christ, and into holy thinking and living. He can not be governed by any cast-iron system. There are some pastors who have a regular order of religious exercises that they must go through with in every home, it differs not what may be the circumstances. They will read and comment on a long chapter, and pray a long prayer, though the children may all be sick, or the good sister's week's baking may all be burning up, or the week's washing may be left standing in the tub, or some urgent demand to attend some other important matter. The fewer visits such pastors may make, the better it will be in such homes for the cause of Christ. It may be that all religious services should be let alone sometimes, but, in the main, a wise, apt, and spirited short service will do good. In most instances it will be expected and appreciated. The people should be taught to expect it and to prepare for it.

There is a danger to some pastors that I have seen much of during recent years, and have seen great disaster to the cause of Christ to follow. It is the disposition to create and cultivate a personal party in the church. They are usually men gifted with what is termed personal magnetism, ardent temperament, ambition, and sometimes brilliancy. Such men easily mistake their ambitions zeal for ardent faith and consecration, and all opposition as persecution, and finding themselves easy masters of a large following, they mistake the infatuated enthusiasm of their party for a wise appreciation and endorsement. Such men always weaken the cause, and often break up strong churches. In every case the men who follow them are more or less sacrifices, and years of wise labor is usually necessary to get the church back into a desirable condition. In every such case the man should have wisdom, grace, and consecration enough to say to his Bishop, "Move me." It naturally pleases us all to feel that we are popular, and to desire it in a true sense is a laudable ambition; but we need to be wise enough to detect its dangers, and to have grace enough to put a stop to it before harm results, let it cost us what it may.

There are cases in which the ambition for popularity takes a very dishonorable turn, and works great injustice to all parties. To illustrate: I have known pastors to take care of personal popularity at the expense of candor by encouraging the impression among their people that they are the only people they have any desire to serve, and if they should be moved from them, it would be against their wishes, and injustice to both people and preachers. At the same time the preacher of this class would be zealously clamoring for a better place at the hands of the appointing authorities. The preacher who follows such a man is usually a sacrifice, more or less, to these unrighteous machinations, and the people blindly believe they have been dealt unjustly with by the authorities of the church, and their loyalty is tainted.

There are brethren who carry the mischief even farther. They will manage to keep in touch with their enthusiastic and disaffected friends by visits and letters, and will keep them in mind of their supposed unjust treatment, and will put every obstacle possible in their successor's way by adverse criticisms and comparisons. They actually sometimes encourage the people to put the money into their hands that is justly due their own pastor. I would more readily vote to locate such a man than almost any other, and would be sure not to allow any Bishop or presiding elder the liberty to employ him.

A true pastor will always retain great love for his former charges, and feel deep solicitude for them; but he will realize that much delicacy and skill should be exercised in all his intercourse with the people, especially when there may be dissatisfaction towards their pastor. I have known pastors, after leaving a charge, to solicit and claim it as a sort of personal right to return to marry the young people, to baptize the children, and even to officiate at funerals. The circumstances ought to be very peculiar in which a former pastor will feel anything zeal to return to his successor's charge to perform such offices. Methodist pastors should be brethren, remembering that one can not be wronged without injury to all, and all should be concerned to keep the office pure.

"THAT PARSONAGE."

Yes, I "have seen it," or its counterpart, Bro. Williams, and I hope it may tumble down before Bro. Wakeman is sent there. If it does not before, it surely will after, for he has a way of making things lively. He would not sit down and sing—

"Except the Lord doth build the house,
The labor is in vain."

I rather think he would change it to suit the case and sing—

Except I bear this shanty down,
They'll patch it up again, and the very first string those slowites would know some of them would be on the 'Building Committee," with as many "plans" as Gradgrind.

Just let me tell you what Bro. Wakeman did last and this year. He was sent on a circuit not very far from "Post Oak circuit." There was no parsonage at all, and he lived in "his own hired house" one year—yes he lived in three hired houses—and he said unto himself and others: "We must have a parsonage. We have the lot and we must have the house." Bro. Holdback said, "We are not able just now to build." Bro. Weakley said he "was afraid they would get the church into a debt they could never pay off." Bro. Windward said he "was willing, but they would have to see which way the wind was blowing first, and there was no need of haste." Bro. Bossem said he thought they had better find out how much they could get the thing started for and pick out the site. Bro. Humpit said he thought they "had better go to work." Bro. Wakeman seconded that motion with all his heart, and they had to hustle from that on, and the parsonage was a thing like "Mr. Finney's turnip"—"and it grew and it grew." And today Bro and Sister Wakeman are domiciled in "that parsonage."

It is a thing of beauty and a joy to its inmates, and all that go there find a hearty welcome. One little lamb has been added to the fold, and, although it is not "after the similitude of a palace," or quite finished in its belongings and tasteful touches of paint and varnish, yet it is home—a home for the weary itinerant and his dear little heroine he calls wife, and who has worked nearly as hard as he has to bring all this to pass.

There were some rough places to smooth over while this work was going on, but Bro. Wakeman seemed to ignore the stumbling-blocks and pushed on.

If "that parsonage," which is "the shabbiest house in town," had Bro. Wakeman for an inmate, things might change for the better. The 'Rip Van Winkles" would be astonished some fine day. "Who is to blame?" Bro. Williams.

W. F. M. S., LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

The Annual Meeting of the W. F. M. S., Louisiana Conference, convened in Minden, June 15, 1899. The opening exercises began at 10 A. M., with a devotional service conducted by the president, Mrs. LaPrade. The usual business regulations followed, and through the hours set apart for the sessions of consecutive days everything moved smoothly, harmoniously and prayerfully to the close. The delegation was small, owing to some misunderstanding or inadvertence of the societies as to the appointed time.

Several of the executive officers were unavoidably absent. The corresponding secretary, providentially hindered, sent her report; the treasurer was not present, to the regret of all, but her report was presented in the usual neat form; the faithful recording secretary, who, for fifteen years, has been promptly at her post of duty, was detained en route by sickness, and her place was filled by Mrs. Jno S Young, pro tem.

Notwithstanding all these and other hindrances, the efficient president and delegates present rallied to the needs of the hour, and, with the assistance of the local society (invited to voice and vote in the proceedings) and the preacher in charge, the meeting proved a profitable and enjoyable occasion. To the "faithful few," however, who labored under such disadvantages, the exigencies of the situation emphasized the importance of representation in the Annual Meetings from every auxiliary (and we venture to add, by way of suggestion, that those present certainly deserve no criticism from the "stay-at-homes"—Ed.)

Mrs L. Prade gave an interesting account of the late meeting of the W. B. F. M. in Nashville, and infused much of her enthusiasm into the workers who heard her.

The committees all presented fine reports. It is a source of thanksgiving that no death within our Conference was reported.

Two young women are before us as applicants for foreign work—Miss Helen Johnson, who hopes to be allowed a course in the training-school, and Miss Nettie Peabody, who has attended the school one session, and is full of zeal and anxiety for a life of usefulness in the regions beyond.

The officers elected for the next fiscal year are: President, Mrs. W. H. LaPrade; vice-president, Mrs. T. K. Faunt Le Roy; recording secretary, Miss Lizzie Paxson; corresponding secretary, Mrs. J. T. Foster; treasurer, Mrs J. J. Holmes; alternate to W. B. F. M., Mrs LaPrade; editor of column in NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, Mrs. T. P. Fullilove. District secretaries: Arcadia district, Mrs. O. P. McDonald; Alexandria district, ——; Baton Rouge district, Mrs B. E. Eskridge; Delhi district, Mrs E. W. Anderson; New Orleans district, Mrs. F. A. Dicks; Opelousas district, Mrs. Emma Foster; Shreveport district, Mrs. Burrues Foster.

Shreveport was elected as place, and April as time, for the next meeting in 1900.

Mrs. C. J. Foster, corresponding secretary, reported as follows: Auxiliaries, 20—adult members, 482; Y. P. and Juvenile Societies, 5—Y. P. and Juvenile members, 188; total adult and juvenile members, 670—life members, 21; Bible women supported, 3—scholarships supported, 4; subscribers to W. M. Advocate, 102; subscribers to Little Worker, 54.

The Louisiana Conference pledge of $200 to W. B. F. M. has not been redeemed.

Mrs. S. B. McCutcheu, treasurer, reported (abridged):

The foregoing synopsis of the late Annual Meeting, held at Minden, will be read with interest by the members of the Conference Society, all of whom are, doubtless, anxious to know of the proceedings. This resume is necessarily brief (within the limits of our missionary column), but later on we are promised the "Minutes" in pamphlet form. Every corresponding secretary is requested to collect ten cents each for as many copies as are desired in her local auxiliary, and report the same in her quarterly statement. Please don't neglect this little thing; much depends on the workers keeping in touch with one another.

She has promised to visit other points in our Conference before her return, Sept. 1. We are glad indeed to have her, and her presence will inspire all who are privileged to meet her.

Forest, Flora, and several other auxiliaries have been organized since our last annual meeting.

The Home Mission work in our Conference is encouraging, every year showing growth in numbers and contributions. We raised last year $1 447.50. Since our organization, about five years ago, eleven parsonages have been aided. Yet, from the statistical report in our last Conference Minutes, we note: Pastoral charges, 123; parsonages, 104—leaving 19 to be supplied.

Our desire is a comfortable home for every preacher in our Conference. A Home Mission Society in every charge would soon accomplish this end. Let us press forward to this mark.

The lamented Dr. Morton said of our society, that it was "the right arm of the Board of Church Extension."

But we would not press this line of work alone. In our own land there are so many (not heathen, for all could hear the gospel if they would) who need urging to the supper of the Lamb. With the same earnest, consecrated work that is given by our foreign missionaries to lead the Japanese, Chinese and Mexicans into the fold, city missionaries in all our large cities could reap a rich reward in the salvation of those perishing at our door. Let us no longer "pass by on the other side," but do with our might what our hands find to do.

We regret to note the serious illness of our Conference recording secretary, Miss Inez Watts, with typhoid fever. She has so recently been called to mourn the death of her mother. Our prayers and sympathy are extended the family in their bereavement and this additional sorrow. May it please God to restore her to loved ones and to our work! MRS. J. B. CHATFIELD,

Vice-Pres. H. M. S., Miss. Conf.

The Christian Life.

CHRIST AS A WORKER.

Although the commonest work well done is honorable, every kind of work is not of equal honor. There are some callings in which a man can contribute far more directly and amply than in others to the welfare of his fellow-creatures, and these stand highest in the scale of honor.

It was on this principle that Jesus acted when he quitted the bench of the carpenter to devote himself to preaching and healing. Than these two there are no callings more honorable, the one ministering directly to the soul and the other to the body. By adopting them, however, Jesus stamped a fresh dignity on the work both of the preacher and of the physician, and ever since many in both professions have gone about their duties with intenser ardor and enjoyment, because they have been conscious of walking in his footsteps. But, though his work had changed, he was not less a worker than he had been before. It is a common theme of discussion between manual and professional laborers whether the toil of the hand or that of the brain is the more severe. The artisan thinks that his well-clothed neighbor, who does not need to touch rough materials or lift heavy loads has an easy time of it, while the professional man, harassed with anxiety and responsibility, sighs for the regular hours, the well-learned task, and the freedom from care of the workingman. This is a controversy which will never be decided. But certain—in the case of Jesus, at least—that it was when he entered on his new career that the real hard work of his life began. His three years of work as preacher and healer were years of unexampled toil. Wherever he went multitudes followed him. When he went into any new region they sent into all the country round about and brought unto him all that were diseased in mind or body; the crowds about him sometimes swelled to such dimensions that the people trod one upon another, and sometimes he had not time even to eat. Such was the pressure of congestion of work with which he was beset. It is the kind of life which many have to live in this busy age; but we can look to Jesus and see in what spirit to carry the burden.—The Rev. James Stalker.

EMULATION AND ATTAINMENT.

Man is an imitative being; he copies and patterns after that which he sees and comes into contact with. This he will do both with and without effort. But excellent likeness can only be attained by careful and prolonged effort at reproducing the purest and best, with "a noble emulation" impelling from within. Said a young man, "What an ideal man I could create if I only had the power to combine in one the best things I see in some of the best men I know!" We have that power—the faculty of emulation. And we also have the "pattern of excellence" to imitate, the "model of perfection" to reproduce, even Christ, our great Exemplar. "He is the highest model of religion within the reach of our thought." We are his followers, his imitators. Our business is to show to unsaved men the Christ. We best do this when we exhibit his spirit, and give evidence of having within us his mind. What poor attempts at this we often make! May not the reason be that our life is not so steadily fixed on the model as it should be? To reproduce Christ in our own lives demands close and faithful study of his life, intimate fellowship with him and determined, prolonged effort at reproduction. Excellence will not be attained at once; we should, therefore, not be discouraged, but continually employ the faculty of emulation. The result will be that more and more the Spirit of Christ will possess and dominate us, and we shall become like him.

"Till we, too, change grace to grace, Gazing on that transfigured face"

—Exchange.

As surely as the careful agriculturist will root out all the weeds that he finds, so surely will our Father take from us whatsoever of sin and defect he discerns in us, if we will let him. Many people in India, in the last plague, gave no end of trouble to the sanitary authorities, because they would hide away the corpses in the back of their hovels; when the dead-cart came round they said that there were no dead in the house; and so the corpse remained to poison the atmosphere, and kill some more of them. If we keep our sins huddled up in the back premises of our nature, and try to put a screen between them and God, by impenitence and locking our lips against confession, then God can not cast out the sins that we cling to, and will keep. But if we go to him and say, "See if there be any wicked way in me. Come into the very innermost recesses of my soul; and whatsoever is there smite with thy searching light," which like the old Greek legend of the arrows of Apollo, will slay the pythons, then God will answer the petition, and we shall be delivered.—Alexander McLaren, D. D.

The love of Christ has ever been and will ever remain, the wonder of all wonders, which neither man nor angel can explain. That God's compassion should pour itself out in human tears, that God's tender mercies should link themselves with the affections of a human heart, is beyond comprehension—it passeth knowledge.—Rev. J. K. Millet.

THE SAM JONES CAMP MEETING

Although I do not at present anticipate the privilege of attending this camp meeting, still, as the time for its session approaches, my meditations and desires turn in that direction, and I can but revert to reminiscences of the times that I have been present, shadowed by regrets, deep and heartfelt, that I allowed those golden opportunities to slip away with but little show of personal work for the Master. I have never before felt the least desire to realize the sentiments of the old song, "Backward, turn backward, oh, Time, in thy flight!" until now, when opportunities of the past rise before me, and I feel that I have been a laggard in my Lord's vineyard, that I partook of his bounties, feasted at his board, and then, fed upon and filled with the bread of eternal life, I failed to break it to others; forgot to hold up the lamp of salvation to those who were still in darkness, and spent more time in the useless indulgence of the creature comforts of life than in the earnest and prayerful effort which every consecrated child of God should make to seek lost souls, and bring them to the living fountains of God's saving grace. Oh, these lost opportunities! How they rise up before us and sit as mute accusers of our sinful negligence and indifference! And am I alone in these painful reflections? Are there not others who have likewise neglected their Lord? I have seen those who should be soldiers in King Immanuel's army; those who should be ever ready for battle—"instant in season and out of season." I have seen them sit, with passive mien and quiet demeanor, through a soul-stirring sermon, and then, ere the fruits of that sermon could be tested—yea, even before repentant souls could be called upon to give expression to their sorrow for sin by coming forward for prayer—I have seen those same soldiers of Christ furl their flag, shoulder arms, and march to their peaceful tents, unmoved by any interest as to the effects of the sermon—seemingly actuated by no desire to follow it up with earnest and persistent efforts to "seek the lost," to cheer the fallen, to press in among the careless multitude, and urge the indifferent to arouse from their slumber of death while present opportunity holds the gospel salvation to their lips.

Let me say to all who may read these lines that I write not in a spirit of criticism—for, surely, in judging others I would condemn self—but because I do feel already self-condemned, because I failed to embrace the opportunities in which I might have honored my Lord; and because of the remorse which now besets me I write, hoping to help others, ere it is too late, to see "wherein we have erred," and to feel an overwhelming sense of duty, of responsibility and accountability renewed and increased as opportunities are afforded them, and that they who may be so favored may attend those sevices this year with hearts full of the love of Christ, with a burning desire to save souls, to sink "self" out of sight, and to "work while it is called to-day."

We do not need "talent" in either pulpit or pew so much as we do earnestness, consecration and lively endeavor upon the part of God's people. Let one think, for a moment, what the effect would be if every individual claiming acceptance with Christ would go to those services with but the one thought and desire to be the individual means of bringing a soul out of darkness into light. How God would honor that occasion! How souls would rejoice in the new birth! How criticisms and jealousies and strife would cease to mar the beauty of the occasion, and the hills and vales would resound with united praises of the redeemed, and the old-time religion, pure and undefiled, would fill all hearts, and scarcely would the soul leave those sacred grounds without having felt the joys of salvation. There could be no such thing as failure. Every Christian full of the Holy Ghost—emptied of self and selfish desires, actuated by one motive, by a singleness of purpose, committed to personal effort, with tongue, hands and feet consecrated to God, resolved to speak only for Christ, to think, to work, plan, to do all in one's power for the glory of God—oh, who can estimate results! And yet, is this too much? Is it any more than our solemn duty? Will not God hold us accountable if we do not thus serve him? What right have we to go there with any other motives? How dare we desecrate the occasion by going with a selfish idea of the charge doing us good?"—or "recuperation out in the pure country air—drinking the cool spring waters and resting our tired bodies?" Is it not rather God's opportunity, a time for activity and effort, a banding of Christians together for a mighty crusade against the devil and his works?

Dear friends, let us ponder the subject in the light of our accountability and responsibility. Let us ask God to lead us there in singleness of purpose—not for our comfort, but for his glory. Then let us enter into preparation for the occasion, and, solemnly and prayerfully divesting ourselves of "self," let us first purify our own hearts, "laying aside every weight and the sins that doth beset us;" let us assemble with pure hearts, clean lives, renewed consecration to our God, and a righteous determination to work and walk as near like Jesus would, were he by our side, as our feeble minds can conceive; and, above all, let us forbear to go with a view to self-indulgences, with more thought of worldly comforts than of the work we should do, with the sinful idea of eating and drinking and sleeping and relaxing generally—simply for the benefit to ourselves. Let us, I say, forbear to do these things, lest we do them to our own damnation.

SHREVEPORT DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The recent session of the Shreveport District Conference, held at Coushatta, was remarkable for the brotherly love and harmony which prevailed throughout the entire Conference. Everyone seemed to esteem other better than himself. It was in many respects the most pleasant District Conference I have ever attended.

Dr. Sawyer presided with dignity, but not with stiffness; with brotherly love and pleasantness, but not with partiality nor lightness. The addresses were all of a high standard.

The presiding elder preached Sunday morning to the delight and edification of the large audience.

The secretary, Bro. Evans, will give you a more extended report, but I desire to give you the following resolutions, which, among others, were adopted either unanimously or by a large majority:

Whereas, The settlement of the claim of our church against the United States, commonly called the "War Claim," is causing much unwholesome discussion and controversy as to the methods used by our Book Agents and their attorney in obtaining settlement of said claim, and that the unsatisfactory condition of affairs over this settlement is doing great harm to our church; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Shreveport District Conference express that, in their opinion, it is expedient to call a special session of the General Conference to settle this vexed question in accordance with the honor and purity of our beloved church.

Resolved, That we consider it desirable and expedient for our Annual Conference to elect afresh delegates to the said General Conference.

Resolved, That our delegates to the ensuing annual session of the Louisiana Conference be requested to vote in accordance with the above resolutions.

Resolved, That we continue to give the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE our hearty support, and will do all we can to increase its circulation.

Besides these, we passed strong resolutions against the use of tobacco, and in favor of prohibition of the liquor traffic; also in favor of aggressive missionary movements at home and abroad, and our colleges—Centenary and Mansfield—as well as on Sunday-schools, Sunday Observance, Tithe Law, etc. All of the above resolutions were introduced by the Committee on Resolutions, and all were adopted without amendment.

ROBT. P. HOWELL,
Chair'n Com. on Resolutions.

TO "REX"

Our brother "Rex" is again protesting against the so-called evangelists, their greed, their methods, and their "jig music," and he is right. But it occurs to some of his readers that the protest might have begun at the name of the camp ground in question, which, from its name, would seem to be the legitimate field of his many imitators.

Secondly, a remonstrance with the Committee on Public Worship who sought to engage one of these "wandering stars," had they not been deterred by his price. Whether this was excessive depended only on the star's drawing power, and this was a question for the stock-holders (supposing the ground in question to be a private enterprise) or their directors to decide. If, on the other hand, the camp ground be the property of the Methodist Church, it should be under the control of her duly authorized ministers, and should be subject to her discipline, which discipline makes no provision for these false lights which lead men astray.

When the church shall return to the old paths, and shall insist that every institution which calls itself Methodist shall be exclusively her own, both in possession and government, then the day-spring of truth will extinguish these "wandering stars;" the "Sun of Right eousness, with healing in his wings," will dissipate these "clouds without rain," and God's people, learning to "separate the precious from the vile," will become as his mouth, who has promised to be both mouth and wisdom to his people. May the Lord hasten the day!

FANNIE MINOR MONTGOMERY.

OUR HOME.

I have just read the journal of our Home at Water Valley, Miss. I was filled with delight as I read the beautiful letters written by the boys and girls published in that paper. Every Mississippi Methodist ought to feel proud of this institution of charity that is destined to bless the future of these boys and girls who have neither father nor mother to love and care for them.

Doctor, I listened with delight to a speech that you made two years ago in favor of this institution being supported by every Methodist in the State of Mississippi in self-defense, as well as to be prompted by a sense of duty to prevent the Roman Catholic Church from making inroads upon our Protestantism by capturing our children and taking them into their institutions of charity, for the same spirit that made old Rome howl when Martin Luther sounded out the key-note that set to music a burning desire for reformation on ecclesiastical lines throughout the Roman Empire is in them to-day as deep as the capacity of the human soul will admit. The same spirit that led Thomas Cranmer, Ridley, Hugh Latimer, and others to the stake would lead the Protestants of to-day there if they only had the power to do so. I appeal to every pastor throughout the bounds of our Mississippi Conference to make this institution a subject of prayer and effort for large donations to insure its continued prosperity and success. May it live long and grow to bless the boys and girls who may have and enjoy the benefits accruing to them through this home for the poor and destitute of our State!

ROBT. H. BARR.

Matherville, Miss., July 18, 1899.

We need not go three days' journey to Mount Moriah in order to erect an altar and offer a sacrifice; there is place for an altar everywhere, and the first uneasy burden that comes to us to be borne, the first expensive duty that comes to us to be done, if borne with the gentle obedience with which Christ bore his heavier cross, and done with the tender submission with which Abraham laid upon the wood his precious offering, will likewise take us up a little way through the cloud toward the clear shining, and give us intimations, at least, of the same voice of promise that spoke peace to troubled Abraham and that made blessed even his hour of struggle and pain.—C. H. Parkhurst, D. D.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. Nolan B. Harmon, Ellisville, Miss., July 18, 1899: "The protracted meeting held during the month of June at Ellisville was a success in every way. The Rev. P. R. Knickerbocker was greeted at the first service by a crowded house, and for nine days he held the crowds—our large auditorium, together with the Sunday-school room, being insufficient to accommodate the people. Several nights the ushers were compelled to turn quite a crowd from the door. The results were 22 accessions and a spiritual uplift given to the church. Last year the Rev. H. W. Knickerbocker, now of Los Angeles, Cal., assisted; this year the Rev. P. R. Knickerbocker, of Crowley, La. Now the brethren say Bro. Herbert Knickerbocker, of Texas, must come to us in 1900, the Lord willing. What's the matter with the Knickerbockers? They are all right! There is a sweetness and freshness about their sermons that reminds one of a garden of roses washed in dew. Nevertheless its the old fashioned gospel in its pungency and power. . . . Last Sunday, July 16, Rev. M. L. Burton, agent of our Orphans' Home, was with us at Ellisville. He gave a good sermon in the morning and a strong Epworth League talk at night. The weather was extremely sultry, but he was faced with a fairly good congregation. The collection for the Home amounted to $50.05 in cash."

The farmer who keeps bees plants buckwheat handy to the hives. He understands that to put flowers rich in honey where the bee can get them with least effort, means an increase in the quantity and quality of the honey garnered in the hives.

It is on this principle that Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery increases the quantity and quality of the nutrition of the body. The ingredients of this medicine are selected to furnish the blood and stomach with the essential materials for body building, in a concentrated and assimilable form. They make the conditions under which the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition must work, as easy as possible, and so reduce strain and waste. As the strength of the body is re-established disease is thrown off. It is due to this fact that persons with weak lungs, obstinate cough, bronchitis, and other diseases, which if neglected lead to consumption, find a complete cure by using "Golden Medical Discovery."

"Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is the best blood purifier that I ever used," writes Mrs. M. Hartrick, of Demster, Oswego Co., N. Y." It is about three years since my health began to fail. Last September I gave out entirely with what the physicians pronounced enlargement of the liver. My back pained me all the time; the doctor said I must not ride, in fact I could not ride nor walk, nor hardly sit still; could not lie on my right side. I commenced taking the 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pellets,' took them for three months, and still continue the 'Pellets.' I will be glad if I can say anything to help those who are suffering."

SHAPING THE FUTURE

BY JOHN G. WHITTIER.

Think ye the notes of holy song
On Milton's tuneful ear have died?
Think ye that Raphael's angel throng
Has vanished from his side?

O no! we live our life again;
Or warmly touched, or coldly dim.
The pictures of the past remain--
Man's works shall follow him!

God's acceptance of imperfect service seems to me a glorious thing. —Austin Phelps.

Our education will never be completed till every good possibility has been fully developed.—W. A. Duncan.

One should count the cost before going to war, and if he can not stand the strain, let him not draw the sword.—Gail Hamilton.

The only possession we can carry to heaven is a Christ-like character. Is it not worth while to seek that more earnestly than gold or silver? —Selected.

It is not so much what is thought and said that matters, but when, where, and to whom it is uttered. Striking a light over a wet blanket is one thing; over a barrel of gunpowder is another.—Exchange.

It is as important to know when to be silent as when to speak. Socrates is said to have asked a very talkative young man a double price for a course of lessons on oratory. When asked why he charged double, the answer was, "Because I must teach you two sciences—one, how to be silent; the other, how to speak."—Selected.

Secular education without moral culture dwarfs the soul. It may make the keen intellect, but it starves the conscience. It may whet the wit, but it lets loose the smart rascal to prey upon society. The entire nature must be trained and developed. Education and religion must go hand in hand to the right exercise and proper development of man.—Presbyterian.

I saw a delicate flower had grown up two feet high between the horse's path and the wheel track. An inch more to the right or left had sealed its fate, or an inch higher; and yet it lived to flourish as much as if it had a thousand acres of untrodden space around it, and never knew the danger it incurred. It did not borrow trouble, nor invite an evil fate by apprehending it.—Thoreau.

When you settle the question whether you will drift or pull in life's stream, you decide whether you will be the master of your own actions, or whether you will let the current decide your course for you. You can drift but one way—down stream; but if there is strength in the arms that wield the oars, you can make your way up stream, to your chosen destination, against the force of the current.—Exchange.

Physical pain is "a blessing in disguise," a reminder that we are not in harmony with the original design of our creation. It comes, like the fire-alarm, to warn us of danger, to ward off real evils, such as might otherwise result in dangerous disease or death. Pain in the brain, stomach, muscles, the eyes, etc., is but another method of saying that these organs are being overworked, abused, in danger.—Selected.

SINS OF THE BODY.

Every now and then there is an appearance of that ancient and heretical notion that after conversion sin is almost entirely, if not altogether, of the body, and, therefore, does not bring the believer under condemnation. Even in this enlightened age there are not a few professed Christians who seek to excuse evil in their lives on the ground that it is chargeable to the essential corruption of the physical nature, and who believe—or, at least, profess to do so—that the soul can remain pure while the body indulges in iniquity of various kinds. Since it is the spiritual, not the physical man, that is regenerated by divine grace, it seems plausible to attribute our sins and shortcomings after conversion to the fleshly nature, which still bears the mark of infirmity and sin. To suppose, however, that professing Christians can "yield their members as instruments of unrighteousness unto sin," and be blameless in the sight of God, is to be guilty of infinite folly as well as of gross misinterpretation of the Scriptures.

While it is true that the body is not renewed in conversion, or at any period during our pilgrimage upon earth, it should be remembered that it is not the body that is the seat of sin, but the soul—that part of us which thinks and feels and wills; that invisible, intangible something within us which loves and hates and hopes and fears. The body will not be transformed and glorified until the glad day, when, at the end of all things, our Lord himself shall come again in the clouds of heaven with all his holy angels, and shall gather together his elect from the four winds. While these tenements of clay that we now inhabit will not be glorified and delivered from weakness and corruption until the resurrection morn, the grace of God can convert them even here in this present time into fit temples for the indwelling Spirit. Frail and sin scarred as the body is, God designs to fill it with his spirit, if we will but yield ourselves to him. Addressing himself to the Corinthian Church, Paul says: "Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you? If any man defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy; for that temple of God is holy, which temple ye are." Though subject to infirmity and the occasion of manifold temptations, the Word of God thus plainly declares that the body of the disciple of Christ is holy. Whatever may be the infirmities of the flesh, it is a grave error to regard the bodily nature as the seat and source of sin, apart from the operation of the will. Jesus gave not the slightest hint that evil originates in the flesh, and hence is to be passed over as not involving guilt. He ascribes all sin—both of thought and conduct—to the heart, to the corruption of the spiritual nature. "Out of the heart," said he, "proceed evil thoughts, adulteries, murders, theft, fornications, blasphemies. These are the things that defile a man." Thus the blame of depravity is located where it belongs.

When we have been justified by faith and renewed in the divine image by the Spirit of God, grace is given, so long as we will receive it, to walk in the light, and gain the victory over the appetites and desires of the flesh as well as over the sinful tendencies of the spirit. The dominion of sin is broken, "and a gracious bias towards righteousness and holiness is imparted to the will." We are not responsible for sin except as it is the conscious, voluntary infraction or neglect of God's commands. Every evil act the body performs, or sinful indulgence it revels in, is, after all, the act of the soul, for the two are, until death parts them, but one entity.

The flesh is simply the instrument of the soul, the medium of its operations. The body does not act apart from, or in spite of the will, but in obedience to it. No murderer or thief would dare to plead in court that his body alone was blamable for the crime committed; that his mind and soul were innocent of evil. There is, then, no escape from the conclusion that whatever of wrong any man commits is the outward manifestation of sin in the soul, either of acquiescence or of deliberate purpose.

The service, then, of God includes not merely the spiritual nature, but the whole man. Both body and soul are to be surrendered to the Lord to be the instruments of his will. The Scriptures repeatedly emphasize the duty of honoring God in our bodies, and teach in unmistakable terms the impossibility of serving him acceptably without such dedication. "They that are Christ's," declares Paul, "have crucified the flesh with the affections of lust." Again he asserts, "If ye live after the flesh, ye shall die; but if ye, through the Spirit, do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live." And again he says, "I beseech you, therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy and acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service."

The resolution to yield the body to God must be formed and put into effect by daily striving. How can we be the servants of Christ if our lips speak not words of comfort and blessing? if our feet are not swift to run errands of love and mercy? if our hands minister not to the needy? if our eyes look not upon that which is good? if our ears are not eager for the truth? Not all have made this complete self-dedication; but without it we are only half-Christians. The offering of Christ avails not for our redemption until we have made an unreserved offering of services.

As the "Expositor's Bible" rightly says: "It is only through the body that we can serve our generation by the will of God. Not without the body, but through it, the Spirit must tell on the embodied spirits around us. Without the body, where should we be as to other men?"

MILLSAPS COLLEGE—RETROSPECT AND PROSPECT.

The history of this institution is not long, but it is brilliant. From the hour of its inception to this good day the leadings of Providence have been manifest, and the faithful following of the same has been the joyful purpose of its friends and promoters. The great historian of Methodism said of John Wesley's ready and loyal following of Providence, that it was "the crowning maxim of his philosophy and the crowning fact of his policy." The emulation of that spirit and principle has been the earnest desire of those connected with the establishing and promoting of Millsaps College.

The readiness with which the church in Mississippi responded to the proposed founding of such an institution evidenced the need and timeliness of the movement. The very first appeal resulted in an offering of about three thousand dollars. The first term of the college was patronized far beyond the most ardent expectation. Every year confidence in the enterprise has increased, and the work of the institution has commanded generous and general appreciation.

Our alumni are already taking position in the professional and business world, and several young ministers promise much to the church. The work done is thorough and conscientious, and by earnest, progressive, well-equipped professors intimately acquainted with the best modern educational methods. I know of no institution that in so short a time has wrought so remarkably and written so large a history.

The outlook for next term is reported to me as most hopeful. A large number of old students will return, and applications are daily coming in for rates, rooms, etc. The graduating class next year will be the largest in the history of the college. Without a particle of reserve, and with full knowledge of the facts, I have no hesitation in saying that our people can find in this section no better place for the thorough education of their sons under positively wholesome and Christian auspices. I have no sympathy with that sentimental church loyalty that demands the support of an institution at the sacrifice, educationally, of your son. We are under the highest obligation to give our children the best possible advantages. To imperil their future for a sentiment, however beautiful or sincere, is little less than criminal. Church schools must, therefore, provide the best possible facilities if they are to command the support of the church. With this rigid view vividly in mind, I advise, with all good conscience, the increasing patronage of Millsaps College. Your sons will here find a Christian atmosphere and the highest collegiate training. CHAS. B. GALLOWAY.

Jackson, Miss.

LET US BEGIN AT ONCE.

Subscriptions to the Twentieth Century Fund should begin at once in every Conference and congregation. There has been much of discussion and seed-sowing; the beginning of harvest is at hand. We can not longer postpone the active and personal canvass for offerings without imperiling the great movement. In every congregation the work should begin, however small the amount promised. Open the honor roll, and let each giver sign his own name and amount. Each one counts two. The gift of one person will stimulate the thought and stir the conscience of another. Reports from some sections of the church are encouraging; others as yet have done comparatively little. If pastors allow this matter to go over to next year without beginning the canvass, they may expect humiliating results. Enthusiastic leadership will assure an ardent and courageous following.

RALLY IN INTEREST OF TWENTIETH CENTURY FUND.

Bishop Galloway authorizes the statement that he will lead our education rally on Aug. 30 and 31, and urges all members of the Louisiana Conference to attend. The rally will be held in North Louisiana, the place to be announced in ADVOCATE next week. WM. H. LAPRADE,

SEASHORE CAMP MEETING.

Being so situated at the time that it was impracticable for us to attend the Seashore Camp Meeting, we are glad to be able to present the following account of the exercises from the facile pen of Rev. R. H. Wynn:

The twenty-eighth camp meeting at the Seashore Camp Grounds began Wednesday night, July 12, and closed Wednesday night, July 19. There is scarcely any place in the South that is enshrined in the affections of a greater number of Christians than is this hallowed spot, where people from all parts of Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama, and other Southern States, have met in social and religious intercourse, and where hundreds have found Christ.

About thirty-five preachers, traveling and local, were present during a part or the whole of the meeting, there being about an equal number from each one of the three adjacent Conferences. Twenty-nine sermons were preached by twenty-one different men. It is quite an enjoyable intellectual and spiritual feast to listen to such a variety of preachers, but it is questionable whether the effect upon the consciences and lives of the hearers would not be increased by having only a few men specially suited for revival work to do all the preaching.

None of the advertised celebrities were on hand except Bishop Galloway, who was present from Saturday until Monday, preaching twice on Sunday to very large audiences. The writer was not present on Sunday, but learns from other sources that a profound spiritual impression was made by the Bishop's sermons on the texts, Jer. i, 5—last clause—and Gal. vi, 17.

The three presiding elders were present, conscientiously and prayerfully superintending the service, and each of them preached once.

The crowds on the grounds this year have been as large as usual, and the attendance at the services was very good compared with other years. The experience meetings conducted at the 8:30 morning service were invariably precious seasons. Very faithful and earnest preaching was done, and there were a number of bright conversions and reclamations, while a very large number of people professed to be blessed in some way.

There were no accessions to the church, as those converted were church members in every instance.

The editor of the Alabama Advocate was present during the entire meeting and made an excellent report for his paper.

Dr. A. E. Clay was present one afternoon with all of the waifs from the Beauvoir home, and conducted the service, making a strong appeal for his noble work.

A NEW BOOK.

THE KINGDOM OF GOD AND PROBLEMS OF TO-DAY. Lectures delivered before the Biblical Department of Vanderbilt University. By Alexander Sutherland, D. D., Toronto, Canada. 12 mo., 240 pages. Price, $1. 1898 Southern Methodist Publishing House, Nashville, Tenn.

There was a time, as the author points out, when the conditions of life of wasps and bees and the habits of earthworms received more attention at the hands of men like Sir John Lubbock and Charles Darwin than was given to the conditions of life among the common people by the leaders of the Christian Church. Happily that day of ignorance, of social ills and of shameful indifference to them has nearly passed away, and now there is throughout the Christian world a deep interest in the study of sociological problems and in attempts at the amelioration of the oft pitiable condition of the masses.

The six lectures which compose this volume are a masterly exposition of what may be called "Christian sociology," and are aimed to show the application of the laws and principles of the kingdom of Christ to social concerns and difficulties. The field that the subject covers is too vast to be gone over fully in one volume; hence the author has not attempted a complete elucidation of every topic touched upon. Nevertheless, he probes matters to the bottom, and has given us some valuable conclusions as well as wise suggestions. After setting forth the fundamental principles of Christianity, the author proceeds to indicate the necessity and the manner of their application to the various problems of modern civilization.

The following live topics are discussed at length, namely: The Liquor Traffic, the Sabbath Question, the Problem of Poverty, Labor Disputes, and Socialism. The tone of the book is bold, but optimistic. The author evidently has unlimited confidence in the efficacy of the gospel to regenerate society and bring about the abolition of the grave evils from which it now suffers. "We can have better social conditions," he remarks, "only when we have better men, and the only way that has yet been discovered of making better men is the transforming power of the Spirit of God." On the other hand, the author believes that the church will be guilty of great folly and neglect should she attend merely to spiritual things. He says in this connection: "The church needs to learn what this meaneth, 'Man shall not live by bread alone;' no, nor even by religion alone. No one thing—not even religion—can fill the whole round of man's needs, and the church must learn to champion the cause of the toiling masses in regard to many things which lie outside of the spiritual realm." The book is able and philosophic in its treatment, and contains much matter of interest to every philanthropist and student of the times. None who read it can fail to be instructed and stimulated.

The number of Roman Catholics in Austria who have passed over to Protestantism during the present movement was estimated at the beginning of March at 5,000. It is thought that by this time it may have reached 10,000. In Vienna alone 600 were converted during 1898, and 250 during the first quarter of the present year. Encouraging reports come in from many other places. In Carlsbad, for example, a Protestant minister acceded to the request of some Catholics to give them instruction in Protestant principles. He expected to find only fifteen or twenty persons. He saw with surprise four times that number, and his labors resulted in forty conversions.—Central Advocate.

Every great success in life is the result of concentrated thought. It is the search-light which the mind sends out, illuminating the path it desires to take. Once learn to focus the mind on a subject, and undreamed-of avenues of knowledge open to the view. Scattering, desultory habits of thought cause many of the worst failures in the world.—Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

It is now claimed that there are in the Southern Methodist Church forty-eight colleges and universities, valued at about $3,700,000, with an income of $583,000, and an attendance of 7,517 students. There are also nineteen academies, valued at $561,850, with an annual income of $66,500, and an enrollment of 2,500 students.—Texas Christian Advocate.

The Wesleyan Advocate, of last week, announces the election of Hon. Walter B. Hill, of Macon, Ga., to the presidency of the University of Georgia. Mr. Hill is a ripe scholar and a man of fine literary attainments. He is a thoroughly consecrated Christian and a polished gentleman in the highest sense of the term. A more symmetrical, better-rounded character we have not met in all our journeyings. We congratulate the patrons and friends of the university on their choice. In our judgment, a better selection could not have been made.

EPWORTH LEAGUE DEPARTMENT.

"ALL FOR CHRIST."

REV. THOMAS B. CLIFFORD, Jackson, La., EDITOR.

REV. HENRY G. HAWKINS, Madison, Miss., ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

Our friend, Hawkins, has recently been elected professor of English in Whitworth Female College.

For some time he tanght in the government schools at Matsnyama, Japan, and prior to entering the ministry was connected with the work of public edncation in his home county in Mississippi.

We shall expect him to stick to the Epworth ship, and help fill the spaco reserved for us oach week in the ADVOCATE.

We are in receipt of the "Epworth League missionary nnmber" of the Midland Methodist, and hereby desire to commend those in charge for their interest and enterprise thns displayed.

The "Holston plan" has been commended by Dr. Hoss and others as a practical means whereby the Leagnes may become enlisted in the regular Conference work, proving themselves to be the pastor's helper, a sort of "junior preacher."

Below we give some excerpts from an articie recently contribnted by Rev. T. C. Shuler, entitled, "The Leagne's Part in the Plan:"

"When the Epworth Leagnes of Holston Conference, one year ago, resolved to assist the pastors in raising in fnil the regnlar missionary collections, and not undertake to support a special missionary in the foreign field, it was not contemplated that the Leagnes shonld pay in fnll the collection for each charge, mnch less that any ten of their members shonld do this. Either wonld be exceedingly hnrtfnl to the missionary interests of any pastoral charge. No wise pastor conld afford to allow any one or two members—ten or twenty—to pay off these assessments for the church, because giving is a means of grace, and every member needs it.

"Bnt the resolution did contemplate the League's assistance in raising the collections. Not for the Leagnes to take this work out of the pastor's hands, nor stand behind him in his work, but right beside him, working with him and for him to fnll collections and fnll liberality. The League simply pledges itself to see that the missionary money of each pastoral charge is paid in full, and after doing all that can be done lawfully, as a last resort pays the deficit itself. It is not the guarantee that is valnable, but the League that makes the gnarantee.

"But the League is not to resort to clap-trap methods to do this work. There are to be no cake-walks, ice-cream suppers, exonrsions, etc., bnt it is to be done on the high plane of Christian liberality. There is to be an intelligent, Christian purpose to do this for Jesns' sake.

"The League is to organize, plan, and work to this end. It must put itself in the front. It must lead the entire charge in consecration, in spirituality, and liberality. It mnst be able to teach by example and precept the great, fundamental truths in the 'Go ye into all the world.' The League's part is to make every member of the church intelligent and effective as a contributor to missions; to bring about a real missionary church. It is to secure the missionary money by a process that will bring to the church the highest type of Christianity. It is not to exhaust the resources of the church, bnt to enrich with the deposit of a broader faith, a trner purpose, and a higher aim, thereby making it possible to always, hereafter, raise the fnll amount assessed for missions.

"The League's part, then, is to assist the pastor in raising his collections. To put itself under contribution to the pastor, to plan with him, to work with him, to see those whom he can not see, and never quit the field until the last cent is paid over."

In every great movement there is a single chief-inspiring soul. But this spirit must find responsive spirits. Thus it has been observed that in every reform, or other great achievement of history, there have been several inspiring spirits concentrio abont one chief-inspiriting soul. There is first a leader; a few others catch his spirit, and it develops in each one according to the bias and training. This gives variety, breadth, interest to the movement. Each one of this circle of leading sonls inspires all the others, and is inspired by them. Those who have had experience in League work have noticed that in the history of every chapter there was some one who was determined to "make it go." That one was nndannted. The chapter would several times have "fallen through" bnt for that one. Now others have worked enongh in it to love it; they have caught the first leader's spirit; they are now just as determined as he, and, if the leader shonld fall, the work would go on, because some of these can command just as skillfnlly—it may be more so.

Rev. G H. Thompson, of Benton and Midway charge, Mississippi Conference, has some skilled Leagners. They are going to undertake the raising of the Twentieth Centnry Fnnd. That League which has learned to lift instead of always leaning, has caught the right idea.

The chapter of the First Chnrch, Jackson, Miss., recently passed resolutions commending the mayor, Hon. John W. Todd, for his efforts to relieve the city of blind-tigers. It seems that the mayor's efforts have met with snccess, and it is very proper that such efforts receive recognition and commendation. It is disconraging to worth when it is not recognized.

SPANISH-AMERICAN WAR PANORAMA

is one of the war books which is likely to be in continuous demand. It is a panoramic record of the triumph of Yankee Doodle. The eagle flaps his wings on every page, and "Old Glory" waves around and above every scene. Prominent officers connected with the war are here portrayed, as well as many of the "men behind the guns." Military life is pictured to the eye, from recruiting to guard mount and skirmish line. Nor is the ludicrous omitted. The company cook receives the attention due to his importance; the mess is shown; cavalry scenes are given; the hospital arrangements are depicted; the heroines of the Red Cross service are displayed; street scenes in Havana, Santiago and elsewhere are unrolled, the new citizens or subjects (which are they?) of Uncle Sam appear and disappear as the leaves are turned.

In a word, the gazer visits the new localities and sees the tumultuous new life, without the risk or expense of a sea voyage.

The Album is 5½x8 inches, weighs 12 ounces, printed on finest coated paper.

Sent FREE to any address in the United States, Canada, or Mexico, for 12 cents in stamps or coin, to cover postage and packing. Copy may be seen at any ticket office of the Big Four Route.

THE BOY THAT LAUGHS.

I know a funny little boy—
The happiest ever born;
His face is like a beam of joy,
Although his clothes are torn.

I saw him tumble on his nose;
And waited for a groan—
But how he laughed! Do you suppose
He struck his funny bone?

There's sunshine in each word he speaks,
His laugh is something grand;
Its ripples over run his cheeks
Like waves on snowy sand.

He smiles the moment he awakes,
And till the day is done;
The school-room for a joke he takes—
His lessons are but fun.

No matter how the day may go,
You can not make him cry;
He's worth a dozen boys I know,
Who pout and mope and sigh.

AN EVERY-DAY MAN.

Upon the broad Post Office piazza in one of Western Massachusetts' prettiest villages groups of people are waiting for the mail to be "sorted." On one side a half dozen farmers in various-shaded, "second-best" suits, and palm-leaf hats, are discussing the hay crop, while a little apart a gay party, whose negligee suits and freshly-tanned cheeks proclaim them "city boarders," are talking over the latest hop, when from across the street approaches a gentleman who is neither farmer nor boarder. The simple dress and dignified bearing betray nothing of his position in life, and a slight literary stoop of the shoulders gives the only clue to his occupation. Whoever he may be, it is clear that all know and respect him, for, as he steps upon the piazza, all conversation ceases, the farmers raise their hats, and every face smiles a welcome. He smilingly lifts his hat in courtly acknowledgment of the greetings, and after chatting a moment with the boarders, turns to the group of farmers. They listen as if charmed by the kindly face and musical voice, while in tones of genuine interest he inquires of one and another in regard to his family, his farm, or the weather prospects, and later, as he passes down the street with his mail, one says to his neighbor, with emphasis, "Mr. Curtis is a real, every-day kind of a man, and I like him."

To the citizens of the little town among the hills that he called "home," the memory of George William Curtis will always be an "odor of sweet incense," and the gracious life he lived in their midst will exert an uplifting influence far beyond the present generation. "We loved him," said a prominent citizen of Ashfield in a recent public utterance, and the humblest citizen of the town would have heartily echoed, "Amen!"

Two ministers are settled in adjoining and similar parishes. Rev. A. is an eloquent preacher, and attracts to the rented pews of his church a large congregation of well-to-do people, who consider attendance at church their chief active religious duty. He becomes a star at select social and literary gatherings, writes beautiful articles for religious publications, and receives many honors from the local and State church bodies. His parish visits, especially among the humbler people, are far between and formal, and he is always in too much of a hurry to shake hands and chat a moment with the laborer on the street. When, after five years, his sermons secure him a call to a better, paying position, he leaves behind few converts, and a church spiritually cold. Rev. B. is not a gifted preacher, nor does he strive in literary circles. He believes in free pews, and becomes intimately acquainted with everybody in his parish, through neighborhood prayer meetings and frequent personal visits. If he meets a carpenter on the street, he asks about the "new block," and the boys just coming from the ball field are delighted when he asks after the "score," and congratulates them upon their success. His ministry results in the spiritual overturn of the town and the winning of many souls, and largely because he has the pleasant smile, the cordial voice, and the hearty handshake for everybody, that characterize the real "every-day" man.—Exchange.

A WONDERFUL BEING.

What a wonderful being is man! Created in the image of God. The breath of the Almighty within him. Stars and sun make his servants. His scepter given dominion over all animal creation. Destined for two worlds. Made a little lower than the angels. Glory and honor his crown. God standing ready to die for his redemption. Heaven set into a jubilee over his repentance. A son of God—yea, a king and a priest unto God. Certainly his dignity towers up like a mountain. To no other existence outside the jasper walls is attached such significance. And yet how we forget all this! We act as if we were earth-born and earth-destined, and without a higher end than to sport with sin and revel with corruption. How contracted our vision. How little we see the parapets and towers of the next world. How fully we see those of this. How earthly passions play and hold carnival in our hearts. How seldom are we lifted to a third heaven by a touch of inspiration. How we live as if the life were not more than meat, nor the body than raiment. How shadowy and faint, like the first gleams of the morning, are the great realities of the soul, and how thick and heavy the darkness of worldliness and falseness which surrounds us. How the apparent triumphs over the real. But we are the sons of God, nevertheless, and the breath of the Almighty has given us understanding. We should be filled with the thought. To think highly of ourselves will help us to act nobly and well. If tempted, remember you are a prince, and should not act like a slave. What many persons need to do is to discover themselves. They have never been aroused by the thought of who and what they are, and whither they are hastening. If we are the sons of God, we should be like him. If we are hastening into his presence, we should assimilate of character like his own. Our motives and deeds should correspond with our dignity. Young man, young woman, think highly of yourself and lead a worthy life.—Epworth Herald.

THE DUTY OF BEING CHEERFUL.

We speak much of the duty of making others happy. No day should pass, we say, on which we do not put a little cheer into some heart, make the path a little smoother for some one's tired feet, or help one fainting robin unto its nest again. But we are not so accustomed to think of the duty of being happy ourselves. Yet the one duty is taught in the Bible as clearly as the other. Jesus said his disciples should have tribulation in the world, but he said in the same sentence, "Be of good cheer."

That is the problem that is set before us as Christians. We are to live cheerfully. The fact is, however, that not all Christians are cheerful Christians at all times. Some are scarcely ever cheerful—are habitually uncheerful. Others are cheerful only at times, when the sun shines and all things go well with them.

How can we learn to be of good cheer, even in times of trouble? It does not come naturally. Nor does it come even to a Christian without being learned. All the fine things of Christian nurture and Christian culture have to be gotten through discipline. We have to learn to be of good cheer.

Some practical suggestions may aid those who are sincerely desirous of learning this lesson. One is, that we should train ourselves to see the good things, the bright things in life. There are few habits more common, even among Christians, than this of seeing and remembering unpleasant things, and being blind to and forgetting the pleasant things, and there is no habit which is more inimical to cheerfulness.

The truth is, there are in the ordinary life a thousand pleasant things to one that is unpleasant. It is a shame, therefore, to let the one roughness or pain spoil for us all the gladness of a thousand good things; the one discordant note mar for us all the music of the grand symphony.—Forward.

TEMPERANCE.

Mr. Depew's remarks about the decrease of drunkenness among railroad men indicate an encouraging condition of affairs, if true, and we have no doubt of their substantial accuracy. The association has helped to bring a better order of things about. It never has claimed the entire credit. The brotherhoods have aided much. The companies by strict discipline, and the public by more rigid demands, have also helped to raise the standard of manhood. But the work is by no means completed. Drinking is not a lost art. Drunkenness is not a forgotten vice. The tears of wives who suffer and of children who starve are not dry upon their cheeks. Drink, with its attendant evils, is still the greatest enemy of railroad men. There must continue to be relentless warfare against it by all those who wish to see the moral standard of the railroad men raised.—Railroad Men.

CONVERSATION.

Very few persons recognize the large possibilities of good with which conversation is freighted. It can diffuse intelligence, spread knowledge, inspire new ideas, animate the drooping spirit, move the feelings, kindle the affections, stimulate the activities. These possibilities may be gradually made realities by everyone who will constantly and patiently put in practice the two essential parts of good conversation—to seek for the best that is in one's self. No large fund of information, no years of culture, no powers of eloquence are necessary in order to do this.—Exchange.

Happiness does not consist in the honors of the world. There have been those for whom the kingdoms of the world and all the glory of them had no attraction. The heads which wear the crowns still lie uneasy. The greatest conceivable foolery is the hunt for fame. To the living it proves a gilded vapor; the dead are beyond its glamor. Here is the true dream-life—a momentary intoxication and the vision dissolves How few live in the pages of history, and there by what accidents? Difficult of attainment, brief of tenure, impotent of good, fame brings no human soul substantial satisfaction. —Texas Advocate.

Those who think to pursue a course of sin for years, and finally become Christians at the end, little know the power and permanence of evil habit. A tree was once broken down by the wind, but it was found on examination that it had been cracked many years before, and straightened up and healed; but when the strain came it broke in the old crack. A broken bar of iron usually shows an old, rusty flaw; and many a broken-down man may trace the final wreck of his life to the results of sins indulged in years before.—H. L. Hastings, D. D.

Satan sometimes appears as an angel of light Homes are wrecked, and the child's star of hope sinks beneath its ruins. Sin ofttimes moves in noble guise. Morally destructive forces can lurk in flowers and wing on every passing breeze. Young men of seemingly unimpeachable character share the sacred fellowship of splendid circles. They leave behind a virus, the very memory of which crushes and blights. Parents will forever be the sentinels of the arena in which the world's manhood moves. Sin may seek the livery of the skies. By the forgetfulness of this divine right ofttimes we plunge into irretrievable ruin.—Selected.

DANGERS FROM VIOLENT EXERCISE.

There is considerate diversity of opinion as to the safety with which women may indulge in violent exercise in view of possible injury. As regard the heart, there appears to be but one opinion, namely: that that organ, accustomed to a quiet life, may be dangerously and permanently crippled by the excessive strain in athletic sports. Experience in medical practice, says an eminent authority, teaches that the patient with the weak heart must be extremely cautious in his exercises, and the demonstration of a dilation of the healthy heart under sudden violent, exhausting effort which has been made was of a surprising nature. Many clinical observers in Germany and in this country have detected by percussion and observation of the changes in the heart beats that there is under strain and exertion considerable dilation, which continues for a shorter or longer time after the exertion is over. Ocular proof of this has been afforded by the Roentgen rays. This shows not only the need of caution by those in good health, but more particularly so in the case of those who suffer from any weakness, constitutional or otherwise, in this organ.—New York Ledger.

OUR $1 OFFER.

Much has been said about reducing the subscription price of the ADVOCATE. The only way in which a reduction can be brought about is by an increase in the number of subscribers. In order to facilitate this result, we make the following offer: Until further notice we will take new subscriptions at the rate of $1 for eight months. When seven thousand five hundred new names have been sent in at this rate with the cash, we will extend the time four months longer, thus reducing the price to $1 per annum. When the extension is made, old subscribers will get the benefit as well as new ones, provided they first pay up all arrearages. Of course, no commissions can be given under this offer. Address

LIKE A THIEF IN THE NIGHT.

Malaria creeps into the system and leaves a poison which saps its vitality until the well-known symptoms of CHILLS AND FEVER, INTERMITTENT FEVER, CONGESTION, BLOODY URINE, etc., will show their snake-like heads. Fortunately there is an antidote in DICKS' CHILLIFUGE, which absolutely exterminates Malaria in a few hours; so pleasant to the taste that children love to take it. It banishes fevers like mist before the morning sun; brings as a gift rose cheeks, health, happiness, and makes life worth the living

DAVIS—Bro. W. K. Davis was born Jan. 15, 1820, and died April 26, 1899. He was married to Miss Sarah A. Caine, Oct. 29, 1846. Joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1853, and ever after lived a faithful, consistent and devoted member of the same, true to his church vows, and a staunch friend and supporter of his pastor—in fact, a model man in all the relations of life—a true and devoted husband, a kind and indulgent father. He was the father of eight children by his first wife, she having died on the 20th of March, 1879. After the death of his first wife he was married the second time to Mrs. Mary H. Womack on the twenty-second of March, 1880.

I was this writer's privilege to know him intimately or more than fifty years; ever in all these years as a true gentleman and a good citizen, a kind and obliging neighbor. But our friend and brother is gone from among us; but we mourn not as those with no hope, as he expressed himself as being ready and waiting for the change. His mortal remains lie in the old family burying ground where all his good father and mother, sainted wife and many other loved ones are quietly awaiting the resurrection morn, when in my small arise and shine with that bright and glorious flag that shall ever contract rize the children of God and rise upward and onward to meet him in triumph descending the skies. Dear brother, loved companion and his loving and dutiful children and loved ones, to remember that he can not return to them, but they may go to him. He will ever be ready to meet you at the pearly gates of the New Jerusalem, and walk with you the golden streets of the celestial city, where God himself has promised to wipe all our tears away. H. C. Nawson.

Flora, La.

FERGUSON—Mrs. Cynthia Adaline Ferguson (nee Sparkman) was born March 16, 1838, and died May 19, 1899.

These dates bound a life of wifely, motherly, sisterly devotion to duty in all the lines of life common to ordinary mortals. Her life was spent in her native county of Pike, and for many years near the old town of Holmesville, so long the county site. She joined the church, under the ministry of Rev. Henry M. Youngblood, in her twenty-first year, having previously been married to Mr. Jas. A. Ferguson. She became the mother of eight children—five sons and three daughters—five of whom survive her. About ten years ago her husband died.

During the years of my life at Kavanaugh College, in Holmesville, I was a frequent visitor to the Ferguson home. I loved the sweet restfulness of this country home, and I loved more this gentle, pious couple, and the youngest son and daughter—my pupils who were still under the parental roof. I prayed with them; I administered the Lord's Supper to them in the home when Bro. Ferguson became too much of an invalid to get to church, and the memory of these ministrations and associations is very sweet indeed. The strength and beauty of a quiet life—these marked the character of Sister Ferguson. She was ready to go when the call came, and she said so; but if she had left no death-bed assurances, her loved ones could not be in doubt about it, for they have a long life-assurance of her title to a home in the beautiful beyond.

H. Walter Featherston.

FANT—Elmire, infant daughter of Bro. and Sister S. A. Fant, of Johnston's Station, Miss., was born July 19, 1898, and died May 3, 1899.

Brief and beautiful was the life of little Elmire. Like a ray of morning sunshine, she brought joy and gladness to parents, grandparents, brothers and sister; but the cloud of death soon hovered down over the home.

Of unusually lovable disposition, she had already found a warm place in the hearts of the entire circle of neighbors and friends. It is natural that every child should be peculiarly dear to its own parents; but "our baby" had entwined the tendrils of affection about the hearts of many.

For twenty-eight days there was a struggle against the ravages of a wasting, continued fever. All that anxious hearts and willing hands could do was done to effect a recovery. The most scrupulously careful medical attention was given, but, in spite of all, she died. Died? No; she could not die. Like the chrysalis, she broke forth from her temporal tenement beautiful though it seemed to us—and in a higher clime and a glorified form she lives. Shall we not see her again? Yes, I believe it. May Heaven comfort the sorrowing!

J. A. Moore.

PARKER—Mrs. Jettee Parker an excellent Christian woman, well beloved by all who knew her, passed away from earth to glory after a lingering illness of six weeks. She died of that long, lingering disease called consumption. She was only confined to her bed about six weeks. In all her affliction she was never known to murmur or complain at the providence of God. Her only regret was she leaving her children. She said, if it was God's will, she wanted her baby to go with her to the glory-world. Among her last requests was for her pastor to baptize her baby and bow with her in prayer. With meekness, patience, and all the Christian graces the dear suffering displayed, served to lessen and ease the bereaved hearts of her devoted husband and other loved ones.

Sister Parker was twenty-four years and eleven months old. She died July 1, 1899. Just as she is gone, but the world is made better by her having lived in it. She leaves a husband and four children to mourn their loss. They mourn not as those who have no hope, but we expect to meet her again at the right hand of God on high. May God bless this lonely home!

DONAGAN—Resolutions adopted by the Live Oak Sabbath-school of Slidell, La., on the death of Mr. W. C. Donagan, who, for the last five months, has been doing duty in the police force of New Orleans, La., and was accidentally killed while on duty about three o'clock A. M., May 18, 1899.

Resolved, That in the death of our beloved friend and former superintendent, Mr. W. C. Donagan, this Sabbath-school has lost one of its most efficient members, one who has given service as satisfaction to those whom he has served in an official capacity, a worker alone and faithful in his official duties, upholding the work for Christ, and practicing its truths by an honest, truthful and faithful walk in all the avocations of life. A good neighbor and true friend, a kind parent and tender husband. We miss his familiar face and voice in our meeting, and not with sadness his vacancy in our midst; but while we deplore the loss to our Sabbath-school, to his friends, and, most of all, to his family, especially his widow and sweet little girls, yet we would bow in humble submission to Him who doeth all things well, believing, as we confidently do, that our loss is his eternal gain.

Resolved, That we will try and emulate his zeal, and we will cherish his memory as one of the faithful few of our little Sabbath-school.

Miss. S. J. Chaney, for Com.

FISHER—The angel of death has crossed the threshold of another happy home and flown away on its wings the soul of Florence Rebecca, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Fisher. She was born near Edwards, Miss., Dec. 20, 1887, and died June 3, 1899, aged one year five months and thirteen days.

Although her life was short, yet who can measure the height, breadth or depth of her influence in drawing her loved ones nearer Christ? Everything is done with an eye for man's good and God's glory. She was the idol of her fond grandparents, as well as her parents. One month ago, during the little one's illness, she was tenderly watched over day and night by her loving grandmother. Nothing that was done could revive this flower, until, failing away to be revived on the resurrection morn. Grieve not, loved ones, but prepare to meet her in heaven, where to be is a parting. M.

MILLER—In memory of our little brother, Andrew S. Miller, who was born in Leake county, Miss., April 21, 1883, and died in Smith county, Miss., March 8, 1899, aged fifteen years eleven months and sixteen days.

Andrew joined the M. E. Church, South, at about seven years of age, and lived a consistent member until the time of his death.

It was my happy privilege to visit in the home of his parents, Bro. and Sister S. D. Miller, several times during the year I was their pastor, and I always found little Andrew glad to see the preacher. He was a regular attendant at church. He was an obedient son, an affectionate brother, and an agreeable playmate. He left abundant evidence of his entrance into the realm of the pure and the good. Weep not, dear mother and father, brothers and sisters, for your loss is his eternal gain; your grief is his everlasting joy.

P. H. Howse.

CATCHINGS—Mrs. Mollie S. Catchings was the only child of Mr. Jas. A. and Mrs. E. A. Bovard, and was born in East Baton Rouge parish, La., Oct. 12, 1873. In 1879 she moved to Madison county, Miss. On Jan. 5, 1899, she was married to Mr. F. B. Catchings, of Georgetown, Miss. She joined the Methodist Church at the age of fourteen, and was a consistent member. After patient suffering with a lingering illness she died May 24, 1899, in hope of a blissful resurrection.

We can but regret the loss of one who was so bright and happy, and so calculated to scatter sunshine in her new home. We commend the bereaved husband and widowed mother and others to God's sustaining grace.

$100 REWARD, $100

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh, being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials. Address,

JOB EARNED HIS TITLE BY GREAT SUFFERING. Had he flourished in these days, his recourse for consolation would not have been the company of three nagging friends, but a bottle of DICKS' MUL-EN-OL, which has a wonderful power to dissipate the inflammation, cool the feverishness, and completely cure boils and carbuncles.

NAPOLEON LOST THE BATTLE OF LEIPSIC because of a fit of indigestion. One dose of DICKS' MUL-EN-OL would have given him instant relief, and the fate of the kingdoms of Europe been decided differently. It is really marvelous how quickly a colicky pain will vanish when a teaspoonful of Mul-en-ol in a wineglass of hot water is taken. Try it; you will never suffer from colic.

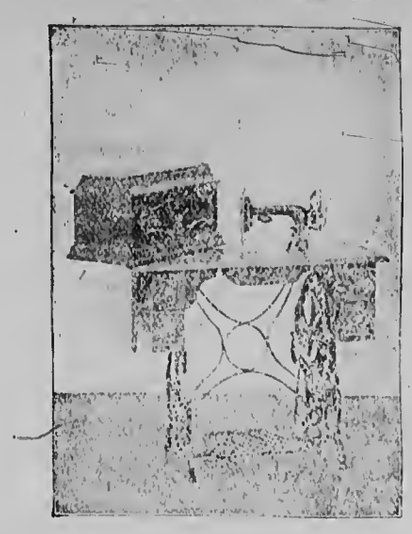
New Machine Offer.

By Far the Best We Have Ever Made.

Always on the watch for something good for our subscribers, we have succeeded in making arrangements whereby we can make a sewing machine offer which is far better than any we have been able hitherto to make. Read the following description and then read our offer:

No. 4 IMPERIAL.



THE IMPERIAL HIGH ARM SINGER will be found the perfection of mechanism as regards simplicity, durability and adaptability to the widest range of work embraced in the general family needs.

A Handsome, Light Running, Lock Stitch, High Arm Machine that will not fail to please the most fastidious. Embracing all the advantages with all desirable improvements of other first-class sewing machines, except complication, that the most inexperienced need no assistance in operating it. Book of instructions with every machine. Any child can learn to run it.

Extra Set of Attachments consisting of the following: One Tucker, One Foot Ruffler, One Set of Plate Hemmers, four different widths up to ½ of an inch, One Binder and One Thread Cutter.

No. 3 Machine, drop leaf table, gothic cover, case of two drawers at one end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $21. Our price, $11.75.
No. 4 Machine, drop leaf table, gothic cover, case of two drawers at each end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $25. Our price, $15.50.
No. 5 Machine, drop leaf table, gothic cover, case of three drawers at each end, making seven drawers in all. Dealer's price, $26. Our price, $16.25.

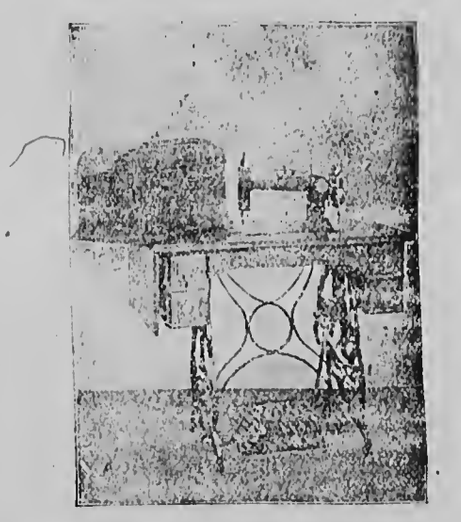
No. 4 Columbian



EXCELLENCE OF THE COLUMBIAN.—All wearing parts are of case-hardened steel possessing great durability, and by the turning of a screw all lost motion caused by wear can be taken up. All parts are fitted so accurately that the machines are absolutely noiseless and as easy running as fine adjustment and best mechanical skill is possible to produce. No expense or time is spared to make them perfect in every respect, as every machine passes a rigid inspection by competent men before leaving the factory.

NICKEL PLATED. The balance wheel and many of the fine parts are nickel plated, with other parts finely encircled and ornamented, giving it a rich appearance.

A Self Setting Needle and Self Threading Cylinder Shuttle are used in the Columbian High-Arm Sewing Machine. They are so simple that any one can easily operate them in a few minutes' time, as our Instruction Book is fully illustrated, showing how to do all kinds of fancy work with attachments.

Extra Attachments, in velvet-lined case, sent free with each machine: 1 Tucker, 1 Ruffler with shirring plate, 1 Hemmer set (4 widths) and Binder, 1 Braider (Foot and Slide), 1 Thread Cutter.

ADDITIONAL ACCESSORIES. Each machine is supplied with the following outfit: 1 Hemmer and Feller (one piece), 10 Needles, 6 Bobbins, 1 Wrench, 1 Screw Driver, Oil Can with Oil, Cloth Gauge and Thumb Screw, and 1 Book of Instructions. The Book of Instructions is profusely illustrated, and answers the purpose of a competent teacher.

No. 3—Drop leaf, Bent cover, case of two drawers at one end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $29. Our price, $17.
No. 4—Drop leaf table, Bent cover, case of two drawers at each end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $31. Our price, $17.75.
No. 5—Drop leaf table, Bent cover, case of three drawers at each end and center drawer, making a seven-drawer machine. Dealer's price, $33. Our price, $18.50.

The chief difference between Numbers 3, 4, and 5 is in the furniture, i. e., in the number of drawers. If you do not want to pay for the extra drawers, you need not do so. We sell these machines under a ten years' guarantee, by which we mean that if any part gives out by reason of any defect therein, the manufacturer will replace the same free of charge. Moreover, we allow the purchaser to test the machine ten days. If at the end of ten days you are not satisfied, you have only to drop us a postal card, and your money will be refunded.

OUR OFFER.

We will send any one of the above described machines at the prices named, and also send the Advocate free for six months. The only condition attached to this offer is that subscribers who are in arrears must first pay up all arrearages to date. It would be well to avail yourself of this offer at once, as we can not promise that it will last very long. Notice that you take no risk whatever. We do all the risking. Address

The health report for the past two weeks has been the most favorable ever known in the history of Havana. There have been no yellow fever cases, and the number of other contagious or infectious diseases has been reduced to the minimum. The authorities will not declare that it is impossible there should be a yellow fever epidemic there, but are doing everything possible to avoid such an occurrence.

The International Peace Conference, which began its sittings about two months ago, has about concluded its labors, and it is understood will adjourn during the present week. The Czar, who was primarily responsible for the Peace Conference, has every reason to feel disappointed at the results, as really nothing has been accomplished. Disarmament has not even been touched upon seriously, and no restrictions whatever have been placed upon warlike inventions. About the only definite and clear-cut result of the conference has been the adoption of a plan of voluntary arbitration of international disputes.

LEMONS AS MEDICINE

They regulate the Liver, Stomach, Bowels, Kidneys and Blood as prepared by Dr. H. Mozley, in his Lemon Elixir, a pleasant lemon drink. It cures biliousness, constipation, indigestion, headache, malaria, kidney diseases, fevers, chills, heart failure, nervous prostration and all other diseases caused by a torpid or diseased liver and kidneys. It is an established fact that lemons, when combined properly with other liver tonics, produce the most desirable results upon the stomach, liver, bowels, kidneys, and blood. Sold by druggists. 50c and $1 bottles.

Where the spent body to its rest lies down?

nd shall the Might that fixed the whirling star
And the strong sun in light our darkness here, ve never ray of light to guide afar
Aught journeying beyond this little sphere?

E JACKSON DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Jackson District Conference s held at Capitol Street Church, ckson, July 12-14; T. B. Holloman, E, in the chair. R. S. Rickotts s elected secretary, with B. F. wis and H. C. Brown as assistants. The district comprises seventeen torial charges. Fifteen pastors re present—two being providen- ly hindered—and about the same ber of lay delegates. The ex iment of meeting on Wednesday, s to give time for pastors to reach ir Sunday appointments after ad- nment, was not a marked success, y a few remaining to the close of session on Friday.

eports showed that the work on t of the charges has been prose- d during the last year under seri- discouragements — quarantine, dyke weather, and recently much ness among the people; still the iding elders, old and new, have s full proof of their ministry, and pastors have been earnest and ful, so that we have not only nur own, but have good prospect increase in all departments of ch work. Especial interest has shown on most of the charges in nrth Leagues and Sunday-schools. ral interesting papers and ad- ses on these subjects enlivened proceedings of the Conference, gave rise to quite animated and, he main, practicable discussions. paper read by Bro. G. H. Thomp- on "The Epworth League as or Pastor" was ordered sent to DVOCATE for publication.

e terms used in describing the tual state of the church were: ellent," "good," "improving," ," "average," and in a rare in- e, or two, "poor." For the least losing of these conditions reason ud chiefly in bad weather, the ed nature of the work, or in presence or proximity of that y of all righteousness—the open n. There is much rejoicing g us in the recent defeat of two eive petitions for a local-option n, and over the results of our ary elections just held, which lind-tiger people say were run e preachers, and which is the in this instance, as saying that were mostly run right.

ers are two local church papers district—The Yazoo Method- blished at Yazoo City, and The dist News, published at Jack An effort was made to have the rence assume the management latter as a sort of organ of the t, but while the present man- nt of the paper was commend- was not deemed prudent to n further responsibility in the r.

Nashville and the NEW OR- CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE were nded to our pastors and peo- t the Conference, by resolu- eprecated the recent publica- the latter of certain articles nal in nature and polemic in and requested the editor to e a rigid censorship over such nications in future.

educational work received due on. Millsaps College was rep- resented as having had, under some what adverse circumstances, a highly satisfactory session; and President Chambers, of Whitworth, gave a good report of the work done at that hon- ored institution, adding a vigorous plea for greater concentration in our denominational school work. On Thursday night an Educational Rally was held, with interesting addresses by the presiding elder and Bro. H. B. Hawkins, pastor of Madison charge. Not all the charges have had this subject presented to them, but when it has been presented the response has been encouraging, and there is no doubt that contributions will in- crease as our people are made more perfectly to understand the necessity and the possibilties of this great movement of our church.

Bro. M. L. Burton, manager of our Orphans' Home at Water Valley, gave a good account of his work. Too little attention is paid to the claims of this institution, which is now providing for nearly sixty or- phan children.

Judge J. R. Enochs, J. J. Daniels, G. W. Galloway and J. A. Hobbs were elected delegates to the Annual Conference.

Miss Addie Purnell, Conference secretary of the Woman's Home Mis- sion Society, made an interesting re- port of this organization, to whose beneficent work so many an itinerant owes the comforts of a home.

Yazoo City was selected as the place for the next meeting.

On the whole, the session was a pleasant one. Capitol Street Church abounded in hospitality, and the pre- siding elder and the Conference were in cordial agreement throughout.

Good preaching was done morning and evening by Bros. Golden, Wil- liams, W. B. Lewis, and Thompson.

SECRETARY.

OPELOUSAS DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Opelousas District Conference met in Lake Charles, June 22, at 8 P. M.; Dr. C. W. Carter in the chair, and about the usual number of preachers and delegates present. The growing and prosperous city by the lake extended a cordial hospitality, and the genial "young" host, Rev. B. F. White, assisted by his man of all work, Bro. A. M. Mayo, had all things in readiness for the reception of the Conference. Rev. Jno. G. Sloane was elected secretary, and filled the position very efficiently. The usual District Conference business was transacted with dispatch. There seemed to be a general feeling, shared by presiding elder and pastors alike, that the spiritual condition of the work in the district, as a rule, was far from satisfactory, lacking, to a large extent, in the important ele- ment of revival power. The finances were reported far behind on most of the charges. Most of the charges, however, are supplied with good church-buildings and comfortable parsonages. Some notes of progress were reported. In the charges of Bros. Riggs and Blocker new ground had been broken by revival meetings under a tent in localities where Pro- testantism had been hitherto a stran- ger.

An interesting and profitable feat- ure of the session was the early morn- ing prayer meeting called each morn- ing by the presiding elder.

Dr. Cooper was present in the in- terest of Centenary College, and was abundantly used in the pulpit.

Attention was called to the Twen- tieth Century Movement, though no representative of the Board of Edu- cation was present to push the mat- ter.

An elaborate program for a Mis- sionary Rally, but several of the speakers had gone home before the time appointed for the meeting, so the whole subject was left to two or three speakers; but the rally, never- theless, was considered a success.

A memoir of Bro. J. White Davis was prepared, and resolutions of sympathy for Bro. R. C. Grace, in the loss of his wife, were adopted.

The pulpits of the Methodist Epis- copal, Presbyterian and Baptist Churches were filled by members of the Conference on Sunday, besides our own Southern Methodist pulpits.

M. Carter Holt, of Crowley, was licensed to preach, and the license of Rev. W. H. Ney, of Lake Arthur, is- sued by the M. E. Church, was recog- nized in due form. Both are young men of promise.

Rev. Jno. G. Sloane was recom- mended to the Annual Conference for admission on trial.

If memory does not mislead, the lay delegates to the Annual Confer ence are: Capt. J. N. Pharr, A M. Mayo, Geo. D. Price, and Rev. Jno. G. Sloane. If the list is at fault through inaccessibility of the record, the secretary will, doubtless, make correction.

Several of the preachers were pre vented by sickness, or other cause, from being present, and several oth- ers returned home before Sunday, but enough remained to fill the vari- ous pulpits. It would seem that if the preachers can not be held over Sunday, it would be better to hold our District Conferences in mid-week.

This account is written by request of the presiding elder.

W. WINANS DRAKE.

BATON ROUGE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The session of the Baton Rouge District Conference is among the things of the past, but its influence is still felt amongst us. Our people were glad to entertain it, and would willingly entertain it again. I think every host and hostess was pleased with their guests, and if they should be honored with the pleasure of en- tertaining the Conference again, would be glad to have the same guests assigned to them.

The preaching was practical, spir- itual, and scriptural, and by men evi- dently "called of God." The sub- jects chosen were eminently appro priate, and treated by workmen that "need not be ashamed," and who "rightly divided the word of truth." Each sermon seemed to be almost perfect, but the missionary sermon by Bro. Hoffpauir, on Sunday, was certainly one of the finest presenta- tions of the duty of the church on that subject that this writer has ever heard. Indeed, that is the opinion of many (if not all) who had the pleas ure of hearing it, and that opinion was manifested by a generous con tribution from the great congrega- tion at its close to the cause of mis- sions.

Methodism, I am quite sure, has gained largely in the estimation of our people by the Conference holding its session here, and its influence will not soon be forgotten.

A goodly number of families, too, have begun to determine who they would prefer as their next preacher, and, so far as I have heard, they have each selected the man whom they entertained during the Confer- ence session.

A remarkable feature of this Con ference was that there were thirty- six more homes provided than there were guests to occupy, and the only complaining is from those who had no guests to entertain. Did you ever know of anything of that kind, Mr. Editor? I am sure I never did.

All in all, Mr. Editor, it was one of the best District Conferences it has ever been my privilege to attend.

The work here, Mr. Editor, is in a reasonably prosperous condition, and a kinder people no man ever served.

THOS. J. UPTON, P. C.

ARCADIA DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

This body met in the town of Homer, Claiborne parish, June 27, 1899. The opening sermon was preached by Rev. N. S. Cornell, of Hanesville charge, at 11 A. M. The organization was effected by the elec tion of W. H. Leslie, of Arcadia, sec- retary. In the absence of an episco- pos the sub-Bishop of this delightful district, Rev. B. T. Crews, presided to the satisfaction of all.

The first day was devoted to mis- sions, addresses being made by Revs. S. J. Davies, C. H Carson, C. P. Smith, and others. Bro. A J. Notes tine, of Ruston, presided at this Mis sionary Institute. In the evening a Missionary Rally, addressed by Revs. S. J. Davies, W. A. Clark, and C. P. Smith, was followed by an appeal from Bro. Crews for a contribution to our Cuban work. Forty-one dollars was quickly raised.

The second day was devoted to Sunday-school work. Some good ad dresses were made. We note espe cially the address of Bro. W. H Les- lie, which was well prepared and well received.

Dr. I. W. Cooper and Rev. J L. P. Sheppard represented our schools in good addresses. These brethren were gladly welcomed, and their presence much enjoyed. Mrs. Sligh, in well- chosen words, spoke of the work of Mansfield College, in which she has her heart and soul.

I have not the Minutes of the Con- ference at hand, so can not give a satisfactory report of this important feature of our meeting.

Reports from the charges indicate progress. Some charges report good revivals and additions to the mem- bership.

We gladly state that the prospects of our work in this district are said to be brighter than for many years. The Conference collections will be increased, and especially is this true of foreign missions.

Sermons were preached by Revs. Notestine, Carson, Davies, Cooper, and Smith.

The Spirit of God was with us in all our sessions. An half hour was given to prayer before the business sessions opened each day, morning and afternoon.

We closed our Conference in a feast of love. Glory rolled over our souls while dear Bro. Wright led us in prayer. Heaven seemed very near. We meet next year at Minden.

LETTER FROM "GILDEROY."

I am now in Byhalia, in the north- west corner of Marshall county, Miss., spending a week with my long-time friend, Rev. R. M. Davis. Bro. Davis is a man of full, varied and accurate information along many lines, and along some lines he is the best-posted and wisest man I know. In meta physics, logic, and in theology, he is well informed, and a close and pro- found reasoner. A week with him is like taking a course of lectures in theology. I go to his house to study and to learn—to fill up before I run dry. He is pious, social, and as con- genial a companion as I have ever known. His company is as refresh- ing and strengthening as mountain air. He sets me to thinking along higher and deeper lines. The fric tion of mind with mind generates heat of the right kind. If preachers were sent out in pairs now, I would like to be junior to R. M. Davis.

Church circles here feel the loss of Prof. E. H. Randle, who goes to Her- nando to teach. He has been here eight years, and is said to be one of the finest teachers in all the land. I have longed to see him at the head of one of our church schools. He is a cultured, polished Christian gen tleman. He is active, efficient, and punctual in all church work, and is a power for good in the community where he lives. Bro. Randle has had experience in the ministry, and takes the pastor's place when the pastor is called from home. Such a man is missed when he moves, and he is felt where he goes. Would that we had many more such men.

Byhalia is an old town. It has been here from the early days. This section was once the garden spot of Mississippi, but it is not so now. The hills are leaching down and melting away under the tooth of time and rain, and the valleys are filling up with sand. The hill-sides are fur- rowed with gullies deep and wide. It is sad to see them scarred and blighted as they are. The level pla- teaus, and the branch and creek bot- toms, are still very productive, and this is a prosperous country. The people are not getting rich, but they prosper and live well.

Byhalia sits on seven hills, or more, and covers a wide space, and there are many substantial and beautiful homes. Long as I have lived in North Mississippi, this is a new terri- tory to me. I have served in the bounds of every district in the Con- ference except the Holly Springs. At times it is comfortable to get where you are unknown. The grazing is fresh and green. This has been a delightful week to me.

NOTICE.

At the Arcadia District Conference the following were elected delegates to the Annual Conference: R T. Mc- Clendon, W. H Leslie, T. J. Baker, and Rev. Thos J. Martin. Rev. C. H. Carson was recommended for re- admission. D. F. Turner was recom- mended for admission on trial; also A. F. Vaughan, who has since with- drawn from the church. J. M. Man- ley and D F. Turner were recom- mended for deacon's orders. Four were licensed to preach. D. F. Turner has been appointed to supply the Fort Lick circuit, in place of A. F. Vaughan, withdrawn from the church.

MENEMEN ULEKETE PHARSIN.

The closing days of the century constitute a testing time. In a pecu- liar sense this is true as to Method ism. The Twentieth Century Edu- cational Movement will reveal what manner of men we are. As a great ecclesiastical organization, and as in- dividual members thereof, we are be- ing tried. Opposite each name are the words, "Weighed in the balance." When the time comes for the final test, let it not be added, "and found wanting" Nay, let it rather be, "He hath done what he could." When we come to the "Education Rally" at the sessions of our Annual Confer- ences, next Fall, may no preacher be speechless because he has not on the garment of honest endeavor, and may none begin to frame weak excuses! Bishop Candler's interest in this work is known of all men. Recently he said, "I will stump the State in dog days rather than this movement should fail in Georgia." No North Mississippi preacher will fail to ap preciate such zeal. Let us be ready to gladden his heart by the reports we will make at Greenwood. Missis sippi preachers will do the same for Bishop Fitzgerald. Bishop Gallo- way's splendid canvass has met heartiest commendation from all sources, and he has inspired the hopes of the people everywhere. His own Mississippi must not be behind the very foremost in this noble en- deavor. Let us not disappoint our leaders and humiliate ourselves by failure. Back of these great men, and inspiring them, is the Lord of hosts, who is looking on. We must not disappoint him who is always mindful of us. This is his cause, and we must not neglect it.

Rev. J. M. Huggin is observing the day on Pittsboro circuit, using the programs furnished. He makes the proper start by making pledges for the members of his own family.

Rev. F. B. Ormond, Winchester circuit, is preaching on the subject, and explaining the manner of work- ing the plans, and making prepara tion to observe the day, and will then report the results. He is confident his charge will meet its obligation. A young lady is so interested she could not wait, but has already handed him two dollars. God bless that young lady, and may there be many to imitate her noble example!

Rev. J. H. Smith, assisted by the Epworth League, observed the day at Wall Hill, securing fifty dollars, and "will continue till we reach every church." Therein lies success. Earn- est, continuous work done in faith will always succeed.

I hope none of the preachers are hesitating because they are fearful, and yet many more reports should have come to hand than have been received up to the time of this writ ing.

Dear brother, prepare, prepare, pre- pare, and then give your people an opportunity. Do your duty, at any rate.

IS THE FIELD BEING OCCUPIED AS RAPIDLY AS POSSIBLE?

It is Saturday evening in the city of Matanzas. An intelligent, thor- oughly Americanized Cuban and his American Methodist wife have come to the door of the Methodist Mission hungry—yes, with a hunger that has not been satisfied for six months. For six months they have been liv- ing in a place of three thousand in- habitants, with no opportunity for attending public worship of any kind, the Catholic Church of the place being closed because the people have not been able to raise the amount of money demanded by the priests for their services. And this American- ized Cuban who feels so keenly the needs of the Cubans, and knows, or, at least, thought he knew, so well the wealth and the missionary spirit of American Christians, stands as an emphatic interrogation point to his question, "Why don't the Protestant Church of America come and occupy such places?" The missionary can only reply that the field is being oc- cupied as rapidly as possible. Is it? Our Board of Missions and the hand- ful of missionaries are doing all they can for Cuba, but is not Southern Methodism falling far below what it might do? We hear of one man giving $1 000 for the Cuba work. In all Southern Methodism is there but one one-thousand-dollar man for such a time as this, when in one little corner of Cuba there are three thousand human souls as sheep hav- ing no shepherd? Southern Method- ism may not be able to show many one-thousand-dollar men to Cuba, but it surely ought to show hundreds of fifty and hundred and five-hun- dred-dollar men, and thousands of five and ten-dollar men.

NOTICE.

To the Members of the Louisiana Conference—

DEAR BRETHREN: By the consent of my presiding elder and approval of Bishop Galloway, I have under- taken to raise $2,500 of the Twen- tieth Century Fund, eighty per cent. of which is to be applied to needed repairs and improvements on Cente- nary and Mansfield Colleges. As it will be impossible for me to present this claim in person to your various charges, will you kindly aid me in this important work by presenting this claim and collecting what you can, and forward to me at Mansfield at the earliest possible date?

The Delhi District Conference has just passed a resolution to do what I ask you to do.

Fraternally,

Did you ever hear of a man who had striven all his life faithfully and singly toward an object, and in no measure obtained it? If a man con- stantly aspires, is he not elevated? THE PAST IS O'ER

The past is o'er—
Waste not thy days in vain regret.
Grieve thou no more.

Look now before
And not behind thee do not fret—
The past is over.

Thy pain is sore
And thou hast cause for sorrow, yet
Grieve thou no more

Close memory's door
That day is dead, that sun has set
The past is o'er.

There are in store
For thee still happy days. Forget!
Grieve thou no more.

Smile as of yore—
No longer let thine eyes be wet.
The past is o'er.
Grieve thou no more!

REV. HENRY PARKER GIBBS.

The life and labors of Henry Parker Gibbs will ever be an inspiration to his brethren in the ministry and a blessing to all who were privileged to know him

Born in "Bourton-on-the-Hill," Gloucestershire, England, July 19, 1805, he grew to young manhood among the historic and inspiring scenes that have made the Englishmen the quiet, gentle, brave men that rule the world.

In 1882 he came to America to seek his fortune. We find that he engaged in farming and merchandising in Noxubee county, Miss., and by his thrift and devotion to business began at once to prosper.

It was while engaged in these pursuits that he came in contact with "the people called Methodists," and met those who, under the providence of God, were to change the whole aim and purpose of his life.

Raised in the Church of England, he was naturally prejudiced against the Methodists, but during a meeting held by Rev. T. B. Malone at Trinity Church, Crawford circuit, North Mississippi Conference, he was deeply convicted of sin. After a night and a day of anguish, on his way home from his work, Aug. 18, 1887, as he knelt in prayer by an old step on the roadside, he was powerfully converted, and felt at once that he was called of God to preach the gospel. He began immediately to prepare for his life-work, and God raised up for him a friend in Mrs. T. B Hargrove, and for a year and a half she led the mind and heart of the young Christian in his search after knowledge. It was during this time of preparation that I first met Harry. After a hard day's work he would ride five miles, and for hours pore over his books and the Bible. It was in this home that he met Miss Carlotta Hargrove, and won her heart and her promise to become his bride, and go with him to his first appointment.

With T. B. Hargrove, H. T. Cunningham, R. H. B Gladney, W. H. Sanders, and others, he was admitted on trial into the North Mississippi Conference at its session in Starkville, Miss., December, 1888, and was appointed to Cherry Hill circuit, Greenville district. His work in that charge will never be forgotten by that devoted people. The following year he was sent to Pleasant Grove circuit, where he labored most faithfully and with great success for three years. During these years "many added to the church of such as shall be saved." While on this charge he made a fuller consecration of himself to God, and received a fresh baptism of the Holy Spirit.

From Pleasant Grove circuit he was sent to Jonestown circuit, where he spent two years in untiring labor. God gave him a place in the hearts of that people such as few men have enjoyed, and used him to draw them nearer to himself.

From Jonestown he was sent to Starkville circuit, and under his ministry the work developed rapidly. There is little doubt that had he been permitted to return, he would have been able to bring it up to a self-sustaining circuit.

His next charge was Enpora and Maben, where, in spite of sickness in his family, lasting almost the entire year, he did a great and good work. Here, as in every other charge that he served, the people were devoted to him.

His last and, in many respects, most successful work was Main Street station, Water Valley, Miss. One of the most important and most difficult works in the Conference, it required all the strength and patience of his great, loving heart. You have but to examine the records, or mention his name in Water Valley, to see how great was his success. His successor, Rev. J. C. Park, does not hesitate to say that Main Street, Water Valley, is the best-organized and most religious church in our Conference. It was my privilege to labor with him in the last meeting he ever held, and never can I forget his loving, patient, untiring devotion to his work. There was nothing too hard or too menial for him to do for his people. He went into the homes of the poor and sorrowing, and with the tenderness of a woman supplied the want of body and soul. All that he possessed of material or spiritual good was laid, a willing sacrifice, on the altar of their need.

It was for their good that he wrote the articles, "The Factory and Its People," that brought down upon him the wrath and condemnation of those who opposed him, and the shameful assault and insult that, no doubt, hastened his death. These articles were written after a careful study of the conditions, and mature and prayerful deliberation, and were not given to the public until they had received the approbation and endorsement of his presiding elder and brethren of the Methodist ministry resident in Water Valley.

I was with him during his last illness, and whenever he was allowed to talk, it was of his work and of the joy that filled his heart, because of the conscious presence of his Savior. On Friday he said to me, "George, Jesus is as present with me as you are," and when I asked him if he had any direction concerning his family, he replied, "Jesus knows." He had committed them into the hands of One that he knew was able to keep that which he had committed unto him against that day. When the end was near I asked him if he had any message to send to his brethren of the Conference; he replied, "Tell them that I love them." On Saturday morning before his death he said to his wife and myself: "The matter of the Head Light is in the hands of the Methodists of Mississippi, and of my brethren of the Conference, and of our great church, not only national, but international in her interests. We must go on and on, and up and up, and at last in heaven we will rejoice together." To his attorney and dear friend, "Bro. McGowan," he sent this message, "I want Bro. McGowan to know that every true man in Mississippi is with him, and that we are not to antagonize men, but for the glory of God and the good of the church."

Such statements show the spirit that actuated him, and that which he wished to govern and control those who should take up the battle for the uplifting of humanity, and the right for which he bravely fought and died. It was not for revenge, but for the right that he would have them fight, and, if needs be, die.

That night, when he was too weak to talk much, I sat by him and asked him these questions, viz: "Harry, is Jesus with you now?" He replied, "Yes; oh, yes." "Harry, is it all right now?" "Glory! glory!" was the response from the dying preacher. Again I said, "Harry, you are going home on Sunday morning." "Glory! glory!" was the reply. When he failed to answer my questions I said to the brethren, "I will see if he has gone beyond our reach," and began to sing a song that we had sung together many times during revival meetings, "We praise thee, O God! for the Son of thy love," and when I came to the chorus, "Hallelujah! thine the glory!" his whole face lighted up, and, with a voice clear and strong enough to be heard all over the room, he joined in with me. His last act was one of praise to the God he loved and served so faithfully. The room was filled with the presence and glory of God as the dying preacher sung his praises.

None who were privileged to be there can ever forget that scene. Truly, it was none other than the gate of heaven. On Sunday morning, April 23, 1899, he passed with praises on his lips to join the innumerable company which came out of great tribulation, and have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb.

"Servant of God, well done!
Rest from thy loved employ.
The battle's fought, the victory's won;
Enter thy Master's joy."

Before the hour for Sunday-school his body was carried to the church, and never have I seen such a universal expression of sorrow. The children of his congregation were devoted to him, and refused to be comforted, because he was not.

The memorial service, held in his church on Sunday night, was a beautiful expression of the love of his people.

On Monday his body was shipped to Columbus, Miss., and after one of the most impressive and helpful funeral services I ever attended, it was laid to rest in the quiet city of the dead

In the death of Henry P. Gibbs the North Mississippi Conference lost one of its best and most faithful preachers. God grant that a double portion of his spirit may fall upon his brethren, and that they may bravely and lovingly carry forward the banner of the cross until the knowledge of God shall cover the earth as the waters cover the sea.

May the God of all grace comfort and guard his bereaved wife and children, and bring them at last, an unbroken family, to heaven! I shall see him, but not now.

REPORT OF TWENTY-FIRST ANNUAL MEETING OF W. F. M. S, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

The twenty-first annual meeting of the W. F. M. S. of the Mississippi Conference convening in Hattiesburg, June 24, preceded its sessions by an executive meeting Saturday afternoon, at 6 o'clock.

Saturday evening, at 8:15, a consecration service—beautiful and appropriate preparation for the duties before the Conference—was conducted by the president, Miss Marshall.

Sunday morning, in spite of the downpour of rain, all the officers, delegates, and many others, were present to hear the annual sermon by Rev. B. F. Jones, who preached well from Isaiah. His words of encouragement for mission work he fortified by comparing ours with other religions, showing the cause for the Christian's hope, the true nature and eternal destiny of Christianity.

Sunday afternoon was the time set apart for a service in memory of our dead. This memorial was conducted by Mrs. Drake, of the Seashore district. She paid a beautiful tribute to the life and death of Mrs. Bell, of her own district, who in her last hours remembered so generously the foreign missionary cause. Mrs. Featherstun read a fond memoir of our own Mrs. Watts that moved us deeply. She spoke beautifully and truly of her strong Christian faith and courage, her gentleness and goodness; how she was loved by all who knew her; of the great loss we have all sustained in her death. Miss Smylie was well able to speak of her in church-work relations, where she was always ready to enlist her interest, time and effort for her Master's work. It was with deeply touched hearts that we joined in singing at this service that hymn associated with her last moments, "Jesus, lover of my soul."

The memorial service was followed by a love-feast, and testimony of experience in the work. The choir rendered well-selected music, and the service closed with prayer and the Doxology.

Sunday evening, at 8:15, with the president in the chair, and after devotional exercises, the address of welcome from the Seashore district came from the gifted district secretary, Mrs. Drake. Miss Self, of Hattiesburg, gave a cordial and graceful welcome in behalf of the local auxiliary, while from the Baptist Church awaited us pleasant, fraternal greeting expressed by Miss Bostwick. The Epworth League, which we found a strong organization in the church, was no less hearty and cordial in receiving us. It remained for the pastor to welcome the assembly to Hattiesburg Church. Mrs. W. H. Jones, of Crawford Street Church, Vicksburg, responded to all these addresses gracefully and well—a pleasant voice for the Conference.

Mrs. Fryant, secretary of Jackson district, read at this interval an appropriate selection, a poem full of missionary sentiment—the work of a personal friend.

The first business session was called Monday morning, at 9 o'clock. Devotional exercises were conducted by Miss McNemar, who gave a Scripture reading on the guidance of our Lord. The devotions closed by prayer and Hymn 872. The president then took the chair, assigned the delegates and district secretaries their places, and called for the roll, to which officers and delegates responded with their names. On motion, carried for proceeding with reports from the work, the district secretaries responded with their reports. This business was followed by the introduction of the question of an organizer for the W. F. M. work of Mississippi Conference, but the question made no development at this time. Miss Smylie read a letter Mrs. E. D. Jones had written to the Conference, to which she was instructed by the Conference to respond. The corresponding secretary read also a letter of business and information from Mrs. Trueheart.

Monday evening, at 8:15, the president was in the chair, and the officers present. Scripture service was held by Rev. Jones. The features of this meeting were the reports of the treasurer, the annual address of the president, and the report of the Conference corresponding secretary. There were entertaining and well-chosen recitations by Miss Evi Rivers, of Central Lights, Meridian, and by Mrs. Jones, of Vicksburg. A more business-like feature of the evening was the enlisting of new members for the Hattiesburg Auxiliary.

ONE OF THE DELEGATES.

Whereas, God, in his providence, has permitted death to enter our midst and remove from our mission ary society of Central Church, Meridian, our beloved friend, Mrs. Kate M. Watts; therefore, be it

Resolved, That in her death our auxiliary has lost a valued and efficient member, for her spirit was sunshine and her presence always helpful at our meetings.

Resolved, That we bow in submission to the divine will, knowing our loss to be her eternal gain, and pray that her example of faithfulness and devotion may draw us through God's Holy Spirit onward in the way that leads unto that rest which remaineth for the people of God.

Resolved, That we extend to the bereaved family our tenderest sympathy in their deep distress, but rejoice with them upon the inestimable inheritance her godly life and saintly death have bequeathed to them.

Resolved, That these resolutions be spread upon the Minutes.

Mrs. E. R. Kennedy, of Louisiana Conference

The monthly meetings of our Woman's Home Mission Society are seasons of "refreshing from the presence of the Lord;" pleasant reunions at the parsonage with Christian friends—"all with one accord in one place." Here we leave for awhile the dusty thoroughfare of care and rest in the "green pastures" and besides the "still waters" of God's eternal Word. Oh, these waiting times before the Lord!—these moments of prayer before our Father's throne! How they strengthen us to take up the burdens of life, and to "press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus!"

"How blest the sacred tie that binds
In sweet communion kindred minds!
How swift the heavenly course they run,
Whose heart, whose faith, whose hopes are one!"

At our last meeting we enrolled two new members and placed six names on the Baby Roll. Our babies are leading on to higher, holier planes of living a great army of mothers. I saw a mother's eyes grow dim and gentle as she looked at her baby's certificate of membership, and then at the frail, tiny fingers pressed against her bosom—little fragile fingers, but stronger to lead her than any chain of steel or brass. "A little child shall lead them."

Dear sisters, we have so much for which to be thankful. We live in a land favored of God, and prosperous. We have access to the good and great in literature, comfortable homes, congenial companionship, and, above all, we have the open Bible and churches scattered all around us. Shall we not show our appreciation of these manifold blessings?

Our Woman's Home Mission Society is calling the women of Southern Methodism to enter this field of labor. There is work for each one to do, specially suited to you and to me. We have about one hundred pastoral charges in the Louisiana Conference, and only forty auxiliaries of the W. H. M. Society. Appropriations were made last year to Benton, White Castle, and other places, and there are now six or seven applications for aid in building or repairing parsonages before the Executive Committee. These appeals are urgent, and would most assuredly not be in vain if we had an auxiliary in every pastoral charge in the Conference. If our preachers, each and all, would lend a helping hand, we could more than double our membership before the dawn of the twentieth century. Our General Secretary, Mrs. Hargrove, says: "At the lowest estimate, the work of the society for 1899-1900 demands the raising of $20,000."

Let us at once, then, invest the one, two, or five talents committed to our keeping in some one of the many departments of this work, for the Lord will demand of each one of us at his coming an account of the investments we have made of time and opportunity—talents far more precious than jewels of gold or silver. An article in the Review of Missions on the many-sidedness of home mission work is very suggestive along this line. Parsonage-building is the most attractive to some; others favor specially the home-mission feature, while to another class the educational work appeals most forcibly, of the Department of Supplies or Systematic Giving, or the Baby Roll—all important and broad enough to suit the taste and surroundings of every woman and child in the Methodist Church.

We are sometimes discouraged at the smallness of our work and its meager results, but—

"In the world is darkness,
So we must shine;
You in your little corner,
And I in mine."

I am glad to think we are not commanded to make the world go right, but only to let our "light shine;" only to do with willing hearts and hands the work that God appoints. I am glad he tells us to "Sow the seed," and he will care for the harvest. So many of us would fail if our salvation depended upon eloquent words of wisdom or wonderful achievements; but, dear friends, let us be sure we are doing what we can. The close of each day ends a chapter in the book of life, with its record of mistakes and follies; its opportunities, duties, and obligations; its careless words and worthy acts and thoughts. All these have gone from us into the great gulf of the past, never to return, except, perhaps, as accusing phantoms when death places his icy seal upon our brows, and we bid farewell forever to time and opportunity.

"I expect to pass through this world but once. Any good thing, therefore, that I can do, or any kindness I can show, let me do it now. Let me not defer or neglect it, for I shall not pass this way again."

ELIZABETH R. KENNEDY.

The Christian Life.

THE DISCIPLINE OF LIFE.

Sooner or later we find out that life is not a holiday, but a discipline. Earlier or later we all discover that the world is not a play-ground; it is quite clear God means it for a school. The moment we forget that, the puzzle of life begins. We try to play in school; the Master does not mind that so much for its own sake, for he likes to see his children happy, but in our playing we neglect our lessons. We do not see how much there is to learn, and we do not care; but our Master cares. He has a perfectly overpowering and inexplicable solicitude for our education; and because he loves us, he comes into the school sometimes and speaks to us. He may speak very softly and gently, or very loudly. Sometimes a look is enough, and we understand it, like Peter, and go out at once, and weep bitterly. Sometimes the voice is like a thunder-clap startling a Summer night. But one thing we may be sure of—the task he sets us to is never measured by our delinquency. The discipline may seem far less than our desert, or even to our eye ten times more. But it is not measured by these; it is measured by God's solicitude for our progress; measured solely by God's love; measured solely that the scholar may be better educated when he arrives at his Father's. The discipline of life is a preparation for meeting the Father. When we arrive there to "behold his beauty," we must have the educated eye; and that must be trained here. We must become so pure in heart—and it needs much practice—that we shall "see God." That explains life—why God puts man in the crucible, and makes him pure by fire.—Henry Drummond, in Ideal Life.

LEAVING SELF OUT.

Self ought to be left out of our service for Jesus Christ. Indeed, it must be. We can not serve Christ and have self uppermost in plan and effort. If self is served, then Christ can not be. If Christ is served, then self must take a back seat. The Christian life is an unselfish life. The more we learn of Christ, and the more we become like him, the more will we leave considerations of self out of our aspirations and work.

It is said that a young man who had attended a Summer meeting of Christian workers went away, saying, "I will leave a great deal of myself at this camp." He had received such exalted views of Christ, and what a life consecrated to him meant, while at the meetings in the grove, that he came to think less of himself and more of Christ. So he was going to leave self behind, and put Christ in the forefront of his future life.

A rich spiritual blessing will lift many a Christian to this higher view of the Christian life. Happy would it be for all Christians if they would learn to leave out self in the camp meetings and revivals, when they take higher spiritual grounds, and return to their work filled with the Holy Spirit.—Exchange.

VALUE OF MEDITATION.

Desire may be intensified and purified by meditation upon the value of the objects desired, and the real reasons for which we desire them. The phraseology of ordinary prayer requests for things of immeasurable worth, and yet is often need with the vaguest idea of that worth, and consequently with the faintest desire for their possession. Let the Christian meditate upon the meaning of the Holy Spirit's power in his life and influence; upon the need of higher wisdom in winning men to Christ and enriching them in the Christ-character; upon the incalculable evil of sin, its terrible doom, and its well-nigh impregnable intrenchment in the human heart; and his prayer for divine assistance in Christian life and effort will be at times agonizing.—Selected.

The one purpose of Christ's coming into the world was to save men. The story of Christmas, Good Friday and Easter is not for our entertainment. It is the gospel to a lost world and the power of God unto salvation. God does not reckon the success of a church by the crowd which attends, but by the number of lives which it makes Christ-like. Enthusiasm for soul-saving will bring life into the deadest church. Consider the value of a soul. Remember its immortality. Try to realize how much it means for a soul to be lost. Think of the glories which await the follower of Christ. Make it personal. Think of one of your own family as lost. If this work of soul-saving be so all-important, what are we doing who belong to the Christian church? Are we satisfied to be saved ourselves and let Satan take the rest? I do not want to reach the other shore on a piece of wreckage. We ought to ride into the harbor bringing other souls with us. Heaven is not for selfish people. Let us help men to learn that God loves them. This is the great truth taught and lived by Christ. For this purpose he died, that men might know how great is God's love toward them.—Selected.

The spiritual life is not knowing, not hearing, but doing. We only know so far as we can do; we learn to do by doing; what we do truly rightly, in the way of duty, that, and only that, we are.—Frederick W. Robertson.

It is right to have companions in this life, but it is wrong to have except those who will refuse to companionship with Satan.—Exchange.

FIRESIDE SERMON BY GEO. G. SMITH.

THE SAVIOR'S PICTURE OF A GOOD MAN.

In the Sermon on the Mount there are enough subjects to supply a preacher with more than a volume of sermons; but there is a possibility of so studying this matchless discourse as in a few sermons to point out what was our Lord's ideal of a good man.

It is in happy contrast with the intangible, transcendental descriptions of Christian life which are found in many of our mystical devotional books, to see the simplicity of Christian life as it is portrayed here. In analyzing this sermon I find it resolves itself first into what a good man is.

He is poor in spirit. Bishop Candler says this means he feels like a poor man might be expected to feel, it matters not what he has. He is as humble, as helpless, as dependent, as unpretentious as though he was a penniless pauper. This may be true, and is true. A rich man's spirit may be in a poor man's breast, and a poor man's humility may be in the rich; but I do not think this is what is meant by the Lord here. It includes this, but it goes much further. The good man has lowly views of his intellectual powers; the pride of intellect, which lies at the base of much of our rationalism, is absent from his bosom. He knows he is not wise, that he needs God's constant guidance and enlightenment, that his strongest convictions are by no means certainly true, and he humbly sits at the Master's feet to learn of him. He has lowly views of his own excellence of character, of his own attainments in religion—as Bunyan quaintly expresses it, each sees the beauty in another which he can not find in himself. He has no worldly ambition to be great; is willing to be little and unknown, if God says so. He does not seek great things for himself. He is poor in spirit, in truth.

He is pure in heart. He is not content with mere outside virtue; he seeks to have everything contrary to God's pure love driven from his heart. He has a unity of intention, a purity of thought, and a purity of affection. He has one ideal—the absolute perfectness of God—and he is seeking continually with a single eye to reach it.

He is meek. Realizing how very unworthy he is of anything, he aims to meekly receive what, in the providence of God, is granted to him.

His life is no life of thoughtless frivolity, but he has reasons of real sorrow over the defects of his own life, the sorrows of others, and the sins of the world.

He is merciful. He gives alms, not as the hypocrites do, but unostentatiously, generously, cheerfully. He is merciful in his judgments, as he is merciful in his deeds.

He realizes the sad results of contention and strife, and does not find an excuse for his own bad temper under the pretexts of zeal for the truth, but seeks after peace with all order; he is a peace maker. Alas! how many men otherwise conscientious are conscientiously unamiable, and stirrers up of strife, and how much more of happiness would we know if we sought always to follow peace with all men, and to seek earnestly to keep the peace between our neighbors.

He has a great hungering and thirsting to be good and to do good. The one raging desire he has is to be a good man and be filled with righteousness. He aims to be perfect as God is perfect.

He is careful in attending to all his religious duties. He goes into his closet and shuts the door and prays to his Father in secret, which sees in secret.

He fasts and makes no display of his self-denial, but anoints his head and washes his face so that no man knows the character of his exercises.

He lays his gifts on the altar in the church of God, and tries to learn the will of God, and to teach men so.

He is not ostentatious in his religion. He does not sound a trumpet before him, nor pray standing in the synagogue, nor seek the glory of men for his piety, nor does he cast his pearls before swine, and speak of the deep things of God where men are likely to be hurt, and not heeded; but while he is not obtrusive, while he submits to much and does not openly condemn, yet he has an eye for a true prophet. The fact that a man makes pretensions does not blind him to the fact that often the boldest pretender is an enemy of the cross of Christ. The blasphemous Mormon, the Christ-ignoring Unitarian, the Socinian rationalist will meet his opposition. He pulls off the lamb-skin and sees the wolf beneath, and the green leaves do not hide the sharp thorns of the fruitless tree. The loud pretenses of Scribes and Pharisees, who tithe anise, mint and cummin, who would rather let a man die than on the Sabbath day do any thing to save him, do not hide from the true man the character of this mere outward piety. In his relations to his fellow man he seeks to avoid everything which is harmful and do everything which is good.

Knowing he himself is fallible, he tries to remedy his own defects, and to him these defects are so odious that they appear even greater than those he tries to correct, and so he does not judge harshly his erring brother. He sees in things objectionable in another reason for greater care in his own conduct; but at the same time he is not devoid of common sense, and he judges men by their fruits, and puts a true estimate on them and their opinions. His lowly views of himself, and of his want of perfectness, does not shut from his eyes the fact that the Pharisee has made void the law by his traditions, and while he is willing to meekly submit to wrong, he stands firmly for the right. He judges men by their fruits. He does not with a blind optimism find good where God finds only evil. He is not, however, harsh in his judgments nor stern in his resentments. He seeks to be reconciled to his brother, forgives him freely as he hopes to be forgiven, and seeks to agree with his adversary while he is the way with him. He loves even his enemies, and personal wrongs do not excite his resentment.

He not only does not revenge himself, but he does not even use opprobrious words, and keeps his heart pure from malevolent feeling. He not only leads a pure life, avoiding everything like criminal relations with the other sex, but he avoids all impurity of thought, and has a pure heart and a clean tongue.

He is ready to help those who need help, and has no such rigid rules of business as will prevent his lending "to those who are in need, and yet who are not willing to beg. He bears the faults of his wife, nor puts her away from his heart or his home because of them, but condones no crime. Petty wrongs are overlooked by him. If there is a suit, he submits to loss rather than contend. Firm as a rock when principle is involved, and devoid of fear, he stands against all comers when there is a trust to be kept, but petty, personal wrongs do not excite his resentment. He can be brave enough and strong enough to be smitten on the one cheek and turn the other. The selfish cowardice which is unwilling to bear lest men should count him weak, or the wretched spirit which allows personal wrongs to lead to public disturbances, is absent from his magnanimous heart. Oh! how much we suffer because all men seek their own. A little endurance, a little patience, a few soft words would often avert a conflict which involves a whole section.

He has a single eye, a oneness of purpose, and does not try to serve God and mammon. He knows that a self-seeking, ambitious, selfish man who is striving to lay up treasures here can not be the true servant of the all-loving, generous God, and he seeks, above all, to be a good man, fully assured if he will be good and do good, God will see to it that all that is best shall come to him. This, then, is a picture, very imperfect, of him who has at great labor dug down deep and found the rock.

SOMETHING OF SUPERSTITION.

Recently, returning to the parsonage from a pastoral engagement, while a moderate rain was falling which had already well settled the dust, coming to an angle in the road on the descent of a long hill some distance below me, I saw a man, or youngster, laboriously forcing his horse backwards as he sat on him. I thought at once the fellow was in trouble. I was anxious to escape a thorough wetting, but thought I must help him, if I could. I did not stop, but slowed up as I came to him. I said, "What is the matter?" He turned to me with a look of real concern on his face, and replied, "I advise ye to turn yer hoss roun' and ride backwards over dat rabbit trac', so as not to spile yer luck." I took in the case and situation at once, and rode on in the falling rain, reviewing the superstitions which crept into my childhood life caught from my father's negroes—then slaves—and also from the neighbors about us. An animal crossing the road before one brought a painful certainty of impending evil. The being compelled to turn back after starting to a place, the "luck" of the unfortunate circumstance, might be made void by making a crossmark on the ground and spitting in the cross. One old woman, the wife of an old soldier of the Revolution, who was then living, would take a negro as a safeguard to church and other places. She gave him strict orders to pilot her round the track of any squirrel, rabbit, or any thing of the animal kind whose escapade had portended such luck. Another omen of shocking force to her was the spilling of salt in the doorway. Such a fault in a servant was a misdemeanor not lightly condoned. Another neighbor of my father's, between whom and my father was a warm friendship. The neighbor—an old man—sickened and died. My father was present, and aided in dressing and laying out the corpse, after which the newly-made widow was called in to see it. For a time she looked on the face of the dead in silence. All in the room were respectfully quiet. She broke the silence with the following speech: "I had Dicy" [negro woman] "dipping candles the other day, and told her, whatever she did, not to drop one. After a while I went in to see how she had finished up. I asked her if she had dropped any. She said, 'No,' but I saw from the sign on the floor she had dropped one, and, now here is the result." A husband, a father and neighbor dead, because a half-made tallow candle slipped from the greasy fingers of an awkward negro.

But this recent experience with the fellow forcing his horse backwards up a slippery hill, as he rode him, to reverse the ill luck entailed on him by a frightened rabbit scurrying across the road before him seeking safety by flight, was something new to me in the lists of "sign" and "luck." It certainly had no effect on my belief in the overruling providence of God, though I did think it was an up hill business.

Brethren, send on your money to Bro. Griffin by the twenty-seventh instant if you want your charge credited in the Year Book, with its Children's Day collection. Up to this time 74 have reported. There are 116 schools to which programs were sent that have not yet reported.

Brethren, have you put off this service till the last of the year, or are you just holding the money? Why not report to Bro. Griffin, and have your charge or school make fair showing in the Board's annual report?

D. SCARBOROUGH, Sec.

"Every married man must ask his wife's permission to make a success." That was a saying of a wise old clergyman who knew that marriage was a partnership in the broadest sense, and that there can be no success in any partnership in which the partners do not contribute equally to make success possible. For this, if for no other reason, every man who is trying to climb the ladder of success should be interested in his wife's health. A healthy woman is always helpful. A tired, nervous woman, depleted in strength and depressed in mind, can contribute neither mentally nor physically to a husband's success.

The remarkable remedy, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, so strengthens the organs peculiarly feminine, dries up debilitating drains, heals ulcerations and inflammations, and cures female trouble, that the causes of ill-health are thus entirely removed, and the healthy, happy wife becomes a genuine help-meet to the husband.

"I was sick for twelve years, and for two years I had to stop work altogether," writes Mrs. Bell McCrabie, of Oakland, Garrett Co., Maryland. "I was treated by five different physicians, who pronounced my case Bright's disease, impoverished condition of the blood, and uterine trouble. I suffered a great deal with pain in both sides and much tenderness in pressing over the womb. I was bloated at times in bowels and limbs. Was troubled with a disagreeable discharge from the internal organs; I could not sleep and was troubled with palpitation of the heart. Suffered a great deal of pain in my head, temples, forehead and eyes, and I also suffered excruciating pain at monthly periods. Since taking eleven bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, I have enjoyed better health than I had for more than twelve years previously, and have gained in weight twenty-five pounds since taking your medicines."

Sick women can consult Dr. R. V. Pierce by letter, addressed to Buffalo, N. Y., absolutely without charge. Each letter is read in private, its statements held in sacred confidence, and all answers are mailed, sealed in plain envelopes, without advertising or other printed matter.

It is a good thing to keep Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets in the house. One Pellet is a laxative, two a cathartic dose.

There is a difference between character and reputation. Character is what a man is, reputation is what he is thought to be. Men of good character are generally men of good reputation, but this is not always the case, as the motives and actions of the best of men are sometimes misunderstood and misrepresented.—Ed. Burke.

Very lately a manifesto has been signed by twelve hundred members of the Episcopal Church in England: "The Holy Ghost does not make his home in any dissenting sect. Sometimes people break away from the church. We call these people dissenters, and their sham churches sects. The Holy Ghost does not dwell with them."—Selected.

SIMPLICITY OF LIFE.

Modern civilization, with its grand inventions and priceless benefits, has so wonderfully multiplied comforts and conveniences that even the poor now enjoy advantages and pleasures that a century, or two, ago were beyond the reach of kings and millionaires.

Along with this multiplication of the means of enjoyment which is so marked a feature of modern civilization comes, however, the multiplication of wants, and the growth of luxurious tastes and habits. Unfortunately, too, the desire for luxuries with most people grows faster than the financial ability to gratify the same; so that, notwithstanding the manifold benefits civilization has conferred upon the masses, discontent is rife, and thousands are miserable because of a restless longing for things not included in the catalogue of necessaries. There is no question of the fact that one of the most noticeable characteristics of American life today is the strong and growing tendency to luxurious living. The healthful simplicity and wise economy that distinguished our forefathers are fast disappearing, and we are in danger of degenerating into a nation of pleasure-lovers and spendthrifts, like the Romans during the latter period of the Empire. Simple tastes and contentment with modest surroundings are becoming less and less common. The whole body of society seems to be permeated with a burning desire for elegance and sumptuous fare, the future being left to take care of itself. Hundreds who dress well and live well come to have no higher aim than the gratification of extravagant tastes and appetites. The marvelous increase of wealth in this country is already having its demoralizing effect upon the habits, aims, and pleasures of the populace. People of moderate means are striving to imitate the elegance and indulge in the luxuries that the rich only can afford, while they, by their folly and extravagance, involve themselves in debt and dishonor. Many of the poor also oft times spend their last dollar purely to gratify a false pride or a fondness for something that ill befits their condition.

While far from being regarded so by the average man, the growth of luxurious habits is one of the greatest enemies to the stability of society and government, and also to the development of Christian character. Wealth and luxury caused the downfall of nearly every one of the great nations of antiquity. A thousand men have been injured in character and soul by riches to where one has been injured by poverty. It was not idolatry alone that brought Israel under the divine displeasure during the time of the prophets. The downfall of the nation was due in large measure also to the selfishness, cruelty, and pride that were the outcome of revelling in wealth and pleasure. No one who thoughtfully considers the spirit of the times, and the customs and demands of society, can fail to perceive that a premium is put upon extravagance, display, and costly entertainment. Where is it all to end? Are we to think only, or principally, of the gratification and adornment of the outward man? Is physical enjoyment the chief end of life? Truly, the blandishments of the world and the attractions of indulgence are causing many to forget the teachings of the Master, that "the life is more than the meat and the body than the raiment." A fundamental law of the kingdom of heaven is that of self-denial. "If any man will come after me," says the Master, "let him deny himself, and take up his cross and follow me."

However other men may act, the Christian must strive to live simply and unselfishly. To spend money recklessly on self, and then to plead impecuniosity to the calls of charity and benevolence, is a grievous sin in the sight of God. If, because of sumptuous and stylish living, there is little left in our purses for the poor and the mission cause, it is no excuse in the eyes of the Judge of all the earth. Leaving out of the account the enervating effect upon the physical man of a luxurious mode of living, the greatest evil resulting therefrom is the spirit of selfishness that it fosters. What does the average man or woman of society care about the sufferings and hardships of the poor, or the spread of the gospel at home and abroad? The most heartless people in the world are those who give themselves over to feasting, fashion, and frivolity. Such will often spend hundreds and thousands of dollars upon a banquet or a ball, but will not give a hundredth part of that sum to the alleviation of distress or the cause of Christ. They are willing to assist in any charity that does not involve self-sacrifice and self-denial; but a simpler mode of life for the sake of Christianity they will not hear of. The pulpit can hardly speak out too strongly against the corrupting influences of luxury and self-indulgence, or picture too attractively the advantages of a simple and self-denying mode of life. It is not a sin to want luxuries; neither is it a sin to enjoy them, provided it be not at the expense of one's loyalty to Christ or one's duty to humanity. Every man must judge for himself how simply he ought to live, and how far his self-denial ought to extend. What would be luxury to one man would not be to another. What a noble example has been left us by some of the early Christians, who, in their extreme poverty, used to fast in order that they might have where with to help those more unfortunate than themselves!

Some time ago the Congregationalist uttered the following timely words regarding luxury: "The drift to-day is toward excess. Christians may be easily swept along by the world-currents of display and extravagance. There are at least three conditions under which Christians have no right to luxuries, when indulgence means disaster to their spiritual lives and faithlessness to their Master:

"A Christian has not the shadow of a claim upon a luxury which he can not afford. . . .

"A Christian has no right to a luxury which materializes him. The one thing he is after is strength and symmetry of spiritual life. . . .

"A Christian has no right to a luxury which isolates him from his fellow-men. Harm attaches to every luxury which makes one less sensitive to the tremendous struggle that is going on all about us—a struggle often not for delicacies for the table or for an occasional trip abroad, but a struggle for daily bread and for shelter by night."

If we recognize, as we ought, that everything we have belongs to God, then we shall be careful to spend nothing except in ways that he will approve. Another writer says: "The Christ-spirit forbids lavish expense upon one's self while the needs of humanity are so many and great. A Christian may indulge in any luxury which he is sure will better fit him for, or aid him in, Christ-like service."

A NEW BOOK.

"FACING THE TWENTIETH CENTURY." By Rev. James M. King, D. D., General Secretary of the League for the Protection of American Institutions. Large octavo 640 pages. New York: American Union League Society.

After tracing in the opening chapter the composite sources of our great civilization, the author next discourses at length upon the three fundamental American institutions, namely: the State, the Church, and the School. In this connection much interesting and valuable information is given concerning educational institutions and agencies, special mention being made of the enlightening influence of the newspaper, the Chautauqua movement, and the public library. In Chapter III. a contrast is drawn between Anglo-Saxon and Latin civilizations, the causes and results of the recent war with Spain are narrated, and it is pointed out how strangely the hand of Providence seems all along to have delivered us from the oppressive and corrupting domination of Romanism.

The bulk of the volume is devoted to an arraignment of the aggression and unjustifiable methods of Roman Catholicism in this country. Not without reason, Dr. King characterizes the Romish Church as a "political-ecclesiastical" organization, and makes some startling revelations regarding its movements and aims. He unmasks the disgraceful schemes of Roman Catholic plotters at Washington in their efforts to obtain office and recognition for men of that faith, shows how persistent the Romish Church has been in seeking aid out of the public treasury in behalf of its schools, and exposes its hostility to our free public schools. The antagonism of Roman Catholicism to our American ideals of government, and of civil and religious freedom, is strikingly presented and borne out by a strong array of facts and figures.

In the concluding chapter the author outlines the agencies and measures to be depended upon for the protection of our American institutions against the menace of Romanism. Among other things, he advocates an amendment to the Constitution forbidding all appropriations either by Congress or by any State Legislature to sectarian institutions.

The book gives evidence of considerable investigation, and will furnish every true patriot much food for reflection. While, in our opinion, the author overdraws the picture in some particulars, and has not in every instance been guarded enough in his statements, there is no question that the matters to which he calls attention are of the most serious importance, and should receive careful consideration at the hands of the liberty-loving.

The volume is a regular thesaurus of information concerning the matters discussed, and to most readers will prove extremely interesting. Artistically considered, it is a very attractive volume, as it is profusely illustrated with portraits of public men of the past and present, of the heroes of war and peace, and views of historic buildings and places. (Price, $2 75; half Russia, $3 25. Sold by subscription, or on application to the American Union League Society, 156 Fifth avenue, New York.)

LITERARY NOTES.

BY W F B

Oddly enough, no book has ever been published which may be fairly called an adequate treatment of the business of American journalism. It is to fill this gap that Julian Ralph, "the best reporter in the world," has written for The Saturday Evening Post, of Philadelphia, a series of twelve papers on "The Making of a Journalist." The series will begin in the Post of Aug. 12

The Southern Magazine, for July, contains a biographical sketch of Paul Hamilton Hayne by Col. J. P Thomas, historian of South Carolina. Capt. W. P. Carter contributes an article on the battle of Fredericksburg. The "Religious Views of Jefferson," from an original letter of Thomas Jefferson, will be of interest. Mildred Rutherford's series of articles on Goethe reaches its second installment. "Dickens' Farewell"—a personal reminiscence by Geo. C Rand—adds to the interest of this new and valuable magazine.

The leading article in Appletons' Science Monthly, for August, is a reply to Comptroller Coler by Franklin H. Giddings, professor of sociology in Columbia University. The Hon. Charles D. Walcott, director of the United States Geological Survey, contributes an article on "The United States National Museum." "Are Jews Jews?" by Joseph Jacobs, president of the English Hebrew Historical Society, is a reply to Professor Ripley's articles, in which the latter took the ground that the Jews were not a distinct race, but simply a people. Prof M. V. O'Shea is the author of an article on "Mental Fatigue." The second part of the late Hon. D. A. Wells' paper on the "Best Methods of Taxation" is published in this number. "Herbert Spencer at Seventy-Nine" is the title of an interesting account of this great philosopher's work during the past ten years, and includes many interesting details regarding his habits and daily life.

In the August Ladies' Home Journal the Rev. Newell Dwight Hillis, D. D., has an interesting article on "The Diffusion of Happiness through Conversation," the third of his "Secrets of a Happy Life" series, and Mrs. Burton Kingsland and Emily D. Striebert write of "With the Children on Sunday"—their diversions and instruction. On two pictorial pages are shown cozy and attractive "Houses in Woods, Valleys and Mountains," and "The Sweetest of Summer Charities" pictures the work of the flower missions in several cities. The latest feminine fancies in dress are set forth in "The Gossip of a New York Girl." Mrs. S. T. Rorer's cooking lesson is on "Cold Dishes for Hot Weather," and Mr. and Mrs. Edward B. Warman's health talks are on timely themes.

THE NEW CENTURY EDUCATION.

The New Century Education is the name of a neat and attractive sixteen-page monthly issued by our General Board of Education in behalf of the Twentieth Century Educational Movement. Each number is filled with exceedingly interesting and valuable matter anent the subject of education, and the progress world-wide Methodism is making in equipping herself during the closing years of the century for more effective work in education, and along other lines.

This little paper has already reached a circulation of over fifty thousand, and, on account of its excellence and cheapness, it ought to go to every home in Southern Methodism. If our pastors expect to succeed in the movement in which we are now engaged, they ought, without exception, to utilize at once the aid of this paper in arousing interest, and in informing their flocks respecting our plans and progress.

The paper is ably edited by Dr. J. D. Hammond, Secretary of the Board of Education, and costs only ten cents a year. Let everybody take it and keep up with the "Twentieth Century Movement."

A WISE APPOINTMENT.

Bishop Galloway has appointed Rev. J. L. P. Sheppard financial agent for Centenary College and Mansfield College. Centenary and Mansfield are to be congratulated. Bro. Sheppard is a first-class man, and is thoroughly enlisted in the great educational movement of the day. He is also an ardent friend of both the Conference schools. A better appointment could not have been made. Let the Methodists of Louisiana give him their co-operation, and they will accomplish a work that will tell upon coming generations. Bro. Sheppard is already in the field making a canvass in North Louisiana.

RALLY AT SHREVEPORT.

The rally in the interest of the Twentieth Century Movement will be held at Shreveport, La., Aug. 30 and 31. Bishop Galloway requests me to urge all the preachers of the Louisiana Conference to attend. All will be entertained free of charge who send their names to Rev. W. T. Bolling, D. D.; Rev. P. O. Lowrey, or Col. S B. McCutchen.

Wednesday, Aug 30, will be devoted to addresses and prayer, with special reference to spiritual power and ministerial fellowship. Thursday will be set apart for the discussion of the educational movement, methods of procedure, etc.

Brethren, let us pray for a great spiritual baptism, a "time of refreshing"

Railroad rates will be published later. WM. H LAPRADE,
Sec. B'd of Education.

NOTICE.

MR EDITOR: The statement in the ADVOCATE, of the 27th instant, giving me credit for the completion of our new church at Port Vincent, is misleading. Other pastors have done the work, and I have entered into their labors. I rejoice that it falls to my lot to have it dedicated, and we are confidently expecting and praying for a refreshing from the Lord on the occasion. God bless you.

NOTES.

Rev. T. B. Clifford was one of the working force at the Sam Jones Camp Meeting.

Rev. A. D. McVoy is spending his vacation at the Seashore Camp Grounds.

Rev. G. D. Parker is assisting Rev. J. P Drake in a meeting at Long Beach, Miss.

Rev. F S. Parker passed through the city recently en route to Asheville, N C., where he will remain some weeks.

Rev. V. D. Skipper spent last week at Adams Camp Ground, assisting the pastor, Rev. W. W. Morse, in a meeting. He will remain in Mississippi two or three weeks.

The opening sermon of the next Ecumenical Conference will be preached by Bishop Galloway.

Bishop Thoburn, of the M. E. Church, is in the Philippines laying plans for extensive mission work.

The numerous friends of Rev. J. M. Henry will be pained to learn that he is quite ill with malarial fever.

The celebrated millionaire, Andrew Carnegie, has given $50,000 for the establishment of a public library at Fort Worth, Texas.

San Francisco was selected as the place of the next International Epworth League Convention, which will be held in 1901.

Rev. H. H. Ahrens attended the Indianapolis Convention. Bro. Ahrens also visited Nashville, Louisville, Cincinnati, Pittsburg, and Baltimore.

Rev. R. W. Vaughan writes: "Rev. C. F. Staples is slowly improving. He is in very weak physical condition. He has no fever now."

Dr. W. M. Leftwich, of the Tennessee Conference, has been appointed to the pastorate of Main Street Church, Danville, Va., to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Dr. R. N. Siedd.

Under date of July 25 Rev. G. W. Hoff writes: "I have just closed a meeting on my work. Fifty-one members received into our church, and thirty or forty bright conversions. We had no help from outside the circuit."

Rev. A. F. Watkins, of the Mississippi Conference, recently made a visit to the Crescent City. He occupied the pulpit of Carondelet Street Church on Sunday night, and preached one of his characteristically excellent sermons.

Under date of July 24, Sister C. F. Staples writes: "My husband, Rev. C. F. Staples, has had fever twenty-five days. We are hopeful, as the fever is declining. Our little boy is improving very fast. We ask the prayers of the brethren."

An unusually large number of people are spending the Summer at the Seashore Camp Grounds, every cottage except three being occupied. So far there has been preaching every Sabbath by visiting brethren—Bros. Sheppard, Cox and McVoy.

Bishop Hurst has invited Bishop Galloway, of the M. E. Church, South, to spend Sunday with him during the Rock River Conference, and preach one of the ordination sermons. Bishop Galloway, while holding the Japan Conference of his church, invited Bishop Hinde to assist him.—Northwestern Advocate.

Rev. O. L. Savage writes under date of July 29: "We have just closed a great revival on this charge (Coffeeville), which resulted in 12 additions to our church and 17 conversions. I was assisted by Rev. W. L. Graves, of Tunica, Miss. My people were delighted and edified with his preaching. Sinners were convicted and converted at the altar in the old-time way. Pray for us."

The Interstate Epworth League Conference, to be held at the Seashore Camp Ground, Aug. 15-25, promises to be an interesting occasion. An excellent programme has been arranged. The entire afternoon of each day will be given to recreation—boating, bathing, bicycling, etc. Board can be had at reasonable rates. Reduced rates will be given on the L. and N. R. R.

Rev. R. S. Isbell writes: "I am serving an appreciative people. Am moving up along all lines. Have received about fifty adults into the church—a large proportion of these into the church at Natchitoches. Have baptized thirty-five—near all adults. Have lifted in good subscriptions a large part of my Conference collections. Am getting good subscriptions on my parsonage fund, and hope to build in the Fall. Glorious meetings at Ragan's Chapel, and a bright future for Natchitoches and St. Maurice. Am much encouraged."

"ALL FOR CHRIST."

REV. THOMAS B. CLIFFORD, Jackson, La., EDITOR.

REV. HENRY G. HAWKINS, Madison, Miss., ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

The protracted meeting season is upon us, and many are the calls for help.

Having been obliged to respond to some of these, and our time, therefore, largely taken up of late in preaching, we have been unable to devote much time to this department.

The Leaguers, and young people generally, can assist to a great extent in these meetings. They can, at least, help in the singing; and this is a great factor in a meeting.

We earnestly pray that everyone of them may sing—with the spirit and the understanding also—the following lines:

"Take my voice and let me sing,
Always, ever, for my King."

Some sweet song sung at the proper time in a meeting will often stir a thousand memories, and strike responsive chords in some sinner's heart, and be the means of bringing him home to God.

Let not the Leaguers forget their motto, "All for Christ," which means that they themselves have been fully given to Christ, and intend to work and pray and sing till all with whom they come in contact shall have Christ fully formed within them, the hope of glory.

Those interested in higher female education should not fail to read the ad. of Randolph-Macon Woman's College in this issue. This institution takes rank with Vassar, Wellesley, and other first-class colleges. It is so classed by the United States Commissioner of Education. It has an endowment of over $100,000, and a faculty of twenty-four. It has the same grade of professors and the same curriculum as the best male colleges.

Notice.

I have rented the McGehee Cottage on the Campus at Centenary College, Jackson, La., and expect to run a first-class boarding-house at prices to suit. Any boy that wants to board at private home, and any that room at the dormitories and wish to avoid the rush of the "mess hall" and desire a quiet time, we will feed you at reasonable rates. Will be glad to correspond with any of the boys who contemplate attending Centenary.

Brethren of the Conference, I am making a great sacrifice to equip myself for more useful and efficient service to my church. Any help you can render by referring the boys to me, or putting me in correspondence with them, will be appreciated. Write me at Downsville, La., until the twenty-fifth of August.

Fraternally,

ROBT. W. VAUGHAN.

A DISTRESS CALL—HELP NEEDED.

We invite special attention to the following appeal. Here is a magnificent opportunity for those Christians to honor the Lord with their substance.

One of the pastors in Alexandria district, having his wife and seven children to support, was put in charge of a circuit which could not be expected to pay any pastor more than $125 to $150. Only $25 was furnished by the Board of Missions.

After advising with Bishop Morrison, the presiding elder advised the preacher in question to devote his time, not spent in filling the appointments, in some way as to complement his income. He started a crop, cultivated and had a fine prospect for 200 barrels of corn, and two or three bales of cotton. The drouth came, and the crop is a failure. The labor and heat has prostrated the brother, and he is now down with slow fever.

It is a case of real charity, and the more so as the condition results from the brother's heroic efforts to avoid just what has come.

The name I withhold for obvious reasons. Send help, and send quickly, by postoffice money order, or by registered letter, as below.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

The Durant District Conference closed to-day at Ackerman. Rev. J. S. Oakley, P. E., was present and presided with great urbanity and ability. The pastors were all present excepting Revs. L. M. Lipscomb and A. J. Foster. Lay delegates were present—more or less—from every pastoral charge excepting Salem and Cumberland.

Rev. W. M. McIntosh, president of Grenada College, and Prof. W. L. Weber, of Millsaps College, were present, and impressed themselves personally and the institutions they represent very favorably upon all who heard and met them. Their visitations and able addresses will doubtless bear much fruit for the cause of Christian education in general and our two excellent colleges in particular. Bro. Burton, manager of our Orphan's Home, ably represented that worthy institution. Rev. R. A. Burroughs, P. E., of Columbus district, added interest to the occasion by his genial presence and good sermon.

The doors of the Ackerman homes were opened wide, and hospitalities were generously dispensed to all preachers, delegates and visitors. Each guest praised his home, but none had better cause for doing so than Bro. Oakley and this scribe, who enjoyed together the good fare and cheer of the parsonage with Bro. Evans and his good wife and interesting children. Bro. Evans has recently improved the parsonage-building and grounds very much by adding needed repairs, painting, etc., most of which he did with his own hands. The remaining indebtedness on the district parsonage was provided for, so that that encumbrance will soon be a thing of the past.

Rev. Geo. H. Lipscomb has been taking a needed rest with relatives in Oxford.

We are glad to note the convalescence of Bro. J. M. Massey. He will ere long be able to resume his work.

Prof. Weber will spend a week or so itinerating in these parts in the interest of Millsaps College. We bespeak for him and the cause he represents the hearty co-operation of our preachers and people wherever he goes.

Bro. McIntosh is also bestirring himself for Grenada College, and meets with encouragement on all hands. He reports the outlook for the coming session as very hopeful, and from all indications his hopefulness is well founded. So may it prove. G. W. RACHMAN.

A CALL FOR HELP.

Dear friends and readers of the ADVOCATE, will you kindly send us 25 cents to help us finish our church in the beautiful little city of McHenry? Our people at this place have in the last two years passed through two epidemics of yellow fever, and, of course, need help to build a church. Send money to me at Wool Market, Miss.

KIDNEY TROUBLE.

The Most Prevalent, Dangerous and Deceptive Disease.

Thousands Have It and Don't Know It.

Pains and aches come from excess of uric acid in the blood, due to neglected kidney trouble. Kidney trouble causes quick or unsteady heart beats, and makes one feel as though they had heart trouble. Because the heart is overworking to pump the thick, kidney poisoned blood through the veins and arteries.

Soreness or uncomfortable feeling in the back indicates kidney trouble of no small importance.

The passing of scanty or profuse quantities of urine is a warning of kidney trouble. If you want to feel well you can make no mistake by first doctoring your kidneys.

The famous new discovery, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp Root, is the true specific for kidney, bladder and urinary troubles. It has cured thousands of apparently hopeless cases after all other efforts have failed.

Sold on its merits by all druggists in fifty cent and one dollar sizes. A sample bottle sent free by mail to any address. Also a book telling all about Swamp Root and its wonderful cures. When writing, address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and mention that you read this generous offer in the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

SPANISH-AMERICAN WAR PANORAMA

is one of the war books which is likely to be in continuous demand. It is a panoramic record of the triumph of Yankee Doodle. The eagle flaps his wings on every page, and "Old Glory" waves around and above every scene. Prominent officers connected with the war are here portrayed, as well as many of the "men behind the guns." Military life is pictured to the eye, from recruiting to guard mount and skirmish line. Nor is the ludicrous omitted. The company cook receives the attention due to his importance; the mess is shown; cavalry scenes are given; the hospital arrangements are depicted; the heroines of the Red Cross service are displayed; street scenes in Havana, Santiago and elsewhere are unrolled, the new citizens or subjects (which are they?) of Uncle Sam appear and disappear as the leaves are turned.

In a word, the gazer visits the new localities and sees the tumultuous new life, without the risk or expense of a sea voyage.

The Album is 5½x8 inches, weighs 12 ounces, printed on finest coated paper.

Sent FREE to any address in the United States, Canada, or Mexico, for 12 cents in stamps or coin, to cover postage and packing. Copy may be seen at any ticket office of the Big Four Route.

SOCRATES died from a cup of poison administered by the hand of a friend. How many in this land have died by poisonous remedies given by friendly hands to combat diseases? It is quite a comfort to know that when giving DICKS' CHILLIFUGE there is not a drop of poison in a bottle full of this beneficent remedy.

DON'T LOOK FOR FLAWS.

Don't look for flaws as you go through life;
And even when you find them
It is wise and kind to be somewhat blind,
And look for the virtue behind them,
For the cloudiest night has a hint of the light
Somewhere in its shadows hiding;
It is better by far to hunt for a star
Than the spots on the sun abiding.

The current of life runs ever away
To the bosom of God's great ocean;
Don't set your force 'gainst the river's course
And think to alter its motion.
Don't waste a curse on the universe—
Remember it lived before you.
Don't butt at the storm with your puny form,
But bend and let it fly o'er you.

The world will never adjust itself
To suit your whim to the letter;
Some things must go wrong your whole life long,
And the sooner you know it the better.
It is folly to fight with the infinite,
And go under at last in the wrestle;
The wiser man shapes into God's great plan
As the water shapes into the vessel.

—Progressive Age.

TOO MUCH MARRIED.

Mr. Editor: I would not have you and your readers think for a single moment that I am opposed to marriage; on the contrary, I believe in marriage, and, in most cases, believe in early marriage. But not unfrequently I see people who are "too much married."

Marriage was never designed to conflict with a man's duties to God and the church. It was never designed to stand in his way of attending the services of the church, the preaching of the Word, the weekly prayer service and the Sunday-school; and yet, in these latter days, when a couple of young people marry, it is a sign-manual for them to drop out of Sunday-school, or, at least, to attend every now and then. They become mere figure-heads in the machinery of the church, and are worth as much to the church and society as a hole in the side of a gully or a wart on a black-jack tree. These are the sort of people who are "too much married."

The pastor meets the "too-much-married" husband Monday morning, and says: "Good morning, brother, I missed you from Sunday-school yesterday morning; and by the way, your Sunday-school class had no teacher. I also missed you from the preaching service."

Husband—"Yes, it is true I was not at church yesterday, but my wife didn't feel very well, and I thought it was my duty to stay with her. I never like to go away and leave her by herself on Sunday."

Pastor—"How do you manage to leave her for six days in the week? I suppose there must be some dangers stalking about on Sunday that do not find their way out in public on other days."

Husband—"Well, you see it is this way: I work hard all the week, and I feel tired on Sunday, and my wife don't care to go to church, and so I stay with her."

Some people go to Sunday-school and church, for the most part, in order to get married. When they have accomplished their purpose, it is not a strange thing that it develops later that they are "too much married."

If this class ever get to heaven, they will have to get there without having shown any loyalty to the church, or fidelity to the King.

My judgment is (I may be mistaken), God has a contempt, if contempt he can have, for men who work six days in the seven for a money consideration, and refuse to work for God and humanity the seventh day in the absence of money consideration. From people who are "too much married!" good Lord deliver us. —Plain Facts.

DON'T TAKE OFFENSE.

Look here a moment, my friend, just listen to my words: Don't be so willing to be offended. I have noticed you are very sensitive and quick to suspect a fancied wrong. There are many reasons why you should not be thus.

One is: It makes you very unhappy. You know how much you brood over some fancied injury you received. You think about it when alone. You wake in the night and recall how somebody has ill-treated you. This ruffles your spirit, destroys your inward peace, nurtures in you unpleasant feelings, and, sometimes, thoughts and schemes of retaliation and revenge. The effect of such a spirit is at last seen in the face, discerned in less kindly eyes, and even the voice loses its melody and sweetness. The connection between spirit and body is so close and vital that the internetions are sure and effective.

Then, again, this makes you less agreeable to others, and what you in an evil hour fancied become realities. Offenses and slights will be given, because many will not be so anxious to please you. You know when we have a sore on foot, or hand, or arm, some one all the while jogs gles us and hurts us right on that sore spot. So, exactly, if we carry sore feelings, sore spirits, and a sore heart into society, some careless one or cruel one will surely manage to hurt us—and sometimes I think on purpose.

Now, if that spirit injures you so much in respect to yourself, and unfits you for a social life, it must be very injurious to your Christian life; for that involves all other of life's relations, and takes more. You can not be a happy, trustful, amiable, and congenial Christian when you are fermenting with a sense of injuries received. Hence your influence and power for good are very much weakened. Just read Paul's description of an opposite spirit that should govern a Christian soul: "Love suffereth long and is kind, envieth not, . . . is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil, . . . beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things." What a happy person he must be who is governed by such a spirit! —H. O. Rawlands, D. D., in Standard.

WITHOUT MANNERS.

Standing by the desk of a business man who employs quite a number of lads, I saw a boy of about fifteen come in and apply for a situation. The boy was well dressed, and in demeanor and accent indicated that he belonged to one of the upper grades of the public schools. Without taking off his hat, or appearing to notice anybody who was present, he demanded, in a sharp, unpleasant voice, "Say, mister, are you advertising for a boy?" The business man looked at him for a second and answered, "I want an older boy than you." "What?" "I want an older boy than you," answered the merchant, in a somewhat louder voice. "Oh," answered the lad, as he swung around and walked out.

"That," said the merchant to me, "is a sample of the manner of the Toronto school-boy. In my business, you know, we depend almost entirely upon the politeness, quickness, and adaptability of the young fellows we have behind the counter. I have to change my boys a dozen times a year because I can not get the right material. My customers ask me why I change my boys so often. Certainly it is not to save money, for I would be willing to keep them if they were worth keeping. The first thing they ask me is what wages I pay, and the next, what hours they will have to work. They never think about me or my business; all they want to know is how much they can get out of me. Apparently they give me no credit for being able to teach them a profitable trade; they only regard me as a task-master, who is to be made pay the highest price, give the shortest hours, and accept the lowest possible quality of service."

Parents who are bringing up their boys without manners, and without any consideration for themselves or prospective employers, and without any ambition to acquire a decent method of procuring a livelihood, should cut this little paragraph out, and paste it up where the boys will see it when they rise in the morning and go to bed at night.—Toronto Saturday Night.

ONE CIGAR A DAY.

"How can you afford all these books?" asked a young man calling upon a friend; "I can't seem to find spare change for even the leading magazines."

"Oh, that library is only my one cigar a day," was the reply.

"What do you mean?" inquired the visitor. "Mean? Just this: When you advised me to indulge in an occasional cigar several years ago I had been reading about a young fellow who bought books with the money that others would have burned in cigars, and I thought I would try and do the same. You may remember that I said I should allow myself one cigar a day?"

"Yes, I recall the conversation, but don't quite see the connection."

"Well, I never smoked, but I put by the price of a five-cent cigar every day; and as the money accumulated, I bought books—the very books you see."

"You don't mean to say that your books cost no more than that! Why, there are dollars' worth of them!"

"Yes, I know there are. I had six years more of my apprenticeship to serve when you advised me 'to be a man.' I put by the money, which, at five cents a day, amounted to $18.25 a year, or $109.50 in six years. I keep these books by themselves as the result of my apprenticeship cigar money; and if you had done as I did, you would, by this time, have saved many, many more dollars than I have, and you would have been better off in health and self-respect besides."—The Commonwealth.

There is in every heart a dark chamber. There are very, very few of us that dare tell all our thoughts and show our inmost selves to the dearest ones. The most silvery lake that lies sleeping amidst beauty, itself the very fairest spot of all, when drained off show ugly ooze and filthy mud, and all manner of creeping abominations in the slime. I wonder what we should see if our hearts were, so to speak, drained off, and the very bottom layer of everything brought into the light? Do you think you would like it? Do you think you could stand it?—Alexander Maclaren, D. D.

Our expectations, our ideals, our hopes and intentions in beginning life are generally all too low. Many and many a one is only indifferently successful in living a strong life, because at the start the standard of what one ought to be, and the belief in what one may be, were set too low.—Charles Cuthbert Hall, D. D.

We once knew a man who boasted of his ability to take three straight drinks of liquor a day—never any more, never any less. The old man is living yet, but two of his sons died drunkards, and the third one is keeping a bar room. He sowed his "moderate drinking," and has reaped the ruin of his sons.—The Baptist Standard.

Hygiene.

WE EAT TOO MUCH.

Of the many cures in vogue, and recognized from their records as worthy the name, nine-tenths of them depend upon reducing the diet for their effectiveness.

A widespread fad during the last few years has been the "no breakfast cure," and thousands of dyspeptics have gained health, the stout have grown thin, and the thin have grown stout, all through lifting the burden from overtaxed digestions. An equally popular cure preceding this was the leaving off of the evening meal—equally effective, of course, just as a "no midday meal cure" would be, if it should be promulgated.

One of the most splendid cures for all ills in Europe is the grape cure practiced in Germany; and it is said that anyone taking the treatment drops off the wear and tear of five years—actually renews himself by so much. The sanitariums where this treatment is given are beautifully and healthfully situated and comfortably appointed. The patient is given nothing but unfermented grape juice for a period of four weeks—beginning with a generous amount, decreased to a minimum allowance—as little as the system will bear without great weakening, and gradually increased to the first amount.

At all European spas and American springs where people are so benefited, what is the course? A restricted diet and a flooding of the system with pure water—resting and washing the system, in other words.

Animals—those not dominated by the habits and thought-atmosphere of man—do not overeat, and even domestic animals stop short their nourishment when in anywise ill. A dog will bury the food not immediately required; other animals leave off before or at repletion. Man alone will eat without hunger, solely to tickle his palate, being, indeed, the only gorging animal save—truth is merciless—the occupant of the sty.—Woman's Home Companion.

OUR $1 OFFER.

Much has been said about reducing the subscription price of the Advocate. The only way in which a reduction can be brought about is by an increase in the number of subscribers. In order to facilitate this result, we make the following offer: Until further notice we will take new subscriptions at the rate of $1 for eight months. When seven thousand five hundred new names have been sent in at this rate with the cash, we will extend the time four months longer, thus reducing the price to $1 per annum. When the extension is made, old subscribers will get the benefit as well as new ones, provided they first pay up all arrearages. Of course, no commissions can be given under this offer. Address

LIKE A THIEF IN THE NIGHT,

Malaria creeps into the system and leaves a poison which saps its vitality until the well-known symptoms of CHILLS AND FEVER, INTERMITTENT FEVER, CONGESTION, BLOODY URINE, etc., will show their snake-like heads. Fortunately there is an antidote in DICKS' CHILLIFUGE, which absolutely exterminates Malaria in a few hours; so pleasant to the taste that children love to take it. It banishes fevers like mist before the morning sun; brings as a gift rose cheeks, health, happiness, and makes life worth the living

HEARN—In Pearl River Cemetery, on June 8 1899 just at her beloved Sunday-school hour, loving hands consigned to mother earth all that was mortal of Mrs. JAMES HEARN (nee Sue Eda Graves). The old church organ that had so often responded to her skillful touch, and had so lately pealed forth her joyous wedding march, to-day seemed to join its sobs with that of sorrowing friends, as it mournfully chanted her funeral dirge. Just five months before she stood at Hymen's altar and plighted her troth to the man of her choice. Fair and beautiful did she look—so bright, so full of hope—as their little barque glided smoothly off down the stream of life. Her health had not been good for over a year, but loved ones were ever hopeful, and it was not fully realized till just the day before she died that her earthly mission had been filled. That same minister who had joined her in the holy bonds of wedlock stood again before her and read in solemn tones, "I am the resurrection and the life," as she lay in her casket sweetly sleeping that "blessed sleep, from which none ever wake to weep." In that profound repose she seemed a creature fresh from the hands of God waiting for the breath of life, and not like one who had lived and suffered death. Everything that willing hands and loving hearts could do had been done, but the fiat had gone forth, "Dust thou art," and her gentle spirit was wafted across the silent sea. Wrapped in her bridal robes, upon a bed of flowers, she sleeps until the "resurrection morn" beneath the sod that so lightly covers her narrow home. And as we turned sadly away, leaving her alone with the quiet sleepers of the city of the dead, we thought: How many hopes lie buried there! How long a time before broken, bleeding hearts can bow in meek submission and say, Thy will be done!

The subject of this notice was born at Dixon, Neshoba county, Miss., Sept. 15, 1876; moved to Madison county, Miss., in October, 1890; joined the Methodist Church in 1894; married to James Hearn, Jan. 4, 1899, and died June 8, 1899. A FRIEND.

DEAR—There are so many in this beautiful world of ours, who are called to bear the "cross of suffering," numbered among earth's afflicted ones, yet patient, meek, cheerful, and resigned to the will of their "Father in heaven." Such a one was VIRGINIA COFFMAN DEAR, daughter of Dr. C. R. and Mrs. V. E. Boucher.

"Miss Virgie" was born near Enterprise, Miss., Feb. 3, 1871, and was baptized by Bishop Paine, June 4, 1871. At twelve years of age she made an open profession of religion, and connected herself with the M. E. Church, South, which relation she held sacred until her death, which occurred June 13, 1899. She was happily married to Mr. H. M. Dear, of Enterprise, Miss., Dec. 16, 1898.

One year was hardly yet complete
Since she before her pastor vowed
That she would be a true helpmeet,
Who now is in her shroud."

Her reserve and shrinking delicacy, caused by physical suffering, threw a veil over her beautiful character. She was not extensively known beyond her home circle, but there she spread around her that soft, pure light which makes home so attractive. She was an obedient daughter, loving wife, tender and sympathetic in her relations to the world, and now, since she has passed away "trusting in Jesus," her memory is the shrine of pleasant thoughts—"sweet as the scent of flowers." To the bereaved ones we tender pure sympathy, and say:

"Weep not for her! There is no cause of woe,
But rather nerve the spirit, that it walk,
Unshrinking, o'er the thorny path below,
And from earth's low defilements keep thee back;
So, when a few fleet, swerving years have flown,
She'll meet thee at heaven's gate,
And lead thee on;
Weep not for her."

J. T. LEGGETT.

HILL—Col. J. L. S. HILL was born in Chester, S. C., Jan. 27, 1818, and died in Okolona, Miss., June 18, 1899. He was twice married, and by the first wife there were some children, all of whom died in infancy and childhood. His second wife survives him.

Col. Hill was a man of fine character and splendid influence wherever he lived. His mind was clear, strong, and well stored with useful information. He was often honored by his fellow-citizens with positions of trust and of great responsibility, and whether in the Legislature, the sheriff's office, or as a delegate to Annual Conference, he was true to every trust committed to him. Honor, honesty and integrity were the marked features of his noble character. His word was as good as his bond in any matter. He was a polite, courteous Christian gentleman to all persons and in all places—one of nature's noblemen.

As a Christian, Col. Hill was sincere, devout and spiritual; true to God and to his church and ministers. No man had a finer influence for good in the community where he lived. He was a perfect man—one that feared God and hated evil.

A stroke of paralysis nine or ten months before his death rendered him nearly helpless and greatly impaired his mind, but to the last he was the same polite gentleman and the same devout, holy-hearted Christian. His mouth was filled with laughter, and his tongue with singing and shouts of victory, as he slowly and painlessly went down into the last river. A purer, truer, holier man of God I have never known. "A good name is better than precious ointment, and the day of death than the day of one's birth." GILDENOY.

WATSON—CYRUS DAVIS WATSON was born in Grangeville, La., June 25 1877; joined the M. E. Church, South, at Pine Grove, La., under the ministry of Rev. C. D. Caull in 1892; died March 19, 1899, at Grangeville, La.

It was our privilege to be his pastor for three years, and we can truly say we never had a boy in our charge we loved better, or that was a better friend to us, and in his death we fully realize that we have lost one of our best friends. We used to spend days together at the same time, and he never tired of hearing us read the manuscript, or sit down and go through a whole sermon to him, especially if it was the biography of some Bible character. He loved to listen to the trials and triumphs of these great men.

He was the idol of both father and mother. They both depended on him for almost everything, and their trust was well founded, for their interest was his interest; hence no wonder his death was such a blow. Our hearts go out in sympathy to them in their dark hour of bereavement. His father writes me that he has every reason to believe, from his prayers to and talks with the Lord Jesus during his illness, that he has joined that happy throng where sickness, sorrow, pain and death are felt and feared no more.

That the good Lord may cheer and comfort the sad hearts of papa and mama, and help them to so live that bye and bye they may form an unbroken family circle around the great white throne, is the prayer of one who loves them. J. P. H.

CARNEY—MARK BOATNER CARNEY, the youngest son of J. G. Carney, was taken severely ill with pneumonia at his home in Slaughter, La., in the early part of January. All was done that loving hearts and tender, skillful hands could do for his recovery, but in vain. His suffering was intense and brief. On Jan. 8 1899, his tired heart stopped to rest, and he entered the land "beyond the vale of tears."

Boatner was born Nov. 26 1879 and joined the Methodist Church during a revival held by Evangelist Joe Jones. He was one of our good, faithful young men. How we all miss him! He was frequently at prayer-meeting, at Sunday-school, and at League meetings. His disposition was of that quiet, happy kind—always the same; his home life was beautiful, his obedience prompt, his service willing and joyous; his love for father, mother, brother and sister was pure and devoted. The beautiful home circle is broken; the vacant place in the sad, broken hearts can be filled only by Him who loved us and gave himself for us. May God bless the bereaved and sorrowing loved ones! ALBERT S. LURZ.

POOL—Mrs. MALINDA C. POOL was born in Pike county, Miss., April 6, 1825; removed to Copiah county when quite young. She was converted at an early age and joined the Methodist Church, and was ever a consistent and devoted member, praying in public and doing what she could for the cause of Christ. She was twice married; first to A. Y. Lord in 1849, and after his death to W. P. Pool in 1853, and died March 23, 1899. We are bereaved with her loved one.

Sister Pool was one of the best women it has been our privilege to know; quiet, unassuming, but deeply pious, and ever ready to testify for her Lord. We shall miss her, but we know where to find her, "in the sweet by-and-by."

May God graciously bless her loved ones, and help them to meet her where parting will be no more! A. D. MILLER.

Hermanville, Miss.

FOR OVER FIFTY YEARS

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used for children teething. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for Diarrhœa. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

The shortness of life is bound up with its fullness. It is to him who is most active, always thinking, feeling, working, caring for people and for things, that life seems short. Strip a life empty, and it will seem long enough.—Phillips Brooks.

JOB EARNED HIS TITLE BY GREAT SUFFERING. Had he flourished in these days, his recourse for consolation would not have been the company of three nagging friends, but a bottle of DICKS' MUL-EN-OL, which has a wonderful power to dissipate the inflammation, cool the feverishness, and completely cure boils and carbuncles.

The older I get the more I see how important it is first to learn and then form an opinion; not the latter before the former, nor both at the same time.—F. Mendelsohn.

NAPOLEON LOST THE BATTLE OF LEIPSIC because of a fit of indigestion. One dose of DICKS' MUL-EN-OL would have given him instant relief, and the fate of the kingdoms of Europe been decided differently. It is really marvelous how quickly a colicky pain will vanish when a teaspoonful of Mul-en-ol in a wineglass of hot water is taken. Try it; you will never suffer from colic.

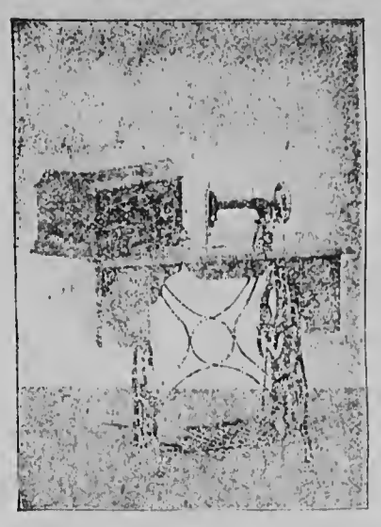
New Machine Offer.

By Far the Best We Have Ever Made.

Always on the watch for something good for our subscribers, we have succeeded in making arrangements whereby we can make a sewing machine offer which is far better than any we have been able hitherto to make. Read the following description and then read our offer:

No. 4 IMPERIAL.



THE IMPERIAL HIGH-ARM SINGER will be found the perfection of mechanism as regards simplicity, durability and adaptability to the wide range of work embraced in the general family needs.
A Handsome, Light-Running, Lock-Stitch, High-Arm Machine that will not fail to please the most fastidious. Embracing all the advantages with all desirable improvements of other first-class sewing machines, so simple in mechanism that the most inexperienced need no assistance in operating it. Book of instructions with every machine. Any child can learn to run it.
Extra Set of Attachments also free with each machine consisting of the following: One Tucker, One Foot Ruffler, One Set of Plate Hemmers, four different widths up to ½ of an inch, One Binder and One Thread Cutter.

No. 3 Machine, drop leaf table, gothic cover, case of two drawers at one end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $24. Our price, $14.75.
No. 4 Machine, drop leaf table, gothic cover, case of two drawers at each end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $25. Our price, $15.50.
No. 5 Machine, drop leaf table, gothic cover, case of three drawers at each end, making seven drawers in all. Dealer's price, $26. Our price, $16.25.

No. 4 Columbian

EXCELLENCE OF THE COLUMBIAN.—All wearing parts are of case-hardened steel possessing great durability, and by the turning of a screw all lost motion caused by wear can be taken up. All parts are fitted so accurately that the machines are absolutely noiseless, and as easy running as fine adjustment and best mechanical skill is possible to produce. No expense or time is spared to make them perfect in every respect, as every machine passes a rigid inspection by competent men before leaving the factory.
NICKEL PLATED.—The balance wheel and many of the fine parts are nickel plated, with other parts finely enameled and ornamented, giving it a rich appearance.
A Self Setting Needle and Self-Threading Cylinder Shuttle are used in the Columbian High-Arm Sewing Machine. They are so simple that any one can easily operate them in a few minutes' time, as our Instruction Book is fully illustrated, showing how to do all kinds of fancy work with attachments.
Extra Attachments, in velvet-lined case, sent free with each machine: 1 Tucker, 1 Ruffler with shirring plate, 1 Hemmer set (4 widths) and Binder, 1 Braider (Foot and Slide), 1 Thread Cutter.
ADDITIONAL ACCESSORIES.—Each machine is supplied with the following outfit: 1 Hemmer and Feller (one piece), 10 Needles, 6 Bobbins, 1 Wrench, 1 Screw Driver, Oil Can with Oil, Cloth Gauge and Thumb Screw, and a Book of Instructions. The Book of Instructions is profusely illustrated, and answers the purpose of a competent teacher.

No. 3—Drop leaf, Bent cover, case of two drawers at one end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $29. Our price, $17.
No. 4—Drop leaf table, Bent cover, case of two drawers at each end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $31. Our price, $17.75.
No. 5—Drop leaf table, Bent cover, case of three drawers at each end and center drawer, making a seven-drawer machine. Dealer's price, $33. Our price, $18.50.

The chief difference between Numbers 3, 4, and 5 is in the furniture, i. e., in the number of drawers. If you do not want to pay for the extra drawers, you need not do so. We sell these machines under a ten years' guarantee, by which we mean that if any part gives out by reason of any defect therein, the manufacturer will replace the same free of charge. Moreover, we allow the purchaser to test the machine ten days. If at the end of ten days you are not satisfied, you have only to drop us a postal card, and your money will be refunded.

OUR OFFER.

We will send any one of the above-described machines at the prices named, and also send the ADVOCATE free for six months. The only condition attached to this offer is that subscribers who are in arrears must first pay up all arrearages to date. It would be well to avail yourself of this offer at once, as we can not promise that it will last very long. Notice that you take no risk whatever. We do all the risking. Address

They are all agreed that General Otis is responsible for the small results which have been achieved, and is utterly incompetent to meet the difficulties of the situation.

A volume of clippings, valued at $2500, is to be presented to Admiral Dewey upon his arrival. The book contains between its solid silver covers a wealth of printed matter, from profound editorials on the admiral to humorous poetry regarding him, and from the comments of the President and Cabinet down to the jokes of street gamins.

The announcement that General Henraux, President of the Republic of San Domingo, had been assassinated naturally created some concern in this country, not so much because of any special interest in the man himself, as because of the political consequences which may follow his sudden taking off. Like all other Latin-American countries San Domingo has been ruled completely by the personal influence of a single man.

Officially the authorities say that the "New Orleans" and the "Machias" are being sent to the Dominican Government solely as a precautionary measure; that the press dispatches indicate political intrigue, which may result in a revolution, and that as American interests in the little republic are paramount to those of any other country, it is a part of prudence to have ample force at hand to see that full protection is given to these interests.

United States Minister Merry has been instructed to represent to the Government of Nicaragua that in the opinion of the State Department that $9000 collected by General Torres, from the American merchants in Bluefields, should be returned to them. The merchants were required to pay this amount of money on goods that had been assessed previously by the revolutionary party, while the latter was in control at Bluefields. Our Government objects to this double collection.

LEMONS AS MEDICINE.

They regulate the Liver, Stomach, Bowels, Kidneys and Blood as prepared by Dr. H. Mozley, in his Lemon Elixir, a pleasant lemon drink. It cures biliousness, constipation, indigestion, headache, malaria, kidney diseases, fevers, chills, heart failure, nervous prostration, and all other diseases caused by a torpid or diseased liver and kidneys. It is an established fact that lemons, when combined properly with other liver tonics, produce the most desirable results upon the stomach, liver, bowels, kidneys, and blood. Sold by druggists. 50c and $1 bottles.

Randolph-Macon Woman's College, LYNCHBURG, VIRGINIA.

This college is named by the United States Commissioner of Education as one of the fourteen colleges for women in the United States entitled to be classed in "Division A." [See Official Report, page 1732.]

1. LOCATION: Virginia. Near the foot of the Blue Ridge, in the residence suburbs of Lynchburg—beautiful scenery, health-giving climate, railroad, telegraph, telephone, street cars, modern facilities.

2. PLANT: $149,000. Campus 20 acres. Buildings new, modern; steam heat, gas, hot and cold water, etc. Front 365 feet. Four separate laboratories; excellent library; skylit art studios; large gymnasium, chapel, lecture rooms, music rooms, etc.

3. ENDOWMENT: $102,000. The annual income from the endowment of $102,000 is applied toward current expenses. The plant is exempt from charges for rent or taxes, thus patrons get thousands of dollars free every year. The purpose of the college is not to make money, but to make noble, cultured women.

4. COURSES: Elective. Nine distinct elective courses lead to the A. B. degree, enabling the student, after the fundamental discipline has been secured, to follow the bent of her natural talent. A. M. courses entirely elective. Full courses in music and art.

5. FACULTY: Full faculty of college grade. Twenty-three instructors and two hundred and twenty-five students last session. Professors selected for special ability in their departments, and for personal worth as men.

6. PHYSICAL CULTURE: Large gymnasium, well equipped. Regular training for vigor and grace by competent directress. Out-door sports arranged for—tennis, basket ball, cycling, etc.

7. HOME LIFE: Officers and teachers and their families live with the students, and help make their home life elevating and happy. Noble character is the ultimate end of our culture, and influence association one of the chief means.

☞ Special arrangements to aid teachers who wish to improve their preparation.

Correspondence.

LETTER FROM KENTUCKY.

BY REV. CHAS F. EVANS, D. D.

For many years it has been the custom in this city for the various churches to concentrate their night services during July and August at one church, and so, for the past four Sabbaths, I have had a half day's rest. It has been more—a season of sweet communion with other denominations, tending to deepen our fellowship, and the privilege of hearing from other lips the precious gospel. We preachers also need to hear the gospel, and if it comes by unexpected combinations and points of view, so much the better for breadth of our theology and the sifting of our personal experience. In this "Woodford county" not only do our traditional opponents, the Baptists and Campbellites, whose pulpits have always been closed to us, but the Protestant Episcopalians also, join in this union service. I hope they will, ere long, wake up in Louisiana to the fact that we also have a view, a message, and an unction.

The Twentieth Century Educational Campaign has begun in Kentucky, not very vigorously, for we are waiting for our Conference, now about five weeks off, to settle some essential preliminaries. But our District Conferences have inaugurated the discussion, and individual pastors are scattering literature and preaching sermons directly and indirectly bearing upon this interest. Much has to be done in informing both our congregations and certain classes of our preachers before any general enthusiasm will appear. After all, our general success depends largely upon the spirit of our circuits. If the young men upon the circuits will be at the pains to read the specific works of such men as John Stuart Blackie on "Self-Culture," Herbert Spencer on "Education," and Principal J. C. Shairp on "Culture and Religion," they will obtain not only rich and wonderous thought for distribution among their flocks, but choicest personal culture, which will prove an abundant personal and official blessing all their lives.

I have been privileged with several opportunities to use such matter, and expect to embrace everyone that offers. Very recently I went to the field of our pastor at Nicholasville, in an adjacent county. A choice congregation in a fine church gave exceptional attention, showing their sympathy with the movement, and appreciation of the fact that the future history of our denomination is being certainly defined by the esprit de corps which is brought to this movement, the thoroughness of our work, and munificence of our gifts. If we do not prepare for ourselves a higher and more symmetrical character in the pulpit and in the pew by a more general and generous use of our literary institutions, we will be not only discredited before our communities, but find that all our enterprises limp and halt for want of both intellectual skill and financial support. There has never been any enterprise projected by Southern Methodism that so vitally touches its ministry in their personal or fiducial capacity, nor one that in bringing rich results to the church enriches so variously its pastors. It is to be hoped that the Annual Conference secretaries and the Boards of Education will arrange to supply every charge with such speakers as will instruct and enthuse the people.

Being in Jessamine county, and only nine miles from the site of Bethel Academy—the second educational enterprise of American Methodism—I could not forego the privilege of looking upon its ruins, and rescuing from them a relic or two. There is nothing left now but a grass grown heap of broken bricks, and a few pieces of native marble supposed to be the foundation of what, everything considered, was a noble structure. It was eighty feet long, forty feet wide, and three stories high. It was founded in 1790, opened with a course of primary instruction in 1794 by Jno. Metcalf, and chartered in 1798, when Valentine Cook took charge of the enterprise. It was short-lived, for it was abandoned in 1803. It is marvelous that such a house should have been built at all, or that it should have been used so long. Nicholasville was the nearest settlement, and was nine miles away, while Lexington, much larger, but then only a village, was twenty-one miles distant. Asbury's visit to the first Conference in Kentucky, in 1790, when the institution was started with a collection of £300 in money and land, was made under guards. The country was unopened, and hostile Indians threatened every path. The Conference was composed of only six preachers, and the Bishop moved with his escort on bridle-paths, through cane-brakes and deep streams, and over mountains, where wild beasts were as great a menace as the red men of the forest. There were but one thousand church members represented in that Conference, and they lived under shadow of military posts that were scattered through the territory. It is wonderful to think of their enterprising and daring faith. These men got for their year's ministry an allowance of sixty-four dollars, and Burke says "that the building of this house rendered the pecuniary means of the preachers very uncertain, for they were continually employed in begging for Bethel Academy." Did these unmarried and childless men stand in equivocal relation to the subject of education, to the weal of the church, or the glory of God? Has Southern Methodism a shameful record, or, with such a history, will it fail to meet the demands of the twentieth century, or will it, with faltering feet and craven heart, fail to follow the white plume of Galloway as he leads this noble charge for God and humanity?

"ON TO INDIANAPOLIS."

This was the slogan voiced by the Epworth Era, and echoed by State and District League Conferences; and having been honored, even in my absence, with the presidency of the Mississippi State Conference, and being urged by my friends and family, I heeded the slogan.

In company with Rev. J. M. Morse and his little daughter, Ora, Miss Annie Lee Sudduth, and Miss Grace Loper, the second vice-president of our State Conference, I left for Indianapolis on Tuesday, July 18. We found the chair-car accommodation on the I. C. all that we wished. At Memphis, Miss Blanche Frazier, a sister-in-law of Judge Estis, came aboard, and very soon she and our Grace were acquainted, and she became a delightful addition to our party.

From Memphis to Paducah was passed in the night, and from Paducah to Louisville, across the big bend of the Ohio, in the early morning. Stock farms and apple orchards had taken the place of corn fields and cotton plantations. We got breakfast at Louisville, boarded a yellow car of the Big Four line, and crossed the Ohio into Indiana. Broad fields of hay and corn, wheat and oats spread away to the horizon, and towns and villages were numerous. At every station hoosiers came aboard, many of them, like ourselves, Epworth Leaguers bound for the International.

This was the first time I was ever in Indiana. One thing impressed me at once—that Indiana sadly needs the temperance sentiment and anti rum legislation that prevails in Mississippi; the saloon signs to be seen in every town and village we passed, and a very odoriferous saloon patron, who sat behind me, gave strong evidence of this want. The second thing that impressed me is, that all the verdant young people do not live in the pine woods of Mississippi.

Indianapolis is a beautiful city, with broad, well-paved, clean-swept streets, handsome cottages, and splendid public buildings. It is her boast that she has neither millionaires nor paupers. Her State House is an immense structure, magnificently built and located. In the centre of the city, from which radiate in every direction avenues and streets to the distant city limits, is a circle, in the centre of which stands the soldiers' and sailors' monument, said to be the grandest in the world. It rises 284 feet above the street, and from two sides of its base there rush sheets of water, leaping in cataracts to broader pools below, where it glistens a rich Nile green. A sculptured group on one face symbolizes war, and another, on the opposite face, peace. Stone terraces lead from the street up to the base, and statues of Indiana's great men, at regular intervals, guard the circle. One morning these vast terraces were crowded with Epworth Leaguers holding a sunrise prayer meeting.

The Conference, or "Convention"—as our Canadian brethren termed it—met simultaneously in a large circus tent on Court Square, in Tomlinson Hall, across the street from the tent, and in English's Opera House, some blocks away; and although the three places combined offered seats for some fifteen or twenty thousand, at almost every meeting all three were overcrowded. It is estimated that from twenty-five to thirty thousand Epworth Leaguers were present. Epworth League flags and the Maltese cross, and the blended League colors of the Northern and Southern Leagues, with American and British flags, were to be seen everywhere.

Most of the addresses delivered were spoken of as fine. As a matter of course, I only heard about one-third of them, as I could only attend one of the three simultaneous meetings at any time. No other speaker evoked the applause that greeted our own Bishop Galloway. It mattered not whether his theme was missions, or prohibition, or the Twentieth Century Movement, his utterances were listened to with bated breath, and followed by the very strongest expressions of approval. We were proud of him.

The negro was in evidence, there being about five hundred of them present. Some of them were on the program. Their promiscuous intermingling with the whites in the audiences was a little embarrassing to the Southern Leaguers.

The closing service in the tent on Sunday night was one of the most thrilling I ever witnessed. Between eight and ten thousand people were crowded about the platform. While Profs. Excell and Gabriel sang a duet a great wave of emotion swept over the vast audience, and old Methodist shouts broke out from every part of the assembly.

The Leaguers of the M. E. Church, South, met in a "League Rally" at the First Baptist Church on Sunday evening. The idea previously suggested that we have a biennial General Conference of the Leagues of our church met hearty endorsement at this rally. The first of these Conferences will be held next year, the place to be determined later.

Several matters were specially popular. One was prohibition, another was anti-Roberts-of-polygamy fame, and another was the prospective Anglo-American alliance. Whenever allusion was made to anyone of these applause greeted the suggestion.

A great deal of good came of it. Inspiration to better work and higher ideals was caught by many a Leaguer, while broader views and truer knowledge of the various sections of Methodism, and a better feeling between those of distant sections, resulted. I am glad that I went.

H. WALTER FEATHERSTUN.

DURANT DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

This body met this year in Ackerman, Miss., July 27. Ackerman is a growing county town on the Aberdeen branch of the I. C. R R, between Kosciusko and Starkville. Rev. R. M. Evans, P. C., was the Conference host. Ackerman and her pastor were at their best in entertainment. That speaks volumes. All were happily homed and bounteously entertained. Bro. Evans thinks he could entertain a session of the Annual Conference.

Two weeks earlier we could have had Bishop Candler, and would have saved ourselves the regret of losing the able presidency of this able chairman, of whom brethren in attendance at other District Conferences speak in such landable terms, had not our political pot been boiling so vociferously, and our Democratic primary conflicted with that date. We were compensated for this loss, however, by the fact that our beloved presiding elder had so far recovered from his partial paralysis as to be "on the ground" and ably preside at every session. He—Bro. Oakley—is now meeting his Quarterly Conferences, even in this warm season, and we trust will, ere long, be himself again.

On account of the advanced date, many of the preachers left on Friday evening and Saturday, so as to begin revival meetings on Sunday, thus avoiding the loss of another week during the season. This was more than made up by the good number of laymen who attended, their farm duties being abated some just now.

A fine team of laymen was elected to the Annual Conference. They are: Messrs H. A Sorrels, J. F. Wilburn, M. T. Boswell and J. G. Irving, principals; J F. Broom and P. Williams, alternates.

The preaching was full orbed and to full houses. Great good must come of it. Revs. J. C. Lowe, G. W. Gordon, R. A. Burroughs, N. G. Augustus, J. W. Treadwell, W. T. J. Sullivan, J. J. Garner, T. H. Porter, R. O. Brown and R. H. B. Gladney did the preaching.

That was a masterly sermon on the broad and narrow ways by Rev. R. A. Burroughs, presiding elder of Columbus district; so also that by Dr. Sullivan on Christian education. Things "old and new" were blended by the faithful "scribes," with the old-time fervor and no uncertain sound.

Revs. W. M. McIntosh, president of Grenada College; R. A. Burroughs, presiding elder of Columbus district; M. L. Burton, manager of our Orphans' Home; F. L. Banks, pastor Presbyterian Church, Ackerman, and Prof. W. L. Weber, of the faculty of Millsaps College, were distinguished visitors. They added much to the interest and profit of the occasion by their preaching and speeches.

Bro. Burton captures the hearts of the people where he goes, but feels somewhat embarrassed in his work, because brethren do not invite him definitely, and open the way for him on their charges. A suitable resolution was passed by the Conference extending to him a cordial welcome into the district; so also were proper resolutions passed at the last session of the Annual Conference, but these do not suffice. By not taking collections for this ourselves, nor specially inviting him, we "neither enter in ourselves, nor suffer them who would."

Bro. McIntosh is the right man to carry our woman's college to success. He magnifies the man and magnifies his office. The universal consent is to give him our support.

Prof. Weber evinces great confidence in "our" Millsaps College, and insists upon all Methodists claiming interest in it. His speech will do much good.—He is close akin to the Methodist ministry, and made a warm place in all our hearts. Come again, we all said, and magnify Millsaps College.

Small progress has been reported in the district, because preachers forget that District Conference reports embrace a year—not simply since the last Annual Conference.

A glance at the report on the spiritual state of the church brings us to our knees. In a membership of 5,031 only 77 family altars—about one family in every thirteen. A low state of spirituality is recognized by the committee, and suggest the remedy to be found in Bible sermons prayerfully prepared, and clean, pure lives by our ministers.

The Sunday-school interest is doing well—a slight advance in some quarters. Rev. G. W. Bachman, colporteur and Sunday-school agent, was on hand with his genial smiles and tempting books. A more useful man is not found in all our borders.

The next session goes to Kosciusko.

We go out from this council chamber feeling that we have met our Lord, and been recommissioned to "hold forth the Word of Life." The rich spiritual feasts enjoyed by preachers and people we trust will kindle all over the district into flames of holy power.

MIXED RESIDENCE IN JAPAN.

The question that is pre-eminently the question of the hour with both foreigners and Japanese at this time in Japan is that of the enforcement of the New Treaties, from July 17, by which Foreign Concessions in Japan are abolished, foreigners come under Japanese law and are permitted to reside anywhere in the country without passports.

Hitherto, foreigners have been free to live and trade only in certain "Treaty Ports," such as Yokohama, Kobe, etc. Permission to live, or even to travel, in the interior was to be obtained only by special application to the government; and even then sometimes there would be considerable delay and difficulty in obtaining it. But the foreigner was everywhere exempt from the jurisdiction of the Japanese law courts. He had the satisfaction of knowing that he was subject only to the laws of his own country.

Now all that is to be changed. Foreigners are to be freed from the inconvenient restrictions of the passport system; but they are to come under the restrictions of Japanese law, administered by Japanese. And as the time for that important change draws near it is but natural that all parties concerned should be greatly interested.

The Japanese are busy making all necessary preparations, even down to such minute details as the preparation of prison uniforms for foreign prisoners. I am told that one of our lady missionaries here in Osaka was asked for dress patterns for ladies to be used in making the same kind of uniforms for foreign ladies. In another city a member of our mission has been asked to act as chaplain for the foreign prisoners that are to be in that city. The purpose of such preparations, of course, is only to be prepared for all emergencies; but they have rather an unpleasant suggestiveness.

Both foreigners and Japanese seem very anxious that the change should be made as smoothly as possible. So that I think there is no reason to magnify, with the pessimists, all the possible difficulties that may arise. And yet, even with the best intentions, it would be strange indeed, considering the difference between the broad-minded men that make the laws and the narrow-minded men who, in many instances, enforce the laws, if considerable hardship were not at times experienced, especially by business men.

As to our work, of course, missionaries do not anticipate personally any special difficulty in coming under Japanese law, more than a little annoyance at what seems to an American excessive red-tapism. The change will give us greater freedom in evangelistic work.

The widespread interest in the question of Mixed Residence is now having a decidedly favorable effect on Christian work in Japan. Throughout the country there seems an increasing desire to hear of Christianity, and in many places the work seems to be taking on new life. Of course, in some places it is a surface interest, but in other places there seems to be a true spirit of revival. Certainly it is a time of opportunity to be improved while it lasts.

May this spirit of interest in Christianity now awakened by the near approach of Mixed Residence in this land become, through the working of the Holy Spirit in the hearts of the people, a spirit of deep conviction, causing everywhere the earnest cry, "Men and brethren, what must we do to be saved?"

THE TIDE IS RISING!

LET US HAVE A SUMMER OVERFLOW!

Rev. J. A. Bowen, Columbus, writes: "The Twentieth Century Educational Movement has been properly brought before our people. In addition to what the pastor has had to say on the subject to the church and League, Dr. Murrah, by invitation of the pastor and the Official Board, spent a Sunday with us, and very ably presented the cause to a large audience. He made a fine impression. Our membership roll has been copied as directed, and I have engaged some of our best Epworth Leaguers to solicit subscriptions this Fall for the fund. I am encouraged and hope for success. The cause shall be kept before the people, and pushed to the best results the pastor is capable of achieving."

Thank you, brother; that is all we ask—"the best results the pastor is capable of achieving."

Rev. R. A. Meek observed Twentieth Century Education at Starkville. The congregation was considerably smaller than usual, on account of extreme heat and sickness. Sixty persons gave one hundred and eight dollars. Bro. Meek writes: "Dr. W. T. J. Sullivan was here on a visit to relatives. He did the preaching, and gave us a splendid discourse. I have only begun the canvass for subscriptions. I mean to make out lists, secure the assistance of my Leaguers, and to vigorously push the work. I hope to make a creditable report at our rally in Greenwood. I believe Starkville will pay one dollar per member."

Of course it will! And so will most places, if the pastor will throw himself into it and lead the way.

Please note that both these pastors have followed the plan suggested, and they also secure the assistance of their Leaguers. Pastors who have reported have shown the way and demonstrated the possibility of success. Get a move on you, brother, and let us hear from you. Observe Twentieth Century Education Day, using the programs sent you, and follow that with personal solicitation. Use the League, the Sunday-school, the Official Board, anybody, everybody; but the pastor must lead.

THE CARES OF LIFE.

BY GEORGE BANCROFT GRIFFITH.

Not a moment lose in fretting,
Nor let change or loss annoy;
Every sorrow's but the selling
Of some sparkling gem of joy!

Happy birds that soar while singing
Have no dust upon their wings;
So the buoyant heart, unspringing,
All vexation from it flings.

Freedom, freedom for the spirit!
Leisure, too, for higher things,
And may those we love inherit
All the sweets contentment brings!

THE MODERN UNIVERSAL PEACE MOVEMENT AND AMERICA.

No apologies need be offered for the Modern Universal Peace Movement, for it has been "the dream of poets, prophets, philosophers, and all noble souls, from the most remote time." The civilizing forces of literature, art and commerce, the silent and unseen influence of the teachings of the "Prince of Peace" upon the heart and intelligence of humanity, prepared the world for its birth.

The immediate cause, however, of the rise of the Peace Movement in Europe was the reaction against the long and desolating Napoleonic wars, described by Lord Russell as "the most bloody hostilities that ever mangled the face of Europe." Under the influence of this reaction the thoughtful public, led by Dr Chalmers, David Bogue, and others, began to realize the true nature of war and the responsibility of the Christian church for the existence of international conflicts.

The war of 1812 in America gave rise to a similar sentiment against the customs of war, which crystallized in various peace organizations, the first of which was the New York Peace Society of 1815. In less than a quarter of a century the sentiment in America became national, resulting in 1828 in the American Peace Society, which at present has its headquarters in Boston, with Hon. Robert Treat Paine as its president.

In Europe the Peace Movement was national in its inception, and after some years of agitation the great continental Peace Congresses were brought into existence. The Peace Societies of the world number to-day at least 300 and among their members are some of the most prominent men and women of all professions. It was the representatives of these societies that held their fifth Universal Peace Congress during the Fair in Chicago.

The purpose of these organizations is threefold. First, the enlistment of a world-wide army of peace; the organization of those individual forces which are opposed to the customs of war, but are ineffectual through their lack of combination and direction. Again, and more definitely, they aim at a system of international arbitration which shall substitute the tribunal of reason for that of force in national disagreements. Reason, says Cicero, is proper to men; force to brutes. These societies want the outgrowth of the principles of liberty, justice and equity wrought out especially by the Anglo-Saxon race instead of war—the greatest scourge of the human race—the miseries and horrors of which the research of the historian, the eloquence of the orator, the imagination of the poet, the colors of the artist, are alike powerless to portray.

The success and growth of this arbitration movement has been marvelous. Tell a man who sneers at international arbitration that there have been nearly one hundred important national differences settled thus in this century, and he will question such history. Tell him America, his own country, has entered into not less than forty-eight agreements for international arbitration. Such facts astonish him. The present sentiment on both sides of the Atlantic foretells a glorious future for international arbitration in the coming century.

The third definite proposal of these societies is the reduction of the standing armies and navies of the world. Not only do they advocate a reduction, but strive to hasten that day prophesied by Victor Hugo in his opening address before the second Universal Peace Congress: "When weapons will fall from men's hands and cannon balls will be replaced by ballots by the universal suffrage of the people. A day when a cannon will be pointed out in a museum as an instrument of torture, with astonishment that such a thing could ever have existed. The growing unity of man religiously, intellectually, and commercially; the surrender of national and racial prejudices, the growing consciousness of the brotherhood of man, demand that the nations of the earth furl their battle flags, hush the noise of the war-drum, and that 'the bugles of battle blow the marches of peace.'".

What is our part as a nation in this great Peace Movement? What is our responsibility in regard to ushering in the reign of universal peace? "The responsibility for the peace of the world," says Dr. Benjamin Trueblood, "rests upon the United States as upon no other country." Our geographical position, separated by great oceans from other nations, gives us special fitness for the office of peacemaker, and the number of times the United States has been called upon to act as arbitrator between other nations shows that we are looked upon as the peacemakers of the world.

Our republican form of government bears a unique relation to universal peace. Emmanuel Kant says in his essay on eternal peace, "Universal peace can come only with a universal republic." We, indeed, have furnished a model for the federation of the world. Union of nations will come after the form of union of States.

Our responsibility as an enlightened people is no less than our responsibility as a republican people. Besides the public provision for elementary education and considerable opportunity for higher school training, by our recurring elections each man is educated on the great questions of public interest.

Our moral enlightenment has come from the Word of God; our religious standard gives freedom of conscience; our social institutions are built on simple manhood. Freedom is the Creator's great schoolmaster, and peace can only follow in the path of liberty.

And in respect to our historic records and national influence come a still greater responsibility. The United States is itself the greatest Peace Society in the world, with its record of more than one hundred years of peace and less than six years of war with other nations. Between 1141 and 1815—a period of 674 years—England was at war with France alone two hundred and sixty-six years. So remarkable has been our record for peace that Lady Henry Somerset said that America and war should not be mentioned in the same breath.

To Washington has been credited the honor of changing mankind's idea of political greatness, and to his country will be credited the honor of changing mankind's idea of war. If the Declaration of Independence proclaimed to the world that man had the right to unsheathe the sword in behalf of his own birth-right of liberty, the ultimatum of President McKinley proclaimed to the nations of the earth that man has the right to unsheathe the sword in behalf of his brother's liberty. When war becomes thus unselfish eternal peace is at hand.

The victory of Dewey at Manila will go down in the annals of history, marking the time when the United States of America came forth from her national monastery to take up the white man's burden; marking the time when war of conquest among civilized nations was doomed by a war prompted by motives of sympathy and unselfishness; marking the time when the armor-clad Old World was given a vision of the true glory and grandeur of national destiny.

At present the representatives of the civilized nations of the earth are consulting at The Hague as to how this new ideal may be realized. Let us assure our representatives that they have the privilege and authority to act in accordance with our historic record, in accordance with our republican form of government, our intellectual and moral enlightenment, ideals; and, if necessary, let us be willing to lay aside our new armor in order to lift the crushing burden of militarism off the armor-clad world, and then, with one accord, the great nations of the earth will say, "Let the bugles sound the truce of God to the world forever," and then from all climes, among all races, generations yet unborn will rise up and call America blessed, "for Peace hath her victories no less renowned than War."

We have reached a great crisis in our history. Shall the dream of empire lead us on, as it has other republics, to certain destruction? Shall we forget our responsibilities, our history, our own happiness, and pervert the opportunities and influence which Heaven has given us to the increasing of war and injustice in the world? Or shall we follow our manifest destiny, moving upward and onward, leading the march of civilization, blazing out the path for "universal peace," and making clear the way through which all nations must come in fulfilling the will of the great Creator, and hastening the day

"When the war-drum throbs no longer,
And the battle flags are furled
In the parliament of man,
The federation of the world."

FROM BRO. TINNIN.

MR. EDITOR: Will you please give me space in your esteemed paper for this letter of explanation? A number of my friends are writing and enquiring as to my withdrawal from the M. E. Church, South; so I desire to inform them through the ADVOCATE. It grieved me very much to sever my connection with the M. E. Church, South. I have always loved her, and tried to be loyal to her laws, doctrines, and teachings, and I do not consider that I have ever been disloyal; but pressure was brought to bear upon me of such a nature by those in authority over me that I had to either sacrifice my self-respect and manhood, or get out; so I chose the latter course.

My presiding elder wrote me, demanding that I should not employ evangelists, and that my reply should be immediate. Because I refused to make him this promise, he moved me from Whitestown charge and appointed me to a work that would not support me. The only cause for his action was, that I would not comply with his unreasonable and unjust demands. My wife was in bed at the time (he was aware of her condition), and other considerations pressing upon me made it impossible for me to move; so I was compelled to resign.

Within the last few years I have served the Adams, Providence, and Whitestown mission. The Lord has wonderfully blessed us. We have had on these works more than 700 professions of either conversions or entire sanctification. Finances the last year that I served Adams was $1 600; at Providence, $1,900; Whitestown mission, $2 400.

It is sad to say good-by to the church that is so dear to my heart, but I can not, in justice to myself and family, remain.

Trusting that the Lord will continue to bless you and the ADVOCATE, I am, Yours, J. W. TINNIN.

INNOCENCE SUFFERING

It has long been argued that the idea that Christ, a perfectly innocent being, should suffer on the cross for the guilt of other people, is contrary to every principle and sense of justice. It is claimed that it is an outrage on God to suppose that he would consent to accept, as an act of propitiation, or as a remedial scheme, the horrible sufferings of his own innocent Son. They tell us that reason revolts against such a thing. Well, it matters not how much human reason may revolt against the idea of the innocent Christ suffering in behalf of guilty men and women, it is a great truth, nevertheless, and it was constantly foreshadowed in the bloody rituals of the Old Testament economy.

I have been recently impressed with this truth while reading in the Old Testament about the animals which were offered in sacrifice for the atonement of the sins of the people. Not only were those animals without blemish, but they were entirely innocent of the sins for which they were slain. They were innocent sufferers; they had not violated any law; they had not done anything for which they should be condemned to death. Their sacrifice was typical of the sacrifice of Christ. They, innocent creatures, suffered death in behalf of condemned sinners. This was not injustice to the animals. They belonged to God, and were used by him in a service which was a pictorial illustration of the substitutionary sacrifice of Christ. They were sacrificed in accordance with the law and order of God. So the suffering of the innocent Christ was not an injustice to him, nor was it against the law of justice. It was a moral necessity, to which Christ was willingly subject. He wanted to save sinners, and his sacrifice was necessary to that purpose.

(Concluded.)

Tuesday morning Mrs. Fryant, secretary of Jackson district, had the usual devotions at 9 o'clock. Miss Smylie begged to read before the Conference, "Duties of Delegates." This was so opportune and excellent a number of suggestions that the Conference moved to have them incorporated in the Minutes.

The reports of auxiliaries were resumed, the several delegates giving encouraging response from their societies.

The Conference elected as its next item of business the nomination of officers, which resulted in re-election, with the exception only of vice-president and the secretary of the Forest district.

A very pretty courtesy and excellent choice was the making of the president of the Hattiesburg Auxiliary, Mrs. Foote, vice-president of the Conference. Mrs. T. L. Mellen was elected secretary of Forest district.

The question of an organizer for the missionary work came before the Conference again in the form of a resolution offered by the district secretaries, wherein they defined the needs and the benefits that would result from such an officer in the Conference. The resolution was submitted, but no action taken upon it.

One feature of this afternoon meeting was a special prayer offered by Mrs. Drake in behalf of Miss Hughes, whose bodily strength is of so much concern to her friends and to the work.

Tuesday evening there was a most beautiful and affecting service in the presentation of the young woman to the Conference that had prepared her for foreign mission work. It was especially opportune that the same pastor which first presented her to the Missionary Conference of Mississippi a young, untutored, inexperienced girl, should, on this occasion, present her to the Conference again a woman, stronger still in faith and purpose, thoroughly taught, prepared, and armed with experience in missionary work and study; ready, equipped for the mission for which her Lord had so early set her apart. Bro. Drake spoke tenderly and fondly of her childhood, her youth, and of the call she had to work; but when she herself stood before the assembly, and spoke in simple, earnest words of her life, her call, of the glad hopes she had in her future of service for God, our hearts were touched with the fervent spirit of her own. A farewell service for the Conference to her, her bright, happy Christian faith and trust looked beyond the present, and saw a future full of joy and happy reunion for the saved of her Master. No service could have been more impressive, for surely we have not often seen such abiding love, faith and trust; such gentle, godly womanhood.

There were beautiful and appropriate songs by the choir; an excellent paper by Miss McNemar, our district secretary, on the field of work the Board had appointed her for. Mrs. Scott Phillips read an intelligent and entertaining paper on Mexico. Mrs. Jones' and Evie Rivers' recitations were happy additions to the program of this evening.

Wednesday morning Mrs Ellis, of West End, Meridian, lead the devotional exercises. Mrs. Drake read a good paper on Cuba. Every member of the Conference appreciated it.

After the Conference pledges were taken. Mrs. Phillips, of Vicksburg, reported for Committee on Resolutions, which report was adopted by rising vote.

The hour for adjournment had arrived; but finding that all work could be finished by prolonging the session, a motion to that effect was made and carried. The Minutes of the morning were read and approved. Business over, the motion for adjournment of the Conference carried. In conclusion of the session, Mrs. Jones, of Bay St. Louis, conducted the closing devotions, and the Conference stood adjourned at 12:30, Wednesday.

Wednesday afternoon was given to visiting, dining, and like pleasant things—partially in preparation for the reception to be given the Conference at the home of Mr McLeod. You who do not know Hattiesburg have, no doubt, such ideas of the town as some of us entertained—that it is one of the many lumber towns on that road; and, like ourselves, you will have to go there and be received in the pretty homes of those hospitable people to get queer ideas radically changed.

Hattiesburg opened its homes and its heart to the Conference. It did us good to be there, and we believe it did the work good for them to have us there. Meridian must appreciate having the Conference as Hattiesburg did before it can excel those excellent people in kind, cordial reception, untiring thoughtfulness for our pleasure and entertainment, and the sincerity of all they did to make us welcome.

THE SUE BENNETT MEMORIAL SCHOOL.

BY BELLE H. BENNETT.

The Sue Bennett Memorial School, at London, Ky., is the largest educational institution yet established by the Woman's Board of Home Missions. The object of this school is to give an opportunity for higher Christian education and training to the large number of young men and women, boys and girls, who live in the more remote and inaccessible mountain counties, and who, up to the present time, have been shut off from all, save the most meager, church and school privileges. These young people, equipped with the best that the church can give them through the ministry of a school where the English Bible is a daily text-book, and where the highest mission of an earnest, consecrated faculty is to lead the students to Christ as a personal Savior, go back to their homes and little district schools preaching the gospel of spiritual, intellectual, and physical redemption to the thousands of cabin-home peoples, who, from father to son for generations, have been leading the same dwarfed, shut-in lives.

The school is just closing its second year, with an enrollment of something more than two hundred students for each scholastic year, and with an average daily attendance of one hundred and seventy-five for the Winter terms. A large per cent. of these have been district school teachers, who, at the close of their three, four, or five months' schools, have saved enough money to enable them to enter for the remainder of the school year. The best primary and academic work is done; but to keep "Christ in the midst" by prayer, precept, and example, is the chief business of all.

Industrial work is greatly needed; but this is expensive, and must be added slowly, as the Board sees best, and as the people will accept. This year carpenter's work has been introduced, and is slowly becoming a popular department.

The main school-building—a large, commodious brick structure—will accommodate three hundred pupils. This, with the thirty acres of ground on which it stands, was secured through the efforts of the Home Mission women of the Kentucky and Louisville Conferences, much of it being given by the citizens of London and Laurel county, irrespective of denomination. The people of this mountain section are poor, most of them very poor, and cheap boarding is an absolute necessity for the success of the work. To meet this urgent demand the cottage system has been adopted, and four Conference Societies—Georgia, Kentucky, Tennessee, and Little Rock—have put on the grounds small, well-built frame cottages, at a cost of $300 each, which bear the names of these various Conferences. These cottages have four rooms—two large and two small. Each will accommodate eight, ten, or even twelve persons, who can bring their own furniture and provisions, and live at a cost of not more than fifty cents per week. Sometimes a mother or an older sister from a neighborhood will take a cottage, and, by being housekeeper and house mother, accommodate as many as the principal will allow in one building. The Board is now erecting a small dormitory, to be called the Lucinda B. Helm Dormitory, which will accommodate the lady teachers and twenty or twenty-five girls whose parents may be able to pay for a better class of board. In this dormitory is a large dining-room and kitchen, where comfortable meals will be given to students who room elsewhere at $1.25 per week; students living in the house will pay $1.50. Cooking, sewing, and general housework will be taught in the dormitory, and a close supervision is exercised by the teachers over cottages and boarding departments.

The school has been from the beginning partially self-supporting, and it is the policy of the Board and the faculty to stress this point. Some remuneration is required from every pupil, and even when one is entered on a scholarship a note or pledge of repayment is taken.

The principal of the school, Prof. J. C. Lewis, is a man prepared of God for the place, a Christian scholar and educator in the best sense of the term, and the teachers associated with him would be a blessing to any school or community with which they might be connected. The aim and desire of the Woman's Board of Home Missions in this school, as in every work it has projected, is to be faithful and true to Him who has called, doing the best work and expecting the best results; and here, as elsewhere, the seal of divine approval has been manifested by the conversion each year of many souls to Christ.—Review of Missions.

The Christian Life.

COLD OR HOT.

Cold or hot, my friend? Feel your spiritual pulse and see. Put the Bible thermometer under your tongue. Search your heart and see how much love for Christ is left there. If, after such an honest examination, you find that the temperature has run low, very low—what then? Should you quit the church and throw up your Christian profession? No! a thousand times no! The Holy Spirit's message to you is "Be zealous, therefore, and repent." The only way to repent of sin is to quit it. The only way to warm a chilled frame is not to throw yourself into a snow bank, but to hasten to the fire. Come back to a deserted Savior! Instead of erasing your binrred name from the church registry, seek a reconversion.

Simon Peter's best work was done after he was re-converted. Do not stop with lamenting your neglect in the place of prayer. Open again the door of devotion, and go in and throw yourself down at the Master's feet, and cry out: "I have sinned, I am no more worthy to be called thy servant." Set up again your altar; and on it lay the sacrifice of a contrite heart. At the earliest moment lay hold of some blood-stirring Christian work; it will warm you up. It may take some time to get the blood into full, free circulation again, and to recover your lost ground and lost health. But when you do get a fresh tide of Christ love pouring into your heart, and a fresh glow of his likeness on your countenance, you will feel as Lazarus must have felt when he shook off his grave clothes and leaped into life again.—Rev. T. L. Cuyler, D. D.

Nature never withdraws her flowers, her music, her joyousness, and her sunlight, from before human cruelty or suffering. She overwhelms man by the contrast between divine beauty and social hideousness. She spares him nothing of her lowliness, neither butterfly nor bird. In the midst of murder, vengeance, barbarism, he must feel himself watched by holy things; he cannot escape the awful reproach of universal nature and the implacable serenity of the sky. The deformity of human laws is forced to exhibit itself naked amid the dazzling rays of eternal beauty. Man breaks and destroys, man lays waste, man kills; but the Summer remains Summer, the lily remains the lily, the star remains a star.—Green Thoughts.

While we weep in the desert of misfortune, like Hagar, how often God's angel on the way to point out the well our tear-stained eyes can not see.—Ram's Horn.

OUR LOSS IN MEMBERSHIP.

When the statement first appeared that we had sustained a loss in membership of 8 300, I was ready to hide my face and cry out, My Lord and my God! It was indeed humiliating to me, in a high degree. I was so sorry I was torn all up; I was sorrowful in spirit. I did not believe it, and don't believe it to this day. My reasons for not believing the report is based upon an editorial tabulation of the persons removed by death, certificate, and otherwise, and those received by profession of faith, certificate, and otherwise, in the Nashville Advocate, of April 13, 1899. Mr. Editor, please publish the article in full given below:

"In the Advocate, of March 23, we published a statement indicating a loss in our membership for 1898 amounting in round numbers to 8,300. Since then we have had access to the published Minutes of thirty-nine Annual Conferences, and by carefully tabulating the total number of members reported to each Conference as having been received into the church 'on profession of faith,' and 'by certificate and otherwise,' and those 'removed by death and otherwise,' the following result is shown:

"NOTE.—Four Conferences do not follow the usual order of giving statistics, but simply give net results. The Alabama shows a net loss of 392; the Baltimore, North Mississippi and South Carolina net gains, respectively, 752, 890, and 359.

"The figures speak for themselves. They show that 31,879 more persons were received into the church last year than were dismissed. If there was a loss, can anyone account for the 31,879? We believe the figures represent the true gain. We base our faith on the fact that a Methodist pastor knows two things, and reports them correctly. One thing is, how many members he receives into the church; and the other, how many are dismissed."

I can not believe that the above figures represent anything but our actual gain in members last year, until it has been proved conclusively that they are wrong. W. T. WOODWARD.

Lecompte, La., July 27, 1899.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. W. T. Woodward, P. C., Lecompte, La., July 29, 1899: "I have just closed a very successful meeting at Lamouria, La. We had good congregations from first service to last. The citizens around Lamouria pronounced it the best meeting ever held there. Rev. Geo. Jackson preached three sermons. Rev. J. A. Parker, P. E., preached once for us, and the preacher in charge did the other preaching. Nine by profession of faith, five by certificate; one Sunday-school organized, one subscriber to the ADVOCATE, and several more to follow soon. I spent one week with W. G. Roberts, at Hinston, preaching six times for him. We had a fine meeting. I made a talk for the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE while there."

Rev. W. F. Henderson, Homer, La., July 28, 1899: "Beginning on the thirteenth, and closing on the twenty-third, we held one of those meetings rarely witnessed in a life-time. Arizona was indeed baptized with the Spirit. Some of the oldest members there said they had never seen anything just like it. Bro. Crews, our presiding elder, preached one sermon with telling effect for us Monday night. Bros. H. W. Ledbetter and D. F. Turner, while they did some of the preaching, did most efficient service in a hand-to-hand fight in grove meetings, on the roadside, in the homes, and wherever a sinner was found to be warned, or penitent comforted and led to Christ. The people are loyal; disturbed by no schisms or theories. They rallied to their church and pastor with one mind and one heart, and the Lord honored their prayers, and their labors were not in vain in the Lord. We were indeed visited with a tidal wave of salvation that swept about 40 souls into the spiritual kingdom, and 28 were received into the visible kingdom by baptism and profession of faith."

Rev. B. H. Rawls, Tylertown, Miss., July 27, 1899: "We commenced a series of revival meetings here on the ninth. Bro. H. A. Gatlin, of Beauregard, did the preaching. Everyone who attended the meetings were well pleased with the preaching. The sermons were delivered with much unction. There were seven persons converted, and the membership of the church much revived. The children's service, on the first day of the meeting, was very interesting. The Epworth League received renewed zeal, and we hope to accomplish much through this institution of the church in this place. We have two Epworth Leagues in this pastoral charge. Rev. E. J. Coker, of Anburn, assisted me at China Grove. He talked to the delight of the people. Eleven joined the church and the membership revived. We commence a meeting on the twenty-ninth at Holmesville. Rev. C. C. Evans will do the preaching. Those who know Bro. Evans have some idea what sort of preaching we will have. He is a son of thunder. God grant us a great harvest at Holmesville. Pray for us."

Rev. F. N. Sweeney, P. C.: "We are moving on in peace and harmony on the Pine Grove circuit, and have made some advancements on all lines. Through the aid of the W. F. M. S. we have made considerable improvements on the parsonage. Have secured a lot in the town of Independence on the I. C. R. R., where we expect to erect a church-building some time in the near future. We closed a good meeting at Pine Grove on the twenty-third of July of a week's duration. Bro. A. W. Turner, of Boyce, La., was with me. Bro. Turner preached his first sermon in Pine Grove Church, and it was a great pleasure to his many friends and admirers to have him with them again, and hear him preach in his strong, forcible way. The Word was accompanied by the power of the Holy Spirit, and the church was greatly revived. Several reclamations, two accessions on profession of faith, and two infants baptized, as a result of the meeting. On account of charbon prevailing among stock in some localities on my work, and other hindrances, I have had to postpone three of my protracted meetings until Fall. We hope to have a good report at Conference."

Rev. E. S. Lewis, Brooksville, Miss., July 28, 1899: "So far this has been a good year for Brooksville circuit. We have not had any sweeping revivals, but a number have been taken into the church—about thirty—and half that number on profession of faith. I have secured several new subscribers to the church papers, and there seems to be greater interest in the affairs of the church. Some time ago we had Dr. Steel with us for a couple of days. While here he preached us a great sermon on, 'Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you that God should raise the dead?' At night he gave us his lecture on 'Dixie.' It was a delight to hear this bright, genial, eloquent Southerner in our home. He is a prince among preachers. We are taking steps to remodel our Brooksville Church. It is old, and the worse for wear, but with an outlay of a few hundred dollars it can be made comfortable and beautiful. We already have $500 to go on it. This work here is historic. Dr. W. P. Harrison, of precious memory, dedicated the church, and Bishop Hargrove occupied the parsonage here when he was a young itinerant. The type of our people, and their intelligent interest in church affairs, reflect credit on the work done among them in the past. Good seed have been sown by faithful hands, and we are seeing the results in this, our day. May the good men who have gone before us have worthy successors"

Rev. H. J. Boltz, Haughton, La., July 31, 1899: "We closed our meeting at Fillmore, one of our appointments on the South Bossier circuit, July 23. We had a glorious meeting. The church was greatly revived; about the most universal revival in the church that we have had for some years. Every member of the church who attended the meeting was moved up considerably; also members of other churches and other denominations. Eight souls were added to the church, all of whom were saved from their sins. At the close of the last service the writer administered the Lord's Supper, and we had a most delightful service. The entire membership that were present participated in this service. Rev. J. B. Williams, of the Louisiana Conference, was with us most of the time, and gave us good Holy Ghost preaching, which resulted in great good. Rev. John T. Sawyer, our beloved presiding elder, came over from Shreveport to hold my third Quarterly Conference, and preached two soul-stirring sermons, which proved to be a great help in pushing the good work forward that had already begun. My work is getting along very well. I have had some very interesting services during the year at my regular monthly appointments. Our congregations have been larger this year than they were last year. Our Sunday-schools are all in very good condition. I think that I can say truthfully and correctly that the South Bossier circuit is on the up-grade. The circuit has advanced on all lines this year. Our collections for foreign missions is far in advance of this time last year. The preacher in charge and presiding elder have been kindly remembered by the good people of this charge."

WHITTINGTON CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

I have just closed a grand meeting on my work. Fifty-one joined our church, 33 were brightly converted, and 10 reclaimed. Truly this is the grandest meeting of my life. Some of our itinerant brethren promised to assist us in the meeting, but they failed to do so, and we went into the battle with what help we had on the circuit, trusting in God for help and results. God came to our rescue in great power. So awful were the presence and power of the Holy Spirit, and so deep the conviction on sinners, that the place was simply awful. Strong men and women, boys and girls, were in such agony and crying for mercy, while billows of fearful conviction rolled in fury over their naked souls, that I really feared some one would die at the altar ere they found peace. Oh, for a closer walk with God! Fathers and mothers saw their children gloriously saved. A great writer said, "The promise is unto you and your children." I am sure it is true. I have seen it, thank God. One young man came to the meeting and put a few bottle stoppers in an exhorter's pockets. Our exhorter showed them to me. I said, "Don't say a word, and we will find out who did it," and, sure enough, the next night a young man at the altar, and under awful conviction, cried out, "God forgive me for putting bottle stoppers in a good man's pockets." I said, "Fayard, there is your man." This young man was powerfully converted, and aided us greatly in the meeting.

Our night services continued deep into the night, usually from seven and eight in the evening until one o'clock in the morning. God bless everyone of our friends who took part in this great battle. Bros. Michael Cox and Alex. Scarborough rendered honest service in the fight. Bro. Scarborough did some of the most effective work of his life. Uncle Mike Cox is a grand old warrior, passing sweetly down the stream of time.

Bros. L. Fayard and Ruff Williams, exhorters, did fine work. Bro. Williams is a strong man in the work. Fayard is a great and good man, and like a big battle-ship under full steam—ready for business and battle at a moment's warning. I think Scarborough and Fayard sunk the devil's fleet and captured some of his best men during the meeting. Cox and Scarborough are both superannuated local preachers, and are claimants on protracted meetings for all they can get out of them.

We are under many obligations to Miss Mary Williams and Miss Quillu Walker for very valuable and efficient service at the organ, and in the choir, and in the altar services.

Our members have been greatly revived during the year. We have received 65 members up to date. Glory to God. GEO. W. HUFF, P. C.

Wool Market, Miss., July 27, 1899.

It was one of these experimental farmers, who put green spectacles on his cow and fed her shavings. His theory was that it didn't matter what the cow ate so long as she was fed. The questions of digestion and nourishment had not entered into his calculations.

It's only a "tenderfoot" farmer that would try such an experiment with a cow. But many a farmer feeds himself regardless of digestion and nutrition. He might almost as well eat shavings for all the good he gets out of his food. The result is that the stomach grows "weak," the action of the organs of digestion and nutrition are impaired and the man suffers the miseries of dyspepsia and the agonies of nervousness.

To strengthen the stomach, restore the activity of the organs of digestion and nutrition and nourish the nerves, use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It is an unfailing remedy, and has the confidence of physicians as well as the praise of thousands healed by its use.

In the strictest sense "Golden Medical Discovery" is a temperance medicine. It contains neither intoxicants nor narcotics, and is as free from alcohol as from opium, cocaine and other dangerous drugs.

Don't let a dealer delude you for his own profit. There is no medicine for stomach and blood "just as good" as "Golden Medical Discovery."

"I can say to you, one bottle of your 'Golden Medical Discovery' has cured me sound and well, after suffering two long years with stomach disease," writes W. H. Braswell, of McAdenville, Gaston Co., N. C. "My health is worth all the world to me. I will praise you as long as I live."

Give me the lowest place; not that I dare
Ask for that lowest place, but Thou hast died
That I might share
Thy glory by Thy side.

Give me the lowest place; or if for me
That lowest place too high, make one more low,
Where I may sit and see
My God, and love Thee so.

Luck is ever waiting for something to turn up. Labor, with keen eyes and strong will, will turn up something.—Richard Cobden.

Any man can sing by day, but only he whose heart has been toned by the gracious hand of Jehovah can sing in the darkness.—William M. Taylor.

There is no finer chemistry than that by which the elements suffering is so compounded with spiritual forces that it issues to the world as gentleness and strength.—George S. Merriam.

After you have been kind, after love has stolen forth into the world and done its beautiful work, go back into the shade again and say nothing about it. Love hides even from itself.—Prof. Drummond.

There are some men and women in whose company we are always at our best. All the best stops in our nature are drawn out by their intercourse, and we find a music in our souls never there before.—Drummond.

When you come down from the summits, you do not come away from God. There is no task in life in which you do not need him. The work-bench needs his light as truly as the cloister.—Phillips Brooks.

Our expectations, our ideals, our hopes and intentions in beginning life are generally all too low. Many and many a one is only indifferently successful in living a strong life, because at the start the standard of what one ought to be, and the belief in what one may be, were set too low.—Charles Cuthbert Hall, D. D.

We will never have it that God created any man, especially any Christian man, to be a blank and to be a nothing. He made you for an end. Find out what that end is; find out your niche, and fill it. If it be ever so little, if it is only to be a hewer of wood and a drawer of water, do something in this great battle for God and truth.—Spurgeon.

THE BIBLE AND THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

Although for some time the Bible has been rigidly excluded from the majority of our public schools, it is gratifying to note that a strong reaction is taking place in favor of its reintroduction therein. Catholics, as well as Protestants, are coming to realize as never before that its exclusion therefrom means the encouragement of irreligion and infidelity and the disparagement of Christianity in the eyes of the young.

While it is not the special function of the State to teach religion, the refusal to give any recognition to the Bible in our schools and legislative halls would, if long continued, result most disastrously to the morals of the people. Nobody thinks of objecting to the employment of chaplains for Congress and for the soldiers who enlist to fight the battles of their country. In every State Legislature the voice of prayer is heard at the opening of every session. Then why, since the majority of the people of this Republic are Christians, should it be thought improper to have the Bible, which is the foundation of all morality and jurisprudence, read in the public schools? The Word of God is not denominational; therefore, no sect or denomination that loves the truth and seeks the light need fear the result of its unsectarian use in the schools.

The Roman Catholic Church is largely to blame for the banishment of the Bible from the public schools, thus making common cause with the Jews and infidels and people of no religion. Having accomplished this end, Romanism then turns round and brazenly and hypocritically denounces our splendid public institutions as "secular" and "godless," and boldly announces, in view of this assumption, that the private schools under her care and support are safe, and wholesome morally. Not only so, but she stands ready to receive governmental aid for her educational institutions whenever it is possible to obtain it. Her persistence in making raids upon the public treasury in behalf of her schools, particularly those in Indian Territory, is astounding in the extreme. Nor does Roman Catholicism stop here. Not allowing (when she can help it) children of Roman Catholic families to attend the public schools, she next attempts to dominate the public schools, and in a number of our cities has almost complete control of them. It is stated on the best authority that two-thirds of the teachers in the Chicago public schools are Roman Catholics, and it is claimed that the proportion has been even higher than that. This is only a sample of what is true in other cities. As the editor of the Northwestern Advocate well says: "Rome first withdraws her own children from the public schools, and then assumes to teach the Protestant remainder." Another policy of Rome, where she has the power and influence, is to keep the public schools from being progressive and efficient. It is to her interest to make them inferior, so that her own will appear superior by contrast.

We are glad to say, however, that not all who belong to the Romanist fold are in sympathy with her opposition to our public schools, and to the reading of the Bible therein. The following significant utterance came a short time ago from a leading Roman Catholic layman of Chicago:

"Should the Bible be read in our public schools? It is a question which is engaging the attention of a larger and larger section of the American people. If an affirmative answer has not yet been unanimously given to this question, it is because religious prejudice alone has stood in the way. But as the necessity for a moral as well as a mental training becomes daily more apparent, it is safe to assert that the affirmative must certainly triumph in the end."

At a conference of Roman Catholic educators held in Chicago, in April, the consensus of opinion was that "religion is needed in the schools."

This has been the position of Protestantism all along, but it is too much to assume that instruction in public schools can not be otherwise than secular and materialistic. While the Bible has not the place in our system of public instruction that it should have, as a matter of fact, the teachers in our public schools are, with but few exceptions, professing Christians, and so, by their example, exercise a decided religious influence, even though direct biblical precept be not employed. There is great reason for rejoicing over the recent decision of the Supreme Court of Michigan, in which it was declared that the reading in the schools of extracts from the Bible without comment is not in violation of any provision of the Constitution of that State. Clearly the trend of public opinion is in the right direction; but much yet remains to be done before the Bible will be given the place of honor in our public schools everywhere as a text-book upon morals.

The celebrated agnostic scientist, Thomas Huxley, has put on record the following remarkable and forcible defense of the reading of the Bible in the public schools, the extract being taken from the Northwestern Advocate:

"The boys and girls for whose education the School Boards have to provide, have not merely to discharge domestic duties, but each of them is a member of a social and political organization of great complexity, and has, in future life, to fit himself into that organization, or be crushed by it. To this end it is surely needful, not only that they should be made acquainted with the elementary laws of conduct, but that their affections should be trained, so as to love with all their hearts that conduct which tends to the attainment of the highest good for themselves and their fellow-men, and to hate with all their hearts that opposite course of action which is fraught with evil. I have always been strongly in favor of secular education, in the sense of education without theology; but I must confess I have been no less seriously perplexed to know by what practical measures the religious feeling, which is the essential basis of conduct, was to be kept up, in the present utterly chaotic state of opinion on these matters, without the use of the Bible. The pagan moralists lack life and color, and even the noble Stoic, Marcus Antonine, is too high and refined for the ordinary child. And then consider the great historical fact that for three centuries the Bible has been woven into the life of all that is best and noblest in English history; that it has become the natural epic of Britain, and is as familiar to the noble and simple, from John-o'-Groat's House to Land's End, as Dante and Tasso once were to the Italians; that it is written in the noblest and purest English, and abounds in exquisite beauties of mere literary form. By the study of what other book could children be so much humanized and made to feel that each figure in that vast historical procession fills, like themselves, but a momentary space in the interval between two eternities, and earns the blessings or the curses of all time, according to its effort to do good and hate evil, even as they also are earning their payment for their work?"

LITERARY NOTES.

BY W. F. B.

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly, for August, is a Midsummer Art and Fiction Number. It is brilliant and entertaining in its literary contents, as may be judged from the fact that among its writers are included: W. D. Howells, Ruth McEnery Stuart, Joe Chandler Harris, Egerton Castle, Van Tassel Sutphen, Edgar Fawcett, Etta W. Pierce, C. F. Carter, Theodosia Pickering Garrison, Perriton Maxwell. The article upon "Weddings in Art" is illustrated with sixteen beautiful reproductions of paintings by celebrated European and American masters. William Dean Howells gives, in quaint and delightful verse, the gastronomical observations of one of our fellow-countrymen at Carlsbad. Joel Chandler Harris contributes one of his inimitable "Minervy Ann" stories. Van Tassel Sutphen shows, in a wonderfully imaginative work of fiction, entitled "The Greatest Thing in the World," how this country is rapidly becoming golfolized. Larkin G. Mead writes a crisp little newspaper storyette, called "Human Interest." "A Day of the President's Life," by Mrs. John A. Logan, is highly interesting.

In the American Monthly Review of Reviews, for August, the special features are an illustrated sketch of the late Robert Bonner, by E. J. Edwards; a study of "Porto Rico from a Woman's Point of View," by Mrs. Guy V. Henry; the story of the recent defeat of "seven-day journalism" in London, by Dr. Henry S. Lunn; a paper on "Education in the Southern States," by the Hon. J. L. M. Curry; a presentation of the American side of the Alaskan boundary dispute, by William R. Lewis; and an article on "Play as a Factor in Social and Educational Reforms," by Prof. E. A. Kirkpatrick.

The August number of Self-Culture continues to show the rapid strides made by that unique magazine. The half-tone pictures are superb, and they illustrate such interesting subjects as "Quebec, the Gibraltar of America;" "The Birth of the American Flag;" "A Decade of Institutional Development in Philadelphia;" "Papal Possibilities," and "Andreas Hofer, the Tyrolese Patriot." An instructive article by Mr. Edwin Burritt Smith sets forth the legal status of Trusts, and outlines the ancient English and modern American legislation directed against monopolies. Lovers of Browning will find an admirable criticism of "The Return of the Druses" in this number, the work being judged from the dramatic standpoint.

The Fiction Number of Scribner's Magazine (August) is remarkable for its color-printing, its brilliant pictures by young artists, and the high excellence of the short stories. The frontispiece and a story, "The Play's the Thing," show illustrations in color by a young man, W. Glackens, who has the cleverness of the modern French illustrators applied to New York themes. Richard Harding Davis tells in "The Lion and the Unicorn" a love story of a young American playwright in London. Thomas Nelson Page contributes the tale of a negro lynching in the South, entitled, "The Spectre in the Cart."

The August Coming Age contains a paper of great interest by Prof. A. E. Dolbear, the well-known physicist. It is entitled, "The Kind of Universe We Live In," and discusses in a brilliant manner the results of discoveries made through the telescope, spectroscope, and microscope. Other leading contributors are Charles Malloy, Prof Jean du Bay, Dr. James Hedley, Lillian Whiting, and Nina K. Darlington.

The Cosmopolitan, for August, contains an illustrated paper entitled, "By Trolley to the Sphinx." Mrs. J. K Van Rensselaer describes "The Basis of New York Society." "The Bushwhacker Nurse" is a story by Stockton. Gustave Kobbe writes of the late Augustin Daly.

RACE PROBLEM IN THE EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Memphis, Aug. 2.—A special from Hillsboro, Tex., says: Hon. F. P. Works, president of the State Epworth League, says Southern Leaguers contemplate meeting at some Southern city to consider the advisability of organizing a Southern convention. The object of this convention will be to exclude the negro from participation in the International League meetings. At Toronto and Indianapolis the negro was very much in evidence, and it is the wish to avoid an appearance of social equality hereafter that this meeting was inaugurated.—Times-Democrat.

More than $85,000 were taken in as gate fees at a recent prize fight in New York City. It is said that this is the largest amount ever received for any single performance on any former occasion. This is a most discreditable fact, but a fact, all the same. Christian assemblies are having their occasions, and in some instances they take in gate fees. We would like to chronicle an $85 000 occasion where Christ is honored, to put over against this one where he is dishonored and ignored.—Southern Advocate.

Dr. DuBose, the Southern League editor and secretary, said in private conversation with a friend that he had traveled 60,000 miles during the past year, and had spent one hundred nights in the sleeping-car. He is the busy official head of an organization which now numbers 6,000 senior chapters, with 280,000 members, and 800 junior chapters, with 20,000 members.—Zion's Herald.

Bishop C. C. McCabe, in an interview in the Indianapolis Journal, said: "Not long since Bishop Newman gave $4,000 to an object, every dollar of which he had made by lectures. He also left an endowment, the interest of which is to pay the tuition of thirty students in perpetuity. He never kept a considerable money he earned by lectures. One of our Bishops gave $3,000 to found an orphanage in China from money he earned lecturing. This year he is supporting missionaries, which will require more than $3,000, and which money he is earning in lectures. One of our Bishops has made $150,000 by lecturing, and he has paid it all over to the church. The charge that Bishops enrich themselves in this way is absurd and false. Most of our Bishops are carrying debts to-day in advance because they have given money to help feeble churches and our missionaries on the frontiers."—Northwestern Advocate.

Bishop McTyeire said once, referring to the importance of preparation for the ministry: "If a man is going out to chop wood, it will pay him to first spend a half hour in grinding his ax. He will do his work more easily, and will chop more wood, in consequence."—Southern Advocate.

NOTES.

Rev. V. D. Skipper has returned from his visit to Mississippi.

Rev. J E. Danson spent last week visiting friends in Mississippi.

Bishop Galloway and Dr. Hammond will attend the Educational Rally at Shreveport.

We regret to have missed a call recently from Prof. A. M. Muckenfuss, of Millsaps College.

Rev. J. H. Montgomery is carrying on a meeting at Hammond, La. He is assisted by Rev. W. D. Bass.

At the Preachers' Meeting, on Monday, sixteen accessions to the church were reported for July.

***

Dr. W. R. Lambuth has taken his departure for an official visit to our mission fields in China and Japan.

Rev. W. W. Woollard, the popular and efficient pastor of Aberdeen station, will be off soon for a short rest among the mountains of Virginia.

We are pleased to learn that Rev. J. M. Henry is on the road to recovery. He hopes soon to be able to take a trip to the mountains for recuperation.

Rev. E. P. Craddock writes: "The delegates from Aberdeen district to Annual Conference are Dr. Grand Sykes, G. F. Leftwich, F. J. McDonnal, H. F. Harkey."

We are indebted to our friend, Rev. J. A. Randolph, chaplain of the Sixth United States Infantry, for a copy of "The American," a paper published in English in Manila.

Rev. Ira L. Bronson, of the Louisiana Conference, mourns the death of his father, which occurred at Orwell, Pa., a few days since. Bro. Bronson has returned to his charge at Gilbert, La.

Because of his avowed belief in Spiritualism, Rev. Dr. B. F. Austin has been deposed from the ministry by the London Methodist Conference. So says the New York Advocate.

Rev. James A. Duncan, D. D., has been elected president of Randolph-Macon College. Dr. W. E. Edwards has been chosen for the chair of moral philosophy and biblical literature.

Prof. G. W. Burton, formerly of the Brandon District High School, at Montrose, Miss., has been elected to the presidency of Franklinton Academy, Franklinton, La., and has accepted.

The Epworth League of Holly Springs, through its president, Bro. L. H. Johnson, has sent us $5 for the response to Dr. J. A. Parker's appeal in last week's issue of the ADVOCATE. This is an example worthy of universal imitation.

Rev. J. I. Hoffpanir, P. C., Greensburg, La., writes: "I closed a meeting at Darlington last Sunday, July 30, which had lasted ten days. I was assisted by Bro. C. C. Miller. A number of conversions, fifteen accessions on profession and two by letter, and the church revived."

***

We were pleased to receive a call, on Tuesday last, from Rev. Dr. J. C. Simmons, of the Pacific Conference, who was en route home from the Indianapolis Convention. He is in fine health and spirits, and, notwithstanding his advanced age, seems likely to be an efficient worker in the Master's cause for years to come.

In speaking of the Sam Jones Camp Meeting the Centerville Jeffersonian has this to say of Rev. T. B. Clifford: "He is such an energetic and forceful speaker that some one has given him the soubriquet, 'Cyclone Clifford.' He does strike a cyclone lick at sin at all times, but he is as gentle as he is earnest, and is a great favorite with both saints and sinners."

The United States Government has been officially notified of a new remedy for consumption discovered by Dr. Mendel, of France. The ingredients of the remedy are cinnamon, thyme, and encalyptus, in olive oil. It is said to be quite efficacious. As the materials can be had everywhere at an insignificant cost, the value of the compound will, doubtless, be decided very soon by the profession.

Under date of July 31, 1899, Rev. T. J. Norsworthy writes: "At this writing we are engaged in a tent meeting at Thomastown, having begun yesterday at 11 o'clock. We preached twice yesterday to congregations estimated at about six hundred in number. Everything indicates that we shall have a splendid meeting. We have no ministerial assistance. Will continue through next Sunday."

Rev. W. L. Anderson, P. C., Aug. 4, 1899: "We have held three revival meetings on Chester charge this Summer—at Pisgah, Antioch, and Salem, and were assisted in them by Revs. W. J. O'Bryant, R. A. Clark and J. J. Garner. These brethren did good, faithful work, and the Lord honored their preaching. There have been forty-two accessions—thirty-seven on profession of faith, five by letter. More to follow, and several go to other churches."

At the close of Bishop O. P. Fitzgerald's sermon at Indianapolis a Jewish rabbi, deeply touched by the sermon, walked up to the pulpit and asked the privilege of pronouncing upon the Bishop the Hebrew benediction. No objection being offered, he laid his hands upon the Bishop's head and pronounced the benediction in Hebrew, and afterwards repeated it in English. The audience were moved to tears. For an account of this incident we are indebted to Dr. Simmons.

Rev. John A. Randolph, Illoilo, Panay Island, P. I. (Headquarters Sixth Infantry), June 19, 1899, writes: "MR. EDITOR: As you have doubtless seen in the papers, the Sixth Infantry goes to Iloilo, Island of Pany, to relieve the First California Regiment. I wish my friends in Mississippi to know where I am, and to remember that a stranger a thousand miles from home will appreciate being remembered very much. They can help me in my work greatly by sending me newspapers, magazines, etc., as there will be a dearth of reading matter in the Sixth. We held services every day for two weeks on our trip over, and sixty men were converted, and I think much good done. The weather during the entire trip was perfect. We had several men quite sick, but lost only one. If you wish, I will send you an occasional line."

EPWORTH LEAGUE DEPARTMENT.

"ALL FOR CHRIST."

LOUISIANA.

REV. THOMAS B. CLIFFORD, Jackson, La., EDITOR.

The most captivating address at the Indianapolis Convention was delivered by Bishop Charles B. Galloway

We are glad to note cheering news from the League at Friar's Point, Miss. We know some of the Leaguers there honts, having had the pleasnre about two years ago of talking to them concerning the aim and work of the Epworth League.

Rev. J. O. Bennett reports the organization of a League at Greenwood, La., with thirty-five members. This makes the second Epworth League organized on the Caddo circuit this year.

We have received a copy of the "Student's Hand-Book," presented by the Young Men's Christian Association of Centenary College, Jackson, La. It is a neat and nniqne prodnction, and is printed at the office of this ADVOCATE.

We gladly give epace to the following commnnication from onr fair friend from Mississippi, Miss Vic Thompson, concerning the Epworth League gathering at the Seashore.

ATTENTION, MISSISSIPPI LEAGUERS!

I trnst that a great nnmber of Mississippi Leaguers will attend the Interstate Conference to be held at the Seashore Camp Gronnds, Ang. 15 25. The objeot of this Conference is to bind into closer nnion the Christian workers of the Gnlf States, promote systematic stndy of God's Word, and awaken a more intelligent interest in missions—or rather "to consider the evangelization of the world for Christ, and nnitedly to resolve to undertake greater things for His kingdom." I nrge each League in Mississippi to defray the expense of at least one delegate to thie Conference. Aside from the spiritnal good to be derived from the association together of consecrated workers, and listening to snch speakers as Dr. DuBose, Bishop Galloway, and blind Joe Ramsey, the pleasnre of recreating at the sea-coast for ten days will mean a great deal to onr yonng people. So I trnst it may be my pleasnre to join hearts and hands with a great nnmber of Mississippi Leaguers on the sea-coast.

VIC THOMPSON,
State Secretary.

MISSISSIPPI.

REV. HENRY G. HAWKINS, Madison, Miss., ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

Pastors and League workers in Mississippi need to be reminded that, as there is no pecnniary remnneration to their League Department editor, and as the nnmber of Leagues which he can visit in person mnst be very limited, he is greatly dependent upon them for snitable news. An appeal is hereby made for items of interest from every League. And, pray do not think that yonr items will be excinded because they seem to be of small interest. The best Epworth Leagues we have are those that are attending to a lot of little things. If yon have recently had yonr charter framed, if yon are pnt-ting flowers at the church; if in any way the overbnrdened pastor is being helped in his work, send the word. Items concerning what you have done in the past, what you are doing in the present, or concerning what yon propose for the fntnre, will all be welcomed.

We might make it beneficial to systematize the news, devoting the column one month to flower work, another month to work among the sick, a third to the League Stndy Course, and so on.

There rests a "scandal upon the fame of Jesns;" it is the condition of the heathen world. Shall this scandal be removed? There are needed men and women, strong and many, of prophetic mind and heavenly citizenship, to carry forward to a successful issne this vast enterprise which the church has undertaken.

Whilst the Leaguers are carefnl to not neglect the assembling of themselves together, let them, above all things, take time for reading the League Conrse each year. There is broadening and deepening and npholding in the qniet study of these books. The reading year begins in October and ends with Jnne. The books, 1899-1900, are: "Onr Island Empire," by Morris; "Among the Forces," by Bishop Warren; "Great Books," by Dean Farrar, and a devotional work, yet to be selected.

The Epworth Era, of Jnly 20 has a photo gallery of the members of our General Epworth League Board. Among the fifteen faces we recognize Bishop Candler, strong determined, thonghtfnl; Dr. DuBose, versatile, eloqnent, flashing; J. W. Newman, polished and bright; W. S. Parks, cultnred and ready.

Sometimes it happens that one who has been accustomed to speak to a hnndred or several hnndred finds his voice nnfitted for an audience of a thonsand or several thonsand. This evidently was the case with many who were on the program of the International Conference. Rev. J. D. Ellis, of the Alabama Advocate, says: "The largest meeting place was in a tent; for the great crowds that gathered there to hear was simply impossible, except when such men as Bishop Galloway spoke." The Indianapolis News refers to "Rev H. M DuBose, D. D.," of Nashville, Tenn., as "a man with a voice that was easily heard in every part of the hall."

T. AND P.

No matter whether a person expects to take a long or short journey, the first thing considered is comfort; and more especially is this evident in the oppressive Snmmer months when a cool resort is sought by everyone able to have an outing. Probably you have contemplated a Summer trip Probably yon have decided to go to Colorado. If so, you want easy, comfortable transport, snre connections and polite attention.

The Texas and Pacific Railway has the very best possible service to Pueblo, Denver, Colorado Springs and all points in Colorado. It is the only line running through coaches and elegant vestibnled Pullman Sleepers (without change) to Fort Worth, where direct connection is made with through sleepers to Denver via the Fort Worth and Denver City railway. Between Fort Worth and Denver a handsome Cafe Car, having the finest cnisine on wheels, is operated daily. Meals served on short notice any hour of the day. Compare this service with that of other lines.

Twentieth Century Fund.

Dr. Hammond, onr General Secretary at Nashville, is expecting me, as Mississippi Conference Secretary of Education, to furnish him by the fifteenth of each month a statement of the progress of the Twentieth Century Educational Movement in the Mississippi Conference. Pastors will please write me their plans, the amonnts already snbscribed, the amonnts paid in cash, and amonnts specially directed. If the pastor has not time, let him have the Church Conference Secretary or some committee man to send me the information. H. G HAWKINS, Sec. Ed.

SINCE ITS ORGANIZATION IN 1843
It has paid to living members $243,157,627 66
To beneficiaries of deceased members 201,591,283 48
Total paid to members, both living and dead $444,748,910 66
And now holds for the security of its present members 277,517,325 36
Paid to and invested for its members $722,266,235 43
THE POLICIES OF THIS COMPANY
Are remarkable for their liberality, large guaranteed values and entire absence of all technical terms or phrases. Being practically incontestable, they provide a legacy and not a lawsuit.
Persons desiring policies in this Company can secure them from the Company's nearest agent, or if no agent is convenient, by writing to the General Agent, giving date of birth and stating what amount of insurance is desired.

SPANISH-AMERICAN WAR PANORAMA

is one of the war books which is likely to be in continuous demand. It is a panoramic record of the triumph of Yankee Doodle. The eagle flaps his wings on every page, and "Old Glory" waves around and above every scene. Prominent officers connected with the war are here portrayed, as well as many of the "men behind the guns." Military life is pictured to the eye, from recruiting to guard mount and skirmish line. Nor is the ludicrous omitted. The company cook receives the attention due to his importance; the mess is shown; cavalry scenes are given; the hospital arrangements are depicted; the heroines of the Red Cross service are displayed; street scenes in Havana, Santiago and elsewhere are unrolled, the new citizens or subjects (which are they?) of Uncle Sam appear and disappear as the leaves are turned.

In a word, the gazer visits the new localities and sees the tumultuous new life, without the risk or expense of a sea voyage.

The Album is 5½x8 inches, weighs 12 ounces, printed on finest coated paper.

Sent FREE to any address in the United States, Canada, or Mexico, for 12 cents in stamps or coin, to cover postage and packing. Copy may be seen at any ticket office of the Big Four Route.

SOCRATES died from a cup of poison administered by the hand of a friend. How many in this land have died by poisonous remedies given by friendly hands to combat diseases? It is quite a comfort to know that when giving DICKS' CHILLIFUGE there is not a drop of poison in a bottle full of this beneficent remedy.

WANTED.

Wanted! young feet to follow
Where Jesus leads the way,
Into the fields where harvest
Is ripening day by day;
Now, while the early morning
Scents all the dewy air;
Now, in the fresh sweet dawning,
Oh, follow Jesus there!

Wanted! young hands to labor;
The fields are broad and wide,
The harvest waits the reaper
Around on every side;
None are too poor or lowly,
None are too weak or small,
For in His service holy
The Master needs them all.

Wanted! young ears to listen;
Wanted! young eyes to see;
Wanted! young hearts to answer
With throb of sympathy.
When on the wild waves' edging
The strange, sad tale is borne
Of lands in darkness lying,
Forsaken and forlorn.

WILL IT PAY?

A new standard has been setup in America. Everything, to-day, must be measured by its money value. "Will it pay?" "What is there in it for me?" These are the great interrogations of the century. Even the American youth is beginning to measure his acquaintances, his friendships, everything, by what he can get out of them for his own profit or promotion. When he is introduced to a newcomer, he immediately asks himself: "Is there anything in this man for me? Can he give me a lift? Can he help me to a customer, a patient, a client? Can he be a constituent? Can he help me to capital, to a position, to promotion?"

The first questions asked about a stranger in some of the Western cities are: "Has he 'arrived?'" "Has he got there?" In other words, has he made his fortune? If he has not, he is of little account, except to a few friends.

It is most unfortunate that our youth are brought up to look upon money as the great measuring line of values. It is not so very long since character, respectability, were so prominent in this country that little was thought about how much money one had if he possessed the sterling qualities of manhood.

The finer sentiments are being crushed out of American character by this insane greed for profit, this mad rush for wealth. Everything which money can not buy or replace is sacrificed to this voracious Mammon. Even higher education and culture are now being estimated as the equivalents of money. "Will it pay to send my son to college?" ask the merchant and the farmer. "Will education enable him to earn more salary?—to get rich quicker?" They speak as if the growth, the expansion of man's god-like powers, could be estimated in dollars and cents!

In this wild rush for wealth our people are murdering health, energy, comfort, culture, friendship; all that we should really hold dearest. Peace, happiness, often honor itself; the very things which we struggle hardest to obtain are sacrificed, only to find that money has no power to restore or replace them.

What have our rich men to look forward to when they retire? Many of them possess nothing but money. They have destroyed their capacity for happiness while they have been getting ready to enjoy. Their minds have not been cultivated; they know little of books, and less of art; even the power to enjoy the riches of nature has been overcome in the race for gold. Almost everything for which they desired wealth has vanished. They had hoped to get pleasure from the works of art their money could buy, from the libraries they would collect, from foreign travel, from luxurious living. They did not realize that faculties unused would die, and that if they did not cultivate the aesthetic part or the social side of their nature, they would shrivel and decay; that the exclusive development of the lower nature would kill out the higher.

Does it pay the acorn to unfold the possibilities wrapped up within it? Would you stop its growth and stunt its future when a sapling? Does it pay to stop a boy's growth just as he is expanding into manhood, and take him out of school or college because for the time he can earn a little more money? Is this all that education means? Does it mean nothing to unfold the infinite possibilities of the youth's nature; to give him the opportunity to act the Columbus to his own undiscovered powers?

Shall we give no time to the cultivation of the flowering side of our nature? Shall all the sap go to develop the coarse, woody fiber, and none to call out the foliage, the flower, the beauty, the fruit? Do we need nothing but hard timber or wood? Has life become so mean and sordid that we must spend all our time in the kitchen and dining-room of life, providing for the animal part of us? Are we never to enjoy the artistic, the æsthetic, the social side of life in the drawing-room and the library? Are the externals—houses, lands, stocks, stores—more important than the unfolding of the divine possibilities within us?

A profitable question would be: Does this kind of scramble and hurry and money-coveting and money-getting, without accompanying ease, rest or pleasure, pay?—Success.

NEVERS FOR BOYS.

Never make fun of old age; no matter how decrepit, or unfortunate, or evil it may be. God's hand rests lovingly on the aged head.

Never use intoxicating liquors as a beverage. You might never become a drunkard; but beer, wine and whisky will do you no good, and may wreck your life. Better be on the safe side. Make your influence count for sobriety.

Never make sport of one of those miserable creatures, a drunken man or woman. They are wrecks; but God alone knows the stress of the storms which drove them upon the breakers. Weep rather than laugh.

Never tell nor listen to the telling of filthy stories. Cleanliness in word and act is the sign manual of a true gentleman. You can not handle filth without becoming fouled.

Never cheat or be unfair in your play. Cheating is contemptible anywhere at any age. Your play should strengthen, not weaken, your character.

Never call anybody bad names, no matter what anybody calls you. You can not throw mud and keep your own hands clean.

Never be cruel. You have no right to hurt even a fly needlessly. Cruelty is the trait of a bully; kindliness the mark of a gentleman.

Never tell a lie. Even white lies leave black spots on the character. What is your opinion of a liar? Do you wish other people to have a like opinion of yourself?

Never hesitate to say no when asked to do a wrong thing. It will often require courage—the best kind of courage, moral courage; but say no so distinctly that no one can possibly understand you to mean yes.

Never quarrel. When your tongue gets unruly, lock it in—if need be, bite it. Never suffer it to advertise your bad temper.

Never be unkind to your mother and father. When they are dead, and you have children of your own, you will discover that even though you did your best, you were able to make only a part payment of the debt you owed them. The balance you must pay over to your own children.

Never trust other boys' sisters better than you do your own.

Never fancy you know more when fifteen years old than your father and mother have learned in all the years of their lives. Wisdom is not given to babes.

Never lay aside your manners when you take off your fine clothes.

Never be rudely boisterous at home or elsewhere.

Never forget that God made you to be a joyous, loving, lovable, helpful being. Be one.—Independent.

SNUB NOT AT ALL.

Don't snub a boy because he wears shabby clothes. When Edison, the inventor of the telephone, first entered Boston he wore a pair of yellow linen breeches in the depth of Winter.

Don't snub a boy because his home is plain and unpretending. Abraham Lincoln's early home was a log cabin.

Don't snub a boy because of the ignorance of his parents. Shakespeare, the world's poet, was the son of a man who was unable to write his own name.

Don't snub a boy because he chooses an humble trade. The author of "Pilgrim's Progress" was a tinker.

Don't snub a boy because of his physical disability. Milton was blind.

Don't snub a boy because of his dullness in lessons. Hogarth, the celebrated painter and engraver, was a stupid boy at his books.

Don't snub anyone; not alone because some day they may outstrip you in the race of life, but because it is neither kind, nor right, nor Christian.—Great Thoughts.

YESTERDAY.

Yesterday's words were bitter or flippant. Try again to-day.

Yesterday's moments were trifled away. Try again to-day.

Yesterday's thoughts had too much of self. Try again to-day.

Yesterday's victories made you haughty and proud. Try again to-day.

Yesterday's failures made you gloomy and fretful. Try again to-day.

Yesterday's prayers were aimless and faithless. Try again to-day.

Yesterday's burdens were carried impatiently. Try again to-day.

Yesterday's charity was narrow and cramped. Try again to-day.

Yesterday's temptations were met in weakness. Try again to-day.—Epworth Herald.

Said a suburban minister the other day to some friends who had been visiting him: "I suppose that ours was the only family in this whole place that had prayers this morning." The village where this minister resides is one of considerable size, with four churches, including a colored chapel. He was probably right in his surmise. What is the trouble with Christians in this respect? Is it the early train to the city that has banished morning prayers? If so, it has never yet, even in extreme cases, had that effect upon breakfast. But is not food for the soul as needful as that for the body? And to pray well is to work well.—New York Observer.

HOW MUCH TO SLEEP.

Some one says of sleep: "Six hours for a man, seven for a woman, and eight for a fool," but there never was a more misleading statement. The amount of sleep one needs depends on the amount of mental work he does while awake. Men whose brains are never busy can get along with five or six hours' sleep a day, even though their hands are always employed during the waking hours; but the mental worker must have more, or go crazy. To attempt to imitate Napoleon, who, it is said, could get along with four or five hours' sleep, will drive any ordinary man into an insane asylum before the end of a year. At any rate, those who quote Napoleon so glibly fail to inform us that he died when a little past fifty. A prominent nerve specialist of Philadelphia said recently, "It is not overwork that kills, but under-sleep."

A scientific writer says that night is the time which nature utilizes for the growth of plants and animals; children grow more rapidly during the night. In the daytime the system is kept busy disposing of the wastes consequent on activity, but while asleep the system is free to extend its operations beyond the mere replacing of worn-out particles; hence the rapid growth.—Exchange.

POROUS CLOTHING.

It is absolutely essential to health that the emanations from the skin pass easily through the clothing. This "transpiration" may be interfered with by an excess of clothing, or by clothing of a very close texture. All who wear india-rubber coats know how uncomfortable they are after they have been on a short time. Ordinarily, proper clothing will not prevent transpiration, but an excess will interfere with it; and where too much clothing is worn it soon becomes foul, because the outside air can not freely mingle with the gases from the body, and dilute them. Some wear the thickest and heaviest undervests that they can buy, and such people are very generally the victims of frequent colds. They would be much safer in exposure were they to wear two light undervests instead of one very thick and heavy.—Sanitarian.

OUR $1 OFFER.

Much has been said about reducing the subscription price of the ADVOCATE. The only way in which a reduction can be brought about is by an increase in the number of subscribers. In order to facilitate this result, we make the following offer: Until further notice we will take new subscriptions at the rate of $1 for eight months. When seven thousand five hundred new names have been sent in at this rate with the cash, we will extend the time four months longer, thus reducing the price to $1 per annum. When the extension is made, old subscribers will get the benefit as well as new ones, provided they first pay up all arrearages. Of course, no commissions can be given under this offer. Address

LIKE A THIEF IN THE NIGHT.

Malaria creeps into the system and leaves a poison which saps its vitality until the well-known symptoms of CHILLS AND FEVER, INTERMITTENT FEVER, CONGESTION, BLOODY URINE, etc., will show their snake-like heads. Fortunately there is an antidote in DICKS' CHILLIFUGE, which absolutely exterminates Malaria in a few hours; so pleasant to the taste that children love to take it. It banishes fevers like mist before the morning sun; brings as a gift rose cheeks, health, happiness, and makes life worth the living

AT REST!

Life's voyage is ended,
The day's work done;
Around the throne thy voice is blended
With the praises of His own.

At rest within thy Father's home;
No more with slow, uncertain steps
Through life's dark wilderness to roam;
At rest, and by thine own Father kept.

Not dead! Ah, no; but gone before
To live in that blest land
Where sin and sorrow comes no more;
Near to the Master whom she served,
With steadfast patience still,
With loving faith that never swerved,
Anxious to do His will.

With earthly eyes no more we'll see thee;
But, dear friend, thy memory lives;
And through its influence we are nearer thee,
This precious boon our Lord doth give,
And when our service here is over,
And on God's mercy we must wait,
We'll meet again to part, no, never,
Amid the angels at the gate.

Mrs. H. B. DAVIS, of Meridian, Miss. (formerly Miss Henrietta Bryan Hatch), entered the haven of rest July 15, 1899 at 10:15 o'clock. Her remains were interred in Columbus, Miss., July 16. She was the daughter of Col. Edmond and Mrs. Alice Hatch. Aged sixty-nine; born in New Berne, N. C. When seven years old she, with her parents, moved to Macon, Miss.; afterwards united in marriage to Mr. Durant H. Staves, and lived in Columbus, Miss.; from there to Meridian, Miss. For several years she had been an invalid; was only confined to her bed for a week when the summons came, "Come up higher." This good Methodist made religion the prime object of her life. Every thought was of God, constantly endeavoring to keep hers and her family's hearts pure.

Dear bereaved ones, only look to Jesus in this trying hour. She has only gone on before you to dwell with him whom she worshiped all her life. In joy or sorrow, wealth or adversity, it was ever the same. "God knows best," that dear mother would often say; also, "Whatsoever ye shall ask in My name, believing, ye shall receive." Comforting portions of Scripture for her children and grandchildren to dwell on. She was an honor to you; treasure her name and memory as an invaluable inheritence, and may her Christian mantle fall upon her ever-faithful daughter, son-in-law, and precious grandchildren; then, when all of their life's battles have been conquered, each one can meet in that bright, ennobled clime where the pure and the good are its only inhabitants. Accept in your lacerated hearts God's abiding grace—your sure and only strength in these surging hours. While the shadows are now deep over your pathway, your mother has 'Passed out of the shadow into eternal day, and

Why do we call it dying?
'Tis only sweetly passing away."

A FRIEND.

Aberdeen, Miss.

THOMAS—WM. HARVEY THOMAS was born in Williamson county, Tenn., May 1, 1819, and passed from this life at his residence in Delhi, May 28, 1899, being, at the time of his demise, fourscore years and twenty-seven days old. When a boy his parents moved to Alabama with him, where he remained till 1847. From thence he moved to Louisiana, where he spent the remainder of his life. In 1850 he was married to Miss Mary E. Hughes, which union lasted only seven years. On Feb. 5, 1863, he was united in holy wedlock to Miss Prudence Raney, which companionship lasted till his Father called him home. He was the father of nine children, four of which, with two grandchildren and one great-grandchild, survive him.

Bro. Thomas was converted in 1878, but not having access to the church of his choice, he never united with the visible church of God till two years ago, when he was received into the M. E. Church, South, by Rev. Jas. M. Martin. He lived a quiet, devoted life. He was not demonstrative, but in meekness and humility he served God. With an unshaken confidence in a Divine Providence and an unwavering faith in the atonement, he fell asleep without a struggle. A man with a determined will, yet resigned to the will of his Master; a firm resolution, yet fully consecrated to God, and a stable character, cleansed by the blood of Christ and sanctified to the service of God, has gone from us to the celestial city, where endless praise shall be his joy, and where sickness and sorrow, pain and death shall never enter.

His pastor, WM. HY. HATFIELD.

RHODES—MRS. EMMA EUGENIA RHODES was born near Shiloh, in Rankin county, Miss., on the seventeenth day of November, 1858. Some time in the seventies she united with the M. E. Church, South, at Shiloh. About nineteen years ago she moved her membership to Pelahatchie, where it remained until transferred to the church triumphant on the twenty-fourth of May, 1899. She was married to Mr. A. L. D. Rhodes, March 11 1880 and her life was made as happy as kindness and affection could make it.

Sister Rhodes was a quiet, gentle, modest, modest woman, whose true worth was known only to those most intimate with her. While her religious life was not as conspicuous as some make theirs, it indicated no absence of experience on her part. Her life was truly devoted to her husband and children, and for them she made home bright and cheerful; but that happy circle is broken, and her place is vacant. Oh, how sad are these who are left mourning for the loved one gone before! May God bind up the broken hearts and strengthen them for the duties and trials of life, and at last receive them up to glory!

FULLER—MRS. KIZZIE FULLER aged sixty-six years, died at the home of A. S. Baker, her nephew, of Avoyelles parish, La., on Monday, July 24 1899.

Aunt Kizzie, as she was commonly called, has lived an earnest Christian life from her youth up. She joined the M. E. Church South, while young, and remained a consistent member of the same until her death, always willing and anxious to do all within her power for the advancement of God's cause and the uplifting of humanity.

Sister Fuller was an aunt of the Revs. J. L. P. and B. F. Sheppard, of the Louisiana Conference. She leaves a large connection in North Louisiana, to whom we extend our sympathy. We grieve not as those who have no hope, for her lamp was trimmed and burning, and there was oil in her vessel. In the silent churchyard at Oak Grove we laid her body to rest, where she awaits the judgment morning, while her spirit is basking in the sunlight of God's love. L. L. ROBERTS, P. C.

CISSNA—Again death has visited our little church at Patterson, La., and taken one of our oldest members, Sister LOUISA CISSNA, aged seventy-three years. She was born Aug. 31 1826 in Delaware, near Philadelphia, and died in Patterson, La., June 15 1899.

Sister Cissna joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1854. She was a faithful, consistent Christian. Her life was spent for others. She was useful in many ways. The church and the world is poorer that she is gone. No sacrifice was too great for her to make for the good of her children and family. She leaves two sons, one daughter, seventeen grandchildren and four great-grandchildren to mourn the loss of a faithful mother. God was her stronghold in every time of need. Her work is finished, and she has entered upon her reward: "Her children rise up and call her blessed."

BAYLIS—GEORGE BAYLIS died at his home near Columbia, Miss., July 17, 1899, in his seventy-fifth year, after a long illness.

Thus is gone from us another of the "old citizens" whom men justly honor. In the community where he had lived forty-eight years there was none to say aught against him. His home was always open to the stranger, and it was his delight to entertain the preacher. He leaves a widow and a large family of children and grandchildren. May God's grace be sufficient for them in this their sad trial!

Bro. Bayls was a consistent member of the Methodist Church, and as he walked down into "the valley and shadow of death," he "feared no evil." His body is buried near the old home, but God is taking care of his soul. H. H. TREVILION.

HUNT—At 6:30 o'clock P. M., Thursday, July 6, 1899, Gone summoned from the home of F. W. and Minnie H. Hunt their infant son, JIMMIE HAYS HUNT.

This little bud was just entering joyously upon the pleasures and possibilities of its second Summer. Its innocent prattling and childish laughter was the joy of its parents, and its departure was painful to all the family, but God saw fit to usher it into everlasting Summer, to bloom forever there. May he comfort the bereft! THOS. J. O'NEIL.

A man may know that he is without God if he is without prayer. Prayer is the simplest expression of the desire for God. It is by prayer we invite God to come in to occupy his throne; and when he is in, prayer is inevitable.—James Stalker.

FOR OVER FIFTY YEARS

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP has been used for children teething. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for Diarrhœa. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

JOB EARNED HIS TITLE BY GREAT SUFFERING. Had he flourished in these days, his recourse for consolation would not have been the company of three nagging friends, but a bottle of DICKS' MUL-EN-OL, which has a wonderful power to dissipate the inflammation, cool the feverishness, and completely cure boils and carbuncles.

NAPOLEON LOST THE BATTLE OF LEIPSIC because of a fit of indigestion. One dose of DICKS' MUL-EN-OL would have given him instant relief, and the fate of the kingdoms of Europe been decided differently. It is really marvelous how quickly a colicky pain will vanish when a teaspoonful of Mul-en-ol in a wineglass of hot water is taken. Try it; you will never suffer from colic.

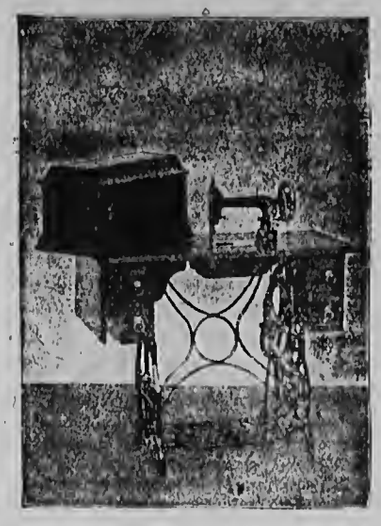
New Machine Offer.

By Far the Best We Have Ever Made.

Always on the watch for something good for our subscribers, we have succeeded in making arrangements whereby we can make a sewing machine offer which is far better than any we have been able hitherto to make. Read the following description and then read our offer:

No. 4 IMPERIAL.



THE IMPERIAL HIGH ARM SINGER will be found the perfection of mechanism as regards simplicity, durability and adaptability to the wide range of work embraced in the general family needs.

A Handsome, Light Running, Lock-Stitch, High Arm Machine that will not fail to please the most fastidious. Embracing all the advantages with all desirable improvements of other first-class sewing machines, so simple in mechanism that the most inexperienced need no assistance in operating it. Book of instructions with every machine. Any child can learn to run it.

Extra Set of Attachments also furnished with each machine consisting of the following: One Tucker, One Foot Ruffler, One Set of Plate Hemmers, four different widths up to ¾ of an inch, One Binder and One Thread Cutter.

No. 3 Machine, drop leaf table, gothic cover, case of two drawers at one end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $24. Our price, $14.75.

No. 4 Machine, drop leaf table, gothic cover, case of two drawers at each end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $25. Our price, $15.50.

No. 5 Machine, drop leaf table, gothic cover, case of three drawers at each end, making seven drawers in all. Dealer's price, $26. Our price, $16.25.

No. 4 Columbian

EXCELLENCE OF THE COLUMBIAN.—All wearing parts are of case-hardened steel possessing great durability, and by the turning of a screw all lost motion caused by wear can be taken up. All parts are fitted so accurately that the machines are absolutely noiseless, and as easy running as fine adjustment and best mechanical skill is possible to produce. No expense or time is spared to make them perfect in every respect, as every machine passes a rigid inspection by competent men before leaving the factory.

NICKEL PLATED.—The balance wheel and many of the fine parts are nickel plated, with other parts finely enameled and ornamented, giving it a rich appearance.

A Self Setting Needle and Self-Threading Cylinder Shuttle are used in the Columbian High-Arm Sewing Machine. They are so simple that any one can easily operate them in a few minutes' time, as our Instruction Book is fully illustrated, showing how to do all kinds of fancy work with attachments.

Extra Attachments, in velvet lined case, sent free with each machine: 1 Tucker, 1 Ruffler with shirring plate, 1 Hemmer set (4 widths) and Binder, 1 Braider (Foot and Slide), 1 Thread Cutter.

ADDITIONAL ACCESSORIES. Each machine is supplied with the following outfit: 1 Hemmer and Feller (one piece), 10 Needles, 6 Bobbins, 1 Wrench, 1 Screw Driver, Oil Can with Oil, Cloth Gauge and Thumb Screw, and a Book of Instructions. The Book of Instructions is profusely illustrated, and answers the purpose of a competent teacher.

No. 3—Drop leaf, Bent cover, case of two drawers at one end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $29. Our price, $17.

No. 4—Drop leaf table, Bent cover, case of two drawers at each end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $31. Our price, $17.75.

No. 5—Drop leaf table, Bent cover, case of three drawers at each end and center drawer, making a seven-drawer machine. Dealer's price, $33. Our price, $18.50.

The chief difference between Numbers 3, 4, and 5 is in the furniture, i. e., in the number of drawers. If you do not want to pay for the extra drawers, you need not do so. We sell these machines under a ten years' guarantee, by which we mean that if any part gives out by reason of any defect therein, the manufacturer will replace the same free of charge. Moreover, we allow the purchaser to test the machine ten days. If at the end of ten days you are not satisfied, you have only to drop us a postal card, and your money will be refunded.

OUR OFFER.

We will send any one of the above-described machines at the prices named, and also send the ADVOCATE free for six months. The only condition attached to this offer is that subscribers who are in arrears must first pay up all arrearages to date. It would be well to avail yourself of this offer at once, as we can not promise that it will last very long. Notice that you take no risk whatever. We do all the risking. Address

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

The second trial of Dreyfus began at Rennes, Monday.

Charbon is still prevailing to a considerable extent in the lower coast parishes of Louisiana.

A German syndicate has secured a franchise to build a railroad from Seoul, Corea, to the west coast.

Admiral Dewey has arrived at Naples, where his stay, according to different stories, will be eight days or a month.

A London dispatch says Senator Jones, of Arkansas, is still ill, and will go to the Continent by advice of his physicians.

The Berlin papers declare their unbelief in the story that Dewey said America's next war would be with Germany.

Five bodies have been recovered on the Florida coast. Two steamers and forty-three other vessels were sunk in a storm.

Jiminez intends to land in San Domingo about the end of August with a party from Cuba and re-enforcements from the United States.

The Anti-Imperialist League, of Chicago, held a meeting, Aug. 5, at which Prof. McLaughlin made a strong speech against the McKinley war.

On the demand of the American minister, the Dominican Government has released Du Vivier, who will not be surrendered if he is to be made the victim of arbitrary or military methods.

"El Sud," one of the new boats of the Morgan Line to run between New Orleans and New York, arrived in Algiers on her maiden trip shortly after 10 o'clock Saturday night.

Information from Washington is to the effect that the Fall campaign in the Philippines will be practically in the hands of Lawton, Otis being retained in chief command, but having nothing to do with active operations.

The Executive Committee of the Jackson Democratic Association adopted a report of a special committee providing for the formation of a city campaign committee, which will conduct the campaign henceforth.

At the town of Carrahelle, Fla., which was badly wrecked by a hurricane a few days ago, only nine houses are left to mark the site of a once prosperous town. Two hundred families are homeless. McIntyre, Fla., was wiped out. At Lanark the hotel was blown into the Gulf.

The scheme of Lord Curzon, viceroy of India, respecting frontier defense, has been approved by the imperial government. It provides for the withdrawal of the regulars from many frontier garrisons and substitution of tribal militia, which will result in large economy.

The rainy season has just begun in earnest in the Philippines and the offensive operations of the American forces against the insurgents are about ended. The next campaign can hardly begin sooner than November. The American army during the rainy season can hardly be expected to do more than hold what it has gained and prepare for the next campaign.

There has recently been a lull in the movements of those European powers credited with intentions inimical to the integrity of the Chinese Empire. All of them have attained footholds on the Chinese coast, and have established, to their own satisfaction at least, certain spheres of influence in which each expects to operate untrammeled in the event of actual dismemberment of the Chinese Empire.

The supreme court martial, before which Generals Toral and Pareja have been on trial, charged with surrendering Santiago de Cuba to the United States forces without having exhausted all means of defense, has acquitted both officers on the ground that they acted upon the orders of their superiors, and only surrendered when it was impossible to do otherwise.

Germany is disposed to look askance at everything this country does in the way of military preparation. The latest indication of this disposition is the comment being made in the German press upon the large additions being made to the American navy. The Germans seem to think that this increase is aimed at Germany, and will be a menace to German interests in the Far East. As a proper offset, it is urged that there should be material increases made in the German fleet.

If any doubt existed in the public mind of Mr. Elihu Root's determination to abandon the long-practiced policy of dallying with the Philippine rebellion instead of crushing it, the order for the immediate recruiting of an insular force of 40,000 men must have instantly dispelled it. It is evident that Mr. Root has already taken an intelligent and forceful grasp of the situation, although but a few days in office. He already seems to know the needs of this country in the East, and proposes to raise and equip such a military force as will make our authority in the Philippines supreme.

LEMONS AS MEDICINE

They regulate the Liver, Stomach, Bowels, Kidneys and Blood as prepared by Dr. H. Mozley, in his Lemon Elixir, a pleasant lemon drink. It cures biliousness, constipation, indigestion, headache, malaria, kidney diseases, fevers, chills, heart failure, nervous prostration, and all other diseases caused by a torpid or diseased liver and kidneys. It is an established fact that lemons, when combined properly with other liver tonics, produce the most desirable results upon the stomach, liver, bowels, kidneys, and blood. Sold by druggists. 50c and $1 bottles.

PAINT TALKS, XIX.

"PERFECT PAINT."

There is no such thing as perfection in this world; therefore, there is no perfect paint, and the use of paint is, in itself, an admission that wood, iron and steel are not perfect building materials. If they were they would not require the protection of paint.

But if there is not perfection there is always a best. The best building is that which endures the longest, the best paint is that which gives the best protection and the longest wear. If ordinary dull colors satisfy there is nothing superior to good metallic browns, ochres, lampblack and graphite for exterior house painting, and zinc white ground in oil with such colors will lighten the tint or shade without affecting their durability.

But usually taste requires something brighter than these dull earth colors and carbons—a white base, to be tinted or shaded at will, is generally demanded. This white base may be either pure white lead, pure zinc white, a mixture of either with some "inert" pigment (barytes, gypsum, etc.), a mixture of lead and zinc, or combinations of the two with one of the inert materials.

If pure lead be used it will readily lose its gloss, darken and chalk or dust off—and the dust from it is poisonous. Pure zinc can be used under proper conditions by a skilful painter in such wise that it will come as near being a perfect paint as any yet devised. Usually, however, such conditions and skill are not available. But under no conditions will pure zinc lose its gloss, change color, or chalk off. This fact naturally points to the use of combinations based on zinc, and nearly every white or tinted paint in the market that is not made by a lead corroder is really such a combination. These paints, when they bear the name of a known paint manufacturer, are, generally speaking, superior to pure lead in every respect and far more economical in the long run. They do not discolor, chalk off, nor peel off, and many of them are guaranteed for a term of years. They do not require frequent renewal, and when repainting is thought desirable it is usually more for the purpose of "freshening up," than for renewal as the protective quality of the coating is lost very slowly. Indeed I have seen work done with such paint where at the end of twenty-two years the paint, for protective purpose, was still in excellent condition. No one ever saw a job done with pure lead on the outside of a building where the paint was not all dried up and washed away within half that time, or where the paint had not lost its protective value in much less than half that time.

While a perfect paint is unattainable the best is easily found, for generally speaking the best paint is a combination paint containing zinc white, and the market is full of such paints. STANTON DEDLEY.

Loving friends! be wise, and dry
Straightway every weeping eye;
What ye lift upon the bier
Is not worth a wistful tear.
'Tis an empty seashell, one
Out of which the pearl is gone;
The shell is broken, it lies here;
The pearl, the all, the soul, is there.

And the man whom you call "dead"
In unspoken bliss instead
Lives, and loves you; lost, 'tis true,
To the light which shines for you;
But in light ye can not see
Of unfulfilled felicity,
And enlarging paradise,
Lives the life that never dies.

SHREVEPORT DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The annual session of the Shreveport District Conference for 1899 met in the town of Coushatta, La., on Thursday, July 29, with the presiding elder, Rev. Jno. T. Sawyer, D. D., in the chair. While keeping the reins well in hand, the brethren were allowed many liberties in debate and otherwise, so that all stiffness was avoided, and everyone, from the least to the greatest, felt fully at home. Sixteen out of the nineteen preachers of the district were present, and seventeen out of sixty-eight laymen (and thirty-five alternates) answered to roll-call. The reports of the preachers showed a considerable amount of parsonage and church repairs to have been made, and more is soon to be done. Several new churches have been organized, two of which are on the Florien work, which also leads the district in the matter of new members, it reporting forty-two to date. The total number of new members reported on the district was about two hundred. It is gratifying to state that nearly every preacher reported that the Young People's Hymnal and our own literature were in use in his Sunday-schools. Quite a number of prayer and class meetings are in operation, but there was shown to be a great scarcity of Epworth Leagues and Woman's Missionary Societies in the district. Children's Day has been observed in many places, and some good collections were reported. There has been special activity in raising the missionary collections this year, and some of the brethren reported as much as eighty per cent. of all assessments in hand in cash or good subscriptions. Rev. J. L. P. Sheppard reported that he had about $100 in sight on the Twentieth Century Educational Fund.

On Friday night an Educational Mass Meeting was held, and addresses were made by Dr. W. T. Balling, Prof. T. S. Sligh, Dr. Inman W. Cooper, and Rev. J. L. P. Sheppard. The good work of our colleges and their needs were laid before the audience, and the Twentieth Century Educational Movement discussed in detail, much to the edification of all present. A collection amounting to about $100 was taken.

The Conference licensed E. L. Carroll to preach, and renewed the licenses of L. L. Brewer, R. T. Wright, J. M. Posey, I. S. Few, and Wm. Hebert.

A very profitable Sunday-school and Epworth League meeting was held on Thursday afternoon. The first feature under the guidance of Rev. G. G. Evans, and the latter looked after by P. O. Lowrey. Both subjects were well discussed, and much valuable information given in regard to plans of organization and methods of work.

Friday afternoon a missionary anniversary was held. Miss Lizzie Beeson, of Keatchie, representing the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, and Mrs. Hutchins, of Shreveport, the Woman's Home Mission Society, were present, and addressed the Conference in regard to the work of their societies. Dr. W. T. Balling delivered a very masterly address on missions, which was well received by all who heard it. Rev. R. P. Howell spoke on the great and growing necessity of work among the French of the State. Rev. P. O. Lowrey spoke on the need of home mission work in the district, and offered a resolution to the effect that a committee be appointed to raise funds and employ a missionary for the district. Rev. P. O. Lowrey, S. B. McCutchen, Rev. J. L. P. Sheppard, J. B. Atkins and H. P. Dance were appointed on the committee. Dr. Sawyer also made a stirring speech on this great subject.

The following lay delegates were elected to the Annual Conference: Col. A. C. Mitchell, W. G. Wadley, S. B. McCutchen and L. T. Anders; alternates: E. L. Cargill and E. E. Hammett.

The Committee on Resolutions did its full duty, and the Conference pledged itself to all kinds of reforms "and things," many of the brethren not knowing for what they voted. This was specially true of a resolution on the use of tobacco smuggled in, in one on the liquor question.

On Saturday afternoon, at about time for adjournment, the Committee on Resolutions made its last report, which has already appeared in the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE, and it brought on a very sharp, lengthy and, at times, passionate debate. The report was on "the Publishing House matter," and was finally passed by a vote of 13 to 7. It could be clearly seen that the report drew its inspiration and backing from those little two-by-four papers whose only object in living seems to be, vulture-like, to get their beaks into something rotten; that are ever at war with well-established church institutions and officers of the church in high places. This was the one blot on an otherwise very pleasant meeting.

The next session of the Conference will be held at Zwolle.

The host of the Conference was Rev. P. M. Brown, appointed by Bishop Morrison to Coushatta, and lately elected to the presidency of Johnston Collegiate Institute. He is a man full of faith and the Holy Ghost, and well furnished for the work of the pastorate, or that to which he has been lately called. He has very much endeared himself to the people of Coushatta, and it is with much reluctance that they give him up. He was mindful of the needs of the brethren, and as he goes from us it is our heart's prayer that the richest blessings of God may rest upon him, his family, and his work.

The sessions of the Conference were well attended by the townspeople, and the indications were that much good was accomplished.

The preaching was of the usual high order on such occasions. It was said several of the brethren were preaching for Bro. Brown's place. Be that as it may, one who preached, and whose sermon received very favorable comment, is now pastor there. A good man and a good appointment have met.

THE FOREST DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The District Conference of Forest district, Mississippi Conference, was held at Hickory, July 29-31; Rev. T. L. Mellen, presiding elder, in the chair. Paul D. Hardin was elected secretary, and Duncan S. Harmon assistant. All of the pastors except three were present, and remained until the close of the session. Nine local preachers and a very good delegation of laymen were in attendance. A program of rare interest had been prepared by the presiding elder, which was rendered to the delight of all.

Saturday, the first day, was devoted to education. Our church schools were well represented. Prof. R. S. Ricketts told us of the successful session through which Millsaps College passed, and of the encouraging outlook for the future. Presidents Chambers and Beeson gave encouraging reports of the work and condition of the honored institutions over which they preside. Prof. Oscar H. Wingfield was confirmed as principal of Forest District High School, located at Montrose, and this worthy school was commended to the consideration and patronage of the district. The pastors' reports showed that considerable interest is being taken in the cause of education, and that faithful effort is being made to induce our people to patronize our own schools. Bros. M. L. White, John R. Jones and W. M. Stevens favored us with excellent papers on different phases of the educational subject. We were disappointed in not having Dr. Murrah to preach for us, but Bros. Mellen and Chambers fully met the demands of the occasion. These brethren put special emphasis on the importance of the great Twentieth Century Movement, and urged the preachers to press this worthy claim upon the people.

On Saturday night Rev. M. L. Burton, manager of the Mississippi Methodist Orphans' Home, presented the claims of this worthy institution, which should lie so near the heart of every Methodist in the State. He gave a good account of his work, and as we listened to the eloquent words of this man of God as he pled so earnestly for these unfortunate ones whom Christ has committed to our trust, our hearts condemned us for having done so little in the past, and we resolved to do better in the future. A collection was taken for the orphanage, and about ninety dollars was raised.

Sunday was Missionary Day. Addresses were made to the Sunday-school by W. M. Sullivan and W. P. Donnell. At 11 o'clock Bro. Mellen preached one of his masterly missionary sermons. Replete with information and zeal, it carried new inspiration to all our hearts. In the afternoon Bro. Mellen led a missionary love-feast, which was indeed "a time of refreshing from the presence of the Lord." This was followed by a sermon by P. D. Hardin.

One of the chief features of Missionary Day was the presence of Rev. W. P. Donnell, preacher in charge of our mission to the Choctaw Indians. He was accompanied by a half-dozen, or more, of these Choctaws as trophies of the cross, illustrating what Jesus is doing for them through us. If any were tempted to doubt that the hand of God is in this work, to look into the faces of "these brethren in red," hear them sing, pray, and tell their experience, was enough to convince the most skeptical. Bro. Donnell gave a good report of his work, and all agree that he is "the right man in the right place."

Bro. D. G. W. Ellis, of Meridian, preached Sunday night; R. S. Gale preached at the Baptist Church, Sunday, at 11 A. M., and J. N. Tucker at the M. E. Church at 8 P. M.

Monday was set apart for Sunday-schools and Epworth Leagues. Good papers were read by D. S. Harmon, Ira B. Robertson, and D. Scarborough, and J. H. Foreman preached at 11 o'clock.

The following were licensed to preach the gospel: Dennis Eugene Vickers, Walter Daniel Wallace, John Robert Jones, and Simpson Jefferson Tubby (Choctaw).

The following were recommended to the Annual Conference for admission on trial: John R. Jones, J. Madison Carley, Wm. P. Donnell, and Jas. E. Williams.

Cyrus H. Ellis, local elder, was recommended for readmission into the traveling connection.

Jas. Johnson (Choctaw) was recommended for deacon's orders.

The license of twelve local preachers were renewed.

W. M. Thornton, Geo. B. Harper, D. S. Harmon and Rev. J. R. Jones were elected delegates to the Annual Conference.

Reports of Committees on the General State of the Church showed the district to be in a fairly good condition spiritually, financially, and otherwise. Preachers all seemed hopeful, and full of faith and zeal. Resolutions were adopted: (1) Sympathy for our superannuates living within the district, but not permitted to be present; (2) Protesting against the seating of Polygamist Roberts, of Utah, as a member of the National Congress; (3) Disapproving our local preachers staying away from the District Conference to look after political and other secular interests.

The next District Conference goes to Newton.

Hickory entertained us royally. J. G. Galloway is a model Conference host. Much praise is also due to that princely layman, George B. Harper, and others.

The customary resolutions of thanks were voted, which was a very poor expression of our appreciation of the Christian hospitality of these good people.

At 5 o'clock P. M. the Conference closed with a delightful communion service conducted by Rev. D. P. Bradford, of East End, Meridian.

PAUL D. HARDIN, Sec.

MERIDIAN DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

Meridian District Conference was held at Shubuta, July 25-30, 1899. Opening sermon preached Tuesday night, July 25, at 8 o'clock, by Rev. D. P. Bradford, of East End, Meridian. Conference was called to order Wednesday morning, at 9 o'clock, with Dr. C. G. Andrews, presiding elder, in the chair, who conducted the introductory service, reading the second chapter of Second Timothy, and making a very earnest talk, hoping for a very spiritual Conference. W. D. Hawkins was elected secretary. Conference hours were fixed at 9 A. M. and 2 P. M., to adjourn at will.

The following preachers were present: Revs. C. M. Crossley, D. P. Bradford, J. M. Weems, L. F. Alford, C. D. Cecil, R. L. Phillips, G. S. Harmon, H. M. Ellis, D. C. Farmer, F. B. Ormond, J. T. Nicholson, W. J. Ferguson, R. H. Barr, J. T. Leggett, A. T. Bell, H. Mellard, R. E. Rutledge, and W. G. Backus; absent, Rev. J. C. Ellis.

Committees were appointed by the chair on State of Church, Missions, Sunday-schools, Epworth Leagues, Education, Finance, and Quarterly Conference Records.

Rev. J. W. Chambers, president of Whitworth College; Rev. M. L. Burton, superintendent of Orphans' Home of Water Valley; Miss Sallie Smylie, recording secretary of Mississippi Conference, and Mrs. Ira Phillips, district secretary of Meridian district, Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, were introduced to the Conference, and each made an earnest talk representing the work in their hands.

There were written reports from all the pastoral charges.

D. W. Heidleberg, J. T. Leggett and S. B. Watts were appointed Committee on District Parsonage.

The following papers were read on Sunday-schools and Epworth Leagues: "The Model Sunday-school," by Rev. G. S. Harmon, of Lauderdale; "How and When Can We Best Teach Our Doctrines to the Young People?" by Rev. D. P. Bradford, East End, Meridian; "The Epworth League—Its Mission," by Rev. A. T. Bell, of Shubuta; "The Best Method of Organizing and Conducting an Epworth League," by W. D. Hawkins, of Meridian.

The above papers were discussed by Revs. J. M. Weems, D. P. Bradford, H. M. Ellis, D. C. Farmer, F. B. Ormond, R. L. Phillips, and Mr. W. D. Hawkins.

"The Education Rally" was conducted by Dr. C. G. Andrews, who delivered a very fine address on "Christian Education," followed by Dr. J. M. Weems, who handled the same subject in a very impressive way. Some enthusiasm aroused.

Thursday, at 3 P. M., Educational Convention, with following excellent papers were read: "The Beneficial Features of the Twentieth Century Educational Movement" was written by Rev. H. G. Hawkins, of Madison. He being absent, it was read by T. A. Ledyard, of Shubuta. "History of Education in Methodism," by Rev. J. T. Leggett, of Enterprise; "Our Church Schools—The Reason for Their Existence," by Rev. H. M. Ellis, of West End, Meridian.

The above papers were discussed by Revs. J. W. Chambers, F. B. Ormond, J. T. Nicholson, and Judge T. P. Bell and A. Trotter.

The love-feast Friday morning, conducted by Rev. D. P. Bradford, of East End, was indeed a feast of love to those who attended. Rev. J. T. Nicholson, of Waynesboro, delivered an address, his subject being, "He That Is against Foreign Missions Is against Christianity."

The missionary sermon was preached at 11 o'clock, Friday, by Dr. J. M. Weems, his text being, "Thy Kingdom Come." (Matt. vi, 10.)

Upon favorable report from the committee as to his examination, Joseph Earl Trotter was granted license to preach.

The committees made their reports, and after some amendments were all adopted.

The following were elected delegates to the Annual Conference: T. P. Bell, S. H. Floyd, L. P. Brown, S. B. Watts; alternates: D. C. Farmer, D. W. Heidleberg.

The following local preachers' licenses were renewed: Allen S. Cameron, W. W. Holmes, A. Trotter, J. T. Griffith, and J. R. Zachry.

D. W. Heidleberg, S. J. Taylor, J. A. Lewis, S. H. Floyd, and T. P. Bell were appointed as a committee to build a district parsonage at Meridian, and also to be trustees for same.

A resolution of thanks was tendered the good people of Shubuta for their kindness, and also to the M. and O. Railway for courtesies extended.

Conference adjourned to meet in Waynesboro a year hence.

We had preaching morning and evening during the entire session; preaching done by the brethren named below: Revs. D. P. Bradford, C. M. Crossley, H. M. Ellis, W. J. Ferguson, J. M. Weems, H. Mellard, F. B. Ormond, J. T. Leggett.

NORTH LOUISIANA NOTES.

We are having plenty of hot weather and hard work up here in the hills. The farmers say that it is unusually hot and dry for their work, and the preachers generally report theirs as dry, but cold. There have been some local showers, both of rain and grace, however. Homer, Minden, Arcadia, and some other points, have had "times of refreshing," but there are many souls and acres of land still parched and dry. Let us all join in the hymn and prayer:

"Savior, visit thy plantation;
Grant us, Lord, a gracious rain."

Elijahs ought to be in demand about here just now.

The District Conferences have come and gone, but there is nothing new under the sun. It is evident that these meetings, which have in the past been so signally blessed in the work of the church, are losing their interest and power with the people. The bill of fare will have to be changed, or served in a different way, or flavored with more divine grace, or—something. The patient is certainly getting worse. Who will volunteer as doctor?

Hot as the weather has been, we still hear of oratory on the subject of the War claim occasionally. The agitation dies hard, but, praise the Lord! it is dying.

The ecclesiastical bushwhacker is still at large, with the usual stock of sensation and slang. He gives the church, the preachers, and things generally, a drubbing where he goes, but the echoes die away, the dust settles, and reveals the fact that the flag of the "regulars" is still there, with every promise of staying for some time yet.

The State Chautauqua has just closed its session near this place. The attendance was very good—better in the Teachers' Summer School work than ever before—and we had some good platform attractions. "Bob" Taylor's lecture on "Love, Laughter, and Song," made a fine impression. He is a remarkable word-painter and a fine orator. He preaches a gospel of good cheer. One felt more like loving, laughing and singing after hearing him; and surely this is the great need of this old, silent, sober, and selfish world. The management allowed innovations in the form of dancing and card-playing this season, to the surprise and disappointment of many. The public, generally, disapproves of these things, but at the Chautauqua they are as incongruous as they would be at a camp meeting. Anyone who is acquainted with the Chautauqua movement knows that it is essentially religious in its moral tone, while both card-playing and dancing have been tried and convicted before the bar of enlightened public conscience as dangerous dissipations, almost inseparably connected with immorality. We commend "Bob" Taylor's definition of dancing, "The delirium tremens of love." It is to be hoped that there will be nothing of the kind in the future; but unless the public are assured that such will be the case, many can no longer conscientiously support the Chautauqua. Our young people can not afford to run the gauntlet of such temptations for the instruction they would receive.

Plans for the coming Educational Rally at Shreveport are already in the air, and we are looking forward to that important event with large expectation and earnest prayer. Surely Louisiana will not be found wanting, when weighed in the balance, for her share of the Twentieth Century Fund. Let every man who can get there come, and then go home to work his row for all there is in it.

HIGH-WATER MARK

IS $37.50 HIGHER THIS WEEK THAN LAST!

"Gilderoy" writes from Ripley, "We are trying here for the thank-offering; have some, though so far small, success." Small favors thankfully received, etc.

Rev. J. H. Bass observed Twentieth Century Education Day at Cherry Hill, and secured fourteen dollars. "Will have Education Day at Webb in September."

Rev. E. S. Lewis observed the day at Brooksville, and reports thirty-three and 50-100 dollars given by twenty-five persons. "I will appoint a committee to follow up the work."

Success will result from such efforts. "Faith takes form and wings from such" reports as these! One from the highest point in the State, one from the prairies in the east, and one from the Delta on the west. The leaven is working. There are others in the three sections named and elsewhere who should report. Why not a report from your charge, brother? Let every pastor help now!

What are the presiding elders doing?

Rev. J. W. Dorman, P. E., writes, "The Greenville district must pay that sum in full." He is laying plans to accomplish it. All preachers in Mississippi will soon receive a personal letter on this subject. Will they heed it? J. R. BINGHAM.

"O LORD, REVIVE THY WORK."

(Hab. iii. 2.)

This prayer came from the heart of a holy prophet who was burdened on account of the iniquity of the land in which he lived. He became so earnest in his prayer, and got so close to the Lord, and had such confidence that his prayer would be heard, that he trembled at the majesty of God. He waited by faith "upon the tower" until the answer came: "God came from Teman, and the Holy One from Mount Paran. His glory covered the heavens, and the earth was full of his praise." God will hear prayer like this in our present time of need as a church. Upon this point, first, of all other considerations, our hope of a genuine revival depends. We suggest the following as a solution of the problem as to how to bring about a revival of pure religion throughout our great church:

1. A general recognition of our need of a revival. God never gives a spiritual blessing, as a rule, until an unmistakable need of the blessing is fully realized and sought on the part of the recipient. This condition has been met by many of our best preachers. They see, as the prophet did, that we need a general revival above everything else, and many of our people everywhere are very much concerned about this all-important matter, and are longing for something to come along that will bring about a change in the spiritual state of the church; yet there are church members, not a few, and some preachers, too, who seem to not fully recognize our one thing needful. The first proper step is for those who are wise in the true sense to thunder down the pure gospel, and awaken the consciences of the less concerned on this subject. God is good, but too wise to pour out his spiritual blessings upon the unconcerned and rebellious. Christians everywhere must become burdened for souls, and with an anxiety for the power of God, before a general revival comes to the church.

2. Confession, and forsaking all sin. Confession of wrong is not only right and manly, but it is one of God's unchangeable conditions upon which he proposes to pardon the guilty; and no confession is real or acceptable to God until the sin confessed has been forsaken. God has not forgotten his Word, that 'the way of transgressors is hard," and that "the backslider in heart shall be filled with his own ways." The ministers of God will have to get above the low plane of firing into their own ranks at one another, and turn all guns on the enemy of souls, before the church can ever be restored to its old-time power, and enjoy a general revival of Holy-Ghost religion. The wane of power in our church began at the birth of the modern strife among her ministers. I remember well, not many years ago, when local preachers were fired at for not doing anything; now, in some instances, they are fired at for doing something. I have been determined for some time to obey God and keep the law of the church, love my neighbor as myself, and march on in the name of Jesus to success. My neighbor is the one who does me a favor in time of need, and not the one who passes by on the other side. As long as the ministers of God are at war between themselves, what else can be expected of the church but a continual drifting away from the current of spirituality? A preacher must himself be led of the Spirit before he can lead the people. The Holy Spirit is easy offended. And for this reason strife among ministers tends to drive the Spirit from the church.

3. To whom shall we look for a revival? Our help must come directly from God, through Jesus Christ, according to the promises: "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills, from whence cometh my help. My help cometh from the Lord, which made heaven and earth." (Ps. cxxi, 1, 2) The great God of the universe, omnipotent in power and great in mercy, still hears the prayers of his people. To whom hath the strong arm of the Lord been revealed in all the past? To the men of prayer. To Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and to all of the holy prophets who daily sought his help by prayer. In answer to prayer, during the first days of the Christian church, God sent an angel by night, who "smote Peter on the side, and raised him up, saying, Arise up quickly," and he led him out of the prison dungeon through the iron gate, and into the street, and delivered him safely to those who were "gathered together praying." Also, in answer to the midnight prayer of Paul and Silas, there came "a great earthquake, so that the foundations of the prison were shaken: and all the doors were opened," and a sleeping jailer was brought to his trembling feet, and he fell down before them, and said, "Sirs, what must I do to be saved?" The same midnight praying on the part of the people and preachers would produce similar results to-day in the way of freeing souls from the fetters of sin, and bringing power to the church. In early Methodism the men of power, and the men who made the world feel the force of the truth they preached until sinners were heard pleading for salvation, were men who had power with God by prayer. This is the only sure way to have a successful revival, and behold the burning coals as they shall go forth at our Master's feet, and in this revival all of the ministers that are loyal to God and the church, regardless of any other name, shall have a share of the work to do, from the Bishops down to the most unlearned exhorter in the backwoods. No one class can monopolize all of the blessings of a revival that comes from God. God says, "All shall know me, from the least to the greatest." "Big I" and "little you" has been the source of great evil in the church of God.

4. What is a revival? It is a return to life; to recover life and vigor from a state of spiritual morbidness and drowsiness; a restoration from a backslidden condition. Nothing short of the Holy Ghost can accomplish this work. This writer accepted nothing short of a work wrought by the Holy Ghost as conversion. Nor has he ever taught any other doctrine as sufficient to revive the church or save a penitent sinner. A preacher without the Holy Spirit, and a good and continued supply of it, is not competent to teach it to others, it matters not what other qualifications he may have. His success as a preacher lies in this. And without this witnessing power a conversion or a revival is not worthy the name. A genuine work of grace from God creates all due respect for church government and love for the brethren. St. James says, "The wisdom that is from above is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, and easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality and without hypocrisy." It is enough to make an angel weep to behold the empty altars in many protracted meetings in our present age of the church. Why are not our altars crowded with crying penitents, as in former days? Sometimes they are, but they are exceptions to the rule. Where is the "mourner's bench," over which our fathers and mothers wept and prayed until they found Christ, and arose from their knees shouting? Sometimes I go to assist pastors in revivals, and find no preparations made for penitents, as was once the custom in all of our churches. I have asked, "Where is the mourner's bench?" I brush the tears from my eyes as I write this question. It is my purpose to preach the old-time gospel, as long as God lets me live, on such subjects as heaven and hell, sin and salvation. I shall do this with all loyalty to the church of my choice, and with a burning desire to save souls; and the man who opposes my course, God will attend to him. I could say other things, but time will suffice.

I have lately assisted Rev. J. H. Bass in a meeting at Webb, a little town in the Delta, within the bounds of the Winona district. Bro. John has done a fine work. He has built a parsonage and a new church, and has received quite a number into the church. "Honor to whom honor." He is a faithful pastor. "O Lord, revive thy work." W. D. Bass.

PERSONAGES—NO. 1.

We have all, no doubt, met with persons at different times in our lives who so impressed us that we never could forget them. I met with ministers in early life who, by their fiery eloquence or piety, or the two combined, spoke to me in thunder tones while living, and notwithstanding they have long since passed away from earth, they are speaking to me yet. My mind loves to run back and linger around them, and, in so doing, I feel refreshed and better equipped for the conflict of life.

Nathaniel H. Lee, of the Louisville Conference, was one of the first Methodist preachers that this writer ever saw. He was presiding elder in Western Kentucky in the fifties, and my parents resided within his district. He was very attractive in appearance; was about six feet and two inches in height, as straight as an arrow, clear, florid complexion, light hair, large blue or gray eyes, which were as keen and alert as an eagle's. His voice was strong, perfectly clear and musical, and under such perfect control that he never seemed to tire. I heard him lecture one cold November night in 1856 for three hours against the Baptist enterprise to translate the Bible and change "baptize" to "immerse." The church was 40x60 feet, and very much crowded; yet no one left the house, neither did anyone seem to tire, and that one lecture killed the translation enterprise in that town too dead to ever move again. In an adjoining charge I attended a Quarterly Conference, and Dr. Lee preached on Saturday, at 11 o'clock, from the words, "The Lord is my portion." He surely minimized the world and magnified the Lord that day. As he proceeded with his theme his eyes dilated, his voice was tender with pathos, and the holy unction rested upon him until he seemed transfigured before his auditors. It was good to be there. Christians rejoiced and sinners wept. After service I was walking behind him with a gentleman, to whom I remarked, "Dr. Lee is a tall man." "Yes," said the gentleman, "he is tall in more ways than one. He is a giant in intellect, a grand orator, and his faith takes hold upon God." In after years he was thrown from a buggy and permanently crippled. He traveled and preached, however, until the last, often riding in a side saddle. Grand man! His life was one of toil and self-denial. He never rested until he rested in his grave. In his last illness he was for a short time under a cloud. He said his "heart was fixed, trusting in the Lord;" yet there was not that rapture for which he prayed. His little ten-year-old daughter left her papa's bed with a heavy heart and with her eyes blinded with tears, and in a distant room began to sing,

"Take the name of Jesus with you,
Child of sorrow and of woe," etc.

It was heard by Dr. Lee, and the first line thrilled him with ecstacy, and he said Jesus was with him, and praised him with his last breath.

WHY?

MR. EDITOR: Will Bro. George H. Lipscomb tell us why, in his long article concerning the life and work of Rev. Harry Parker Gibbs, he failed to make any mention at all of his profession of the experience of entire sanctification? This experience Bro. Gibbs would not have liked ignored by any writer of his life or work. Why should Bro. Lipscomb fail to give this whitest, purest lily, or all, a place in his memorial wreath?

Yours for all of Jesus,

REPORT OF ABERDEEN DISTRICT SECRETARY.

(Read before Aberdeen District Meeting, W. F. M. Society, assembled in Tupelo, Miss., June 28, 1899.)

My heart is overflowing with love to God for his wonderful goodness in giving Aberdeen district such a victory in her great desire to extend the glorious kingdom of our precious Savior in the earth. God be praised for the joy allowed to come into our hearts for the faithful work done by the twenty-three societies in this district. Many prayers have been offered and answered gloriously that God's presence would be manifest in our work done, and through his name the victory came, even amid discouragements many. All honor and glory to his holy name!

Aberdeen district is the banner district, and has the banner juvenile society. Do you wonder that we rejoice? What does this mean? Souls, souls to be won for Christ by the large amount of money cast into the treasury, and a glorious record on high. Ah, sisters; this is the grandest of all work—saving precious souls for whom Christ died. Let's press to even greater victory another year, and a still larger blessing receive.

In Aberdeen district there are 23 societies, adult and juvenile; 15 adult societies, with a membership of 240; 8 juvenile societies, with a membership of 177; total number of members in district, 416; number of honorary members, 51, making a grand total of 467. One new society organized by Mrs. J. M. Davis, of Okolona; total number new members added, 71. We have also 1 honorary life member, 18 life members (4 of these new the last year), 102 subscribers to W. F. M. Advocate, 104 subscribers to Little Worker, 1 day school, 4 Bible women, and 4 scholarships supported (2 of these new). Will now mention the societies engaged in special work. Aberdeen Auxiliary supports a day school, and also made Mrs. S. I. Dalton a life member. A new school was pledged this afternoon by Shannon Auxiliary, and we hope to hear in a few days Verona Auxiliary has decided to pledge one, as they have given us encouragement to believe they will do so. Those supporting Bible women are Tupelo, Okolona, M. L. Paine Memorial, and Mrs. Pegues, of Tupelo. Those supporting scholarships are Fannie Houghton Memorial, Mary E. Thames Society, Aberdeen; Mary E. Shell Society, Okolona, and Aberdeen district name to-day the Morgan Shell Scholarship. M. L. Paine Memorial made one new life member—Mrs. Jack Gathings; Fannie Houghton made two new life members—Dr. J. C. Gathings and Willie Houghton. The 'Mary E. Thames" Society, of Aberdeen, named their scholarship for two, whom but to know is to love with ardent devotion and admiration—Rev. and Mrs. Amos Kendall—and it is known as the "Kendall" Scholarship, recently located in the "Mary Lambuth" school, Soochow, China. The "Mary E. Shell" Society, of Okolona, named their scholarship for Mr. and Mrs. Zack Harper, and is known as the "Harper Scholarship," and also recently located in Chihuahua, Mexico.

May God look tenderly upon these precious young girls being educated for Christ, and from their influence may scores be converted from heathen darkness into the marvelous light and liberty of the gospel!

Towards the district scholarship Mrs. P. W. Shell, Houston, gave $5; Mary E. Shell Workers, of Houston, $1; Houston Juveniles, $2; Verona Auxiliary, 90 cents; Tupelo Juveniles, $2 93. I haven't received a statement of the other amounts sent Conference treasurer; therefore, can not report. Am glad to say this scholarship is also located in Mary Lambuth School, Soochow, China, of which school glowing reports were received in February number of our W. F. M. Advocate.

Sisters, you have done a grand and glorious work, and may God bless you abundantly!

MRS. JAS. D. SHELL.

This District Conference of the W. F. M. Society was well attended. The meeting was especially pleasant and helpful, as we met at the same time with District Conference of the preachers, and decided to do so every year, if possible. The enthusiasm of the district secretary was catching, and there was unanimous feeling of more activity in every department of work, manifested in new work undertaken. The presence of preachers was a great help to the women.

One little diversion from the business was a "parliamentary drill," which rested and refreshed us, and helped us on to more orderly work. Let the women everywhere learn to do things "decently and in order." We believe the signs indicate more willingness to follow in "His steps."

THE MANY-SIDEDNESS OF THE WOMAN'S HOME MISSION SOCIETY.

BY MRS. J. W. BRISTER, NASHVILLE, TENN.

It is about that field of missionary work which we have been pleased to term the Home Mission Department that this paper will deal. And the discussion will be confined especially to the societies organized by the women of the church in this department.

The first suggestion that came to the writer in the preparation of this article was to note the many-sidedness of the work, the varied features of the auxiliary, and to show how they appealed differently to different members.

This very conception of the work is one that commends it, and there is no woman of our church who, if she could be induced to investigate this broad and fertile field of labor, would not discover some spot adapted to her abilities and needs. It is not for me to say which feature of the work is most interesting; none of us are authorized to belittle one aspect and magnify another. It is true that all features do not appeal alike to everyone; one may have a peculiar charm and fascination for us, while another has as great a charm and as abiding an interest for our friend. Herein lies the beauty, the attractiveness of the work, and gives it its hold on so many women.

Any work of the Master's, any institution of his that is so broad and presents so many phases that touch human nature, is apt to partake of the divine nature, and to leave upon those who take part in it the same impression as contact with him. Indeed, the only way we can commune with God and feel the sweet influence of his presence is by doing his work and obeying his will.

In the varied features of the auxiliary's programme there is work for us all to do. Have we money? Here it can be used to good purpose and lasting benefit. Have we time? In this work it can be utilized and be as valuable as the moments of a millionaire. Have we willing feet and hands? On errands of mercy they can go and carry substantial blessings to hundreds less fortunate than we. Have we consecrated heads and hearts? In the Master's name they can be used, telling the glad tidings and appealing to those in sin to seek Christ, the Savior of men. Whatever our talents may be, how few and insignificant, there is a place in the work of our societies where they can be used to good and lasting advantage.

As has been pointed out before, when one is seeking her work there is a wide range from which the choice may be made. Does one delight to visit the "shut-in," those who are not permitted to walk through God's beautiful world and enjoy its pleasures? As a member of the society, this work can be found. Do the faithful sentinels on the outposts, the heroic men and women who have gone to sparsely settled regions of the land to preach the gospel, appeal to you? They are the objects of the special care of the women's societies, and in the society you would find the work you would rejoice to do. Do you feel for the unfortunate women who have fallen out of happy homes, the outcasts of society, and would lend a hand to rescue them from their awful doom? Then the Home Mission work is what you want to do. In short, wherever there is a heart that loves the Savior, an unselfish one that would benefit her kind, there is one who is needed in our auxiliaries, and there duty calls her to go.

Such were the views held by the writer; and to verify them it was determined to visit members of the local auxiliary and secure testimony from certain of them. The question was asked, "What special feature of the work appeals to you, and why?" The following lines will be an attempt to briefly express the responses:

One lady said: "I like especially to visit the unfortunate ones who, for various causes, are shut in to their oftentimes dreary homes. It not only carries sunshine to them, but it has been a special means of grace to me. I have seen souls reached on these occasions as the Word of God was read and some simple prayer offered. The very gates of heaven have been opened, and floodtides of joy have swept over us as we communed with our Father above." And she added: "There are so many all about us who are afflicted, and are so glad to have us come. In these homes one is always sure of a welcome."

(To be continued.)

The Christian Life.

WHAT IS A CHRISTIAN?

Christ did not come to cramp anyone's manhood. He came to broaden it. He did not come to destroy our manhood; he came to fulfill it. A thorough-going Christian is a man with a stronger reason, kinder heart, firmer will, and richer imagination than his fellows—one who has attained to his height in Christ. A Bigot, or a prig, or a weakling is a half-developed Christian—one not yet arrived at full age.

What ought a Christian to read? Every book which feeds the intellect. Where ought he to go? Every place where the moral atmosphere is pure and bracing. What ought he to do? Everything that will make character. Religion is not negative, a giving up this or that, but positive, a getting and a possessing. If a man will be content with nothing but the best thought, best work, best friends, best environment, he need not trouble about avoiding the worst. The good drives out the bad. There are two ways of lighting a dark room: one is to attack the darkness with candles; the other is to open the shutters and let in the light. When light comes darkness goes. There are two ways of forming character: one is to conquer our sins; the other is to cultivate the opposite virtues. The latter plan is best because it is surest—the virtue replaces the sin.

Christianity is not a drill; it is life, full, free, radiant, and rejoicing. What a young man should do is not to vex himself about his imperfections, but to fix his mind on the bright image of Perfection; not to weary his soul with rules, but to live with Christ as one liveth with a friend. There is one way to complete manhood, and that is, fellowship with Jesus Christ.—Ian Maclaren, in Ladies' Home Journal.

REVIVAL.

Is personal soul-winning becoming a lost art? Are we mistaken in thinking that there is less of it than formerly? Do the forces and customs of the present day favor the habit of manifesting an earnest interest in the spiritual welfare of others, particularly the unsaved? That they do not, will doubtless be granted. But does that fact afford sufficient reason for its so general neglect? This will not be claimed; wherever duty is clear it should be diligently done. Can there be a question as to the duty of very frequently magnifying the worth of our salvation, and recommending it to the serious attention of those we meet?

Our words in praise of Christ are too few. A thousand trivial events are commemorated in speech, while we are silent about eternal things. We have derived inestimable help from the church of Jesus, but we seldom urge upon others the obligation or privilege of its fellowship. This ought not so to be. A religion not worth mentioning is a very poor kind. Selfishness and indifference to the everlasting good of others is an easily besetting sin of nearly all. There are few whose conscience does not convict them of remissness in pleading with friends and neighbors concerning God's claims. A revival at this point would seem to be in order. It would result in such a reformation as would double our congregations.—Zion's Herald.

There is nothing in all the divine revelation equal to the life of Christ in influence upon us. It is of absorbing interest for man; it brings home to us the love and mercy of God for a fallen race; it fully and clearly presents to our understanding God's plans and purposes for us. So there is in the life of the humblest Christian something of infinitely greater value as a demonstration of the truth of Christianity than the oldest or the newest creed, or even the sublime gospel of St. John.—Independent.

BRO. TINNIN'S INACCURACIES.

I am very sorry that Bro. Tinnin's note to the ADVOCATE, which appeared in the issue of Aug. 10, compels me to call attention to his inaccuracies. His article makes it appear that his only offense was the employment of evangelists, when he was explicitly made to understand that his intermeddling with the Summit circuit, his mismanagement, altogether inexcusable, of the Whitestown church-building, and the neglect of his work especially at Fernwood, were included in the complaint that I was compelled to make. He certainly knows that I did not mean that he must move until his wife, temporarily ill, should recover. He insists that Pleasant Grove circuit would not support him, and, therefore, he was "compelled to resign." Rev. M. A. Thurman, with an invalid wife and two small children, was sent to the circuit at the last Conference, and went; and Bro Tinnin surely knows that if there was any good reason for his not going to Pleasant Grove circuit, he could have gone to the Conference with that as an excuse, and no blame would have been charged against him there. Was that, as he states it, his real reason for leaving our church? I have proof from himself that he has been contemplating such a step for a time, beginning months before I became his presiding elder.

Bro. Tinnin says that the last year he served Adams circuit, it paid $1,690; but the Annual Conference Minutes show that only $858 were paid on the collections. What went with the other $832? He says that Providence, on his last year there, paid $1,900. The Minutes show that only $596 30 were paid on the collections, and that for foreign missions only $20 was paid on assessment of $81, and similar deficits in other claims. What was done with the $1,330.70? He says that Whitestown mission paid last year $2,400. He reports nothing to the Annual Conference, and to the Quarterly Conference he reports only $473 95. What has become of the $1,926 05?

I only wish to correct Bro. Tinnin's inaccuracies. There are other statements concerning this affair that I am ready to make, if it should become necessary. I do not make them now, because I trust that, for his sake, I will not be forced to do so.

REPORT ON PUBLISHING INTERESTS.

MERIDIAN DISTRICT CONFERENCE, SHUBUTA, JULY 25 30

Your committee fully realizes the importance of a church paper in the homes of our people, believing that its weekly visitations is a benefaction and an important factor in the home training of the family; and we deplore the fact that so few of our people are receiving this weekly blessing to their spiritual lives, and yet we are forced to the confession that the fault is not wholly theirs, nor is ours as pastors.

Our people demand—and we, as pastors, endorse this demand—that our church papers come into our homes breathing the Spirit of the Master, and not that of the belligerency and heat of personal conflict. We deprecate the supplanting of our church papers by others that are not in sympathy with our polity, but whose pages of ridiculous cartoons and reading matter reflect upon the purity of the church, and especially upon the doctrine which claims to be advocated.

How to correct these mistakes is a matter that calls for great discretion and prayerful consideration. There should be no divisions in our Zion. Our ranks should always present a solid front to the common enemy of souls.

Be it therefore resolved, That, we, as pastors and laymen of the Meridian district, will try to persuade our people that the obligation in church membership binds them to support our church papers, these being among the institutions of the church.

T. P. BELL,
Chairman.

SOME BOOKS I HAVE READ RECENTLY.

I have been reading Fletcher's Checks recently. And no better writer in his chosen field has been produced in the last one hundred years. It would be well for each Methodist pastor to spend some time with one of the devontest authors of any age. Though controversial, his spirit is admirable; eloquent, he is yet strong and logical; Arminian, he is not extreme in his defense of free will; Evangelical, he defends the law, because it is the law of love—love fulfilling the law; defending Christian perfection, he is not a sinless perfectionist, but he certainly holds and defends a higher course of living than many, who antagonize, and many, who advocate this much misunderstood experience, have claimed the blessing, and defended the doctrine of perfect love. Let each of us study the truth, for "the truth shall make us free." Read John Fletcher's works. They are a good tonic for religious dyspepsia.

I have also read the "Life of Wm. Carey." The cobbler, who was sent out by the Baptists of England to found their mission in India, more than one hundred years ago, elicited my love from the first page of his biography to the last. The title of his sermon—"Expect great things from God; do great things for God"—thrilled my soul. His marvelous energy; wonderful linguistic ability; heroic faith; spiritual power; and glorious legacy to the church among the Hindoos—the Word in their own language—kindled higher aspirations in my poor soul.

A good book to follow this was the "Life of Livingstone." The story of his six years without a white face to smile upon him, is crushing to one whose self denial has not taken on a form deep enough for that. God help us to learn anew the lessons of self denial at the feet of these of whom the world was not worthy! No grander picture have men ever seen than the dead missionary upon his knees as his faithful servants found him.

"From Darkness to Dawn," by Canon Farrar, is a beautiful and sympathetic tale of the persecutions under Nero. I shall never forget his picture of the Emperor's mother and the quiet surrender of the martyrs on that terrible day when so many were burned in pitch! They went up "thro' great tribulations."

Thomas Nelson Page's "Red Rock" is a pleasing and just piece of fiction. His picture of the carpet bagger in the person of Leech is true to the life. His discrimination between man and man as to character is apt and clear, showing his broad charity. Maj. Welch certainly represented the true chivalry of the North, and Dr. Cary the Christian gentleman of the South. The most despisable character is the overseer, who defrauded his landlord's family out of their holdings. He deserves all the contempt which is poured upon him in these sparkling pages. The incident of the Ku Klux raid is touched up in a martial way; the courts of reconstruction times get due justice—a quality generally absent in those days that tried men's souls.

Andrew Murray's: "The Ministry of Intercession" is the best work on prayer this scribe has ever read. Chapter by chapter this work is full of golden nuggets of truth. At the head of each chapter appropriate passages of Scripture set the pace for the deeply spiritual thoughts which follow. Learn how to pray and what to pray for from this apostle of prayer!

As an accompaniment: "George Muller, The Apostle of Faith," will stimulate our trust in the living Father, who hears and answers prayer. I read this book with self examination and, I trust, with profit.

Browning's Poems have not been forgotten; Kipling's "Captains Courageous;" W. M. Taylor's; "Parables of Our Savior," Liddon's "Sermons of the Old Testament," Bank's "Paul and His Friends;" Dr. Stalker's "Life of Christ," and "Life of St. Paul;" Fisher's "History of the Christian Church," and Abbott's "Life of Napoleon," Dumas' "The Three Guardsmen," and a book on "Intellectual Philosophy" have come in for a share of my Summer reading.

Besides these works and the church papers and the magazines, I have made a close study of the gospel of Matthew, and have read much in God's Word.

Before I close it would give me pleasure for a clear, satisfactory answer to this question, "What are the standards of doctrine for our church?" in the next issue of the ADVOCATE.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. C. C. Griffin, P. C., Hiram, Miss., Aug. 4, 1899: "Our quarterly meeting convened July 29 and 30. Dr. Hunnicutt, in the chair, presided with usual ease. We continued for three days at this place (Macedon) our protracted meeting, with very gratifying results. The Lord was with us in great power. Dr. Hunnicutt left us Sunday evening, and the preacher in charge had to do all of the preaching. Results: 23 accessions, and more to follow. The membership was greatly worked and brought closer together. To God be all the glory. Pray for us."

Rev. Wm. G. Evans, P. C., Red River circuit: "The work here has progressed very favorably so far this year, although the protracted meetings planned did not turn out as we had hoped they would. The meetings at Knox Point and Ash Point had to be postponed. Rev. Jno. Foster came in on time, in company with the presiding elder, Dr. J. T. Sawyer, on June 20. The presiding elder had right of way, and began the meeting with two powerful, soul-searching sermons; held his Quarterly Conference, and then left. Bro. Foster stayed with us for eight days, preaching twice a day to the delight of all who heard him. While the results of this meeting were not large in the number of people added to the church, I can but feel that our people were made better by listening to the great truths of God's Word told simply and faithfully. We have made quite extensive repairs on the parsonage, having closed in an open hall with very fine artistic effect, papered three rooms, put new foundations under the house, repaired two fireplaces, putting new firebrick backs in and concrete hearths. We have also furnished complete one room with modern furniture, china, etc., and bought new crockery for the dining-room, and driven a 75-foot well, and yet we have not finished. We have paint to repaint the inside wood-work and all new outside work; will paper the hall and one other room, and last, but by no means least, we have promised some beautiful and soul-lifting pictures, handsomely framed, for the walls. We have lately had the family of Rev. H. H. Ahrens, of New Orleans, to visit us, and after the close of the International Epworth League Meeting, at Indianapolis, he came up and spent a week with us. He is not only enthusiastic as a Leaguer, but grows eloquent when talking about the convention, and San Francisco as a place for the next meeting. He preached two excellent sermons, and treated us to some delightful music while here. May God richly bless him and his family! This work is in good shape, and may be relied upon to report, 'Everything in full, Bishop,' at the next Conference."

Now and again you see two women passing down the street who look like sisters. You are astonished to learn that they are mother and daughter, and you realize that a woman at forty or forty-five ought to be at her finest and fairest. Why isn't it so?

The general health of woman is so intimately associated with the local health of the essentially feminine organs that there can be no rich cheek and round form where there are debilitating drains, and female weakness. Women who have suffered from these troubles have found prompt relief and cure in the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It gives vigor and vitality to the organs of womanhood. It clears the complexion, brightens the eyes and reddens the cheeks.

No alcohol, opium or other narcotic is contained in "Favorite Prescription."

Any sick woman may consult Doctor Pierce by letter, free. Every letter is held as sacredly confidential, and answered in a plain envelope. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

"I commenced to take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription," writes Mrs. Martha E. Barham, of Newville, Prince George Co., Va., "in June, 1897, also his 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and I cannot express the benefit I have received from these medicines. I was suffering with what the doctors called chronic indigestion, torpid liver and vertigo. I also suffered with female weakness. The doctor did not do me any good, so I wrote to you for advice. When I commenced to use the medicines I weighed only 112 pounds, now I weigh 140 pounds."

Dr. Pierce's Pellets regulate the liver.

CORRUPTION IN HIGH PLACES.

It is chargod that a multi-millionaire, W. A. Clarke, United States Senator-elect from Montana, procnred his election by bribery, and the charge seems to be sustained by unimpeachable testimony. Fifty votes in the Legislature are said to have been bought at ten thousand dollars each. The evidence is so strong that legal proceedings have been instituted in the Supreme Court of the State for the disbarment of an attorney, J. B. Welcome, who acted as the disbnrser of this enormous corruption fund. Moroover, the facts in the case will be laid before the Senate at its next session by a committee of the Montana Legislature. What will be the outcome? Will he be exoinded, or will unscrupulous partisanism trinmph over virtne and patriotism? These are questions which arise in the breast of every good oitizen. If this were a solitary instance, it would be had enough. But, as our readers know, similar charges have been made against several other United States Senators within the past year or two, and that, too, with a show of truth. We have fallen upon evil times, if money has become the open sesame to high official position. We are no pessimist. On the contrary, we are optimistic by nature, and this temperamental inheritance is strengthened by our faith in Christ. Yet, we can not close our eyes to the fact that our own heaven-favored land shows a tendency to walk in the pathway that led to the destruction of many of the great nations of antiquity. Mammon-worship is the rock on which many a proud ship of State has been wrecked. O for a revival of that old-fashioned Christianity that makes men scrupulously honest in everything—true to every trust.

INTELLECTUAL CULTURE BOTH A DUTY AND A PLEASURE.

After all that is said about "the press of business," most men have leisure enough for necessary recreation and a considerable slice of every day left for intellectual improvement, if they will to have it so. Moreover, it must not be forgotten that recreation and instruction go hand in hand; in other words, that reading is itself a recreation. No man makes a more egregious mistake than does he who supposes that reading is a drudgery, and all literary pursuits a pleasureless task. This is the case only with him who is a novice at the business. The man who has formed a reading habit finds in that habit his greatest pleasure. Through the medium of books he holds communion with the great and the good of all ages, and hears them speak in their best moods and their loftiest strains. They commend to him their noblest thoughts and their highest aspirations. In such companionship he finds a pleasure infinitely superior to those of the voluptuary. As high as heaven is above earth, so high are the pleasures of intellect above those of sense.

And is it not our duty to cultivate these higher powers of our nature? Do we not degrade ourselves when we spend the few precious hours that God allots us here in pleasures akin to those which the brutes enjoy, while we allow our higher powers—those which ally us to angels and to God—to lie dormant and uncultivated?

NEW BOOKS.

HEAVEN; OR, THAT BETTER COUNTRY By Jonathan Weaver, D D., Bishop of the Church of the United Brethren in Christ. 12 mo 240 pages Cloth. Price, $1. 1899. Dayton, Ohio: United Brethren Publishing House.

This book was evidently written by a devout student of the Bible, and withal a man of ripe Christian experience. Using as a basis the statements, symbols and figures given in the Word of God respecting the abode and state of the blest, the author enlarges upon them, and makes the glories and the surpassing delights of "the better country" so real as to enkindle in the soul of the child of God a deeper longing for "eternal glory." The author appeals also to the book of human experience, and shows how, in all ages and in every country, man has entertained an ardent expectation of a home beyond the grave, where sorrows never come, and where joy is eternal.

Having asked in the opening chapter the question, "Is there a better country?" he demonstrates that there is nothing in the doctrine of a future life that contradicts either reason or nature. It is Revelation alone, however, that speaks with certainty concerning immortality and eternal rewards. Corroborative of its glorious affirmations, as the author points out, are the dying testimonies of countless thousands who, as they have passed over the dark river, have exclaimed, "I see the pearly portals of heaven opened, and the angels coming to bear me home to God."

Following are some of the inspiring themes discussed: "Heaven—Progress and Employment;" "Society and Recognition in Heaven," "Rest of Heaven," "Sources of Happiness," "Heaven as a Home." One chapter is devoted to a consideration of the various theories of heaven that have prevailed among men. The author believes that immediately after death the soul of the believer enters heaven. "To be with Christ," he says, "is to be in heaven; and to be in heaven is to be with Christ." He is thoroughly orthodox in his views regarding the future and eternal punishment of the wicked. This is a book eminently calculated to cheer the heart, strengthen faith, and inspire a brighter hope. It is full of instruction and tender comfort, and will bring light and peace to many a troubled soul. As is remarked in the preface, "This volume is for the common people as well as for ministers and others of extensive research, and will prove a joy to many a pilgrim." The style is clear and forceful.

HAMPTON AND HIS CAVALRY. By Edward L. Wells, of South Carolina.

We have received from the publishers, the B. F. Johnson Publishing Company, of Richmond, Va., this magnificent biographical volume containing 444 pages, beautifully illustrated.

Among the heroes of the war between the North and South, there is none more loved than General Wade Hampton, and none more worthy of the homage of the Southern people. The gifted author having conceived the desire to place before the country a true history of General Hampton, sought the use of his valuable records, which was cheerfully given. Since this biography was written, nearly all these records and the valuable library have been destroyed by fire, which makes this history doubly valuable from a historical standpoint. The author wrote this book with the unalterable purpose of giving the profits to General Hampton, and now that the devastations of fire have left him homeless, the profits will go into the fund being raised to rebuild his home. No Arabian fairy-story is more intensely interesting. As one reads, he can almost hear the "old rebel yell" and see in memory the stars and bars borne on to victory as in '64. The blood courses more rapidly through the veins as the vivid descriptions of the mad gallop, the charge and the shock of battle are described by this gifted son of South Carolina.

The book is sold only by subscription, and we trust every lover of true and loyal manhood will help in this way to rebuild the home of him who has given his all for the South, that as he walks down the sunset side of life he may realize his sacrifices were not unappreciated.

LITERARY NOTES.

BY W. F. B.

The August number of the Critic contains a drama entitled "Repentance," by Mrs. Cragie; an "appreciation" of the late Augustin Daly, by A. I. DuP. Coleman, and an editorial sketch of "Seumas Mac Manus" by Regina Armstrong. Marion Harland contributes a paper on "Charlotte Bronte and Two of Her Friends."

In The American Illustrated Methodist Magazine "The Problem of South Africa" is a timely and a thoughtful article on an important subject The paper is well written, and the writer shows an intimate acquaintance with his theme. The illustrations are from photographs of scenes in Capetown and Johannesburg, besides excellent portraits of Cecil Rhodes and General Kitchener. "The Illustrated History of Methodism" has for the subject of its sixth chapter, "Field-Preaching in the British Isles."

McClure's Magazine, for August, has an illustrated article on "The Cape to Cairo Railway," by W. T. Stead, whose acquaintance with Cecil Rhodes and other promoters of the enterprise has yielded him much new and valuable information regarding it. Miss Tarbell contributes a new account of Lincoln's assassination and death, embracing interesting unpublished reminiscences from men who were with Lincoln at different moments during the last twelve hours of his life. These are short stories comprising a humorous story of Irish life, a thrilling true story of the United States Secret Service, a pathetic and tender love story.

FROM DR. MURRAH.

I am at home again after an absence of six weeks. In response to kind inquiries of friends, I am glad to say that my wife's health has greatly improved.

I find our college affairs in fine shape. The prospects now indicate a large attendance of students next session.

Before going off I found it necessary to cancel many engagements I had made in the interest of the Twentieth Century Thank-Offering Movement. From this time it will give me great pleasure to aid our pastors in any way I can.

While in the Northwest I was interested to note with what zeal our Northern brethren were pressing this movement. They are using the secular press with telling effect. It is not unusual to see several columns in the great metropolitan dailies devoted to this cause. Active, wide awake pastors are in this way helping news-hunting reporters, and reporters are helping pastors. You hear the subject discussed on the trains and in the hotels as well as in the churches. It will not do for us to be less enthusiastic in the South. Our needs are greater.

W. B. MURRAH.

EAST MISSISSIPPI FEMALE COLLEGE.

President Beeson has just returned from an extended concert tour of six weeks with Prof. Conrad, having visited many of the important towns in Mississippi and Louisiana. He also gave concerts at most of the Summer Normals, and at the Chautauquas of both States, thus reaching the teachers and many of the leading people of both States. Wherever he has gone he has been enthusiastically received, if we may judge by the glowing press notices that were voluntarily given, and the many high personal tributes paid. Prof. Beeson tells us that the E. M. F. College is very much in favor wherever he goes, and is growing rapidly in influence and popularity. He has just completed arrangements for more room to accommodate the large increase in attendance. The college has the brightest prospects for next session it has ever had in its history. This is not a surprise when we consider the continual improvements being made in faculty, in buildings, in furniture, and in equipments and course of study. This institution means much, not only to Meridian, but to this section of the South, and we are glad our people are supporting it so liberally and working for it so enthusiastically. Let us encourage President Beeson more than ever in his noble work.—Meridian News.

FROM BRO. SHEPPARD.

It was my privilege to attend the Delhi District Conference, held at Rayville, and talk of the Twentieth Century Thank-offering, and also lay before that body the claims of our own Centenary and Mansfield Colleges. The brethren treated me royally, and the Conference, by resolution, promised to present the Twentieth Century Claim at once to their various charges and collect as much as possible for immediate application.

I spent the week following the District Conference within the bounds of Bro. Whatley and Barr's circuit, preaching to small congregations and taking collections, which amounted in every instance in cash and good subscription to more than one dollar for every Methodist present.

I find our people in hearty sympathy with this great educational movement of Methodism when and wherever it is presented to them in a sensible and straightforward way. Much depends on the presiding elders and pastors of the various charges in the way of educating the people, so that we may have intelligent and appreciative enthusiasm in our work.

Monday, the seventh, I turned my steps homeward with a scorching fever which held on for twenty four hours after I reached Mansfield. I am now improving and hope to be able to begin work soon.

Wife has been at the bedside of Mrs. Woodard, our daughter, who has been dangerously ill for ten days past. She is thought to be better this morning.

J. L. P. SHEPPARD.

Mansfield, La., Aug. 14, 1899.

THE CASE OF DR. SCHELL.

The Rev. E. A. Schell, Secretary of the Epworth League of the M. E. Church, is the subject of a good deal of criticism among the newspapers north of Mason and Dixon's line. The following statement of the facts in the case we clip from last week's issue of Zion's Herald:

"In the Fall of 1896, or early in the Spring of 1897, Secretary E. A. Schell entered into a private contract with E. O. Excell, of Chicago, by which Schell was to receive one fourth the royalty from Excell in return for his influence in delivering to him the editorship of a certain singing-book to be published by the Western Book Concern, and also the same royalty for such other books as he might thus deliver. As the result of this secret compact Secretary Schell received the first year from Excell $1,069 30, and at the same time he was receiving a salary of $4 500 annually from the Book Concern for his work as secretary and official editor of League publications. When Schell was charged with having a private contract as above, he at first denied, but finally acknowledged the fact. He further admitted that such an agreement was wrong; that if he were exposed, he would be ruined, and asked for permission to resign his office. The local committee gave their consent to this request. But Secretary Schell did not carry out his own propositions as to resigning, and now seeks vindication for his actions in a re-election."

AN EXPERIMENT.

The opening of three free employment offices in Chicago, in accordance with the provisions of a law enacted by the last Legislature, signalizes an experiment in State paternalism, the results of which will be watched with much curiosity all over the country. Under the law the State undertakes to find places for the unemployed through the agency of public offices, where those seeking employment may register their applications, together with specifications regarding the character of work they are qualified to perform, and where employers of labor may also file information regarding vacancies and the kind of help they want. The entire expense of maintaining these agencies is borne by the State.—Exchange.

MOODY'S WAY.

Those responsible for the conduct of religious meetings at places of Summer resort where the general public assemble may learn wisdom from the breadth and generous consideration shown by Mr. Moody in the management of the Christian conventions which he superintends at Northfield. To an immense audience at the convention of Christian Workers last week, in giving notice of a tennis tournament which had been arranged, he said he was desirous that people should come to Northfield for their Summer outing and recreation, and that he wished all to be at liberty to attend meetings or not, as suited the individual tastes. He expressed himself as pleased to see the young people enjoy themselves.—Zion's Herald.

SAVE THE FISH, NEVER MIND THE HUMANS.

Although distillers are allowed to poison human beings, still they are not allowed to poison fish in the rivers; hence an action of the riparian owners on the river Spey against the proprietor of a distillery near Elgin has again been decided in favor of the plaintiffs. The object of the action was to have the distiller interdicted from turning the refuse of his distillery into the river, thereby polluting the water and destroying the fish. The Court of Session (first division) has now confirmed the decision of the Lord Ordinary. There is consternation among the distillers of the North of Scotland, for other actions are sure to follow.—Scotch paper.

BRO. JONATHAN GIVES A GOOD ACCOUNT OF HIMSELF.

A prominent feature of the present day is the inroad which is being made by the United States into the industrial and commercial power of Great Britain. In Europe, Asia and Africa, American goods are taking the place of the English makes, and American manufacturers are supplanting their English competitors in obtaining contracts. Most astounding of all is the extent to which American goods are finding a market in England itself. English pride is sorely assailed, and great anxiety is being felt among our cousins across the water.—Pittsburg Advocate.

A DESCENT FROM THE SUBLIME.

A minister, not a hundred miles away, was recently preaching an earnest discourse on the significance of little things. Soaring high on the wings of eloquence, he brought down the house with the following climax: "The hand which made the mighty heavens made a grain of sand, which made the snow-capped mountains made a drop of water, which made you made the grass of the field, which made me made a daisy."—Midland Methodist.

LITERARY LIFE.

Under the above title, W. C. Everett, business manager of the Dallas Branch of our Publishing House, has started a sixteen-page monthly, which is to be devoted exclusively to literary topics. It will contain skillfully prepared notices of the leading publications of our House. The price is only fifty cents a year. We wish our brother abundant success in his new enterprise.

OUR LEAGUE SECRETARY.

Dr. DuBose is making a splendid record as our leader. His dignified bearing, eloquent tongue and gifted pen make him an all-round officer, especially fitted for his dual position of Secretary-editor.—Central Methodist.

NOTES.

Rev. R. H. Wynn is attending the Bluff Creek Camp Meeting.

We regret to learn that Dr. Josephus Anderson, editor of the Florida Advocate, is seriously ill.

Our venerable brother, M. C. Manley, is quite a sufferer from rheumatism, as he has been for some time past.

***

The postoffice address of Rev. J. A. Parker is Alexandria, La. Let those who wish to contribute to the special fund he is raising take note.

By the time this week's issue reaches our readers, the Interstate League Conference will be in progress. We are sure those who attend will be pleased and edified.

Bro. Morse's meeting at Adams' Camp Ground resulted in ten accessions and some fifteen or twenty conversions. The preaching was done by Rev. V. D. Skipper, who dispensed the Word twice a day for eight days.

Bishop Galloway's clock struck twelve at the New York Chautauqua as well as at Indianapolis. One of our Northern exchanges speaks of his Chautauqua sermon as the best that has been delivered there for years.

Rev. W. L. Anderson writes: "Another meeting closed on Chester charge since my last; my fourth meeting to date. Rev. D. W. Babb did us efficient service. Fifteen added to our church. This makes fifty-seven to date; more to follow. A $500 church going up at Mt. Nebo. This will complete as good a set of country churches as can be found in the country anywhere."

Rev. W. M. Williams writes: "We have just closed a good meeting at Old Crystal Spring. Bro. G. A. Gnice was with us. He is fine help. We had the best meeting we have had at that church in several years. Many were blessed. Seven new family altars were erected. Many got closer to God than ever before. Four additions on profession of faith, with, I think, others soon to follow."

Dr. I. W. Cooper writes: "I had the pleasure to dedicate the beautiful church at Boyce, La., last Sabbath. The church is a credit to the pastor and people. The following gentlemen, W. J. Crocker, B. C. Dean, J. E. Grissom, J. W. Miller, G. T. Neal, M. F. Weaks, J. T. Sandige, composed the Building Committee. All honor to Rev. A. W. Turner, the pastor, and the Building Committee."

The friends of East Mississippi Female College will be pleased to learn that its patronage promises to be larger at the next session than ever before. President Beeson has recently purchased four lots adjoining the college, one of which has a building on it, which will give room for additional boarding patronage. The erection of new buildings of spacious dimensions is contemplated at an early day.

***

The following note from Rev. H. P. Lewis will be read with painful interest throughout the Mississippi Conference. Let fervent prayer be made that this faithful itinerant may be speedily restored to health. "My brother, Rev. W. B. Lewis, pastor of the M. E. Church, South, in Yazoo City, is quite sick; has been for ten days. I have been with him most of the time since Thursday last. We are much concerned about his condition. Pray for us."

From a private letter from Rev. T. J. Norsworthy, dated Camden, Miss., Aug. 12, we quote as follows: "Father and his family are with us on a visit. Here we are where twenty-one years ago we visited you and your dear family. Little did I think then that I would occupy this parsonage home as pastor of this people. Can't you come to see us? Your friends and admirers in this county are legion." [We treasure the memory of those dear people. Kind indeed they were to us and ours. May Heaven's richest blessings, temporal and spiritual, rest upon them!]

Writing from Durant, under date of Aug. 13, Rev. G. W. Bachman says: "Rev. W. M. McIntosh is holding a tent meeting here. He preached to large and interested congregations yesterday morning and night. Interest in the meeting is good, and great results are hoped for. Rev. J. S. Oakley has not been able to meet his appointments since his District Conference. At the solicitation of his brethren he will spend a few weeks quietly at home in hope of sufficiently recuperating for effective service on the fourth round. To this end let prayer be made throughout the Conference."

It becomes necessary for us to repeat what we have frequently said before, viz., that our columns are not open to a discussion of the second-blessing question. Twice we have thrown open our columns to this discussion. Each time the controversy ran on and on until our readers called for a rest. Each time we closed with a number of manuscripts unpublished, much to the disappointment of their authors. It is our deliberate judgment that no good came of the controversy. Hence, much as we would like to accommodate our friends, we must decline to publish articles on either side of the question.

EPWORTH LEAGUE DEPARTMENT.

"ALL FOR CHRIST."

REV. THOMAS B. CLIFFORD, Jackson, La., EDITOR.

MISSISSIPPI.

REV. HENRY G. HAWKINS, Madison, Miss., ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

The Loagnes of East End and West End, Meridian, seem to be doiog better this year than in the years just preceding. The two other pastoral charges in Meridian, Central and South Side, have long established reputations. The Central Leagne has done specially good work in its Charity and Help Department.

Some of the pastors are giving the young people the work of raising the Twentieth Century Fund. The present writer, who is a pastor, has some willing and competent helpers among his Leaguers. A week ago he asked one of these to collect some subscriptions that had been made to this educational fund; as a result $41 ont of $42 is now in cash.

Young man, give your best days, which are those of bnoyant youth, to the service of your Master: do not spend the best portion of your life in the service of Satan, leaving only the burnt-out wick of it for the Lord, telling him to take that.

Young lady, consecrate your womanhood, with its beauty and grace. The Lord can make of your life a more glorious thing than you can make of it by yourself.

The League at Madisonville, in the country, eight miles from Canton, has been in operation only four months. During that time the Leaguers there have put in the church a nice, much-needed chair for the use of the Sunday-school superintendent and League president, a large blackboard cloth, mounted on rollers, a large Atlas of Bible Lands, and an increased supply of hymn books. In addition, they have their charter handsomely framed, and they paid one-third of their pastor's expenses to the State League Conference, two other Leagues on the charge paying the other two-thirds.

W. D. Hawkins, of South Side, Meridian, one of the most faithful and untiring Epworth Leaguers in Mississippi, served as secretary of the Meridian District Conference, which convened at Shubuta in the latter part of July, Dr. C. G. Andrews, P. E., presiding. The fourth Annual Meridian District League Conference will be held in the early Fall.

TO THE EPWORTH LEAGUERS OF MISSISSIPPI.

At the last State Conference of Epworth Leagues, held in June at West Point, I, though absent, was made president of the State Conference for the current year. I appreciate more deeply than I can express this mark of confidence. With God's help I shall strive very earnestly to make this the most successful year of our history as a State Conference. Shall I not have the hearty co-operation of every Leaguer in the State?

We have a Constitution which provides that a secretary in each presiding elder's district shall be appointed by the president upon recommendation of the Leaguers of the district. Some weeks ago I published in the ADVOCATE a call for recommendations. But few have come in. The exigencies of the work require that these secretaries be appointed without further delay. In making these appointments I have had in view the necessity of securing persons who could and would go into destitute parts of the district and organize new Leagues. I mean by destitute parts those charges or churches where there are no Leagues. The one chief business of the district secretary—at least for the current year—is to organize new Leagues. If any of these here named can not do this work at all, I hope he will notify the president at once; and please recommend some one who can.

ORGANIZATION.

This is the watchword for the year. At the last sessions of the two Annual Conferences only 129 Leagnes were reported. There are in the State 263 pastoral charges and about 1,000 churches. More than one-half of these charges are without Leagues, and but little more than one-tenth of the churches have them. There ought to be 800 Leagues organized in Mississippi during the current year, which ends with the next State Conference.

HOW IT MAY BE DONE.

The Discipline says, "Let Epworth Leagues be organized in our congregations." This is one of the regulations of our church. In Par. 122 the Discipline declares that it is the duty of every preacher in charge "To see that all the ordinances and regulations of the church be duly observed;" and Par. 113 declares it the duty of the presiding elder "To take care that every part of the Discipline be enforced in his district." Now, if every presiding elder and pastor in the State will do his duty fully, at least 800 Epworth Leagnes will come into existence in Mississippi during the current year. Let the district secretaries kindly, but persistently, press the matter upon the presiding elders and pastors, and let them co-operate with these men of God who have been placed in authority. Let each secretary enter at once into correspondence with his presiding elder on the subject, and persist until there is a League in every church in the district. Let him correspond also with every pastor whose charge is without a League, and continue to urge and co-operate until every church has its League. Where Senior Leagues can not be organized, a Junior will flourish. Where ten children can be found a good Junior League may be maintained.

STUDY METHODS!

Many Leagnes have been organized, but have soon passed away, because nobody knew how to run a League. Let every district secretary secure a lot of Dr. DuBose's handbooks, and put one into the hands of every pastor and new League president, and urge them to study methods of League work. In addition, it would be well to get and study "How to Make the Wheel Go," by Byron E. Helman, and "Junior League Methods and Programs," by Mrs. Annie E. Smiley. The first—i. e., the handbook—will cost you nothing; the last will cost 25 cents; the other about the same.

DISTRICT LEAGUE CONFERENCES

Should be held in every district. Let the secretary provide for one at the most convenient time and place. Let a carefully-arranged and interesting program be published in advance. Let every pastor be gotten to attend, if possible. The State president will gladly attend and assist in any District Conference, provided his traveling expenses are paid, and the Conference be held mid-week. Being a presiding elder, he can not spare a Sunday from his district work.

PLEASE!

Brother or sister secretary, write to the president, and let him know that you accept your appointment, and tell him of your plans and purposes and prospects.

H. WALTER FEATHERSTUN,
State President.

PREACHER WANTED.

I want a preacher to take charge of the Downsville circuit the first of September. A live, moving single young man preferred. He must have endorsement. Salary will be one fourth of what the circuit pays for the year. It paid about $460 for preacher in charge last year, and I think will do as well this year. Write me at once with reference.

THE NEW CURE FOR KIDNEY, BLADDER AND URIC ACID TROUBLES.

Almost everybody who reads the newspapers is sure to know of the wonderful cures made by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy.

It is the great medical triumph of the nineteenth century; discovered after years of scientific research by Dr. Kilmer, the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is wonderfully successful in promptly curing kidney, liver, bladder and uric acid troubles.

Swamp-Root has been tested in so many ways, in hospital work, in private practice, among the helpless too poor to purchase relief, and has proved so successful in every case that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. When writing mention reading this generous offer in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. The regular fifty-cent and one dollar sizes are sold by all first-class druggists.

SPANISH-AMERICAN WAR PANORAMA

is one of the war books which is likely to be in continuous demand. It is a panoramic record of the triumph of Yankee Doodle. The eagle flaps his wings on every page, and "Old Glory" waves around and above every scene. Prominent officers connected with the war are here portrayed, as well as many of the "men behind the guns." Military life is pictured to the eye, from recruiting to guard mount and skirmish line. Nor is the ludicrous omitted. The company cook receives the attention due to his importance; the mess is shown; cavalry scenes are given; the hospital arrangements are depicted; the heroines of the Red Cross service are displayed; street scenes in Havana, Santiago and elsewhere are unrolled, the new citizens or subjects (which are they?) of Uncle Sam appear and disappear as the leaves are turned.

In a word, the gazer visits the new localities and sees the tumultuous new life, without the risk or expense of a sea voyage.

The Album is 5½x8 inches, weighs 12 ounces, printed on finest coated paper.

GUARDING THE TONGUE.

If each of us, as we pass through life,
Would bridle and curb the tongue,
And speak of only the pleasant things
To be said of everyone,
What a wonderful difference there would be Between this world of ours
And the paradise it might become
With all pathways strewn with flowers!

How surely a little reflection
Will show us as plain as the day,
The mistakes we made when we hastily
Allowed our tongue full sway.
When the day is done and we think it o'er—
Ah me! that it should be true—
There are few of us who can honestly say
There is nothing we would undo.

Too often the faults we clearly see
In others are faults of our own—
And those who dwell in houses of glass
Should be wary in casting a stone.
So, have charity, much charity,
The loveliest virtue of all,
And look well to the men ber unruly,
For it's prone to slip and fall.

—Exchange.

BE WHAT YOU WISH TO SEEM.

That is rather a strange title, you think, but still it bears looking into. Sometimes we exhibit ugly little traits of character at home, and are very careful outside to have our manners polished and correct. We answer our parents disrespectfully, and manifest an unkind spirit toward our brothers and sisters. A stranger hearing us might even imagine there was lack of love in the heart, when it is not really so. The habit has probably grown upon us unawares, we are off our guard, and in one's own family love generally excuses such omissions.

But are they excusable? Not at all. On the contrary, it is a deplorable habit, and one carefully to be guarded against. "Get out of my way," a young girl said recently. "Oh, excuse me," she added a moment later, upon seeing her mistake, "I thought it was sister Sue." And this was uttered without the slightest tinge of blush upon the cheek. Be what you wish to seem to the world. I am sure no one wishes to go through life accounted surly and disagreeable. Yet the world is apt to take you at your true worth, and if there is lack of manners at home, where the most tender courtesy should be manifested, it will be known, and you will be judged accordingly. But why should we wish to slight or neglect those whom we love best? Take the precious mother, for instance; she should be treated with the most tender solicitude, and our choicest words should greet her ear. When I hear a boy speak discourteously to his mother, I feel like hiding my head with shame. Ah, the precious mother, whose love so closely resembles God's that it has been likened unto it. Most of us know and appreciate her worth.

There have been those who have successfully worn a mask for a long time, but by and by it loosens and exposes to view the true face. This work-a-day world in which we live has sharp eyes, and it can pierce right through any ordinary mask. And why should we wish to wear one at any time, since to be is always so much better than to seem?

Be what you wish to seem. Keep the best that is in you for the home where the loved ones dwell, but remember there is a duty we owe the world at large, and adhere to the rule that everyone we meet comes in for a measure of our courtesy.—Intelligencer.

LINCOLN AND THE DYING SOLDIER BOY.

One day in May, 1863, while the great war was raging between the North and the South, President Lincoln paid a visit to one of the military hospitals, says an exchange. He had spoken many cheering words of sympathy to the wounded as he proceeded through the various wards, and now he was at the bedside of a Vermont boy of about sixteen years of age, who lay there mortally wounded.

Taking the dying boy's thin, white hands in his own, the President said, in a tender tone:

"Well, my poor boy, what can I do for you?"

The young fellow looked up into the President's kindly face, and asked:

"Won't you write to my mother for me?"

"That I will," answered Mr. Lincoln; and calling for a pen, ink and paper, he seated himself by the side of the bed, and wrote from the boy's dictation. It was a long letter, but the President betrayed no sign of weariness. When it was finished, he rose, saying:

"I will post this as soon as I get back to my office. Now, is there anything else I can do for you?"

The boy looked up appealingly to the President.

"Won't you stay with me?" he asked. "I do want to hold on to your hand."

Mr. Lincoln at once perceived the lad's meaning. The appeal was too strong for him to resist; so he sat down by his side, and took hold of his hand. For two hours the President sat there patiently as though he had been the boy's father.

When the end came he bent over and folded the thin hands over his breast. As he did so he burst into tears, and when, soon afterward, he left the hospital, they were still streaming down his cheeks.—North Carolina Advocate.

A GREAT TEACHER'S METHOD.

In his life of Arnold of Rugby, Dean Stanley speaks thus of his system of teaching:

"His whole method was founded on the principle of awakening the intellect of each individual boy. Hence it was his practice to teach by questioning. As a general rule, he never gave information, except as a kind of reward for an answer, and often withheld it altogether, or checked himself in the very act of uttering it, from a sense that those whom he was addressing had not sufficient interest or sympathy to entitle them to receive it. His explanations were as short as possible—enough to dispose of the difficulty, and no more; and his questions were of a kind to call the attention of the boys to the real point of every subject, and to disclose to them the exact boundaries of what they knew or did not know. With regard to younger boys, he said: 'It is a great mistake to think that they can understand all they learn; for God has ordered that, in youth, the memory should act vigorously, independent of the understanding—whereas a man can not usually recollect a thing unless he understands it.' But, in proportion to their advance in school, he tried to cultivate in them a habit not only of collecting facts, but of understanding the principles underlying their facts. 'You come here,' he said, 'not to read, but to learn how to read.'"—Success.

Many a child goes astray, not because there is a want of prayer or virtue at home, but simply because home lacks sunshine. A child needs smiles as much as flowers need sunbeams. Children look little beyond the present moment. If a thing pleases, they are apt to seek it; if it displeases, they are to avoid it. If home is the place where faces are sour and words harsh, and fault-finding is ever in the ascendant, they will spend as many hours as possible elsewhere.—Rev. Sidney Smith.

THE GOSPEL OF HAPPINESS.

A woman who had many sorrows and heavy burdens to bear, but who was noted for her cheerful spirit, once said in explanation:

"You know I have had no money. I had nothing to give but myself; and so I made the resolution that I would never saddden anyone else with my troubles. I have laughed and told jokes when I could have wept. I have always smiled in the face of every misfortune. I have tried never to let anyone go from my presence without a happy word or a bright thought to carry with him. And happiness makes happiness. I myself am happier than I would have been had I sat down and bemoaned my fate."

This gospel of happiness is one which everyone should lay to heart. Set out with the invincible determination that you will bear burdens, and not impose them. Whether the sun shines or the rain falls, show a glad face to your neighbor. If you must fall in life's battle, you can at least fall with a smile on your face.—Wellspring.

The universe must ever wear the colors of the beholder.

At every round of the ladder, it is possible to set before oneself human dignity and moral grandeur as one's aim.

"The ideal life, the life of full completion, haunts us all," said Phillips Brooks. "We feel the thing we ought to be beating beneath the thing we are."—Success.

THE GOLDEN RULE OF EXERCISE.

Physical exercise has been so much insisted upon recently in considering the best development of men and women that both theory and practice have been pushed to dangerous extremes. A sound mind in a sound body is the thing most desired, and the hasty conclusion seems to have been reached by a great many people that if physical exercise is good, the more of it the better. An immense injury is being done by over-violent and too long-continued application to the pleasant and stimulating activities known as athletic training

Our remarks need not be confined in their application to those who go into what is called "professional training," but may be taken to heart by all who ride the wheel, play golf, excel in rowing, fencing, boxing, or go enthusiastically into any other sport or pastime involving great physical exertion. It is particularly to the interest of persons following a sedentary avocation to understand just when and how physical exercise should be taken in order to get its best benefits without the risk of injury to the great centers of energy. Nerve force and muscular power are so intimately connected that to interfere with one must certainly hinder the other. Almost every sedentary occupation, and especially where the mind is hard worked, makes a great draining of nerve force; and yet we see persons turn from long and exhausting brain labor to the most violent physical exercise without any intervening rest. No greater mistake could be made. Physical exertion is but an additional draught upon the resources of the nerves.

The young woman who has applied her mind intensely to shorthand and typewriting for many consecutive hours is no sooner released from duty than, perhaps, she mounts her bicycle and goes for a long, hard spin, hoping thereby to fortify her body and limbs, strengthen her lungs and heart, keep her system in robust working order. The young man who is an accountant, or lawyer's clerk, or official copyist, or laborious student, thinks it his duty to go directly from his work to the gymnasium or to the tennis court for what he fondly imagines will "build up" his muscular system and counteract the exhaustion caused by the intense mental application of business hours. This is burning the candle at both ends, and instead of receiving real benefit from exercise, the misguided victim of ignorance almost certainly sustains great injury to the vital centers. Two draughts are made upon the treasury of strength instead of one; it is like borrowing money at ruinous interest to pay a debt.

The first thing to know on this subject of exercise is, that rest must follow work. If you are mentally fatigued, you may be sure that you are also physically fatigued; twenty minutes of sleep are worth more to you at such a time than two hours of the bicycle or the gymnasium. Take the sleep first; then you are ready for action, and may go heartily out for a spin. Your nerve-centers have been readjusted and recharged by the great restorer, sleep; you are in trim for getting the very greatest pleasure and benefit from reasonable physical activities. Take this, then, as the golden rule of exercise: Never go directly from hard physical exertion to hard mental labor, and never go immediately from exhausting mental exercise to great physical activity. Let rest, and, if possible, sleep, intervene.

No physiologist doubts that change from one sort of exercise to another, and the alternation of physical and mental occupations, can be of greatest recreative benefit when properly regulated. Bodily exertion in the open air is conducive to health and long longevity, so is mental activity; but reckless rushing from exhaustion in one to additional exhaustion in the other can not fail to injure the physique and shorten the life of the person who does it. —Saturday Evening Post.

OUR $1 OFFER.

Much has been said about reducing the subscription price of the ADVOCATE. The only way in which a reduction can be brought about is by an increase in the number of subscribers. In order to facilitate this result, we make the following offer: Until further notice we will take new subscriptions at the rate of $1 for eight months. When seven thousand five hundred new names have been sent in at this rate with the cash, we will extend the time four months longer, thus reducing the price to $1 per annum. When the extension is made, old subscribers will get the benefit as well as new ones, provided they first pay up all arrearages. Of course, no commissions can be given under this offer. Address

LIKE A THIEF IN THE NIGHT,

Malaria creeps into the system and leaves a poison which saps its vitality until the well-known symptoms of CHILLS AND FEVER, INTERMITTENT FEVER, CONGESTION, BLOODY URINE, etc., will show their snake-like heads. Fortunately there is an antidote in DICKS' CHILLIFUGE, which absolutely exterminates Malaria in a few hours; so pleasant to the taste that children love to take it. It banishes fevers like mist before the morning sun; brings as a gift rose cheeks, health, happiness, and makes life worth the living

CAPT. J. T. LAY.

It is seldom that so deep a gloom settles down upon a community as fell upon Winona, Miss., when it was announced, July 2, 1899, that Capt. J. T. Lay had suddenly passed away.

He was born in Eutaw, Ala., in 1834, and moved to Mississippi when young. His early manhood was spent in Grenada, coming thence to Winona, where he passed the remainder of his life.

He was strictly a safe business man. Few men did more with less friction than he, being president of various establishments as follows: Bank of Winona, Winona Oil and Manufacturing Co., Blackston Mercantile Co., and Winona Brick and Tile Co. His business capacity was fully tested, managing all these with honor to himself and profit to all concerned.

As a patriot, he was true, serving through the Civil War.

He was an honored member of the Masonic fraternity, and was also a Knight Templar.

He was married to Miss Ella A. Moore, daughter of the late Col. O. J. Moore, Jan. 8, 1862.

His religious life began when he was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1884, under the ministry of Rev. W. B. Murrah, D. D. It was under the influence of no undue excitement, no fitful fever, but after a careful examination of the truths of our holy religion, and the obligations he assumed in taking upon himself the vows of the church.

As is said in the beautiful ritual of the Masons, "we do not claim for our departed brother perfection"—for we recognize the fact that the best of us, and the most sagacious, are liable to make honest mistakes—but we do claim for him purity of motive and honesty of purpose. He was a man of deep convictions, based on well-matured premises, and the conclusions following were generally correct, whether in temporal or in spiritual matters.

He was logical and methodical, not boastful and demonstrative, but unobtrusive and quiet, hiding from the public gaze whatever his warm heart prompted him to do for humanity. The good Father crowned with success his efforts in securing a goodly portion of this world's goods. This he used as not abusing it. His heart was not glued to these things so as to blind his spiritual eyes to his duty to his church and his race. For some time it has been his great desire to see a commodious and beautiful edifice erected to the worship of the God he honored. Pursuant to this great desire, the magnificent structure in our midst stands as a monument of his liberality, and also of his love for God and for the community in which he lived. He contributed to its erection $4,000—nearly half of the entire cost of "Moore Memorial Church," as it is called in memory of Col. Moore, whom we might style the father of Methodism in Winona. But for the goodness of his heart, loyalty to his church, and his princely liberality, this temple of God would not be here.

As a matter of course, his religious life was quiet and even; yet we have seen him, with his now broken hearted companion, approach the altar of the church repeatedly, and give his hand to the minister, promising deeper consecration to God, while his sparkling eye gave evidence of the joy of his heart.

His home life was simply beautiful. So far as our knowledge goes, we have never known a happier home, made so by the uniform kindness and sweet companionship of the one now left lonely in that once happy home, refusing to be comforted because the heart that throbbed so lovingly and tenderly toward her is forever still.

And now, may the God of all comfort console our sorrowing sister! May she come to the Word of his grace as her one hope, and look forward to some sweet day when the union, now broken by the merciless tyrant, shall be renewed in the better land! J. B. STONE.

OBITUARIES.

LEECH—ELMA, eldest daughter of Rev. and Mrs. J. A. Leech, was born at Sturgis, Miss., July 27, 1881, and died at their home in Minter City, July 7, 1899.

This brief space of time marked by these two dates gives to the world a young life of eighteen Summers. It was a life that was bright, cheery, joyous, hopeful, and full of unrealized powers and noble anticipations. Like some rare flower that, even in blooming, dies, her buoyant young life passed suddenly under the wintering frost of death into the great beyond.

In infancy she was dedicated to God in holy baptism by Dr. T. C. Wier. On Dec. 14, 1893, she was received into the M. E. Church, South, by the writer.

Elma was a good, sweet girl, and loved good people, and took delight in offices of kindness and helpfulness. She especially loved to take part or do anything in church service to make it more attractive or helpful. Her last service in the Master's name was to collect money and put a good library in the Sunday-school at Minter City. She was an honest, sincere, truthful, noble-hearted girl, who despised cant and hypocrisy. She was so thoughtful of and kind to her mother; she died so triumphantly. She said to them at her bedside: "Do not weep for me;" "Papa, it is all right;" "I will meet you all in the sweet by-and-by."

What a beautiful closing to a bright young life! She is now in the full fruition of immortal life. Good-by, Elma, "till we meet again."

L. M. LIPSCOMB.

KING—JAMES H. KING was born in Pike county, Miss., April 26, 1819; moved to Tangipahoa parish, near Amite City, La., in 1856; was married to Miss Eviline Dean in 1839, by whom were born to him eight children, two passing away in infancy. In 1874 he moved to Pine Grove, La., and in September, 1893, he lost his first wife, who had been a faithful companion, leaving him with six children. On Oct. 12, 1877, he was again happily married, to Miss Mary A. Tabor, by whom was born to him one son.

Bro. King joined the M. E. Church, South, at the age of twenty, and was always a consistent, devoted member of the same; true to his church vows, true to his pastor; a model man in attending upon the divine worship. For many years he was an exhorter and class leader, and was instrumental in leading many sinners to Christ.

It was my privilege to associate with this man of God for nearly three years, and I feel that I have been strengthened in faith, and have been made a better man by being with him. It was an inspiration to be by his bedside, and hear him exhort and shout the praises of God. He passed away the twenty-third of June, aged eighty years one month and twenty-eight days. May God bless the bereaved ones, and may they so live as to meet him in heaven! F. N. SWEENEY.

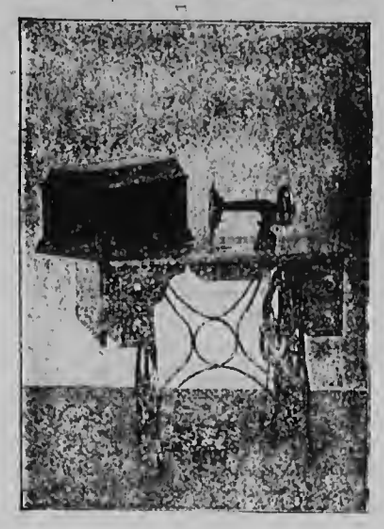
New Machine Offer.

By Far the Best We Have Ever Made.

Always on the watch for something good for our subscribers, we have succeeded in making arrangements whereby we can make a sewing machine offer which is far better than any we have been able hitherto to make. Read the following description and then read our offer:

No. 4 IMPERIAL.



THE IMPERIAL HIGH ARM SINGER will be found the perfection of mechanism as regards simplicity, durability and adaptability to the wide range of work embraced in the general family needs.

A Handsome, Light-Running, Lock-Stitch, High Arm Machine that will not fail to please the most fastidious. Embracing all the advantages with all desirable improvements of other first-class sewing machines, so simple in mechanism that the most inexperienced need no assistance in operating it. Book of instructions with every machine. Any child can learn to run it.

Extra Set of Attachments also free with each machine consisting of the following: One Tucker, One Foot Ruffler, One Set of Plate Hemmers, four different widths up to ½ of an inch, One Binder and One Thread Cutter.

No. 3 Machine, drop leaf table, gothic cover, case of two drawers at one end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $24. Our price, $14.75.

No. 4 Machine, drop leaf table, gothic cover, case of two drawers at each end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $25. Our price, $15.50.

No. 5 Machine, drop leaf table, gothic cover, case of three drawers at each end, making seven drawers in all. Dealer's price, $26. Our price, $16.25.

No. 4 Columbian.

EXCELLENCE OF THE COLUMBIAN.—All wearing parts are of case-hardened steel possessing great durability, and by the turning of a screw all lost motion caused by wear can be taken up. All parts are fitted so accurately that the machines are absolutely noiseless, and as easy running as fine adjustment and best mechanical skill is possible to produce. No expense or time is spared to make them perfect in every respect, as every machine passes a rigid inspection by competent men before leaving the factory.

NICKEL PLATED.—The balance wheel and many of the fine parts are nickel plated, with other parts finely enameled and ornamented, giving it a rich appearance.

A Self-Setting Needle and Self-Threading Cylinder Shuttle are used in the Columbian High-Arm Sewing Machine. They are so simple that any one can easily operate them in a few minutes' time, as our Instruction Book is fully illustrated, showing how to do all kinds of fancy work with attachments.

Extra Attachments, in velvet-lined case, sent free with each machine: 1 Tucker, 1 Ruffler with shirring plate, 1 Hemmer set (4 widths) and Binder, 1 Braider (Foot and Slide), 1 Thread Cutter.

ADDITIONAL ACCESSORIES.—Each machine is supplied with the following outfit: 1 Hemmer and Feller (one piece), 10 Needles, 6 Bobbins, 1 Wrench, 1 Screw Driver, Oil Can with Oil, Cloth Gauge and Thumb Screw, and a Book of Instructions. The Book of Instructions is profusely illustrated, and answers the purpose of a competent teacher.

No. 3—Drop leaf, Bent cover, case of two drawers at one end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $29. Our price, $17.

No. 4—Drop leaf table, Bent cover, case of two drawers at each end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $31. Our price, $17.75.

No. 5—Drop leaf table, Bent cover, case of three drawers at each end and center drawer, making a seven-drawer machine. Dealer's price, $33. Our price, $18.50.

The chief difference between Numbers 3, 4, and 5 is in the furniture, i. e., in the number of drawers. If you do not want to pay for the extra drawers, you need not do so. We sell these machines under a ten years' guarantee, by which we mean that if any part gives out by reason of any defect therein, the manufacturer will replace the same free of charge. Moreover, we allow the purchaser to test the machine ten days. If at the end of ten days you are not satisfied, you have only to drop us a postal card, and your money will be refunded.

OUR OFFER.

We will send any one of the above-described machines at the prices named, and also send the ADVOCATE free for six months. The only condition attached to this offer is that subscribers who are in arrears must first pay up all arrearages to date. It would be well to avail yourself of this offer at once, as we can not promise that it will last very long. Notice that you take no risk whatever. We do all the risking. Address

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Extensive repairs will be made in the Custom House in this city.

It is reported that McKinley will retire from politics, and not accept a renomination.

M. Labori, of Dreyfus' counsel, was shot in the back by men in ambush at Rennes on Sunday.

Russian students who create disorders hereafter will be at once drafted into the army.

The administration has decided to make another call for volunteers to reinforce Otis.

The Sewerage, Drainage and Water bill has passed the Louisiana Senate by an unanimous vote.

The number killed in the storm on the Island of Porto Rico is put at 1000. More than 100,000 are homeless.

The rival factions in Samoa renewed hostilities soon after the commissioners left, the Kings taking no part.

E. W. Huntington, a veteran lawyer of New Orleans, seventy years of age, died of heart failure last week.

Major Rockefeller, who disappeared soon after reaching the Philippines, is a prisoner in the hands of the natives.

The Government is to issue an appeal to the people of the United States for aid for the hurricane sufferers in Porto Rico.

Leading members of the Transvaal Raad are opposed to war, and hold Kruger responsible for the present crisis.

Paul Deroulede and sixteen others have been arrested at Paris, charged with conspiring to overthrow the Government.

The Attorney-General of Nebraska has begun suit to enjoin the Standard Oil Company from doing business in that State.

Representatives of various labor organizations had a meeting to inaugurate a movement for the establishment of a Trades Council in New Orleans.

Gen. Otis, it has been decided, will remain in supreme command at Manila, unless he chooses to retire, in which case Lawton will succeed.

Prominent men, both in civil and military life in Hayti, are taking the field for Jiminez, under the belief that Gomez is behind the movement.

Great Britain has completed arrangements to send 12,000 troops from India to South Africa in the event of war. The transports are all ready for them.

The American troops occupied San Mateo, ten miles from Manila, on Sunday, killed twenty-three Filipinos, and losing three killed and thirteen wounded.

The governor of Texas has sent rangers to Hidalgo county to protect six Mexican prisoners, who, it is charged, are being brutally maltreated by the sheriff.

The Filipinos have abandoned Angeles, the objective of MacArthur's advance. The Americans had a hard march through mud knee deep, but met little resistance.

The British Government is soon to build a battleship of a new class, which will be unique in naval architecture, and is expected to revolutionize the construction of war vessels.

In a letter to the Army of Northern Virginia, Gen. Geo. Moorman, Adjutant General and Chief of Staff of Gen. John B. Gordon, U. C. V., announced that he will soon resign his position, which he has held since the organization of the veterans.

There was great excitement here when the news came from Baton Rouge that the sewerage and drainage bill was in danger, owing to the absence of city members of the House. Mr. Farrar and Acting Mayor Britlin took steps to notify the members, who left for the capital.

There is a project on foot to raise colonial troops in our new possessions. The experiment is being tried on a small scale in Porto Rico; with what success is not known. It is now proposed to organize several regiments of militia or auxiliaries in Cuba as part of the provisional force authorized by Congress, and there is no doubt that the same thing will be eventually tried in the Philippines.

The War Department took prompt measures for the relief of the hurricane sufferers in Porto Rico. When the press dispatches and General Davis' advices made known the extent of the disaster steps were immediately taken to send supplies, and the transport "McPherson" was ordered put in readiness to sail from New York. She will carry rations and other necessaries. Secretary of War Root has sent an appeal to mayors of all cities of more than 150,000 population.

According to the reports from the War Department, the ten new regiments of infantry to be added to the army, under the provisions of the act passed by the last session of Congress, are making good progress. Already several of the regiments are up to their full strength, and, altogether, close to 11,000 men have been recruited, and as the full strength of the regiments will aggregate 13,000 men, it will be seen that the enlistments will be completed by the end of the week.

LEMONS AS MEDICINE

They regulate the Liver, Stomach, Bowels, Kidneys and Blood as prepared by Dr. H. Mozley, in his Lemon Elixir, a pleasant lemon drink. It cures biliousness, constipation, indigestion, headache, malaria, kidney diseases, fevers, chills, heart failure, nervous prostration, and all other diseases caused by a torpid or diseased liver and kidneys. It is an established fact that lemons, when combined properly with other liver tonics, produce the most desirable results upon the stomach, liver, bowels, kidneys, and blood. Sold by druggists. 50c and $1 bottles.

Hollins Institute, Virginia.

Hollins Institute, six miles from the city of Roanoke, is one of the educational institutions that have made Virginia famous in the field of learning. It was founded in 1842 and has steadily grown in capacity, scope and reputation. To-day it ranks with those schools for young women which command the entire confidence of parents. Since 1870 the school has grown so large to be limited to Virginia patronage, so that all parts of the Union are now represented by pupils. Besides the thorough educational work accomplished by means of ten courses from which the student chooses, the institute has unusual material and acquired advantages. It is in the Valley of Virginia, a region possessing a climate unexcelled for healthfulness, and mineral springs of famous health giving powers are on the grounds. There are 300 acres of land surrounding the buildings which are utilized for outdoor sports. The fifty seventh session will begin Sept. 13, 1899.

To Subscribers.

Allow me to call attention to the fact that many of you are in arrears with the ADVOCATE. As I pay cash for labor, material and everything needful for carrying on the paper, may I not expect that all of you who are in arrears will remit promptly the amount of your indebtedness?

In remitting do not send a check on your local bank. We shall hereafter deduct the cost of collecting from the amount of the check and give credit for the remainder. W. C. BLACK,

NAPOLEON LOST THE BATTLE OF LEIPSIC because of a fit of indigestion. One dose of DICKS' MUL-EN-OL would have given him instant relief, and the fate of the kingdoms of Europe been decided differently. It is really marvelous how quickly a colicky pain will vanish when a teaspoonful of Mul-en-ol in a wineglass of hot water is taken. Try it; you will never suffer from colic.

LETTER FROM "GILDEROY."

The other day I dropped in at a quarterly meeting at one of our country churches on one of our circuits. There was a fine congregation, and they had a splendid dinner on the ground. The presiding elder gave us a strong, clear, sound sermon on the "sinfulness of sin, and the lack of consciousness of sin." It was a timely and appropriate utterance. The truth and power of God were in the sermon.

After dinner and an hour of social conversation the Quarterly Conference was called to order. The pastor's reports were good, and full of hope and encouragement. He seemed to have been doing faithful and efficient work. The stewards made their report. There were seven churches and about four hundred members in this charge. They paid the pastor thirty-four dollars and eighty-five cents, and the presiding elder five dollars and fifty cents. This was the sum total for three months' work. The pastor and the presiding elder were both men of families. The pastor got eleven dollars and a fraction per month, and the presiding elder less than two dollars. This is short living for two men with good, large families. This was the pastor's only income. The presiding elder drew from other charges. Some paid him more and some, perhaps, less. Doubt was expressed about paying the pastor up in full, and yet the assessment is less than one dollar per member. This happened in a good country, where the crops are fine and the living good. The people sell cotton, corn, melons, butter, chickens, eggs and cattle.

The presiding elder pressed home on the stewards the great importance of paying in full an assessment already too small. He dwelt on the feeling that would exist and the criticisms that would be made if the preacher did not pay his accounts in full at the end of the year. If the charge fails to pay the preacher, and for this reason the preacher fails to pay his bills, I wonder where the blame will fall when preacher and people stand before the bar of God at the last day? God will do right about it, and we may depend on that. Some one says, "But the preacher ought not to go in debt." That is true; but how he can live and support his family on less than twelve dollars per month without going in debt is a question to be pondered.

The presiding elder has been in the ministry twenty-two years, and eleven years of that time he was not paid up in full. The pastor has been an itinerant preacher twenty-nine years, and never was paid in full. A visiting brother present has been a preacher and pastor forty years, and has been paid in full only four years of that time. These three preachers will say they have faith in the honor, honesty and integrity of the church. Great is their faith.

If Bro. Smith, one of the stewards, had traded with a merchant twenty-two years, and had failed to pay him up in full eleven years of that time, the merchant would begin to grow shaky about letting Smith have any more goods. If Bro. Jones had failed to pay in full for twenty-nine years, I suppose his credit would not be good. If Bro. Allen had paid up in full only four years in forty, the merchant would be apt to ask for security of some kind. Is not the church as much in honor bound to pay the preacher in full as Bros. Smith, Jones and Allen are to pay the merchant in full? The Word of God says, speaking of preachers, "The workman is worthy of his meat." He may not get it, but he is worthy of it, and these debts will have to be settled at the secretary's table in the Quarterly Conference, or at the bar of God in the day of judgment. If the preacher is pure, true, and faithful, any failure to pay him in full will be a wrong done to Christ the Lord.

There is a shameful lack of business sense and tact in managing the money affairs of the church. This is the main source of all our trouble in supporting the ministry. We do not plan wisely, nor act promptly and vigorously, in the business affairs of the church. Our methods—if we could call such slip-shod ways methods—are poorly devised and poorly executed. The loss and, largely, the shame fall on the preacher. This is true here, but it will not be when we stand before God.

If the stewards would try, would take chickens, corn and eggs where they can not get money, this charge could pay every dollar of its assessment, and more, too. This would be some trouble, but it would be an eye-opener to the people about what they are able to do and how to do it. It would develop character, encourage honor and honesty, and greatly promote piety. The pastor is popular, a good preacher, and all the people look upon him as a deeply pious man.

GILDEROY.

Aug. 15, 1899.

TO THE PRESIDING ELDERS OF THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

DEAR BROTHERS: The Conference Board of Education greet you in the field. We are laborers together in the great cause of education. It is gratifying to us—and, no doubt, to all your brethren—that you have given marked attention to the Twentieth Century Fund in the administration of your office. The care you have taken to have this fund presented at your District Conferences, and to emphasize the cause of Christian education, will surely bear fruit in furthering the important work. We all know that the preacher in charge holds the key to final success in this enterprise, and upon him rests the work of reaching the people in detail; yet, as leader, the presiding elder has his place in the forefront of the moving columns. He harmonizes and unifies the forces in his district. His wise counsel and solid judgment, and buoyant, aggressive spirit, will settle divers questions of purpose, of policy, of method, of time and place, and will stir preachers and people to high motives and energies of action. We can scarcely overestimate the value of the presiding elder in this, as well as in every other part of Methodist itinerant labor. Sad indeed would be the day for us if his place amongst us were to be minified, or set aside, or used as a sinecure, or held as less than essential in our economy.

You will agree with us that the time is at hand when the subscription lists in the hands of the preachers should be pressed on the attention of the people. Education Day may be used effectively to this end. The multiplicity of duties and cares on the preacher will sometimes discourage his efforts in this new field, and check his zeal for a twentieth century thank-offering for education. The sympathetic presiding elder will find his opportunity in such cases, and lead his brother and the people to victory.

Southern Methodism can not afford to indulge discouragement or hesitation on this subject, and for two reasons. First: The other leading Methodisms on both sides of the Atlantic have asked their people for three or four times as much per member as our church has, and they are advancing with sure step towards a full collection. The dawn of the twentieth century will find them with their offering on the altar. Shall not the North Mississippi Conference greet that morning with her forty-five thousand dollars? Second: Our schools are more needy of essential funds. Vanderbilt University should have four times the endowment now in hand. Her resources are much short of the needs of her great work, which we should not allow to be embarrassed by lack of funds.

If we turn our eyes on our colleges, the need grows painful, if not distressing. Taking the twelve best out of the forty-eight reported, it is questionable whether more than half of them are ready to be accepted as colleges by our General Board of Education. The other half will have to wait and grow, especially in endowment. The thirty-six others will likely be put in the rank and service of the academy or training-school. Our people, so accustomed to call almost any church school a college, especially if it is for girls and young ladies, will be surprised to find that only two, possibly one, of the female schools can fill the conditions of a true college—if for no other reason, for lack of endowment. It is easy to see, then, so far as the Twentieth Century Fund is concerned, that our true policy is, not to create more schools, especially colleges, but out of those we have to help such as the church most needs in her service. This is not a destructive process, but one of building. It strengthens and insures the whole by endowing and securing the centers. The true classification of our schools, and the regulation of their correlated work under the act of the General Conference, will be an increasing advantage perpetually unfolding itself as we go on in the great work. You will agree with us that all our movements must be kept in harmony with the directions of the General Board. Thus shall we work together.

It can scarcely be out of place to refer here to those schools which we hold in possession and under our own care for support and development in the work of Christian education.

We need not go over the history of struggles and losses which preceded the providential coming of Millsaps College. It suffices that the day of relief came, and that a live, well-organized school, having all the parts and powers of a true college, sprang at a bound into competent service for the higher education of our sons. But if the organization and instruction in this young college are yielding us scholastic results which fulfill and enlarge our hopes, they should none the less call out our purposes and energies to make the endowment and all other parts of equipment equal to the largest demand. Let us cultivate for this worthy college—the results of whose labor are enriching our own fields—a loyal, enthusiastic devotion, shown by works as well as faith.

The Conference Board wishes that you could be pointed to a school in Grenada equally as well endowed and otherwise appointed as a college for our daughters. We hail with sincere satisfaction the action of our General Conference under which the requirements for college classes and degrees in schools for young women shall be equivalent to those for young men. This itself is a great move forward. We must respond to it. Our purpose must be equal to our duty. Let us realize that our work in the field of education is now as much connectional as that of missions or of the Sunday-school. We should give our best study to this great matter, and press with patient energy in this co-operative of higher Christian education. We need not expect our college for young women to spring up full formed in a day. That means large endowment and college organization, but we must keep eyes and hands steadily on that object. We have the solid foundation already laid in Grenada College. The good work done there for these years past under the supervision of the North Mississippi Conference will be continued under the presidency of the Rev. W. M. McIntosh, A. B. (Emory, Ga.). With a competent faculty to aid him, and in full sympathy with the aim of our Conference, he is putting his whole energy into the work. You will realize, as this Board does, the importance of co-operation with him. This is our one Conference school which we own in fee simple—a property worth $30,000. The buildings are specially substantial, among the best in the State, and now in good, fresh repair, ready for use. The record of this school for health during the last ten or twelve years will challenge comparison with any, even in the mountains. The location is in an excellent community, and one of the best sections of the State. Let us urge our whole Conference to concentrate here, and build and grow wisely and well to the end.

W. T. J. SULLIVAN,
For the Board.

IS THERE ROOM FOR ALL?

Some years ago, when the presidents of our various colleges for girls found themselves about to clash in their claims for patronage, impelled by a Christly unselfishness, they were accustomed to say, "Oh, there is room enough for us all." The people have heard this amiable fiction until they have come to believe it, groundless as it is. The college people themselves have found that it is a fiction, a very unfortunate fiction, that needs to be dismissed. There is no reason to hug the charitable delusion any longer, for it has no foundation in fact, and it can but be hurtful to take the false for the true.

Let us face a few facts and figures. There lie before me catalogues, the latest issues, of all four of the colleges for girls in the Mississippi Conference. From these I learn that the enrollments of all four, for the year just closed, in the literary departments aggregate 553 pupils. This includes all the kindergartners, primaries, "preps," and collegiates, even the little boys received into the lower grades.

Now, suppose that everyone of these 553 pupils attended college for the full ten months, and paid in cash $50 for tuition, the gross tuition receipts for the four colleges would have been $27,650. There were employed as teachers in literary work merely for these 553 pupils, 22 men and women.

Now, suppose that every cent of this money had been paid out to these teachers, reserving none of it for incidental or other expenses; divided equally, they would have received each $1,256.81. Teachers of the first class are receiving from $3,000 to $6,000 per year, and when large colleges with ample endowments are paying such salaries, we can not expect to get and hold them for $1,200. We may get one once in a while who happens to be out of a chair, and will take our pittance rather than be idle; but we can not hold him at that salary, for if he is really first class, some endowed institution will soon offer him more, and take him from us. I have known a country public school teacher in California to get $1,250 a year for her work.

Did these 22 literary teachers in our four colleges for girls in the Mississippi Conference get $1,256.81 each? Did any one of them get it? It is a fact that many of these 553 pupils, being preachers' daughters, are charged no tuition, and many others were taken on cut rates, paying $15 and $20 per year. Many attended only a small part of the year, and many more were in the lower classes, where they were only charged $20 or $30 per year. It would be extravagant to suppose that all the money collected in all four of our girls' colleges for literary tuition during the year just closed would aggregate one-half of $27,650. Then, did the 22 teachers get $628.40 each for their year's work? From my knowledge of the business I venture the guess that not one of them received as much as $800, while the majority of them get less than $400 each, and some of them not over $200. No college can keep its chairs filled with competent teachers at these rates. It is utterly impossible to do it, and every business man who looks into the matter knows it.

The foregoing calculations have had no reference to the specials, ornamentals, etc., such as music on the piano, violin, guitar, mandolin, and picolo; vocal music, painting of various kinds, elocution and physical culture, stenography and typewriting, sewing and embroidery. There were last year in the four colleges taking these branches 650 pupils—counting one pupil sometimes two, three, four and five times. The highest rates charged by any of these colleges for any of these branches is $70 per year, and the lowest is $10. Very few pay $70. A fair average would be $40. Now, if everyone of the 650 paid as much as $40, as an average—i. e., if all attended for ten months, and there was no rate-cutting and no failure to pay bills—the whole amount received by the four colleges was $26,000. There were engaged in teaching these branches 25 men and women. Now, if there were no pianos to be bought last year, and none to be tuned or repaired, and no other expenses, so that this $26,000 could have been distributed among these 25 teachers equally, each would have received $1,040. But there was rate-cutting, and pianos had to be tuned and repaired, and possibly new ones to be bought; and there were other expenses, and nothing near $26,000 was paid to these 25 teachers. I doubt if anyone of them got $1,000. Most of them, I am quite sure, got each less than one-half of that amount. Anyone can see that if the ornamental departments of our girls' colleges can pay their own expenses, it is absolutely all they can do. They are not making any money to be carried over into the literary departments to help run them. Let us concede, for argument's sake, that 25 teachers are needed to teach 650 pupils in these ornamental and other special branches, and let us concede, however violent the concession, that these departments can and do pay their own expenses; yet we see, beyond all question, that the literary work, the teaching of English and mathematics, Latin, Greek, and the sciences, is very, very poorly provided for in our four colleges for girls. This must be so. It is so.

If everyone of the 553 pupils who were in the literary departments of our four girls' colleges last year was a full-pledged collegiate, six well-equipped professors could teach them all far better than the 22 half-paid teachers did it. No one can doubt this. If $12,000 could be collected as tuition fees from these 553 pupils—I dismiss the idea of $27,650—each teacher could be paid $2,000. While this would not give a first-class college, it would be infinitely better than anything we now have. Have we room for four colleges for girls in the Mississippi Conference? The catalogues of these colleges answer most unequivocally, No! Is there a single objection to concentration that can stand the light of reason? Nobody has offered a single argument against the concentration idea. Then let us heed the demand of common sense, and the behest of "the powers that be" in our church, and let us take steps at once looking to the concentration of our colleges for girls! If not, why not?

H. WALTER FEATHERSTON.

P. S.—It is rumored in some sections that I am to take a professorship in Whitworth College. The rumor is entirely erroneous. I may deliver between my quarterly meetings a few lectures to the girls, as I once did in East Mississippi Female College; but these will be entirely gratis. I am in no sense an employee or officer in Whitworth; do not desire to be; never expect to be. I am not even a trustee of the college. I am contented where I am, and will be until the Bishop orders me elsewhere. H. WALTER F.

DELHI DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Delhi District Conference was held at Rayville, La., July 27-30. All the preachers of the district, save Rev. I. L. Bronson, were present. The lay delegation, though small in number, took a lively interest in the proceedings of the Conference. Our presiding elder, Rev. J. D. Harper, occupied the chair, and evinced those administrative qualities which are sure to inspire brotherly love and to deepen everyone's interest in the cause of Christ. Rev. Wm. Schuhle was elected secretary.

The first day was devoted to a Missionary Institute. The several speakers had imbibed the spirit of the central theme of Christianity, and handled their various topics accordingly. It is hoped that missionary consolences in this district will multiply, together with the spread of missionary intelligence. Dr. J. L. Pierce, in his sermon on Sunday, dealt with this subject in a masterly way.

The disciplinary questions were diligently put, and the reports showed that "a longer ladder yet remains to scale." The spiritual status of the district calls for deep humiliation, faith, prayer, and earnest pastoral work, together with the definite and Spirit-charged preaching of the Word. The Sunday-schools, in the main, are doing good work. Epworth Leagues are few, but their work is spiritually uplifting. Church-houses and parsonages, in general, are in good condition. The new church at Monroe is expected to be ready for occupancy in time for our Annual Conference session in December.

The American Bible Society was not forgotten, but, as yet, it has not been substantially remembered.

It goes without saying that the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE deserves a welcome to every Methodist home.

Mrs. Mary E. Carr, district secretary of the W. H. M. S., read an interesting paper on the work she so efficiently represents. There are several auxiliary societies, both adult and juvenile, in the district that are doing fine work. As usual, Mer Rouge had an excellent report. All honor to them who so faithfully carry on the Savior's work.

Dr. I. W. Cooper, president of Centenary, made a soul-stirring appeal in favor of Christian education. Happy the young men who catch his inspiration of lofty ideals! His is a call to earnest work. "For not on downy plumes, nor under shade of canopy reposing, fame is won."

Rev. J. L. P. Sheppard was with us, and represented Mansfield Female College; also the Twentieth Century Educational Fund. He is the man to make success, being full of faith, fire, and facts.

Rev. Robt. W. Vaughn was a welcome visitor from Arcadia district. Both he and our courteous Conference host, Rev. W. H. Hatfield, contemplate attending Centenary.

Rev. H. O. White read an interesting paper on: "Are We Reaching the Masses? If Not, Why Not?" The paper is to be published in the ADVOCATE (New Orleans).

The religious services throughout the Conference were inspiring. The preaching was of a high order. The following dispensed the Word, viz.: Drs. J. L. Pierce, I. W. Cooper, Revs. H. O. White, T. S. Randle, J. L. P. Sheppard, and A. S. J. Neill.

A resolution commending officers for faithfully enforcing prohibition laws in Richland, Franklin, and other parishes, was passed by a unanimous vote.

The following were elected delegates to the Annual Conference, viz.: J. B. Reiley, W. J. Daniel, C. E. Robinett, E. W. Anderson; alternates: R. E. Kiper and Richard Arant.

Rayville entertained the Conference with true Southern hospitality.

The Conference meets next year at Oak Ridge. WM SCHUHLE, Sec.

PITY! PRAY! SEEK!

Pity the wandering—oh, the bitter strife,
The shame, the fear, the anguish of their life!

Pray for the wandering—Jesus prays for thee

SAM JONES CAMP MEETING

I may be, and hope I am, mistaken in supposing that the measure of success, spiritual, attained by the ten days' services, amounts to but little. It may be, however, that "the last great day" will demonstrate that some good was accomplished; that some wanderer from the "Father's" house came to himself, arose and went home to be forgiven and blest with the consciousness of pardon and peace. That there was some excellent preaching done, and also some earnest, unselfish work for the salvation of sinners, there can be no doubt, as the names of those who filled the pulpit from time to time, during the week, will fully prove. The opening sermon, Friday night, the twenty-first, was, as is usual and proper, preached by our beloved and faithful friend and brother, Jno. A. B. Jones, and, like all his pulpit deliverances, was of the very best.

Sunday, thirty-first, the pulpit was occupied by Prof. Hannicutt, of Atlanta, at 11 A M The sermon was an excellent one, as all his sermons are, and there was an immense throng of people.

Monday brought "Cyclone" Clifford, who in zeal, earnestness, consecration and ability, is away up near the head. I have seldom seen more earnest effort and intense solicitude for the salvation of the lost than Bro. Clifford manifested in each service conducted by him, and it is the unbiased conviction of this writer that had he taken charge of the meeting earlier and retained control until its close, more good would have resulted. The same remark applies to other preachers on the ground, notably Bro. Frank Keen and Dr. Cooper, possibly others. The idea I wish to convey is, that in such meetings as are these it is best that one or, at the most, two preachers should do the preaching and the altar work. I did not think so until this meeting, but my observation there convinces me that "too many preachers spoil the broth" just as badly as would a multiplicity of cooks. I am sorry it is true, but there is no doubt about its being so. The same impression seemed to take hold of the Association, as is shown by its action at the annual meeting after the close of the camp meeting, in instructing its Executive Committee to secure the attendance of one or two preachers for the next meeting that could draw and hold the people during the week, the idea being embodied in the report of the Executive Committee and also the suggestion named above, which was made the order of the Association. The committee also suggested the names of Joe Jones and Mr. Crittenden, and that suggestion was also endorsed. How the new departure will result God knows, and he is about the only one that can look down the corridors of time and see the end from the beginning. At all events, I am disposed to give my beloved brethren who are partial to evangelists and their methods the largest measure of latitude possible, believing, as I do, that they are actuated by an earnest desire for the advancement of the kingdom of grace and the glory of God. Aside from the fact that in a multitude of preachers there is not ordinarily, and where each has a short inning in the pulpit, much likelihood of a "Pentecost," the proposed plan will eliminate the disturbing element of cranks who can not be taught the fact that a camp meeting is not the place for the discussion of a plurality or a pancity of blessings; nor will it be likely to result in one of these people getting into the pulpit and throwing a firebrand of discord among the people. Along these lines it is proper to quote the reply of the Master to the Pharisees: "I came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance." "They that are whole need not a physician, but they that are sick."

Dr. Cooper preached some most excellent sermons and labored hard in the vineyard of the Lord. He is a most elegant gentleman, an earnest Christian and lovable man. May God bless him in all things! Among others, our young and talented brother, Frank Keen, did excellent service, both in the pulpit and the choir. The same meed of commendation applies to Bros. M. M. Black, Jab. Jones, et al. Bro. R. D. Norsworthy was with us a part of the time, but was too unwell to take an active part. There were other ministers on the grounds, from time to time, some of whom preached once or twice and then left for their different fields of work. The singing was good, as it must always be when Keen, Black, Cassels, the Misses Longmire, Cassels, Webb, et als., compose the choir; but there seemed to be a pall of unrest, coldness and lack of spirit in most of the services, to my mind, that too surely indicated a lack of that fraternity and community of interest that should always obtain among the people of God, and without which it is vain to expect his presence or blessing. God knows what was the matter, and I think I do, too; but if I were to give my opinion here, you would not publish it; hence I will only venture the remark that God is as intolerant of Achans in the camp of his people to-day as he was when the original Achan got into trouble about some silver, gold, and raiment. There has been no change in his code of morals, nor will there be.

There were but one or two conversions, and a like number joined the church. This looks like small returns from a ten days' meeting, but if but one of these finally gains heaven as a result of the meeting, the compensation will be ample, grand, glorious, and inspiring. The weather was hot and dry, but the grounds were comparatively cool, and the water delicious and health-giving.

The annual meeting was harmonious, and the affairs of the Association are in excellent shape. An effort will be made to improve the hotel accommodations and along other lines next year. Praying for the "peace of Jerusalem" and the future success of the Association in advancing the cause and kingdom of our God, and with personal regards, I beg to remain, Yours truly,

REX.

SARDIS DISTRICT.

We are now far advanced upon the third round on Sardis district. The district averages well in almost every particular. It is served by a corps of good preachers, who stay by their charges and look carefully after the interests of the work. I have been surprised at the excellency of the sermons of many of our traveling preachers. But one has not far to go, nor is it difficult to find a reason. As a training-school for the making of a preacher, our itinerant system is one of the very best. If a young man has been soundly converted, called to preach and admitted into the "traveling connection," and will be studious, industrious, and consecrated, it will be an exceptional case if he does not make an acceptable preacher.

Our pastors are planning, or have already entered upon, the campaign of their Summer and Fall meetings, and the revival fires already begin to burn. The great and felt need of our churches is a genuine revival of "the old-time religion." It is not merely the holding of protracted meetings in a perfunctory way that we need, but meetings resulting in a mighty quickening of the church, deep conviction, thorough conversion, and ingathering of members.

Sardis district can boast of a goodly number of veteran preachers. We do not call them venerable men, but men who carry "an element of youth" through their one, two, or more, score years of itinerant service. "Silver threads" appear "among the gold," or other color. They are assuming Solomon's "crown of glory," but are still alert and active. Like Job's war-horse, whose neck is clothed with thunder, who paweth in the valley, who snuffeth the battle afar, they are ready and eager for the fray.

Rev. J. D. Newsom is renewing his youth on Longtown circuit. He looks plethoric and strong, and rejoices to be reckoned again on the effective roll. He finds some folk-lore and some phases of Methodism that constitute a revelation even to a veteran, as reported in a recent article, or two, from his pen. He has four churches and four Sunday-schools. Three of these schools he reported at our last quarterly meeting to be in a very prosperous condition. His brethren, at the last Annual Conference, had the pleasure of hearing his semi-centennial sermon.

Rev. Amos Kendall holds forth the Word of Life at Sardis, where he preached more than twenty-five years ago, when Sardis was on a circuit that paid the preacher eleven hundred dollars. While yet a youth he began his ministry in England, and will preach his semi-centennial sermon at the next Annual Conference. No one ever calls Amos Kendall a dry preacher. He is one of the best-equipped and readiest preachers in the Conference. Almost any college would have done itself credit to have conferred the doctorate upon him long ago. He is in favor with his people.

Rev. J. D. Cameron, D. D., is pastor at Coldwater and Hernando. He is a well-rounded man, a systematic worker, and an able minister of the gospel, a veteran of more than two-score of years; yet his bow abides in strength. His collections ordered by the Conference are all provided for and paid up in part.

Batesville and Wesley is served by Rev. T. Cameron. Several years ago he closed a four-years' pastorate on this charge, and came back to meet the congratulations of his old parishioners. More than three decades ago he was licensed to preach. Has a burning of notes and manuscripts occasionally, and rarely keeps a sermon over ten years old. He rejoices in a new parsonage, built since Conference—one of the best in the district. He averages well with his brother, J. D., in appearance and avoirdupois, and it is still an open question among their brethren, which is the better preacher, "Tom or Jim?" "Par nobile fratrum."

Rev. John R D. King, after two very successful years on Cockrum circuit, was transferred to Courtland charge, where he is now in the midst of earnest work. Revival echoes come from his work. At Courtland there have been conversions and accessions. At Pope station he had a very successful meeting, resulting in quite a number of conversions. Bro. King has of late labored under serious hindrance on account of his wife's critical illness. Her life, he writes me, hangs but on a thread. We commend him and his sick companion to the sympathy and prayers of the brethren.

Rev. W. J. Burt serves Tyro circuit now the third year. Six churches and six hundred members! He has greatly improved his parsonage, and gotten it free from debt. Bro. Burt is thoughtful and painstaking in the preparation of his sermons. He has planned well for his Summer meetings, already reports conversions, and we are looking for still greater things. Burt has good "staying qualities"—such qualities as should be cultivated by both the preacher and his charge.

But, lest I crowd the ADVOCATE and weary the reader, I close for the present, with a promise to complete my report of Sardis district later on.

ARE WE REACHING THE MASSES? IF NOT, WHY NOT?

BY "CLERICUS."

The first question may be answered by the monosyllable "no." With all our church machinery we fail to reach the masses. Why not? is not so easily answered, for there are so many reasons. One, and, perhaps, one of the principal reasons, is, that the pastor has acknowledged his inability to do the work of a preacher, and the church and the world accept it as a fact. Such an acknowledgment is truly sad, and brings a reproach upon the church, and even accuses God of calling wrong men to the work of the ministry. It may be asked, When was this acknowledgment made? When he called a specialist—not a brother pastor—to conduct a meeting; one who is noted, more or less, as doing that special and all-important part of the work of a preacher of the gospel of the Son of God; one who claims a special call to that particular part of the work. This pastor ignores his brother pastor as well as himself, saying by that, "I can't successfully call sinners to repentance; neither can any of these men of God in the regular pastorate," thereby teaching this dangerous untruth, that there are some men called of God to call sinners to repentance who are not qualified by the baptism of the Holy Ghost, reflecting upon God; furthermore saying: "Here is a man that God has called to save sinners, to whom God has given special adaptation over and above his brethren for this work; one who, not by preaching a pure, unmixed gospel, but by peculiar manipulations, and genuflections of voice and of person, certain unusual and queer contortions of the body or face, mixed with very ungentlemanly and, therefore, unchristian manners, as well as words; who has so studied the science of sensation, and mastered and applied it, that he has become the chosen medium through whom God proposes to save sinners, God having concluded that the old style of saving sinners has served its mission, and now introduces this new man of action, noise and slang to take the place of the old pastor, with his antiquated ways and means." This new man is heard to say this old pastor, with his antiquated ways, "is a soul murderer," and that the church is recklessly led to destruction by this old plan, and its old pastor and his ways. This new man is using every means in his power to overthrow the church, teaching disloyalty to the church while he remains in its pales; and when he can no longer remain in the church, denounces it and all its officials, and everyone who would abide by its laws, in unmeasured terms of abuse.

But there are other reasons, one of which is, that so many young men, in their misguided zeal, have become imitators of these self-same specialists, and, following in their footsteps, have gone forth among the people with slang for gospel, until the church has lost confidence in its ministry to a great extent, and in the efficiency of the pastor, so that, when he speaks of holding a meeting, the first question is, "What specialist are you going to have?" having lost faith in a man professing to be called of God to call sinners to repentance, who thus acknowledges his inefficiency. The church has gone back into sinful indulgences, and many into open infidelity. As a result of all this, the masses hesitate to accept Christianity as a truth, and are indifferent to its calls and claims.

Another reason, perhaps, is that we attempt to reach the masses by doubtful means, such as announcing some very sensational subject or theme for our sermons, such as, "The Sinns of Chicago," etc; or, it may be, lifting up ourself before the congregation instead of lifting up Him who said, "And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me;" or, it may be, that we delegate to the few who compose the choir, and very frequently persons who have no knowledge of Christ's saving power, and sometimes persons that are vile in heart and life, the solemn, holy and delightful service of song and praise, thus shutting off from this part of the service of the sanctuary much the larger portion of those that do attend the services of the house of God. It may be that this part of the service is only to tickle the ear by the rendering of some difficult piece of music, or the singing of some unintelligible song by some very cultivated voice of softness, or otherwise in a "so low" that is often a misnomer—it is so high.

Perhaps in the preparation of our sermons we have called in the helps so abundantly afforded by many Publishing Houses, and have not invoked the presence and power of the Holy Ghost to aid us; so, when we go before the people, we go without that preparation of heart and mind that is so very necessary for success. Or, it may be, we make our sermons of such sour or harsh material that it is so unpalatable that one or two attempts on the part of the people to digest satisfies them of the futility of the attempt; or, it may be, that our sermons are so prosy and uninteresting the people get worn out, and go away, not to return for fear of a repetition. We ought to study to show ourselves approved unto God; workmen that need not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth, and not giving it in such large and indigestible quantities.

These are a few reasons why we do not reach the masses.

THE LEAVEN IS SPREADING!

Notwithstanding all that has been said and done and written, some continue to ask: "What must I do?" "How must I do it?" I submit the following answer:

"Sardis, Miss., Aug. 15, 1899.

"J. R. Bingham—

"MY DEAR BROTHER: I will now report what we have done in the interest of the Twentieth Century Education Movement. Early in the year our presiding elder, Dr. T. C. Wier, preached an excellent sermon on Christian Education, setting before the people what they would be expected to do this year and next for educational purposes. I then distributed all the literature I could get hold of among the Methodists of the town. I then supplied the members of the choir with copies of the programme, so they could practice the music for the proper observance of the day. I then copied the names of the church members into the book prepared for that purpose. When the day arrived programmes were scattered all through the congregation, and the programme was strictly observed, even to preaching on the text given in the programme. [Good!—J. R. B.] I then held up the roll-book containing the names of church members, and told them I was ready to receive responses. I think Sardis will pay every cent this year and next. I believe this, and am doing what I can in this direction. I am with you and the church in this matter with all my heart. I do not intend to leave a stone unturned calculated to lead to the accomplishment. Truly,

"AMOS KENDALL."

How complete the answer, and how inspiring the hopefulness of this young-old veteran of more than half a century in the itinerant ranks! Let the young men of the Conference look to their laurels!

Here is answer number two:

"Starkville, Miss., Aug. 14, 1899.

"DEAR BRO. BINGHAM: Starkville circuit hopes to do her part with the Twentieth Century Fund. Have presented the cause at two churches. First one, under unfavorable circumstances, subscribed thirteen dollars. Many more will subscribe from that church. At the second church a membership of twenty-six subscribed thirty-one and 25-100 dollars. Some were absent who, I think, will subscribe. They are glad to do so. We have three churches yet to hear from, and we think the circuit will pay one dollar per member. The Lord is blessing us as a church, and a thank-offering is due. I believe the church recognizes this as a privilege more than a duty.

"Your brother in Christ,

"S. A. BROWN."

This, from a young preacher less than five years in the Conference, will make the old men to rejoice that the cause to which they have devoted so many toilsome years will be committed to such faithful young men. The most cheering feature of these two reports is not the work already done, splendid as that is, but the declared purpose to persevere till complete victory is won, and the hopeful spirit which breathes in every line.

Carrollton reports one more name added to the "paid list," and three dollars cash added to the fund.

Let the reports increase in number and amount from week to week.

J. R. BINGHAM.

W. F. M. S., LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Believing that frequent reports from the auxiliaries will arouse a wider interest in the missionary column which the ADVOCATE has so kindly placed at our disposal, I cordially invite the members of the W. F. M. S to send me by postal card any and every item of intelligent interest within their societies, and then watch the column for reports.

In this issue are given extracts from a letter written by Miss Atkinson to Mrs. Foster, State corresponding secretary, hearing good news of our very own Bible woman in Soochow. It is encouraging to know that our seed-sowing in far-away China is bearing rich fruit.

"I think I have not written of the change in your Bible woman, Mrs. Sung, who, with her husband, was living with us in our Chinese house in West Soochow. We hadn't a better nor more capable woman in the whole mission than Mrs. Sung, and it troubled us to have to give her up in that capacity; but her husband was removed to another centre and each given a day school.

"Miss Ng has taken the place as Bible woman made vacant by Mrs. Sung's removal, and you have lost nothing by the change. I found Miss Ng in an obscure day school in Shanghai about eleven years ago. She became a Christian while in that school, and afterward I took her out and educated her in McTyeire School. Her mother was converted soon after, and became our Bible woman also (after her husband's death). Miss Ng is with her mother, and a little brother is with them also, studying in the Anglo-Chinese School. We are hoping to take Miss Ng's sister with us when we open the new girl's school, and then four of the family will be together.

"Miss Ng speaks and writes English very nicely, considering her opportunities. She is a lovely young woman about twenty-four years of age—a real lady in manner and feeling. Above all, she is one of the most spiritual women I have ever known, our own race not excepted. She is unselfish to a fault (if that be possible), and has no desire for worldly gain. She was offered a position as teacher in the new school for girls in Shanghai, opened by the native officials, where no Christianity is taught, her salary to be three times what we were giving her; but without one word of advice from us, she refused it for her position with us. She wants to educate her sister, and to do this she and her sister say they are willing to wear the clothes they have now for two or three years. Miss Ng dresses very neatly, but plainly.

"Last year, at Conference, the Bishop separated our work on that side of the city into a separate station, giving us a native and foreign pastor both. We have met with phenomenal success. Mr. Nance, in whom you are especially interested, was appointed our foreign pastor, and he has been so kind to us, so interested in the work. We have no preacher whose religious views I appreciate more than I do his, and we have so enjoyed him and Mrs. Nance; but, alas! Bishop Wilson has changed Mr. Nance and his school to Shanghai. We are all broken up about it. They have sent us Mr. Cline, but we don't know him yet.

"Miss Williams lives with me, and we are more than a mile away from any of our kind. We regret that, but so far as work is concerned, we feel that no one is better situated. It is most encouraging work, but we are at a disadvantage, because we are so crowded and our rooms not comfortable.

"Everything has stopped three weeks (in February) for the Chinese New Year's holidays. We will resume work at the beginning of the Chinese New Year full of hope for these people, whom we are so gladly serving, and coming to love more and more, because they are his, and have a right with us to the inheritance.

"I will send you a photo of our Chinese women workers soon. The card has five on it. The one standing in the center is Mrs. Sung, and to the right of her you will see Miss Ng, wearing glasses.

"I should think several of your society members might enjoy a correspondence with Miss Ng, and I am sure it would do her good. Letters directed to 'Miss Ng Yoeh-wo,' Soochow, in my care, will reach her.

"Very sincerely,

"VIRGINIA M. ATKINSON,
"Soochow."

Will not some of the members of the societies write to Miss Ng, and thereby give her the encouragement and pleasure of knowing that she is held in prayerful remembrance by her sisters on this side of the globe?

As aged palm trees bear the heaviest cinsters, so lives which are planted in and nourished from God know no term of their fruitfulness, and are full of sap and verdant when lives that have shut themselves off from him are like an old stump, gaunt and dry, fit only for firewood.—Alexander Maclaren, D. IN MEMORIAM.

Elizabeth Cornelia Grace, the daughter of Perry Humphry Hanna and Mary Ann Hanna, was born in East Carroll parish, March 18, 1853, and departed this life at Plaquemine Brûlee, Acadia parish, June 7, 1899. After the death of her father her widowed mother, with her family, moved from East Carroll to West Carroll parish, and settled near Floyd. It was here she first gave her young womanhood to Christ and united with the M. E. Church, South. Here she became more active in the church than ever before, which resolution she faithfully kept.

In 1877 she was married to R. C. Grace, a member of the Louisiana Conference. It was Sister Grace's ambition to promote the happiness and ministerial usefulness of her husband, and she succeeded admirably. Having no issue, she was at liberty to travel with him, which she did extensively, and in this way was a great comfort as well as a great help in his pastoral labors. She sought her husband's approbation in all things, and, finding it, her happiness was perfect. The disturbance of a connubial bliss and domestic union so full and delectations is one of the providences of the Most High.

The closing up of such a life could not be otherwise than glorious beyond description. For some days before her departure her religious frame of mind was attended by great enlargement and augmentation. In conversation with a friend she said: "I have recently thought so much of heaven. It is constantly before me. In whatever direction I turn its visions break upon my gaze, and its glories fill my soul with rapturous awe." If her life was beautifully consistent, her death was a glorious triumph over the king of terrors. When informed by her grief-stricken husband of her speedy dissolution, the intelligence was received by her with heroic calmness and serenity. Looking into the face of her husband, who was watching by her bedside eager to catch every word that fell from her dying lips, she said, "Jesus has come for me and I must go." Her husband replied, "Dear, I don't want you to leave me." She answered: "Yes, but Jesus has come, and says I must go. It will not be long before you will follow me. Do your work, and then come home. I will meet you at the gate." She then sang with a strong voice,

"'Tis so sweet to trust in Jesus,
Just to take him at his word."

Then in a few moments her blood-washed spirit on wings of light swept upward through ether's trackless waste to the city of gold, which, on reaching, she entered the pearly portals, and by kindred dear welcomed to the throne and companionship of the blest.

Weep not, my Brother Grace; your loss is her eternal gain. Soon, if faithful, you will join her in realms of fadeless glory, never to part, never to suffer more.

NOTICE.

To the Executive Committee of Church Extension of Louisiana—

DEAR BRETHREN: There are pigeonholed in the desk of some member of your committee two applications for aid to the State and Parent Boards of the Woman's H. M. Society from the Melville and Big Cane charge. One of them asks for a loan, and was sent to the president for his approval, and that of the Executive Committee, he—the president—promising to sign himself and send it to the several members of his committee for approval. Several weeks and more have elapsed, and I can not hear from them, and we are in a hurry and needing the money to complete our parsonage here at Melville. I would write to the several members of this committee, but do not know just who they are. So, through the kindness of the editor, I take this opportunity to trace these applications.

Dear brethren, one of you has them; please sign and send through the whole committee and return to me, and I will forward to Mrs. Lyons, who will get it before the Parent Board and Central Committee as soon as possible, so the one for loan may be considered, and if our case proves worthy, we may secure the loan right away, because our case is so urgent.

Brethren, let us not cause an enterprise of this kind to suffer because of thoughtlessness. Fraternally,

J. W. LEE.

FROM THE WORK.

PROVIDENCE CAMP MEETING.

The Providence Camp Meeting began at 8 P. M., July 27, and closed Aug. 1, at 3 P. M. The attendance on Sunday was as large as usual, but not so large during the week, owing to sickness and also as the farmers were not through work. The meeting was good and made a good impression for the next meeting. We suppose the tents will be full next year. There were twenty-five applicants for church membership, all of whom were children. We had good preaching. The preachers present were Dr. Featherston, A. B. Nicholson, R. Selby, V. V. Boone, J. M. Morse, H. A. Gatlin, J. D. Ellis, L. F. Alford and Early Gray. Miss Grace Loper, of Wesson, was organist and she promptly and efficiently did her part, even without the least criticism from anyone.

There was a camp here in ante-bellum days, but between what dates I do not know. It was rebuilt and revived twenty-six years ago next October.

C. MCDONALD.

OXFORD CAMP MEETING.

The Oxford Camp Meeting has just closed. It was one of the greatest meetings in the history of that old camp ground. About twenty-eight souls were converted and a great number reclaimed. Many Christians were made to rejoice as never before from a consciousness of the presence of the Lord. Many—both young and old—entered into a covenant to have family worship in the home. Indeed, it was a meeting of the old-time power. I have attended many revival meetings, but never saw better order. Even the people who were not religious looked and acted as if they were there to worship. The congregation at this encampment is made up from Oxford station and the Abbeville circuit. Besides the two pastors—Rev. R. M. Standifer and the writer—we had Dr. S. A. Steel, and Bro. J. C. Park, of Water Valley. It is useless for us to say anything of Dr. Steel as a preacher. Surely he has but few equals in the pulpit. His preaching and earnest appeals on this occasion will be long remembered. Surely Bro. Park's coming was of the Lord. He proved himself the man for the place. He came to the first service and remained on the ground to the last. He has the combined gift of preaching strong sermons and in a sensible way pressing them to results. The camp meeting preacher of the North Mississippi Conference!

HELP NEEDED.

As I was leaving Hammond, La., some of the brethren there asked me to write something to the ADVOCATE with reference to the condition of Southern Methodism in that town. On invitation of the pastor, Rev. J. H. Montgomery, I spent six days there recently. Our church has a small membership of good people in Hammond, but no church-house. They are struggling against opposition of almost every description. In the town there are about seven different denominations without harmony enough to even attend each other's revival efforts. During the few days I was there we could scarcely get any attendance—only our own little Southern Methodist crowd, and a few of the M. E. Church people. The majority of Hammond's population are from the Northern States. The pastor got twelve more members during our recent revival efforts, some of whom came to us from the M. E. Church, and are good people. We were glad to get them. Our people have a nice lot there and a little cash collected, but they are not financially able to build without help.

Now would be a good time for some open-hearted people to put some of the Lord's money into a church-house at Hammond. When our people get a house of their own there it will result in the establishment of a good membership. Bro. Montgomery is a consecrated and promising young man, with the cause of God at heart. I predict for him a bright future.

We had good times and additions while with that congenial and lovable pastor, Bro. N. J. Roberts, at Franklinton, La.

Am at home now for a few days' rest. I have had more invitations for the Summer and part of the Fall than I could accept. However, I could make a few more engagements with pastors needing help in October and November.

The ADVOCATE is growing in interest among the people where I go.

W. D. BASS.

Corinth, Miss., Aug. 12, 1899.

Rev. T. J. Norsworthy, Camden, Miss., Aug. 12, 1899: "Our meeting at Thomastown has closed, and a wonderful one it was. Never before had we seen such manifestations of divine power as were seen during this meeting. About thirty-five professed conversion, and many were reclaimed from a backslidden state, while the whole church was wonderfully revived. Much of the old-time shouting was indulged. The work was not confined to the tent in which the meeting was conducted, but in the homes quite a number were converted. One brother, who had left a distant city for a visit in the country, was caught in the tide and swept into the 'haven of rest.' The last words spoken to me by him as he, with shining face, bade us good-bye were, 'God works in mysterious ways his wonders to perform,' and so he does. A striking illustration of the depth of conviction prevalent is found in this: After service one night, while sitting in our room in conversation with our host, a young man who had manifested no interest in the meeting whatever, but who had made it the occasion of mirth, came into the room, and, falling upon our neck, requested us to pray. There he found peace with God. There was joy in that home that night. When we say we had no ministerial assistance we mean that we had none in the pulpit. We had with us, however, Rev. Claud M. Simpson, a licentiate, who rendered valuable and highly appreciated service for Christ. His choir numbered about one hundred. Bro. Eugene Terry, father of our fellow-itinerant, W. A. Terry, was with us, praying and working in the Spirit, much to our advantage. We also had with us Bro. Bennie Odum, of the Protestant Methodist Church, who was a benediction to us; and last, but not least, comes that old father in Israel, S. D. Terry, who has preached the blessed gospel for over fifty years, who, though too feeble to preach, was a great blessing to us. His very presence, to say nothing of his bright testimonies to the power and sweetness of the gospel, was an inspiration to this young preacher. We shall always account it a blessing to have been associated with this man of God. 'Father' Terry says this was one of the most wonderful meetings he ever witnessed. Congregations ranged in number from six to eight hundred. We are pushing the work. Camden circuit is moving up, and will not be behind at Conference. We seemed in good subscriptions the amount of the assessments made by district stewards against this appointment. More anon."

Farmer Fahnstock thinks he owns the stock he is so proud of. But as a matter of fact the stock owns him. He is the humble servant of horse, cow and pig. He looks after them better than he looks after himself, and feeds them before he feeds himself. That is why it so often happens that just about the time that Farmer Fahnstock has reached the place where he can take things easy, he breaks down.

No class of people have been more quickly appreciative of the tonic properties of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery than farmers and stock raisers. They have found it prevents as well as cures disease. It keeps the stomach in healthy operation, stimulates the organs of digestion and nutrition and increases the secretions of the blood-making glands. The use of "Golden Medical Discovery" at seasons when the strain of work is greatest, keeps the system in perfect working order and prevents the break down which comes from over drafts on the strength.

"I used ten bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and several vials of his 'Pleasant Pellets' a year ago this spring, and have had no trouble with indigestion since," writes Mr. W. T. Thompson, of Townsend, Broadwater Co., Montana. "Words fail to tell how thankful I am for the relief, as I had suffered so much and it seemed that the doctors could do me no good. I got down in weight to 125 pounds, and was not able to work at all. Now I weigh nearly 160 and can do a day's work on the farm. I have recommended your medicines to several, and shall always have a good word to say for Dr. Pierce and his medicines."

"Golden Medical Discovery" contains no alcohol, whisky or other intoxicant.

A single item of medical knowledge when life is at stake has a value past computation. Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser has 1008 pages of priceless paragraphs. This great work is sent absolutely free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of mailing only. Send 21 one-cent stamps for paper-bound edition, or 31 stamps for edition in cloth. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

DISREGARD FOR LAW.

One of the most appalling characteristics of present-day civilization is the widely prevalent and constantly increasing disregard for law. We do not now refer to that most horrid form of lawlessness—lynching. On that subject we have already spoken, time and again, with no uncertain sound.

Lawlessness abounds in many forms. Strikes are usually attended with most flagrant lawlessness. Of course, a strike in itself is not lawless. Any man, or any set of men, have a right to quit work. But when strikers band themselves together and use violence to prevent others from doing the work which they refuse to do, they place themselves in the same category with lynchers. Then, too, the wholesale boycotting of everybody that patronizes the person or corporation against whom the strike is directed is a most heinous offense against good citizenship.

Of this form of lawlessness the South has had comparatively little. It would be exceedingly unwise, however, for the people of the South on this account to draw conclusions that are favorable to self-complacency. The only reason why there are fewer strikes in the South than in other sections is that there are fewer large cities. Large cities are natural hot beds for this particular form of mobocracy. Should the roll of Time's chariot wheels ever bring about in the South such aggregations of population in urban centres as are to be found in other sections, strikes, with their awful concomitants and sequences, will be no less prevalent here than elsewhere.

Even now the South has little reason to felicitate herself, or assume a holier-than-thou attitude towards other sections. Who needs to be told that in many localities in the South certain laws are simply "dead letters on the statute books?" We refer more particularly to anti-gambling laws and laws for the suppression and regulation of the liquor traffic. In many localities there is not enough good citizenship to bring about an attempt at the enforcement of these laws. In others the attempt is made, but proves an ignominious failure.

Sometimes the failure is due to the fact that public officials are in sympathy with the law-breakers. An official who is himself addicted to gaming is not likely to lose much sleep in devising plans for the arrest of his partners in crime; and one who makes illicit purchases of alcoholic beverages is not apt to overexert himself in an effort to place the illicit vender in the clutches of the law. Oftimes men are elected to office for the reason that they are in sympathy with these forms of lawlessness—a proof that "the children of this world are wiser in their generation than the children of light."

Another great obstacle to the enforcement of law is the difficulty of procuring evidence. Legions of men will commit perjury rather than testify against those who have sold them drink, or who have been their co-participants in gaming.

Corruption in the jury box is another stupendous obstacle. Venal men often seek a juror's seat for the revenue there is in it in the shape of bribes. Others render a verdict contrary to evidence on account of a fellow-feeling for the culprit at the bar. They are unwilling to condemn those who are their partners in transgression. Good men unwittingly play into the hands of law-breakers by shirking jury duty.

Crimes against suffrage are widely prevalent. For reasons that are apparent, there has been in this section in the last few years a diminution of the grosser crimes of this sort—ballot-box stuffing, false registration, fraudulent returns, etc. But new forms of this type of lawlessness have come into existence.

The primary election—a modern contrivance devised in the interest of good citizenship—has become in many instances an instrument for the corruption of the ballot. Men who are disqualified, and can not vote at the regular election, are not only allowed, but actually invited by those at the head of affairs to vote in the primaries. Since, under present conditions, a nomination by the primaries is in most of the Southern States equivalent to an election, this puts in the hands of those who have no legal ballot the power to defeat the will of the majority of the legal voters. In one county it was shown recently that more than eight hundred names on the registration books represented men who are disqualified. Yet these men, who are not citizens, actually voted in the primaries in palpable violation of the law. And this is not by any means a solitary instance.

It may seem a little less criminal thus to change the result of an election by the illegal manipulation of a primary than by the time-dishonored method of ballot-box stuffing, but is not the difference seeming rather than real? In the eyes of patriotism and righteousness, what difference does it make whether you kill a man's vote by stealing his ballot and depositing another in its stead, or by putting on top of it that of a man who has no more right to vote than "a heathen Chinee?" "Twelve of one and a dozen of the other," is the only ethical answer. It does not take half an eye to see that under such a regime the balance of power is placed within the grasp of the vilest elements of society, the corrupt tools of the whisky ring or any other vampire that feasts and fattens upon the blood of the body politic.

The use of whisky at the polls for the purpose of influencing voters is another crime that is said to be widely prevalent, with no visible effort for its extermination.

We would be untrue to our convictions of duty if we did not lift our voice in vigorous protest against these as well as other forms of lawlessness. We plead for a higher standard of citizenship. We urge all who possess the sacred right of suffrage to rise in the might of a noble manhood and do their utmost to put an end to these iniquities. Failure to do so is fraught with peril. It is the natural tendency of lawlessness to increase both in volume and in flagrancy. As sure as fate these forms of lawlessness, if not checked, will prove in the not-distant future a veritable Pandora's box of political ills.

A NEW BOOK.

STUDIES OF BIBLE TRUTHS. By J. C. Keener, D. D., one of the Bishops of the M. E Church, South. Nashville, Tenn.: Publishing House of the M. E Church, South. Barbee & Smith, Agents. 1899. Price, $1.

This work is a fine specimen of the bookmaker's art. Paper, typography and binding are all that could be desired. The work is dedicated to the supernannuated preachers of Southern Methodism. It is divided into five chapters under the following headings: 1. The Creative Glory in Its Two Distinct Realms—the Natural, the Moral; 2. Job, a Prince of the East, and His Inspired Epic; 3. The Apocalypse of Jesus Christ; 4. The First Resurrection; 5. The Ascent of Our Lord. These are high themes, and they are fittingly treated. The reader will find here the results of extensive reading and strong, independent thinking through the long years of the author's ministerial life. That the diction is stately and sublime need hardly be said, the author's name being a sufficient guarantee on that point. The author's large circle of friends will be delighted to possess themselves of this latest production of his brain and heart. It will live as an expression of our beloved senior Bishop's mature thought long after he shall have translated to a higher sphere. It has already been adopted as one of the books of our Epworth League reading course.

LITERARY NOTES.

BY W. F. H.

In Ainslee's Magazine, for August, there are several newsy and well-considered articles, of which may be mentioned: "The Evolution of the Signal Corps," by Gen. A. W. Greeley; "Millionaire Socialists," by Arthur Henry; "Commerce and Politics," by W. P. Corwine.

In the Century, for August, "The Present Situation in Cuba" is graphically stated in a brief article by Major-Gen. Leonard Wood. Jacob Riis writes of "Feast-Days in Little Italy." In "The River of Tea," Miss E. R Scidmore writes of the Yang-tze-kiang, and especially of the city of Hankow. "Old, unhappy, far-off days, and battles long ago," are the theme of Prof. Wheeler's "Alexander in India," with its graphic account of the great and decisive victory that marked the conqueror's crossing of the river Hydaspes.

CENTENARY COLLEGE.

The session for 1899-1900 will begin Wednesday, Sept. 6, at 10 o'clock A. M. Prominent speakers will be on hand to deliver addresses. All new students should reach Jackson, Tuesday, Sept. 5, or Wednesday morning, the sixth. Those coming by Vicksburg on the Memphis Express—first train—will stop at Ethel, where hacks will be furnished for one passenger and trunk for 75 cents. Those coming on the Vicksburg Express will purchase tickets to McManus. Students from the south coming on the Vicksburg Express will stop at McManus. Those on the Memphis Express—last train—will stop at Ethel.

It is important that new students come on the dates named above, that they may be examined and classed at once.

Next session promises to be the largest in the history of the college.

CHAS. W. CRISLER.

Jackson, La., Aug. 19, 1899.

"A RARE TREAT."

First Street Church, Macon, Ga., will soon have the pleasure of a visit from Dr. J. B. Fearn and wife, of Changshu'h, China. At the beginning of this year this church petitioned the Board of Missions to be assigned a missionary in China, whose support they would assume. Dr. Fearn was the man, and the church has every month made contributions for his support.

The Wednesday night after the first Sunday in every month a missionary prayer meeting has been held, and especial prayer has been made for Dr. Fearn and his work. At this meeting many phases of missionary work have been discussed. Well-prepared map-talks have been given, making real the different countries discussed.

The support of an individual missionary has been an inspiration to the church, and has quickened the interest in missions at large.—Wesleyan Advocate.

RIVAL FEVER GERMS.

A commission of officers of the United States Marine Hospital Service, delegated to investigate the alleged yellow fever germs discovered respectively by Prof. Sanarelli, of Bologna, Italy, and by Surgeon-General of the United States Army Sternburg, has concluded its examinations. The commission has reported that the Sternburg germ is not a yellow fever microbe, but that Sanarelli has discovered the genuine article. Another conclusion reached by the commission is that this microbe is introduced into the human body by inhalation into the lungs. The commission expresses the belief that a serum can be made with which to combat the infection. Sanarelli's microbe is named "bacillus icteroides," while that of General Sternburg is called "bacillus X."

A NOBLE EXAMPLE.

Rev. Dr. Goucher, of the M. E. Church, has for fifteen years supported more than 100 primary village schools in India, at an aggregate cost of more than $100,000. The schools have been the means of educating pastors, presiding elders, teachers, local preachers and day-school teachers, through whose influence, as estimated, 27,000 converts have been added to the church.—Central Methodist.

DECREASE OF PENSIONS.

The fact that no less than sixty-three pension attorneys have been disbarred and ten more suspended is one of the pleasing features of the report of the Commissioner of Pensions for the year ending June 30, 1899. There are now 1,163 of these pension attorneys under ban. Although 40 991 names were added to the pension rolls during the year, there were 43,186 dropped, so that the list shows a reduction of 2,195; but there are still 991 519 remaining. The short war with Spain has caused 16 986 soldiers and sailors to apply for a pension, but only 295 were allowed up to the close of the fiscal year. The expenditures amounted to $138 253 922 91 This leaves a balance of nearly $2 000 000 returned to the treasury. These facts show why the present commissioner has excited the ire of the pension attorneys, and explain their efforts for his removal. Members of Congress are too often afraid to speak of pension abuses, but they should feel at liberty to commend the good work of Commissioner Evans.—Exchange.

WOMAN'S WORK.

Dr. Young J. Allen says that he knows of nothing more encouraging, more interesting, suggestive or inspiring than the new impetus given to female education in China by the recent establishment of a Chinese girls' school at Shanghai by the Chinese ladies themselves. "I believe in woman's work," he writes to the Woman's Missionary Advocate, "have always believed in it, and now that my recent visit home has more fully taught me the place of woman in our civilization, I am the more fully convinced that this beginning of the enfranchisement of woman in China is at the same time the beginning of China's regeneration, and that there is, after all, a grand and glorious future for the sons and daughters of China redeemed."—Richmond Advocate.

AMERICA AT THE PEACE CONGRESS.

This country is justly proud of the work done by our delegates in the Peace Congress. These picked men, when brought into close relation and contact with the picked representatives of twenty-six nations, did not suffer at all in the comparison. They were recognized as unselfish, dignified, discerning and accomplished diplomats, worthy of the land they represented, and of the body in which they served. They took, as a whole, a leading part in the work done, while Mr. Andrew D. White, the chairman, and Mr. Holls, the secretary, especially distinguished themselves. The demeanor and ability of these delegates have made a fresh revelation of our reserve forces to the world.—Central Advocate.

THE ZIONISTS.

No very great amount of attention is being paid by the religious world to the Zionist movement among the Jews; yet a large number of Hebrews, some of whom are men of wealth and influence among their people, are interested in it. This movement is one which looks to a general migration of Jews to Palestine as a fulfillment of Old Testament prophecy. The Zionists are a romantic feature of modern religious life.—Central Methodist.

A TEMPERANCE LECTURE.

"I figured out years ago," said a prosperous farmer, "that with very moderate drinking, I'd drink an acre of good land every year. So I quit." Here is a temperance lecture done up in a small parcel convenient for handling.—Western Advocate.

[This is an under-statement of the case. We know many men who drink several acres a year.—EDITOR.]

New Zealand Methodists propose to enroll themselves in groups of fifty, with a captain at the head of each group, who will undertake to communicate with each one of the fifty in behalf of the Twentieth Century Fund and report to the superintendent. For those who do not feel able to give one pound, and yet wish to contribute and have their names inscribed on the Twentieth Century Historic Roll, "guinea cards" will be provided, ruled with spaces for twelve names and twenty-one months.—Richmond Christian Advocate.

A FIFTH WHEEL.

This writer has long been of the opinion that if the District Conference gives proper attention, as required by the Discipline, to the Sunday-school and Epworth League work, then the Sunday-school and Epworth League District Conference is not a necessity, and should be abolished by the next General Conference. The truth is, that the preachers can not afford either the time or expense of two District Conferences every year, and to attempt to hold them together means confusion worse confounded, and distinction without difference.—Richmond Advocate.

SAN FRANCISCO PRIMARIES.

The new charter of San Francisco was very generally commented upon last year. It embodies several modern theories of government, which are theoretically a great improvement. The primaries are held under the direction of the municipal election commissioners, and all the parties intending to make nominations must do it at the same time. The first test of the new law, last week, is said to have put the bosses to rout, and to have thrown the machine into a paroxysm of wrath and disappointment.—Exchange.

It is said that there are in the Southern Methodist Church forty eight colleges and universities, valued at approximately $3,700,000, with an income of $583,000; an attendance of 7,517 students. There are also nineteen separate academies—estimated value, $561,850—with an annual income of about $66,500, with an enrollment of nearly 2,500 students.—Midland Methodist.

Speaking of the recent session of the British Wesleyan Conference, Zion's Herald says: "A great sensation was produced by the presentation before the Conference, and also on the platform of St. James' Hall, Sunday afternoon, of eighteen French ex-priests who have, with many others, recently come out of the Church of Rome and are living witnesses to the power of the gospel. The movement is one of the most remarkable and promising of modern times."

Under date of the eighteenth, Rev. J. M. Wyatt, presiding elder of the Aberdeen district, writes: "Our district promises to measure up fairly well. Preachers are faithfully at work, some of them being blessed with gracious revivals in their charges. Bro. W. O. Sadler has been at the point of death at his father's home in Corinth. We devoutly hope the crisis is past, and that he may be spared of the Lord to do many years of faithful service in his vineyard. Rev. J. T. Lewis, a recent graduate of Millsaps College, will take his place on Shannon circuit."

Under date of Aug. 17, Rev. J. M. Martin writes: "Our camp meeting, which began on the fifth of this month, closed on the fourteenth instant. It was rather a hard pull, but the meeting was a success. Five persons were received into the church, and four children were baptized. We had some bright conversions. The preaching was done by Presiding Elder Harper, Rev. H. C. White, of Lake Providence, and Rev. A. S. J. Neill, preacher in charge of Winnsboro circuit. The brethren preached with great power and they delighted my people and their pastor. Our collections ordered by the Annual Conference were covered by cash and subscription at this (Oak Grove) appointment."

EPWORTH LEAGUE DEPARTMENT.

"ALL FOR CHRIST."

LOUISIANA.

REV. THOMAS B. CLIFFORD, Jackson, La., EDITOR.

If you would like something rinh and rare, rnad Bishop Fitzgerald's address on page 9 of Nashville Advocate, under date of Aug. 10.

A recent report shnws the following membership for Epworth Leagues: M. E. Church, 1,750,000, M. E. Church, Snuth, 300,000; Methodist Church of Canada, 81,935

The fact seems to be assured that a Conference nf Sonthern Leagners will be held some time next year.

Dr. DuBose is anxious to resch the twenty-thnusand mark for the Epworth Era hy Jan. 1, 1900. Let all the Leaguers help.

The Texas Avenne (Shreveport) League has a cheering nnte in the Era, of Ang. 10. We know those Leagners. They are a loyal band. Send us a few lines fnr the League Department in this ADVOCATE, Miss Alice.

"Odette," writing from the "high hills of Holston," nommends the "Holston plan" for the Leagnes. The League president, Rev. T. C. Shuler, is successfully working the plan in those parts.

The Bnrgnndy Street (New Orleans) League is fortunate in having for secretary an expert stenographer. The prnceedings of each meeting are thus preserved verbatim.

We have a lengthy commnnication from the Arcadia district (Louisiana Conference), which we hope to publish in our next issue. We would ask the Leagues, however, to be guided as mnch as possible by the sentence, "Mnltum in parvo."

MISSISSIPPI.

REV. HENRY G. HAWKINS, Madison Miss., ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

Do yon know the number of your chapter?

"Bob" Taylor defines dancing, "The delirinm tremens of love."

It was proposed at the recent Christian Endeavor Convention in Detroit that $1 000,000 be raised for the establishment of a religious paper, to be issued six days in every week. For the Christian youth of America to greet the new centnry with such an organ wonld be glorious. May the enterprise take practicable shape!

It would seem practicable that our Publishing House Agents have The Methodist Review, The Nashville Christian Advocate, The Epworth Era and The Children's Visitor put regularly upon sale in all the respectable news-stands of our Southern cities.

If the district secretaries appointed by State League President Featherstun will carry out his directions, our Mississippi regiment of the Epworth League army will advance to the front. It is said that Philip could give commands just as well as Alexander, but Alexander would see to it that his commands were obeyed. Let it be so in this case.

If the League has helped you in your "striving to enter in at the strait gate," the associate editor would be pleased that you write him your experience therein.

How to get rid of the open saloon, and also of the secret hidden saloon, is a question well worthy the consideration and discussion of our American young people. And in the South the problem of the two races proves itself still a live one, calling for solution. The coming generation of Southern youth can not study this too well.

Early in August the council of the League of West End, Meridian, appointed a committee to collect the $1.25 missionary assessment for the West End Church. We will join with Pastor Ellis in giving praise to those Leaguers, if they succeed in the undertaking.

The Epworth Era will be sent from now until Jan. 1, 1900, for 25 cents. This is to separate addresses, and taken in any quantity from one to a hundred.

MISS M'NEMAR.

The members nf the Mississippi Conference have all known and rejoiced in the acceptation by the Woman's Board of Foreign Missinns of the young woman the Confernnce has been preparing for missinnary work, and of her appnintment to Mexinn.

Tuesday, August 8, on the eve of her departnre for this field, at the home of Mrs. S E. Smylie, Meridian, an informal reception was given Miss McNemar, that frinnds and those bonnd hy ties of love and sympathy fnr the nanse to which she has given her all, might come and pay a last tribute of interest, lnve, and God speed.

During the evening she spnke to thnse assembled in her own sweet, simple words nf her wnrk and the glad hnpes it holds fnr her. The beautiful cnnsecration hymn:

"I'll go where you want me to go, dear Lord,
Over mountain or hill or plain;
I'll say what you want me to say, dear Lord,
I'll be what you want me to be," cnnld never have been mnre appropriate than at such a time as this.

Toward the close a surprise awaited Miss McNemar—the happy forethought of ever-thnnghtful friends. Her appreciation of the exquisite gold watch presented her by the Conference society was readily expressed, and almost child-like in its gennine sincerity. Utility was combined with expressions of love in the selection of these parting gifts, for, as an individnal remembrance, Miss Smylie, her much-beloved friend, gave her a chaste and elegant silver cnp.

Not only did all foreign missionary workers evince their interest and appreciation of this, their charge and representative, by their presence on this evening, but the Epworth League, in a body, and many others, came to say, not the snrrowful "fare well," but, "Fare thee ever well in thy labnr for the Lord."

Miss Leila McNemar is not the first, nor the second, nor even the third missionary from onr Mississippi Cnnference who has gone to her foreign work from the home of Mrs. Smylie. The first two missionaries ever sent from this Conference, Dr. and Mrs. Lambuth, were married and went out from her home to foreign work.

Miss Elizabeth Hnghes started to her mission in China from this hospitable home, where church and foreign mission work has always had support and sympathy.

Miss McNamar, who had been for the month past with relatives, came with her sister to spend the last week before going ont with Miss Smylie, and from there, on the evening spoken of, left for her work in Saltillo, Mexico. X X is one of the war books which is likely to be in continuous demand. It is a panoramic record of the triumph of Yankee Doodle. The eagle flaps his wings on every page, and "Old Glory" waves around and above every scene. Prominent officers connected with the war are here portrayed, as well as many of the "men behind the guns." Military life is pictured to the eye, from recruiting to guard mount and skirmish line. Nor is the ludicrous omitted. The company cook receives the attention due to his importance; the mess is shown; cavalry scenes are given; the hospital arrangements are depicted; the heroines of the Red Cross service are displayed; street scenes in Havana, Santiago and elsewhere are unrolled, the new citizens or subjects (which are they?) of Uncle Sam appear and disappear as the leaves are turned.

In a word, the gazer visits the new localities and sees the tumultuous new life, without the risk or expense of a sea voyage.

The Album is 5½x8 inches, weighs 12 ounces, printed on finest coated paper.

KEEPING ONE'S SELF "UP TO DATE."

"Well, for my part, I don't think it pays for a busy housewife like myself to make such desperate efforts to keep up with the times," said a bright young girl-wife recently when I expostulated with her for dropping all her studies, and seemingly her interest in outside matters, to concentrate every thought on her new home. "What's the use of trying to keep up with my studies and reading," she continued, "unless I can have time enough to make it amount to something?"

"But it does pay, at any time and always, provided one has not allowed herself to lose her capacity for study," replied an earnest woman, who knew just what she was talking about; "and the way not to lose it is to keep up an effort in this direction, however limited it may be. Stop studying for even a little while, and study becomes hard and irksome; but by spending even a few minutes each day at some special branch of study, or reading of special interest, the mind may be kept in a receptive condition."

Don't "let go" the idea of daily study, however limited it may be; for however burdened with cares the housewife may be now, the years are sure to bring you leisure, when your boys and girls are grown up, and are able to relieve you, or no longer need your care. And in old age you may have more leisure than you want, unless you are able to busy your mind with matters of interest and intelligence.

We are beginning to learn that every age needs occupation, from babyhood to senility. The old man or woman needs it as much as the youth; and it is the duty of everyone to so conduct his life that his old age may be a sermon of happiness and cheerful interest to himself and of pleasure to others.—Christian Observer.

TURNING-POINTS IN LIFE.

Every now and then, in history, or in the history and science, we find some striking instance of turning-points in life. On such ground we see how a scandal about a bracelet, or the prohibition of a banquet, wrought a revolution, and precipitated a dynasty. Look at literary or scientific biography. Think of Crabbe's timorously calling on Burke and inducing him to look at his poetry. I have no doubt but Burke was very busy. But with lightning glance he looked over the lines and satisfied himself that real genius was there. When Crabbe left the statesman he was a made man. Burke, ever generous and enlightened, had made up his mind to take care of him. Or look at Faraday. He was only a poor book-seller's poor boy, working hard and honestly, but disliking his employment, and inspired with a pure thirst for knowledge. He had managed somehow or other to hear the great chemist, Humphry Davy, at the Royal Institution; and with trembling solicitude he sends him a fair copy of the notes which he has made of his lectures. The result is that Michael Faraday receives an appointment at the Royal Institution, and lays the foundation of his splendid and beneficent career. Looking back to the past, that was a great moment in the life of Columbus when, resting on a sultry day beneath the fierce Spanish sun, he asked for a drink of cold water at a convent door. The prior entered into conversation with him, and struck by his appearance, and afterwards by the magnificent simplicity of his ideas, gave him the introductions he so sorely needed; and thus Columbus gave to Castile and Aragon a new world.—Great Thoughts.

THEY ARE CHILDREN.

Don't expect too much of them; it has taken you forty years, it may be, to make you what you are, with all your lessons of experience, and I will dare say you are a faulty being at best. Above all, don't expect judgment in a child, or patience under trial. Sympathize in their mistakes and troubles; don't ridicule them. Remember not to measure a child's trial by your standard. "As one whom his mother comforteth," says the inspired writer; and beautifully does he convey to us the deep, faithful love which ought to be found in every woman's heart, the unfailing sympathy with all her children's griefs.

Let the memories of their childhood be as bright as you can make them. Grant them every innocent pleasure in your power. It has often roused our indignation to see how carelessly their little plans were thwarted by older persons, when a very little trouble on their part would have given the child pleasure, the memory of which would last a lifetime.

Lastly, don't think a child hopeless because it betrays some very bad habits. We have known children who seem to have been born thieves and liars, so early did they display these most undesirable traits of character; yet we have lived to see them become noble men and women, and ornaments to society. We must confess they had wise, affectionate parents. Whatever else you may be compelled by your circumstances in life to deny your child, give it what it most values—plenty of love.—The Christian Commonwealth.

THE TRAIN BOY.

He had done several little errands for the gentlemen in the Pullman car, and as the man got off he slipped a dollar into his hand.

"I like your looks, Jimmy," he said, kindly. "Now remember that you can make yourself what ever you wish. I don't mean by that that you may become a Vanderbilt, if you desire, or the President of the United States, but I do mean that you can be something better yet—a Christian man. Don't forget that."

It was ten years later before the two met again. Then Jimmy had just been made conductor on an important road, and in one of the passengers he recognized his old-time friend. The gentleman had changed but little in the ten years just passed, but it was hard to persuade him that the fine-looking young conductor was the ragged train-boy of whom he still retained a faint remembrance.

"But I certainly am he," Jimmy asserted, energetically, "and I've always wanted to tell you how much your words and your kindness did for me. I'd been getting into low company and growing sort o' wild and reckless, but your words just haunted me, and I got to wondering if that kind of thing paid. I concluded that I'd rather grow up a Christian man, as you said, than a drunken loafer, so I just stopped short and commenced over in dead earnest."

"A LITTLE HARDER."

Those of us who are inclined to give up to discouragement when things go wrong, might learn a helpful lesson from a young woman who had left home because her father was a drunkard. When she became a Christian, however, she announced her intention of returning, and doing what she could to reclaim him.

"But what will you do when he finds fault with all your efforts to please him?" some one asked her.

"Try a little harder," she answered, with a soft light in her eyes.

"Yes, but when he is unreasonable and unkind, you will be tempted to lose your temper, and answer him angrily. What will you do then?"

"Pray a little harder," came the answer with a fearless ring in the words.

The discourager had one more arrow in his quiver. "Suppose he should strike you, as he did before. What could you do but leave him again?"

"Love him a little harder," said the young Christian steadily.

It is pleasant to add that her splendid faith conquered. Through love and prayer and patient effort her father was not only reclaimed from his besetting sin, but proved Christ's power to save to the uttermost all that come unto him.—Selected.

LEMONADE OR WINE.

A young man, in company with several other gentlemen, called upon a young lady. Her father was present to assist in entertaining his guests, and offered wine, but the young lady asked:

"Did you call upon me or upon papa?"

Gallantry, if nothing else, compelled them to answer: "We called on you."

"Then you will please not drink wine. I have lemonade for my visitors."

The father urged his guests to drink, and they were undecided. The young lady added:

"Remember, if you called on me, then you drink lemonade; but if upon papa, why, in that case I have nothing to say."

The wine glasses were set down with their contents untasted. After leaving the house, one of the party exclaimed:

"That was the most effectual temperance lecture I ever heard!"—St. Louis Advocate.

So in fulfilling the duty of happiness we must learn to adapt ourselves to the conditions surrounding us, to keep sweet in temper and warm in heart, whatever blasts may blow without. If all the energy wasted in fretting at what can not be helped were applied to things that can be helped, there would soon be left few things that can not be helped. It is only by doing the possible things that we find that nothing is impossible. To do well the thing worth doing, nearest at hand, is the surest way of being happy.

Young man, attend to the voice of one who has possessed a certain degree of fame and who will shortly appear before his Maker. Read the Bible every day of your life.—Dr. Samuel Johnson.

FRUIT AS A MEDICINE.

While the general reader has been told many times of the advantages and desirability of a fruit diet, it may be that the traits and characteristics of the several fruits have not been as fully explained, in a concise form, as could be desired. Here are some useful suggestions, taken from a special article on the subject: Fresh ripe fruits are excellent for purifying the blood and toning up the system. As specific remedies, oranges are aperient. Sour oranges are highly recommended for rheumatism. Watermelon for epilepsy and for yellow fever. Cranberries for erysipelas are used externally as well as internally. Lemons for feverish thirst in sickness, for biliousness, low fevers, rheumatism, colds, coughs, liver complaint, etc. Blackberries as a tonic; useful in all forms of diarrhœa. Tomatoes are a powerful aperient for the liver, a sovereign remedy for dyspepsia and for indigestion. They are invaluable in all conditions of the system in which the use of calomel is indicated. Figs are aperient and wholesome. They are said to be valuable as a food for those suffering from cancer; they are used externally as well as internally.

Apples are useful in nervous dyspepsia; they are nutritious, medicinal and vitalizing; they aid digestion, clear the voice, correct the acidity of the stomach; are valuable in rheumatism, insomnia and liver troubles. An apple contains as much nutriment as a potato in a pleasanter and more wholesome form. Grapes dilute thick blood, send the circulation to the surface, remove obstructions from liver and lungs, dissolve and dislodge gravel and calculi, and bring the stomach and bowels to a healthy condition. Onions are almost the best nervine known. No medicine is so useful in cases of nervous prostration, and there is nothing that will so quickly relieve and tone up a worn-out system. Onions are useful in all cases of coughs, colds and influenza, in consumption, insomnia, hydrophobia, scurvy, gravel and kindred liver complaints. Eaten every other day, they soon have a clearing and whitening effect on the complexion.—Christian Work.

OUR $1 OFFER.

Much has been said about reducing the subscription price of the ADVOCATE. The only way in which a reduction can be brought about is by an increase in the number of subscribers. In order to facilitate this result, we make the following offer: Until further notice we will take new subscriptions at the rate of $1 for eight months. When seven thousand five hundred new names have been sent in at this rate with the cash, we will extend the time four months longer, thus reducing the price to $1 per annum. When the extension is made, old subscribers will get the benefit as well as new ones, provided they first pay up all arrearages. Of course, no commissions can be given under this offer. Address

LIKE A THIEF IN THE NIGHT,

Malaria creeps into the system and leaves a poison which saps its vitality until the well-known symptoms of CHILLS AND FEVER, INTERMITTENT FEVER, CONGESTION, BLOODY URINE, etc., will show their snake-like heads. Fortunately there is an antidote in DICKS' CHILLIFUGE, which absolutely exterminates Malaria in a few hours; so pleasant to the taste that children love to take it. It banishes fevers like mist before the morning sun; brings as a gift rose cheeks, health, happiness, and makes life worth the living.

MRS. FANNIE LUCAS FEATHERSTON

The subject of this notice had no superior and few equals in our State. As we approach the sanctity of this beautiful life we linger over it, that it is too great to be written by us. The least we can do is to call attention to one who was a success in every relation of life.

Sister Featherston made full proof of all her rare talents by consecrating them to the glory of God and the good of humanity. But few were ever so richly endowed. She was born and brought up in a family of great force and strength. Brought to Christ and joined the Methodist Church at eight years old, she was ever loyal to her church and its institutions. She loved her home and all that home meant to her. Fully capable, she was always ready and willing to do her part in any legitimate sphere of society. She was so strong that she adapted herself to all circumstances, and thus, in a powerful, and yet gentle, manner impressed her personality upon others. She put forth all her zeal and brain power in studying the best methods for accomplishing the most good in the Home Mission work. This department of our church will continue to prosper from the efforts of this good woman. She exhibited the Christ-life in her entire unselfishness in everything. Her thought was for others, nor did she count her life dear unto herself when others were in danger.

Last Fall, when she heard that her only son, Dr. J. W. Eckford, of Starkville was visiting some yellow fever patients at A. and M. College, she went at once to see if she could be of assistance to him.

She abounded in charity. Her unswerving adherence to right principle, and her patient, self-sacrificing labor for others, made her a successful leader wherever the church called her to work.

As the last days of a Christian reveal some of the most beautiful traits of character, Sister Featherston, a day or two before she died, requested her Sunday-school class of large boys to come to her bedside. She gave to each one a short message of love and parting advice that they will ever remember. We are not surprised that, by request of her good husband, this class acted as her pall-bearers at her funeral. Her delicate appreciation of Christ-like simplicity was brought out by her request that her funeral be held in the Sunday-school room of her church, and that no other service be held except the reading of the burial service.

Mrs. Fannie Lucas Featherston, wife of Dr. J. S. Featherston, of Macon, Miss., was born Sept. 7, 1845. She was translated to her glorious reward March 9, 1899. Her noble Christian husband and son have lost their best friend; her relatives a dear loved one, whose place no one can fill. Her church and the North Mississippi Conference have sustained a great loss. While we are bereaved, we rejoice in the hope that we will meet in heaven.

J. A. BOWEN.

Columbus, Miss.

A TRIBUTE TO MOTHER.

MRS. JANE S. GIBBS, second daughter of Col. John Lawson Irwin and Martha Elizabeth Mitchel, was born in Jefferson county, Miss., March 13, 1824; married at Vicksburg, Miss., Dec. 3, 1845, to Edward Fitzgerald Gibbs, son of John Gibbs, and died at Grenada, Miss., Feb. 21, 1899.

Reared in the country, and of strong religious parentage, she early gave evidence of those decided virtues which gave to her more than usual attractive person the added charm of a pure Christian character. From childhood her heart beat in loving sympathy for the distressed, with a hand ever open to aid the unfortunate. Early left a widow by the yellow fever scourge of 1855, which not only took from her side a noble Christian husband and true man, but a second daughter and namesake, leaving three daughters and one son with which to battle against the world. No hand was ever more tender, no heart more loving, or will more active, as when giving "even a cup of cold water in His dear name" to the wounded and dying sons of our Southland during the terrible days and scenes of the siege at Vicksburg, when the halls of the Vick homestead ran red with the blood of martyrs sacrificed upon the altar of their country. Amid such experiences as these, and during subsequent seasons of epidemic, were developed those qualities of heart and life so rare to find in man or woman. Pursuing the even tenor of her way, with an unwavering trust in her heavenly Father, she encountered great obstacles such as would have daunted and baffled one of less faith, and successfully met each issue as it came, realizing to all things the hand divine. Never was a more precious legacy bequeathed to children and grandchildren than comes through the character of this dear mother, whose life was one of continued sacrifice of self—the greatest victory allotted man to achieve.

Buried in the cemetery at Vicksburg by the side of the one love of her life, and surrounded by dear ones gone before, rests all that is mortal, while the simple epitaph on the stone above her head, "She hath done what she could," speaks in thunder tones the great "sine qua non" of human life. The spirit went straight to the blessed God who gave it, there to await the coming of the dear children and children's children left behind, who rise up and call her blessed, each of whom are pledged and on their way to meet her in that land of rest beyond the river, where no sorrow is known, where families never break up, where the Christian's warfare is ended, and a sweet fruition of all his hopes are realized in the presence of the Lord of life and glory.

TUCKER—My father, H. L. TUCKER, was born near Sparta, Tenn., Oct. 14, 1815, and died Friday evening, July 28 1899; was in his eighty-fourth year. He came to Jefferson county, Miss., in 1838; was then a school teacher. Some of the old men of this county went to school to him. He was also Sunday-school superintendent of old Bethel Church for many years; also steward of the same church. He joined the M. E. Church in 1844; married Mary Torrey in 1811, to whom two children were born—Margaret Tucker and Benjamin Winans, who died when only an infant five months old. He was a careful student of the Bible, and told Bro. Rayner that he had read the Bible through forty times. His hymn book and Bible were his constant companions, and the way his Bible was marked is a valuable relic to his child, who is left. His death shows to those who witnessed it that a man who has lived a temperate life in love and worship of God passes away as peaceful as a little babe going to sleep. He gave his books to the Methodist parsonage and Presbyterian manse. Told Bro. Rayner the text he wanted for his funeral was I. Tim. vi, 7 and 8. Surely he has fought a good fight, and was ready to meet his Lord.

His daughter, MARGARET MCCLURE.
Fayette, Miss.

COOPER—Mrs. E. J. COOPER was born Jan. 8, 1825, in Jefferson county, Miss., and died in Madison county, Miss., March 15, 1899. In early life Sister Cooper was converted and became a member of the M. E. Church, South, in whose communion she ever consistently lived.

Sister Cooper was ready when the summons came. No doubts or fears beclouded her spiritual horizon, but all seemed bright. The world is poorer today as she is gone; heaven is richer. Patience and resignation characterized her life, but especially the latter days therefor; willing to live, ready to die. Like Paul, she was willing to remain here and battle on, but preferred to be with Christ. She has passed over the river, and now sweetly rests "under the shade of the tree." Of this there is no doubt. We expect to see Sister Cooper again. T. J. NORSWORTHY.

Camden, Miss.

LENO—BLACKWELL LENO, aged twenty-three years, died at the home of his father, Rev. Drosin Leno, of Avoyelles parish, La., July 24 1899, after an illness of about five months.

Bro. Leno was a member of the M. E. Church, South, and lived a Christian life, and notwithstanding the painful afflictions of his last days, he was submissive to the will of God, and expressed a willingness to go. His intention was to apply for license to preach, had he gotten well, but God knows best.

Bro. Leno leaves a wife and one child, and a host of relatives and friends, to mourn the loss. We can not understand why God would take one so young and promising, but the Lord gave, and the Lord has taken away; blessed be the name of the Lord.

L. L. ROBERTS, P. C.

FLEMING—Sister VINIE FLEMING (nee Whitehead) was born Feb. 9, 1837 and died July 25 1899, at her home near Springs, Miss., aged sixty-two years five months and sixteen days. She was married to Bro. J. H. Fleming, Sept. 10 1863; was the mother of eight children—five boys and three girls. One boy and one girl have gone on before. She united with the Methodist Church when a little girl. Her aged and devoted husband is a loyal citizen, and a true and faithful soldier in the church. May God comfort him and his bereaved ones in their sad affliction, and may they meet the wife and mother where partings are not known! J. C. ELLIS, P. C.

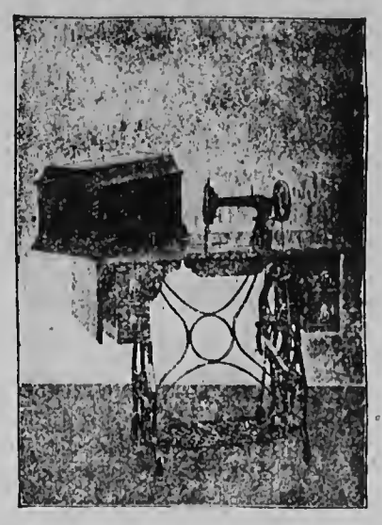
New Machine Offer.

By Far the Best We Have Ever Made.

Always on the watch for something good for our subscribers, we have succeeded in making arrangements whereby we can make a sewing machine offer which is far better than any we have been able hitherto to make. Read the following description and then read our offer:

No. 4 IMPERIAL.



THE IMPERIAL HIGH-ARM SINGER will be found the perfection of mechanism as regards simplicity, durability and adaptability to the wide range of work embraced in the general family needs.

A Handsome, Light-Running, Lock-Stitch, High-Arm Machine that will not fail to please the most fastidious. Embracing all the advantages with all desirable improvements of other first-class sewing machines, so simple in mechanism that the most inexperienced need no assistance in operating it. Book of instructions with every machine. Any child can learn to run it.

Extra Set of Attachments also free with each machine consisting of the following: One Tucker, One Foot Ruffler, One Set of Plate Hemmers, four different widths up to ½ of an inch, One Binder and One Thread Cutter.

No. 3 Machine, drop leaf table, gothic cover, case of two drawers at one end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $24. Our price, $14.75.

No. 4 Machine, drop leaf table, gothic cover, case of two drawers at each end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $25. Our price, $15.50.

No. 5 Machine, drop leaf table, gothic cover, case of three drawers at each end, making seven drawers in all. Dealer's price, $26. Our price, $16.25.

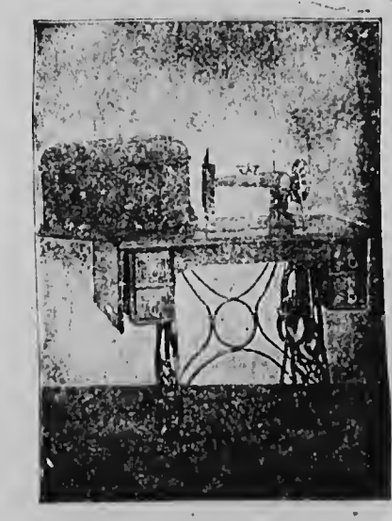
No. 4 Columbian



EXCELLENCE OF THE COLUMBIAN.—All wearing parts are of case-hardened steel possessing great durability, and by the turning of a screw all lost motion caused by wear can be taken up. All parts are fitted so accurately that the machines are absolutely noiseless, and as easy running as fine adjustment and best mechanical skill is possible to produce. No expense or time is spared to make them perfect in every respect, as every machine passes a rigid inspection by competent men before leaving the factory.

NICKEL PLATED.—The balance wheel and many of the fine parts are nickel plated, with other parts finely enameled and ornamented, giving it a rich appearance.

A Self Setting Needle and Self-Threading Cylinder Shuttle are used in the Columbian High-Arm Sewing Machine. They are so simple that any one can easily operate them in a few minutes' time, as our Instruction Book is fully illustrated, showing how to do all kinds of fancy work with attachments.

Extra Attachments, in velvet-lined case, sent free with each machine: 1 Tucker, 1 Ruffler with shirring plate, 1 Hemmer set (4 widths) and Binder, 1 Braider (Foot and Slide), 1 Thread Cutter.

ADDITIONAL ACCESSORIES.—Each machine is supplied with the following outfit: 1 Hemmer and Feller (one piece), 10 Needles, 6 Bobbins, 1 Wrench, 1 Screw Driver, Oil Can with Oil, Cloth Gauge and Thumb Screw, and a Book of Instructions. The Book of Instructions is profusely illustrated, and answers the purpose of a competent teacher.

No. 3—Drop leaf, Bent cover, case of two drawers at one end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $29. Our price, $17.

No. 4—Drop leaf table, Bent cover, case of two drawers at each end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $31. Our price, $17.75.

No. 5—Drop leaf table, Bent cover, case of three drawers at each end and center drawer, making a seven-drawer machine. Dealer's price, $33. Our price, $18.50.

The chief difference between Numbers 3, 4, and 5 is in the furniture, i. e., in the number of drawers. If you do not want to pay for the extra drawers, you need not do so. We sell these machines under a ten years' guarantee, by which we mean that if any part gives out by reason of any defect therein, the manufacturer will replace the same free of charge. Moreover, we allow the purchaser to test the machine ten days. If at the end of ten days you are not satisfied, you have only to drop us a postal card, and your money will be refunded.

OUR OFFER.

We will send any one of the above-described machines at the prices named, and also send the ADVOCATE free for six months. The only condition attached to this offer is that subscribers who are in arrears must first pay up all arrearages to date. It would be well to avail yourself of this offer at once, as we can not promise that it will last very long. Notice that you take no risk whatever. We do all the risking. Address

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

Indications are that the Dreyfus trial will last three weeks longer.

Three large warehouses were burned in Vicksburg on Saturday, inflicting a loss of $150,000.

The British Colonial Office denies that an ultimatum has been sent to President Krueger.

A fire at Victor, Col., destroyed the business portion of the town, entailing a loss of $2,000,000.

Lieut. Gen. Sir Frederick Walker has sailed to take command of the British troops in South Africa.

A revolutionary party that entered San Domingo from Hayti has been dispersed without fighting.

Major Jouaust, head of the Dreyfus court-martial, has been hissed by the audience for his display of partiality.

Admiral Dewey is reported to have said the Filipinos are capable of self-government, and it should be given them.

Major Russell B. Harrison, Inspector General U. S. A., son of the ex-President, is critically ill of yellow fever at Santiago.

Admiral Howison says a war in South Africa can have only one result—the absorption by England of the South African Republic.

There is strong feeling in Spain against the American Government not "removing the obstacles to the release of Spanish prisoners."

Signor Marconi is to come to the United States. He is hopeful of being able to send wireless messages to England from this country.

Col. Schneider, the Austrian military attache, has started for Paris to prosecute for forgery those implicated in forging the Schneider letter used in the Dreyfus case.

Col. Panizzardi, the Italian with whom it is charged Dreyfus had treasonous dealings, has offered to go to Rennes and testify. He says he never heard of Dreyfus until his arrest.

It is announced that the bubonic plague was brought to Oporto, Portugal, by a steamer loaded with rice from India, and that forty-six cases altogether have been reported.

The Americans had two skirmishes with the Filipinos on Sunday. North of Angeles a heavy force of natives were driven from their position, and on the Island of Negros nineteen natives were killed. At Angeles the Americans lost two lieutenants.

The police attempted to suppress an Anarchist meeting in Paris and a serious riot resulted. The mob attacked the Church of St. Joseph, the interior of which they wrecked, destroying many valuable paintings and smashing statues of Christ and the Virgin.

A great national movement has been started for the observance of the one hundredth anniversary of the death of George Washington, on Dec. 14. The Sons of the Revolution and other similar organizations have the matter in hand, and are arranging details of the plan.

The special session of the Louisiana General Assembly, called to pass the water, sewerage and drainage bill and the constitutional amendment on the same subject for the city of New Orleans, and to pass laws enabling other municipalities in the State to issue bonds for public works, has adjourned sine die, after accomplishing its labors in twelve days.

The city of Toronto, Ontario, having spent $2,400,000 in the erection of a new municipal building, the Mayor and the Board of Control have become involved in a controversy as to whether $400 or $2000 shall be spent on a formal opening thereof. The Mayor holds that $400 is an insignificant sum, and should not go on record as the measure of the city's liberality.

Among the contributions for the Porto Rico storm sufferers received at the War Department were from President McKinley, $250; Vice-President Hobart, $250; Secretary Root, $250; William Barbour, New York, $250; August Belmont, New York, $500. A note has been received from the Merchants' Association of New York saying that $10,000 has been collected for Porto Rico.

The report of President Rich, of the Mormon Society, shows that 490 elders are laboring in the Southern field, and that during last week these walked 9260 miles, visited 3500 families and held 950 meetings. The report says in the Georgia Conference sixty-seven elders are at work, and during the week they walked 909 miles and visited 169 families. They were refused entertainment thirty-seven times.

The Transvaal Government, it is reported, has handed its reply to the British agent at Pretoria, to be forwarded to Sir Alfred Milner, British high commissioner for South Africa, and governor of Cape Colony. Conflicting accounts are given as to its contents, and it is possible that the report is premature, and that the reply will be delayed owing to the trouble with Portugal about the transportation of ammunition consigned to the Transvaal, now in Delagoa Bay.

LEMONS AS MEDICINE

They regulate the Liver, Stomach, Bowels, Kidneys and Blood as prepared by Dr. H. Mozley, in his Lemon Elixir, a pleasant lemon drink. It cures biliousness, constipation, indigestion, headache, malaria, kidney diseases, fevers, chills, heart failure, nervous prostration, and all other diseases caused by a torpid or diseased liver and kidneys. It is an established fact that lemons, when combined properly with other liver tonics, produce the most desirable results upon the stomach, liver, bowels, kidneys, and blood. Sold by druggists. 50c and $1 bottles.

The local preachers should be present at their respective quarterly meetings with written reports of their labors during the year on the passage of their characters, as the law directs. Let no one fail.

The trustees of church property should also present elaborate written reports in answer to Ques. 27, Sec. 4, Par. 66 of Discipline. This is important.

CAMP MEETINGS.

New Prospect Camp Meeting, twenty miles from Ocean Springs, Jackson county, Miss., will begin Oct. 19, to continue five or six days.

The services will be under the direction of the presiding elder and preacher in charge. The preachers of the Seashore district are invited to come and help in the cause we so much love.

All preachers will be entertained free of charge. We ask the preachers everywhere to pray for us, that we may have a glorious revival on Vancleave circuit, and especially at the camp meeting. There will be a public tent for the accommodation of those who may wish to come and stay the whole time of camp meeting. W. L. BLACKWELL, P. C.

NAPOLEON LOST THE BATTLE OF LEIPSIC because of a fit of indigestion. One dose of DICKS' MUL-EN-OL would have given him instant relief, and the fate of the kingdoms of Europe been decided differently. It is really marvelous how quickly a colicky pain will vanish when a teaspoonful of Mul-en-ol in a wineglass of hot water is taken. Try it; you will never suffer from colic.

We invite special attention to the advertisement of W. H. Clarke in this issue. We heartily commend Mr Clarke to our readers as a high-toned, honorable man, who may be implicitly relied upon always to do the right thing. Those who need anything in his line can not do better than to place their orders with him.

MY WANTS.

The bread that giveth strength I want to give,
The water pure that bids the thirsty live;
I want to help the fainting day by day—
I'm sure I shall not pass again this way.

I want to give the oil of joy for tears,
The faith to conquer crowding doubts and fears;
Beauty for ashes may I give alway—
I'm sure I shall not pass again this way.

I want to give good measure running over;
And into angry hearts I want to pour
The answer soft that turneth wrath away—
I'm sure I shall not pass again this way.

I want to give to others hope and faith;
I want to do all that the Master saith;
I want to live aright from day to day—
I'm sure I shall not pass again this way.

THE NATCHEZ DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Natchez District Conference convened in the Methodist Church at Woodville, Miss., Wednesday afternoon, Aug. 9; Dr. W. L. C. Hunnicutt, presiding elder, in the chair. Bro. John F. Cassels was elected secretary, with this scribe as his assistant. The attendance on the part of both preachers and laymen was unusually small, six of the fourteen pastors in the district being absent. We feel sure, however, that none of the brethren were absent from choice, there being, no doubt, some providential hindrance in each case. Bro. H. D. Howell, who, for ten days preceding the District Conference, had been helping in a meeting at Centerville, fully expected to be present, but, on account of sickness, had to return home the day Conference met. Bro. Geo. M. Hull was prevented from coming by the death of his little son, Clarence, which sad event occurred on Sunday, the sixth instant.

Notwithstanding the small attendance, it was the most enjoyable District Conference we ever participated in. Bishop Galloway, who was under promise to be with us, arrived on Thursday, and by his presence and words of counsel added immeasurably to the interest and profit of the occasion. What a power he is in the church, and what a tireless worker!

By request the Bishop delivered an address Friday night on the "Twentieth Century Educational Movement," and by the charm of his eloquence, the force of his logic, the grandeur of his thought, and the earnestness of his delivery, he carried his audience to the highest pitch of enthusiasm. Every pastor and laymen present caught new inspiration as regards the grandeur and importance of this recent undertaking of Methodism. The address was followed by a collection for the "Twentieth Century Fund," which we were told amounted to over $200.

When the report on temperance was up for discussion Bishop Galloway expressed it as his conviction that Mississippi has the best prohibitory legislation of any State in the Union, and that she is decidedly in the lead in the matter of practical temperance.

The reports from the various works were encouraging, in the main, and indicated progress both in spiritual life and in finance. Successful revivals have been held at several points. The best reports were from the Washington, Harriston, Fayette and Woodville charges, where substantial gains are being made.

On Friday morning a Sunday-school Conference was held. Bro. Adrian Trimble, of Natchez, the first speaker, entertained us with an account of a visit in May to Mr. Wanamaker's Sunday-school in Philadelphia, which is said to be the largest and best-conducted Sunday-school in the world. After several other talks Capt. Geo. T. McGehee, superintendent of the Woodville Sunday-school, read a paper on the "Qualifications of Sunday-school Teachers and Superintendents," which was so excellent in character that the brethren requested it for publication in the ADVOCATE.

The report of the Committee on Temperance, signed by Rev. B. S. Rayner, chairman, embodied a resolution pledging the members of the Conference to renewed and more diligent effort in temperance work, and also contained a clause condemning as a shame and a disgrace the use of intoxicating liquors in political campaigns.

The following anent our church publications was also unanimously adopted: "Resolved, That we specially commend the Nashville and NEW ORLEANS Christian Advocates in their able editorial management as amply meeting the needs of our people.

"Resolved, That these should have place in all our homes."

License to preach was granted to Bro. W. S. Higginbotham, of the Meadville circuit.

The licenses of the following local preachers were renewed, namely: C. A Hastings, Hiram Day, R M. Cassels, J. M. Griffin, and J. E. Gray. Bro. Gray was also recommended to the Annual Conference for admission on trial.

The following laymen were elected delegates to the Annual Conference: J. F. Cassels, T. R. White, H. B. McGehee, and T. M. Carter. Reserves: Col. J. H. Jones and J. D. Ireland.

The next District Conference will be held at Harriston.

The opening sermon was preached by Rev. B. S. Rayner, whose theme was "Heaven." It was an able and eloquent discourse, and produced a deep impression. Earnest and edifying sermons were also delivered by Revs. R. F. Witt, M. H. Moore, and J. T. Abney.

As we have one of the best and most faithful presiding elders in the Conference, it is not to be wondered at that our district is moving forward.

The venerable superannuate, Rev. T. W. Brown, who, though he carries the weight of numerous years, is still young in spirit and buoyant in faith, was present, and participated in the discussions. In answer to an inquiry from Bishop Galloway as to whether, in his opinion, the spirituality of the church was better forty or fifty years ago than now, Bro. Brown said he was convinced that piety now is fully as general, genuine and exalted as was the case during the early days of his ministry. Bishop Galloway then took occasion to stress the importance of preaching to the unsaved, and declared that if we are losing ground, it is due largely to neglect in this direction. He also urged the brethren to be hopeful, and to avoid censoriousness.

Rev. J. W. Crisler, the pastor at Woodville, is greatly beloved by his people, and is doing a fine work.

We were delightfully entertained while at Conference in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Argo, to whom we owe many thanks for their kindness and courtesies.

We were glad to see several young laymen in evidence, prominent among them being Bros. T. M. Carter, of Harriston, and Thos. J. Reed and Adrian Trimble, of Natchez.

The Conference adjourned at 6 P. M. on Friday, and nearly all the delegates left for home the following morning. M M. BLACK.

SARDIS DISTRICT—NO. 2.

Local politics have been lively within the bounds of Sardis district for several months past. The Methodist Church has been greatly in evidence during the campaign, furnishing many of the candidates for office. As a result, the primary elections show that the public draws largely upon us for men to fill the county offices. The district will honor the draft by putting a number of excellent Methodist men into the high places—in the legislative councils, sheriffs' offices, and other county positions. To secure votes, the candidates had to go round seeking for them. They were much on the go, making a vigorous canvass—a house-to-house and a handshake-to-hand-shake canvass. So should our itinerant preachers be—much on the go, making a house-to-house canvass, seeking to win souls. We can not over-estimate the value of pastoral visiting as an aid to success in our work. Reading books, reading the papers, preaching great sermons, is all very well; but the preacher who does not visit the people in their homes, shake hands with them, and get well acquainted with them, can not stand in with them at the "primaries." They will vote for some other man; will ask for a change of pastors at the next Conference. "O, if he was just as good out of the pulpit as he is in it." So a steward expressed himself, speaking of his pastor, a very fine preacher, but a poor "mixer" with his people.

Orwood mission is supplied by Rev. J. A. Good, a local preacher. Orwood, a small inland village, was extensively advertised in the yellow-fever reports of last year, being one of the stricken localities. Bro. Good has held two successful meetings, resulting in about twenty conversions and additions to the church. He is a good mixer, and is in favor with his people. They want him back next year. This work is susceptible of development, and gives promise of growth under the earnest labors of its pastor.

Rev. W. D. Burroughs is pastor for the second year on Pleasant Hill circuit, and occupies a neat parsonage at Pleasant Hill. He had some trouble on account of the visitation of Mormon missionaries last year, but managed the affair in such manner that a like trouble will not occur again soon. This work has good material within its bounds, and should become one of our best country charges.

Nesbit, courageously served by Rev. C. P. Moss, is a circuit of possibilities. A brother said, three years ago, the circuit was able to pay nine hundred dollars. Oh, if our people could only be brought to see and feel their strength, Zion would arise and shine!

Rev. Dr. H. T. Gaines is working out his second year as pastor at Senatobia. Bro. Gaines was educated for the foreign mission work, but, failing to get off as he desired, he puts his earnestness and zeal into his home work, and his people feel the impress of his labors.

Rev. W. W. Mitchell, appointed to Como station at the last Conference, belongs to a family of the prophets. His father was a member of the North Mississippi Conference, and he is the youngest of four brothers who have been members of the Conference, while his nephew, James Mitchell, is supplying the pulpit at West Point. Bro. Mitchell has enlarged and greatly improved the pastor's home. His people are prompt in meeting their financial obligations. They are well nigh or quite up to date on preachers' salaries, and have paid their missionary assessments in full.

Rev. Ben P. Jaco, on Pleasant Grove circuit, is not far from his native heath. He is an exception to the saying, "A prophet is not without honor save in his own country," for he has the hearts of his people. A good report will be expected of him at the Annual Conference.

Rev. L. D. Worsham is pastor of Eureka circuit—a work of four appointments. If he is not in clover, his parsonage is in a five-acre lot, overgrown with Bermuda grass, interspersed with fruit trees, pecan trees, and scuppernong vines. Nearly three decades ago, while quite a young man, Worsham was a good preacher, and his people brag on his preaching now, and some of them "give him things." He had a great revival at Eureka last year, resulting in more than twoscore of conversions and about as many additions to the church; and quite recently, at the same place, he closed another meeting of great power—a meeting that waked the echoes of the "old-time religion." The people shouted at the church, shouted on the way home, and shouted in their homes.

Rev. W. D. McCullough has charge of Cockrum circuit—a compact work of four churches and over six hundred members. They are an appreciative and loyal people. They think they have a good preacher, and are not alone in this opinion. Bro. McCullough had a good meeting recently at Palestine. Souls were converted and added to the church, and believers enjoyed a season of spiritual refreshing.

Rev. G H. Jacobs is filling out his fourth year on Arkabutla circuit. Of the "old guard," the preachers who were in the district when this "beloved" took charge, Jacobs alone remains. Faithful and true, he holds on his way uncomplaining, a good preacher and a good pastor. He grows upon his people as he approaches the limit of his pastoral term.

Wall Hill rejoices under the labors of Rev. J. H. Smith. He is serving this circuit now for the third year. Smith has demonstrated clearly that "success succeeds" in Epworth League work. He finds a well-organized Epworth League a great help to the pastor. His Leaguers will pray whenever called upon. Through them he worked the Twentieth Century program at Wall Hill, and secured more than fifty dollars on the fund. Under his earnest efforts the old log church at Grub Hill is to be torn down, and a new frame building is to be ready for occupancy by the first of September.

Rev. C. N. Terry, a superannuate of the Conference, lives at Neshit station. He served Sardis district as presiding elder four successive years, made a good record, and left many friends throughout the district. He still preaches with acceptability and power. The brethren would do well to secure his services in their protracted meetings.

Rev. J. W. Bates, another superannuate, resides near Batesville. He was a unique character in the days of his strength. Methodist preacher, railroad conductor, and claims adjuster, original, humorous, fearless and strong, he did much good, and has hosts of friends throughout the country.

Some one reading this account of Sardis district will be ready to exclaim, "Why, all your men in the district are good preachers." Just so. Dr. W. A McCarty, in the Alabama Advocate, says, "Methodist preachers out-preach all others of the same intelligence."

A preacher on an adjacent circuit was once permitted to fill the pulpit of one of our stations during a revival meeting. The town people, surprised and delighted, plied the 'beloved" with questions: "Where did you find him?" "Have you any more like him?" "Yes, plenty of them," replied he. "The woods are full of them."

Not only in Sardis district, but throughout the Conference; not only in the towns, but in the country charges, we have plenty of good preachers. "The woods are full of them." T. C. WIER.

NOTES FROM THE FIELD.

Since our last we have met all appointments, two of which were protracted, and the elder held for further service, making the third protracted meeting which he has helped in up to date, with promises for two others yet outstanding. During the past three weeks four days have been spent in the district parsonage, twenty sermons preached, five Quarterly Conferences held, and a fuller understanding of what the apostle meant when he spoke of the "care of the churches." A fifth wheel it may be, but one which keeps the individual, if not the machine, constantly turning. I am more and more convinced that my father, who thought it much pay and little work, would change his mind after a short trial.

During the round we have been met by good congregations at nearly every point, and in most places the finances have been good for the third.

Though the weather has been hot, calling for two collars per day and handkerchiefs in extra supply, we have enjoyed our stay with the brethren. The oppressive nights have put sleep at a premium, and more than once we have been made to appreciate the value of the mosquito bar—"verbum sap sat." I wondered if the Shunamite had one for Elisha in that little room on the wall.

At Vaughan's we found the young itinerants doing well. That preacher's daughter fills well her place as a preacher's wife, and I incline with those on the work to say that Golden planned wisely.

Committee appointed, arrangements made and announcements out for a grand circuit rally in the interest of the Twentieth Century Fund on the sixth of September, at Ellison's Chapel.

From this point we dropped down to Pearl River, on the Madison circuit. Here we found the circuit Sunday-school Institute in session, and two more pleasant and profitable days we do not remember ever to have spent. Bro. Hawkins has a genius for planning and getting people to work, four good Sunday-schools and four wide-awake Leagues (one of each at each church) demonstrating that they can be as successfully worked in the country as in the towns.

Pearl River Church is the home of the Lambuth family, and here we saw the tomb of Rev. Roht. Lambuth. During the recent meeting a move was begun to erect a monument in honor of Rev. J. W. Lambuth on the open court in front of the church. The interest manifested assures me in saying it will succeed beyond a doubt. Such a memorial is becoming to him whose name is world-wide as a representative of that band of whom the world was not worthy.

In Yazoo City the brethren have an eye to comfort, and so rocks furnished with fans are attached to every seat—a warning to the pulpit these August days. In one family we found four boys named John (not Baptist), Wesley, Luther, and Sam Jones. We baptized the baby boy, and to him was given Wm. Jenning Bryan. Did the brother fall from grace? In another we found Chas. Galloway and Jim Weems.

Riding along, we overtook a colored brother, and this was the conversation: "Well, uncle, that's a fine mare and colt." "Yes, boss; I jis married the 'oman what own dis mare, and she's rich, she is. She's got a plantation." Candid, unpretentious old child of nature.

Opening our satchel on return from one meeting, we found wrapped in an envelope ten dollars—"an expression of appreciation of extra work done by the elder." Who says there are none to cheer us in our work? Thank you, brethren.

GRENADA COLLEGE FOR YOUNG LADIES.

Parents and guardians who have girls to educate, and think of sending them to college this Fall, are investigating the merits of the different schools bidding for their patronage. Reasonably, they desire to place them where they can derive most good at least expense.

Grenada College for Young Ladies bids for your patronage, and offers advantages unsurpassed by any of our schools. As an institution of our church, this school has a claim upon the Methodists of North Mississippi that no other school has, and under the able administration of Rev. W. M. McIntosh, A. B., deserves the support of all our people. The college is located at Grenada, Miss., in a refined and Christian community. The health record of the school compares favorably with those in the mountains. The building is supplied with a splendid system of electric lights, sewerage, and waterworks. Hot and cold water are on every floor. Nothing is lacking to insure convenience and comfort to the inmates.

The trustees, through the president, have expended $500 this Summer in repairing, refitting and refurnishing the building. Painters, plasterers and carpenters have renovated it from basement to observatory. The floors are covered with new matting, new mattresses supplied, and the building renewed generally. With a choice collection of books in the library, new models in the art-rooms, and new instruments in the music-rooms, the equipment is good.

The faculty will compare favorably with that of any of our schools. At the head of each department there is a competent and experienced instructor. These are assisted by graduates who have taken the regular course, and, in addition thereto, have taken special courses of instruction that fit them admirably for their special departments. They come to us with the vigor and energy of young life, fresh from the classic halls of some of the best institutions of learning, and, directed and complemented by those ripe in scholarship and experience, form a combination capable of the best results.

The prospect for the session of 1899-1900 is very encouraging. Let the Methodists rally to the support of their college, and make it better each year. H. C. MOREHEAD.

TO ALL THE PREACHERS IN MISSISSIPPI.

Will you heed my letter of this date, and report the result of your effort?

To Those Who Have Been Expecting Some Great Connectional Magnate to Visit Your Charge and Raise Its Quota of the Million and a Half Dollars:

Wait no longer. The twentieth century evangelist is not coming to do your work, for two reasons: First, he is not coming for lack of time and opportunity. Second, he is not coming because he ought not to come. Reliance for success in this movement is upon the pastors, and from the very beginning this fact has been given prominence and emphasis. If you do not perform it, the work will fail. Rest assured of that.

I wish to emphasize again the encouraging nature of the reports received, and to thank those who sent them. If all will do as well as these, we will raise twenty thousand dollars this year, which will be splendid vantage-ground on which to enter the new year, and will be the guarantee of complete success before the close of the century. The only discouraging feature, if any, is the distressingly large number of preachers who have made no report. I raise this question, How is the preacher who does nothing this year ever going to catch up with the procession? Look out, brother, or you will be left. What is done must be done before the first of November.

Tell it not in Mississippi, publish it not in the papers of Methodism, that any Methodist preacher in this year of grace failed to do his level best in this crisis in our educational work.

THE LEAGUE AS JUNIOR PASTOR.

The word "pastor" comes from the Latin "posco," to feed, and in the sense in which we use it here means to feed flocks. The flock which the church was sent to is all people in all places at all times. This is not a flock of sheep, goats, or geese, but a flock of intelligent, rational beings, capable of a choice, and responsible for that choice. The pastor is the same order of beings as the flock, with no special powers and privileges; no Saint Peter to bind or loose, to bless or curse. It is true the church does ordain certain men for certain functions, but this does not bring them into any relation to God that is not enjoyed by the humblest man in the church. The ordained man is chosen from among men. The spirit which makes possible a priest, a Pope, a Joseph Smith, or a Brigham Young, is anti-Christ, or worse. The pastor is not a custodian of consciences, nor a livery-man to carry souls over Jordan. Human nature is very much prone to so endow the priestly robe—a disposition no less marked in the nineteenth-century devotee of Rome than in the ancient Egyptian bull worshiper.

Modern Protestantism has another idea of a pastor which is as silly as the other is pitiable. He must perform occasionally before his flock; this is commonly called preaching. His sermon must be of the jelly-fish order—without bones—otherwise some things which appear on our rolls as sheep, but on God's roll as wolves in sheep's clothing, will break over his ecclesiastical fence and seek more congenial company. This thing will not eat when fed, and if kept from starving, it will be in spite of all its efforts to the contrary.

We are faced to-day with the sad spectacle of a church wasting all its energy on itself. The pastor and the few faithful members are kept busy in keeping the remainder from wholly forgetting their obligation and their God. After the duties of the pulpit are over the remainder of his time must be given to visiting and admonishing, not the world, but the church. That a pastor should be required to spend his time in visiting church members, to the neglect of non-church members, is ridiculous. But such is often the case, and still we hear that the church is backslidden; and no wonder. The mission of the church is to the world—not to itself. Some people believe if they can keep the financial barometer of a church normal, that their obligations are met, and the conversion of a soul is a matter of minor importance. There is another class who look on the church as the tree of life, under which they may fall and breathe out their life sweetly there, while some little preacher feeds them on bon-bons and fans their pallid cheeks.

The true picture of the church is found in the heart. At every beat the bright blood, freighted with new life, is forced through the veins into every fiber and tissue of our being, giving vitality and power. So the church stands, not the blood itself, but the conveyor of the blood into a weakened and decaying moral body, driving out impurities and imparting new life. The heart that fails to send forth its blood is drowned by its own action; and such has been the history of the church in all ages.

Another picture of the church is found in a well-disciplined army. In this there are officers of different rank—the general, the colonel, the captain, the lieutenant—each discharging the duty of his rank, but one is over all who plans and directs. So in the church. The pastor should be the field-general, and every officer in the church a member of his staff. No discreet pastor will make an attack without consulting his staff. He should secure, if possible, their co-operation. We have seen the pastor who never lets the officials know when he would hold a Church Conference. If a church was to be covered, he would collect the money. If the Sunday-school needed a revival, he would take this from the superintendent's shoulders. The officer was not called into use, and he soon felt that he had a compliment without a duty. Hence the picture of the church in the wagon and the preacher in the shafts trying to climb a hill, and couldn't. I do not censure the people for getting in the wagon as much as I censure the little pastor for getting in the shafts. If he could not hitch up and direct the membership, he ought to step down and out, and let a better teamster come in.

Again: We have seen the pastor who had one good yoke-fellow that would allow himself hitched to anything the church undertook. He is made steward, trustee, Sunday-school superintendent, class leader, Epworth League president, church secretary, put on all committees, and elected a delegate to all the Conferences, while many others, as competent, that could and should be trained, have been allowed to go free, and jump in the devil's pasture, if they chose. When this overworked ox is taken out of the team, either by death or removal, and a spike team is hitched, a run-away is a natural result.

But let us consider the true pastor—the true overseer of a spiritual community. He is a man who brings out of his treasury things both new and old, and spreads them before his people when they go to public worship. He gives them wine and oil well beaten out in study, experience, and the revelations of the spirit. He arranges his congregation into the Sunday-school, the Epworth League, the missionary society, and puts these under officers that act under his direction. These officers should feel much responsibility, and have all the latitude they want, so long as they do right.

A LOST ART.

An art has been defined as the external manifestation of the idea. A lost art is the same thing unexpressed to the eye.

The fine art of disciplining unruly members has in many instances lost face and form among the churches. It is now a memory. One good soul told me, after we had sat heavily on a case for slander, she had been in the Methodist Church forty years; yet it was her first acquaintance with the judicial procedure of a trial, to her knowledge.

Bishop McTyeire said: "The objects of discipline are to rebuke offenders, to remove scandals and vindicate the character of the church, to clear the innocent, to reclaim the erring, to promote purity and peace in the membership, and the spiritual welfare of the members themselves. When properly administered, it frequently proves an effectual means of grace."

Would not these "objects of discipline" do a church more good than a nervous breakdown miscalled "a revival?" A revival of what? No one can find out after six weeks.

A "pasture" with the front gate never shut, all sorts of herbivorous creatures wandering in and out, will soon spoil the grass. Better nail up the front gate awhile, after driving out the scrub-stock, which brings us neither milk nor meat for our grass. A healthy vine needs a pruning-knife. Trimming up not only brings forth more fruit, but it greatly improves the appearance of the vine, because the unsightly, diseased parts are removed thereby, and are only fit for fire. Why, then, has this judicial process fallen into innocuous desuetude?

One shining reason—David must number Israel. It is better to put our trust in statistics, and our strength in running down the dodging dollar and the nimble nickel. We have not time to tarry with a slow-moving church trial. By juggling with the quick and the dead a certain divine makes a creditable showing, because a net increase is rather to be desired above all net decreases; therefore, by making statistics turn a somersault, his report lands on the winning side. The passion for mathematics burns brightest in the addition and multiplication tables.

An honest revision of the roll reflects too gravely upon our predecessors' reports to Conference. The extirpation of the dead, the withdrawn, the quitters, the removals, the unwept, unhonored and unsung, is as painful as grave digging. To come up to Conference bringing the sheaves of a big net decrease by an honest uncovering of the truth as it is in statistics, is a Cain-like sacrificial offering.

Another barrier is a sad declension of spiritual life. A committee who keeps all the General Rules is hard to find. If you begin the work of expulsion for violation of these rules, the whole church will be "led like lambs to the slaughter." It is a process like the way of the wicked—no man can tell the end thereof. Some congregations have struck bottom; they can not go any lower, spiritually. Church trials would stir up more angry devils than seven preachers could cast out by prayer and fasting. They would raise more dust than the new broom could sweep clean.

The red-tapism of ecclesiastical law is so complex and circuitous it would take a Philadelphia lawyer to evade the charge of mal-administration. Certain small churches are hopelessly cut off from trying to purify the church according to the Discipline. The necessary committee can not be secured when the accused has the right of peremptory challenge of two on said committee. If the accused adheres to the right of unlimited challenge for cause, who can try him? The Discipline of 1882, ¶ 120, reads, "Nevertheless the preacher may, at his discretion, bring the case before the whole church for trial." They cut this out of editions of the Discipline since then. Take a circuit of small churches, where laymen of sound doctrine and practice are few and far between. It may cost a preacher $30 or $40 to carry out the disciplinary provisions. Everything is against the preacher or laymen who would bring a culprit to trial. Everything is in favor of the accused. They were so jealous of conferring power on an unwise preacher, they have made them all powerless puppets and manikins before a God-defying church, who hold down the truth in unrighteousness.

The supreme obstacle in the way of the "objects of discipline" is a lack of grit. The layman or preacher has not the courage to bring the offender up with a short turn. The man who believes it requires no moral heroism to beard these church lions in their dens, let him try it once. To convert yourself into an auxiliary cruiser itinerating after one of the devil's first-class battleships "Major This" or "Judge That," run up alongside and, in the name of God and the Methodist Church, demand that he run up the flag of repentance and surrender, is no small task. As a courage-developer, equivalent to a trip into Santiago harbor with Hobson, try it only once; thereby discover the strength and stability of thy backbone. Selah!

LETTER FROM "GILDEROY"—NO. 2.

In further consideration of paying the pastor's assessment in full, it was stated that they did not expect to pay it, and did not intend to try to pay it when they made it. It seemed to me that this was a terrific statement to be made on the floor of a Quarterly Conference. If the stewards did not expect to pay it, and did not intend to try to pay it, why did they make it? If the work of the stewards is a deception on the face of it, how is the preacher or the people to have confidence in the honor, honesty or fairness of the stewards? If the assessment is made just for show, by what law of the church, on what passage of God's Word, or on what principle of Christianity is it done?

It developed that this Board of Stewards thought the Board of District Stewards had apportioned too large a share of the presiding elder's salary to this charge. They made a bogus assessment for their pastor in order to cut down the pay of the presiding elder. This looks to me like a swindle on the face of it. It would be a stupid man or a bad man that would approve it. An isolated case, or two, of this kind would be too exceptional to claim time for discussion or room in a paper. What was done on this circuit by this Board of Stewards is done in too many charges and by too many Boards of Stewards. If this thing obtains and becomes common, then rottenness and moral dishonesty will be at the core of our Methodism. The pastor who would knowingly consent to a financial fraud of this kind needs to repent and do his first works.

"But," says one, "we had no representative at the district stewards' meeting." Why not? "Our man did not go." Does that justify a Board of Stewards in practicing a fraud to defeat the action of those who did go? We have a law, a rule, a method of doing things, and we ought to abide by it. Any other course is lawless, anarchical, and subversive of the fundamental principles of our Methodism.

Suppose some charge should think the presiding elder had not been assessed enough, and some one should propose to lower the assessment of the pastor in order to increase the pay of the presiding elder? I suppose the average Board of Stewards would resent this as a dishonest outrage, and yet it is just as fair this way as the other. This is a sharp practice, alike dishonoring to God and the church of Christ.

The presiding elder is an integral part of our economy, and just as essential to the church, as we have it, as the pastor; and a Board of Stewards is as much in honor bound to deal fairly and honestly with him as with the pastor or anyone else. We need not do evil to the presiding elder that good may come to the pastor; need not rob Peter to pay Paul.

When a Board of Stewards sets an example of this kind before the people of a charge, it is no wonder if they adopt all sorts of schemes, and are given to sharp practices, to keep from paying the pastor and all other church obligations. If it were wit and wisdom in the stewards, it is wit and wisdom in them. Moral contagion is as dangerous and deadly as contagion of any other kind. I have known a few charges in my time that openly refused to abide by the action of the district stewards in the matter of apportionments. In all such matters they assumed to be a law unto themselves. They ran rough-shod over the law of the church.

"It is the duty of stewards to make estimates of expenses and provision for the support of the ministry." There is no law authorizing them to make an assessment to circumvent the payment of the presiding elder's claim. Whenever and wherever this is done it is done without law, contrary to law, and in utter disregard of the principles of common honesty.

It strikes me that if the members of the church were to join together in a solemn resolution to pay up in full all just claims, the proper conditions for a glorious revival would obtain in every charge. It is difficult to see how we are to have any great revival of permanent benefit, so long as we are so negligent and so low in matters of common honesty. In some instances some people are greatly rejoiced over a great ingathering of souls, and mainly because they will help to divide the financial burdens. I have yet to see a steward or a church that voluntarily proposed to increase the assessments after a great ingathering of souls and a large increase of financial strength. The pastor tends the flock, but gets none of the increase in milk. Instead of growing stronger, financially, the individual members grow weaker and smaller in their payments. The increase is prostituted to base purposes. Instead of making it a blessing, it really becomes a curse.

These are some of the reflections stirred in a Quarterly Conference. I have seen many like this one.

THE MANY-SIDEDNESS OF THE WOMAN'S HOME MISSION SOCIETY.

BY MRS. J. W. BRISTER, NASHVILLE, TENN.

Such an experience is worth infinitely more than it cost. Here is work for good women to do. More are needed for it than have ever yet responded. May many more be inspired to engage in this pleasant work, and thus carry sunshine and joy into thousands of darkened rooms and saddened hearts that have never yet been reached!

I visited another lady of our auxiliary and asked her what feature of our work, what tenet of our society, she liked best. She was ready with her answer immediately: "I like that resolution of ours," she said, "which inculcates systematic giving. I like it because it is consistent with God's law. And such a beautiful promise is conditioned upon our following it. Read Malachi iii, 10, and you will understand why I believe in this feature of our work, and why I am glad it seeks to impress this lesson upon our members. Tithing," she added, "promotes our spiritual welfare, and I have faith enough to believe that it aids us materially as well."

Our society, I may interject just here, not only gives work for the women of the church, but it inculcates valuable lessons, and is teaching thousands of noble women to consecrate not only time and talent, but a reasonable portion of their substance to God and humanity.

But this is not all. Another member was interested in quite a different feature. She said, in answer to my inquiry, that no department of the great work interested her so much as that which we speak of as Supplies. "I think," she said, "it is such a noble work, and the objects of our assistance are so deserving that I take the greatest delight in it. I can feel for the heroic men who represent us on the frontiers, and I feel even more strongly for the noble women who help them endure the hardships of such a life, that through their efforts and their sacrifices the old, old story may be proclaimed to the men around them. The delight of packing the boxes!" she said. "If every woman of our church could only be present on one such occasion, they would always take an interest thereafter. As each useful article is placed in the box, and we breathe a prayer that it may prove a blessing, we anticipate their joy and thankfulness in receiving. In this work I have realized, as in nothing else, that 'it is more blessed to give than to receive.' If anything were needed to complete the happiness of such a work, it comes when we meet in our monthly meetings, and read a grateful letter from a far-off brother and sister whom we have helped."

Every woman who knows anything of the work can appreciate the delight this sister feels in such work as this. We all have felt that way, and none of us would be willing to part with the peace and happiness that come to us from the part we have taken in preparing boxes or barrels, no matter how humble it may have been.

There was another sister of our auxiliary who, for a long time, has been engaged in the Rescue Work, and that department especially appealed to her. "Why do I believe in this work?" she repeated. "Because our Savior did it; because fallen women most need help and receive the least. Shut out from churches and schools, from contact with the good, from all that uplifts, their destiny seems fixed. Somebody ought to look after them, and when one is rescued, I feel indeed as if a soul has been snatched from the burning. God does not abandon them, although society does. They have souls, and our Savior died for them. And we are rescuing them. The homes that have been established, the institutions that have been opened for them, have not been in vain, for many a one has been saved from a life of shame and transformed into a useful member of society. Yes, indeed, I feel I ought to do this work," she said, "and I am thankful that my efforts sometimes meet with success."

Those actively engaged in foreign mission work—those who feel that they are guided by the Holy Spirit, and are really about their "Father's business"—are often grieved that so many are indifferent to a work so grand, so glorious. Yet sometimes we meet with lives so holy, so bright, so blest in this labor for the Master, that we think their radiance should shine out to encourage others.

Such a character was Mrs. Mahaly Sands, a member of the M. E. Church, South, for fifty years; now one of that celestial throng who sing the "song of Moses and the Lamb."

In 1892 our now-sainted sister, Nannie Fant, came to organize a Foreign Missionary Society at Pine Mountain Church. The name of Mrs. Sands was among the first enrolled, and just a few weeks before her death we heard her tell how Sister Fant reasoned in persuading her to join. She said: "Sister Sands, do you ever sell poultry?" "Yes!" "Do you sell eggs?" "Yes!" "Well, had you thought that one dozen eggs would pay your dues for a month, and in making this slight effort, you might be instrumental in saving some heathen soul?"

Very soon Mrs. Sands' health failed, and I do not think she was ever able to attend more than two meetings; still for eight years she was faithful, never failing to send her dues with some message, assuring us of her prayers.

Sisters, think of this. Eighty-six years old, eight years an invalid, almost blind, so unable to read for herself, and no one to read missionary literature to her, yet faithful to the end. No loving touch, no tender voice to cheer and comfort her through those long days, for she had no near relatives, and was attended only by a faithful colored servant.

One day spent in her company I remember as one of the happiest of my life, and feel thankful for the object-lesson in faith and trust that her life furnished me that day. I read to her the fourteenth chapter of St. John. She said: "Yes, I know in my Father's house are many mansions, and I shall rejoice when he calls me home; but he may have a use for me here yet, so I will not murmur."

Oh, that we all could realize that the Master needs each one of us in his vineyard!

Just two weeks before she was called home she requested the society to meet in her home, that she might be with us once more. That was a sweet, a holy service, and I feel that Jesus was with us. When we bade the dear old lady good-by she said, "I would not take fifty dollars for this meeting."

In her will she did not forget the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society that she loved so well, but left it a bequest of $100—more than one-tenth of her whole estate.

"Sweetest lives are those to duty wed
Whose deeds, both great and small
Are close-knit strands of an unbroken thread,
Where love ennobles all.
The world may sound no trumpets, ring no bells;
The Book of Life the shining record tells."

The following is the report of our treasurer for the first quarter, ending June, 1899: Received for all purposes from Winona district, $67.82; Aberdeen district, $71.72; Sardis district, $54.34; Columbus district, $170.08; Corinth district, $32.91; Grenada district, $68.50; Greenville district, $65.20; Holly Springs district, $36.40; Durant district, $61.83; total, $628.80.

The chapter is finished, the book is closed, and the story of a useful life is ended; a life beautiful in its genial, happy nature; rich in its benevolent kindness to others, noble in its generous designs to do good. The life on earth is ended, and Capt. J. T. Lay has been translated to a glorious, endless life.

Whereas, It has pleased our divine Father to remove him from our midst; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, the Winona Auxiliary of the W. F. M. Society, recognize in Capt. Lay's removal the mysterious hand of a wise and gracious Father, and that we bow in meek submission to this dispensation that sorely grieves our hearts.

Resolved, That in Capt. Lay's death our missionary society and the missionary world have lost a faithful, stalwart friend, whose generous gifts have done much for the poor heathen.

Resolved, That we extend to the bereaved wife our deepest and sincerest sympathy, and recommend her to the tender, loving Father, who hath said, "I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee."

Resolved, That the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE be requested to publish these resolutions, and that a copy be sent the bereaved wife; also to Isabel Medina and Marta Gartia, two Mexican girls whom Capt. Lay was educating for missionary work.

Resolved, That because of the great gap in our ranks, we strive to be more valiant soldiers, endeavoring to do worthy service while we may, ever remembering that the days are numbered wherein we are permitted to work for the Master.

In all discussions as to the right way of preaching the gospel, in this or any age, it should be understood that the thing to be always aimed at is vitalizing men with the new-making nature of Christ, without which there can be no salvation, and very seldom any reformation.—Exchange.

AMONG THE PINES OF RAPIDES.

En route to the Rapides Camp Ground, I fell in with Rev. A. W. Turner, our pastor at Boyce, and was shown through our beautiful new church, which was recently dedicated by Dr. Cooper. The movement was begun in March in the face of great difficulties. Failure was freely prophesied on all sides, but the indefatigable pastor, with a band of faithful workers, pushed on until success crowned their labors. The church has a seating capacity of about two hundred, and is tastefully finished and furnished throughout. It is an ornament to the town. The total cost was about $1,300. Was the new Bible, given by a railroad conductor, and the new clock, given by some other friends, intended as a gentle hint that some new and timely sermons were desired?

The Rapides Camp Ground, situated on the banks of a crystal stream and among the graceful pines, is indeed a delightful place. Its social features are unsurpassed. Better living and better behavior I never saw.

When we remember that nearly everybody in that section belongs to some church, no great results in the way of additions can be expected, and yet there were a few, while the membership was edified generally. The preaching was done by Drs. Parker, Sawyer and McVoy, and Bros. Haney, Roberts (W. J. and Luther), Kelly, Turner, and this writer. The sermons were all, perhaps, good enough, but were almost, without exception, too long. In these days of the bountifulness of preaching it takes a good deal of grace to stand four sermons a day, ranging in length from forty-five to seventy-five minutes.

Those who attended the early prayer meeting were required to sit more than five hours a day on hard, uncomfortable seats. The set of camp-meeting preachers who will cut their sermons down to thirty minutes will receive the grateful thanks of a suffering audience.

The Board of Trustees contemplate fencing the grounds and charging a gate fee. This will be a wonderful improvement over the present plan. This camp meeting has been, and still is, a source of great good to the parish of Rapides. May its glory never depart!

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. C. C. Griffin, of the Mississippi Conference, writes: "Another grand victory for Christ at Hopewell. Results: 14 additions, quite a number of reclamations and conversions, and a great many family altars erected. The preaching was done by Rev. Milton Farrall."

Rev. W. J. Porter, Ennice, La., Aug. 17, 1899: "Closed a good meeting at Long Point, La. (Opelousas district), at twelve o'clock last night. The Holy Ghost was with us from first to last in great power; so much so that the people flocked to hear the gospel, and were convicted, converted and sanctified. It was glorious to behold a Campbellite preacher shouting around the altar with Methodist and Baptist. The meeting was held under the Lake Arthur Holiness tent. Services were conducted by Rev. R. M. Blocker and Willie Nye, and Bro. Cheney, of Lake Arthur; Rev. J. G. Sloane, of Grand Chenier, and Bro. Vail, of New Orleans. We also had a number of sanctified workers from Bro. Blocker's charge. There were about forty conversions, twenty sanctifications, and fifteen additions, with more to follow. Praise the Lord."

Rev. J. N. Tucker, Aug. 22, 1899: "We have recently closed a protracted meeting both at Raleigh and Cedar Grove, assisted by Bro. W. O. Newman, of Meridian, Miss., a professional singer, earnest and forceful preacher, though unlicensed. Visible results: At Raleigh—1 baptized, 2 received by profession of faith, 1 entirely sanctified, and quite a number convinced of its truth. At Cedar Grove—1 accession by profession of faith, quite a number reclaimed from backsliding, 1 entire sanctification, and quite a number seeking the blessing. Others were convinced of its truth, but said (being Baptists) that they could not profess entire sanctification, because they did not want to be turned out of the church. This meeting was remarkable for its effect on the outward life of the people. One man was so troubled about his former conduct that he insisted that he be tried for immorality in the midst of the meeting, to which he pleaded guilty and made reparation, as far as possible. Another stated to me privately he had some seventeen years ago received about $5 by mistake in another man's making change, which he was determined to refund with interest, amounting now to about $17, and quite a number have quit the use of tobacco, including one whole family of five or six. Brethren who need some one to help them in protracted meetings will do well to secure the service of Bro. Newman. God is using him to call sinners to repentance and believers to holiness. His knowledge of the Holy Scriptures is far beyond many of us who are ordained ministers in our church."

E. A. Vail, Prudhomme City, La., Aug. 18, 1899: "There was a glorious tent meeting recently at Long Point, La. Rev. R. M. Blocker conducted the services, and did the most of the preaching. We had with us also Rev. J. G. Sloane, a young preacher, who did some of the preaching. Among the leading workers were Bro. W. H. Nye, of Lake Arthur, and Bro. A. W. Cheney and his little daughter, Hattie. They both did a great work around the altar and with their cornets. Miss Maud Taddy and Mrs. J. H. Nordyke did good service at the organ. The Lord was with us from beginning to end, and many souls found the Lord in the pardoning of their sins. Many were converted, or sanctified, or reclaimed—probably 40 or 50—and 15 taken into the church. The congregations were large, so much so the tent would not hold them. The people had to take their chairs from their wagons and sit outside the tent. Our last service we closed at midnight. After the close of the meeting the writer and Bro. W. J. Porter, who is in charge of this circuit, went in a buggy to Prudhomme that same night—a distance of 17 miles. We reached Prudhomme at 4:15 A. M., and will begin a series of services Saturday night, Aug. 19. The invitation of Bro. Porter to spend a while with him gave me a coveted opportunity to get out into the country. Since I have been laboring with this godly brother I have been greatly helped both in body and spirit. There has been a great deal of improvement made on the church property at Prudhomme City since I was here. There has been a new parsonage built, with a barn and a chicken-house, and the grounds have been nicely fenced in, and the church has been arched and ceiled up inside. Bro. Porter, with the assistance of a few of the brethren, are now putting in the window sashes. After that is done we will have a nice church at Prudhomme. All that will be needed now is a coat or two of paint on the church and parsonage. The church will seat 250 to 300 people, and the parsonage has 6 good-sized rooms in it, and is well furnished. My home address is 127 Dauphine street, New Orleans, La."

Rev. C. F. Emory, P. C., Edwards, Miss., Aug. 18, 1899: "Recently we held a protracted meeting at Learned. Rev. G. A. Guice did the preaching in his usual earnest and forceful style. Notwithstanding daily rains, the attendance was good, and the church was greatly revived. Our third Quarterly Conference was held at Rives' Chapel, Aug. 12, and the meeting protracted four days. The preaching was done by Dr E. H. Mounger and the pastor. Many people were in attendance, some from a considerable distance. The results of these two meetings at Learned and at Rives' were several conversions and accessions. The contractor has just completed work on the new church at Edwards, and it will be opened to the public for the first time on the first Sunday in September. It is a very handsome structure, and would do credit to a much larger place. A more extended description will be given later."

PONCHATOULA, LA.

We are getting on very well on the Ponchatoula charge. The people, generally, manifest a greater love for each other than they did last year.

These good people are taking good care of their preacher. They have not allowed their pastor to buy anything on credit. They furnish him the money to pay cash for such things as he needs. Two-thirds of the preacher's salary have been paid, and some of the other assessments.

We have had three revival meetings. The first was at Ponchatoula the first of the Spring. The church was revived, and there were four accessions. The next was at Springfield, which began July 29, and run to Aug. 3. The first two days, Saturday and Sunday, was held my third Quarterly Conference; Bro. Tucker, P. E., in the chair. He preached us four soul-stirring sermons, and Bro. H. W. May, of Amito City, and also Bro. J. M. Alford, of Live Oak charge, came to me Monday, and both of them did us great work. This church was greatly revived, two adults added to the church, and three children baptized.

Next was held at Hammond, beginning on Wednesday night before the first Sunday in this month. W. D. Bass, of Corinth, Miss., helped me at Hammond, and we had a glorious meeting. Bro. Bass is a Holy-Ghost preacher; just the kind to dig up sinners. I never had a preacher to do better work for me than Bro. Bass did. He preached seven days at Hammond, and the results were twelve additions to the church and two children baptized. The whole church was revived, and he left us fifty per cent. better off than he found us. I can recommend him to any brother to hold a good meeting, and to do faithful and good work. The reason why we did not do more at Hammond is, because there is more denominational strife in the several churches of Hammond than in any other place I ever saw or heard of. Every church seems to do all they can to pull down every other church, and in this way they greatly interfered with my meeting. If the people had turned out to hear Bro. Bass, I think we would have had at least fifty conversions, and equally as many added to the church, and every other church would have been helped greatly.

We have at Hammond a very fine prospect for a good church in the near future. There is plenty of material there to build a very large church. We now have thirty-eight members at Hammond, and have purchased a lot for the building of a church-house, and have some money in hand for this purpose. Others have promised to help us. We need a church-building badly. We are now holding our services in a store-house, and have to pay four dollars per month for it. So we want to build as early as possible.

I have been in very poor health this year. I am now suffering from the sixth attack of malaria this year. I have not been well a whole month in succession. I have been hindered in my studies and pastoral work, but hope that I will be able to hold out here until I shall have finished this year's work, and to make a good report at Conference. I want the brethren to pray for me, and my family, and my charge.

"I feel as if I should fly to pieces." How often those words are on a woman's lips. They express to the uttermost the nerve racked condition of the body, which makes life a daily martyrdom.

If this condition had come suddenly it would have been unbearable. But the transition was gradual. A little more strain each day on the nerves. A little more drain each day of the vitality. Any woman would be glad to be rid of such a condition. Every woman tries to be rid of it. Thousands of such women have been cured by Dr. Pierce's treatment with his "Favorite Prescription" when local doctors had entirely failed to cure.

Sick women suffering from unpleasant drains, irregularities, bearing down pains, inflammation and ulceration are invited to consult Dr. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., by letter free of charge. Every letter is guarded as a sacred confidence. All letters are promptly answered and mailed in private envelopes without printing of any kind upon them.

"Favorite Prescription" is in the fullest sense a temperance medicine, containing neither alcohol nor opium or other narcotic in any form. Accept no substitute.

Mrs. Rena Hensel, of Massillon, Stark Co., Ohio, writes: "I had been troubled with chronic constipation and female weakness and doctored with different physicians, none of whom seemed to help me. I saw one of your advertisements, and I thought I would try your medicines. I did so and with good results. Took one bottle of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and two of his 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and I can say I am cured of my troubles, thanks to Dr. Pierce and his medicines. They do a world of good to those who give them a good trial."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are a perfect cure for constipation.

"THE SOCIETY OF THE ONE."

One of the most noted characteristics of this age is the growth of societies and gnilds, which are being resorted to for the accomplishment of almost every conceivable undertaking Never before, perhaps, in the history of the world has the tendency to organized effort been so pronounced. In overy department of endeavor, whether secnlar or religious, men are relying in no small degree npon the agency of sociotios and orders for the execution of commercial, philanthropic, and other schemes. The people of this age seem to havo learned thoronghly the lesson that "in nnion there is strength."

While organized effort is accomplishing many wonderfnl things, and is rendering possible in many instances what wonld otherwise be impossible, one nnfortnnate tendenoy resulting from emphasis placed upon societies and nnions is the weakening, and in some cases the destrnction, of individnalism. Indications are not wanting that too much is ofttimes expected of committees and society machinery, while too little is expected of the rank and file of the separate individuals who compose the order or society. In this day of "the adoration of committees" we are fast coming to believe that ecarcely anything shonld be attempted withont the agency of a society of some kind, and confidence in the powers of the individnal to accomplish great and nsefnl things is, we fear, growing sadly less. Machinery is a good thing, but if operated merely for its own sake, it is bnt a miserable failnre. In cooperative effort there is not infrequently too mnch shifting of responsibility. In church affairs and in benevolent work the temptation to which the average disciple succumbs is to leave the visitation of the sick and the administering of charity entirely to the pastor or to some committee, and so the spiritnal benefit that wonld result from personal work for Christ is lost almost altogether.

While we wonld not for a moment disparage the importance of organization, we believe firmly that greater effort than ever shonld be made towards enlisting in active service every man and woman in the church. Societies are of great valne in helping to bring about this mnch-to-be desired resnlt, bnt they can not do everything, and sometimes, as we have seen, afford others an excnse for not doing what they might. Bishop Goodsell, of the M. E. Church, not long since said that the need of the church of to-day is "more horse and less harness" All may not agree with him about the need of less harness, bnt none will deny that "more horse" would help wonderfully.

Whenever there is opportunity for service we shonld at once organize ourselves into a society of one "to do with our might what our hands find to do." There should be no lagging back or waiting to see if others are going to join us. We should not stop to ask whether the world is likely to honor us for our faithfulness and self-sacrifice, nor shonld we delay in doing our part because of its seeming insignificance. It may be that our contribution in time and toil for the world's uplifting will outshine and outlive the endeavors of many who rank above us in this world's affairs. The little lad mentioned in gospel story as having but five loaves and two small fishes freely gave them up for the benefit of the hungry multitude, and in the hands of Christ they became sufficient for the needs of that vast throng. Thus did Jesus put honor upon the offering of a lad who, though unmentioned by name, yet will be gratefully remembered through all time. Martin Luther did not wait until he had organized a large band of followers before he began to declaim against the gross corruption and suppression of Romanism, but, single-handed and alone at first, he stood out for the truth of the Bible, and God took care of both him and his work. It was one man, John Howard, who reformed the shamefully vicious prison systems of Europe. The discovery of America was the reward of the faith and perseverance of one man above all others. To the work and influence of Dorothea L. Dix, more than any other person, was due the creation of the British Lunacy Commission, which has so wonderfully ameliorated the condition of the insane in England, and led to far-reaching reforms in other countries.

It is not what you could do if others would help, but what you are doing yourself that counts in the world's conflicts and in the upbuilding of God's kingdom. Let us, then, not "despise the day of small things," nor falter in duty because we are not backed by the enthusiasm of numbers. "If the Lord be for us, who can be against us?" It is nothing with the Lord to save by the many or by few.

THE INTERSTATE LEAGUE CONFERENCE.

On the twenty-third we had the honor of filling a place on the programme of the Interstate Epworth League Conference at the Seashore Camp Ground. A good audience gave respectful attention to what we had to say. Greatly to our regret, we could not remain to take in the exercises of the following day. Those who were privileged to attend from the beginning speak in high praise of the exercises throughout. The biblical lectures of Prof. Thomas Carter are most highly commended by those competent to judge. Bros. Cobb and Atkinson and Miss Butler also filled their places admirably. Dr. DuBose is reported as measuring up to his usual high standard. Although the attendance this year was not large, a good beginning has been made. We confidently expect a large attendance next year. The plan of work meets our hearty approbation. We extend congratulations to the originators of the movement, especially to Bros. G. D. Parker and A. S. Daniels, to whose untiring efforts the success of the enterprise is largely due. We are glad to present a report from the pen of Bro. Parker. During our brief stay we enjoyed the generous hospitalities of Sister S. E Smylie, of Meridian.

Interstate Epworth League Conference.

The Interstate Epworth League Conference was opened on Tuesday eve, Aug. 15, in the tabernacle on Seashore Camp Grounds, Miss., the use of which was kindly granted by the trustees of the Seashore Camp Grounds, by Dr. H. M. DuBose, General Secretary of Epworth League. He preached a magnificent sermon from Luke iv, 18, 19—full of practical thought for the earnest band of workers gathered by the sea. It is a source of gratitude that the head of the Epworth League of our church opened the Conference, touching the key-note of the meeting—that is, out pouring of the Spirit for service. Dr. DuBose remained until Thursday, lecturing on Wednesday morning and night. His talks were helpful and spiritual.

Prof. Thos. Carter had charge of the Biblical Department, and taught a course in the history of the early church, founded on the Acts of the Apostles. This was one of the most interesting features of the Conference. A large number joined this class, and expressed themselves as being helped by the instructions of this gifted teacher of the Word.

The Missionary Institute was presided over by P. L Cobb, of Nashville, assisted by C. D. Atkinson, missionary campaigner. Miss Vic Thompson, of Mississippi; Miss Julia Butler, of Nashville, and others. Practical methods were discussed, model missionary meetings held, missionary books reviewed, etc. A very fine collection of curios from mission fields was on exhibition in Wesley Hall, which proved a valuable addition to the interest of the Institute. Missionary books, periodicals and tracts were on sale.

The open Conference, held each morning from eleven to twelve, discussed the following subjects: State Work, Devotional Department, Junior Work, Literary Department, and Interstate Relations. These practical discussions were informal and helpful.

Perhaps the most spiritual meeting of the day was that known as the decision meeting, held each evening at twilight out on the beach, beneath the wide-spreading oaks. "As the sun went down and the stars came out" the Leaguers gathered by the sea to meet their Lord, as the disciples had often done by the Sea of Galilee, and as in the olden days He met with them there and blessed them.

The evening hour was used in holding gospel services, listening to addresses, lectures, etc. Dr. H. M. DuBose, Dr. W. H. LaPrade and Dr. W. C. Black each delivered popular addresses on subjects pertinent to League work. Revs. J. D. Ellis, B. F. White, J. W. Chambers and P. L. Cobb preached powerful sermons. Revs. R. H. Wynn, Wm. Cox, S. S. Keener, E. N. Evans, D. L. Mitchel, and Jno. F. Foster rendered valuable assistance. Henry Ahrens led the singing until sickness prevented. Miss Nettie Sutcliff was the faithful organist, never having missed a service.

Mrs. M. Butler, of the Woman's Missionary Advocate, was the guest of the Conference.

There were 120 delegates, representing 23 Leagues, in attendance, and 20 ministers and workers present.

The afternoons of each day were given to recreation. Sailing, riding, tennis, etc., was engaged in by the delegates and visitors.

Permanent organization was effected, and the following officers elected for the ensuing year. Geo. D. Parker, president; — Meek, secretary; Miss Margaret Bancroft, treasurer. These officers constitute the Executive Committee. A Board of Control will be appointed from the three States—Alabama, Mississippi, and Louisiana—who, with the Executive Committee, will arrange a program for the next Conference.

Much of the success of the Conference is due to the indefatigable efforts and executive ability of Mr. A. Sidney Daniels.

LEAGUER.

LITERARY NOTES.

BY W. F. B.

Messrs. Barbee & Smith, Nashville, Tenn., and Dallas, Texas, will publish, about the middle of September, "An Autumn Lane and Other Poems," a new volume by Will T. Hale, the Southern poet whose verse has been familiar to the public for a number of years. It is said that the book will contain the poet's best work, some of which appears for the first time.

The Cosmopolitan Magazine, for September, opens with a profusely illustrated article entitled, "The 'America's Cup," by John R. Spears. "A Life" is the title of a very interesting short story by Maarten Maartens. Vance Thompson contributes a beautifully illustrated article on "The Roof Gardens of New York." "The Study of Fiction," by Brander Matthews, is a masterly article which will be read with interest.

The initial number of "Everybody's Magazine," published by the North American Co., 74 E. Ninth Street, New York, comes to our table with a number of attractive short stories and numerous illustrations. James Metcalfe, M. A., contributes an article entitled, "The Heads of Our Colleges" Judging from the interesting features of this new literary venture, it bids fair to become one of the leading ten-cent magazines.

We have just received from the Advance Publishing Co., of 215 Madison street, Chicago, a copy of Charles M Sheldon's new book, "John King's Question Class." The book is notable, first, because giving another of Mr. Sheldon's striking and purposeful stories; and, second, because woven into the story are the author's own answers to the multitude of questions which have arisen in the discussion over his former books. Every Sheldon reader will, therefore, wish to read this story. The price of the book in cloth is 75 cents; paper, 25 cents.

The September issue of The Ladies' Home Journal is an unusually attractive number. On the first page is given a series of pictures of "The Wayside Inn of Sudbury Town," made famous by Longfellow Barton Cheyney contributes an instructive article on "The Young Man and the Professions," telling young men how to take up the study of law, medicine, architecture, etc. Charles T. Brodhead has an illustrated article on "The East-Side Girl of New York," and Patti Lyle Collins tells "Why Six Million Letters Go Astray Every Year." Caroline B. Le Row tells "What It Means to Be a Teacher." Frances E. Louigan tells "How Some Girls Have Earned Money" in many unusual, but practical ways.

CURIOUS PHENOMENA OF DISEASE.

In certain tanneries hides imported direct from China are being used, and six cases of a fatal disease common in Asiatic countries, but unusual here, have occurred in tanneries near Ashland, Wis. The technical name of the malady is anthrax; in Europe and Asia it is known as "wool sorters' disease," and is most common among men handling cattle. It is caused by a microscopic germ, and, once entered, pervades the whole system. This germ was one of the first to be positively identified in the recent career of bacteriology. —Northwestern Advocate.

"SOME CHURCH PROBLEMS OF TO-DAY."

The above caption is that of two articles from the pen of Dr. D. C. Kelley in the Nashville Advocate—one of July 27 and one of Aug. 10. To this writer these articles are worthy of a place in every paper in the communion and to be read by every member of our great church.

Our purpose in this is more to call attention to the subject discussed than to discuss it ourself. Indeed, the matter is presented more forcibly than I could hope to do with my limited experience as compared with the Doctor's. My appreciation of these communications may grow out of the fact that for a long time I have been in hearty sympathy with the ideas presented.

What the Doctor says about the "distressingly inadequate support" of our preachers sent to many of the country appointments we all fully accept. What he says about buying books; education, self-respect, we heartily endorse. Often as we have heard our pastors reporting on the Conference floor their meagre salaries have we been impressed with the question, What have these men done to keep the wolf from the door, to say nothing about the question of education. How can a man's self respect be maintained on such figures, and what can be the self-appreciation of a people who will receive the service of a faithful minister for twelve months and pay so little? As I have said, the object of this is more to call the attention of those whose duty it is to correct than to enlarge.

In many instances the people have settled down on the conclusion that no more is expected of them; in some cases it is possible that they are unable to do more. Whatever be the cause, for obvious reasons they ought to be corrected. I assume that no preacher should feel satisfied with a salary less than five hundred dollars, and that no congregation or circuit can think of itself as it should and pay less. This is small pay for the service and time of such a man as a faithful minister of the gospel is expected to be.

"The laborer is worthy of his hire," says the Master, and as compared with the amount of work and wages therefor, no men are more worthy than the average Methodist preacher. The late Mr. Ingersol said, a few years ago, that no men do as much on as little pay as the ministers of the Methodist Church. Coming from this source, the statement carries double force. As to my own Conference, I have before me the Minutes of our last session, and I find that out of our one hundred and twenty pastors only forty-three received five hundred dollars and over; fifty-three received not over four hundred dollars, and of these thirty-one received three hundred or less. With no time for other work and everything to buy, these figures are entirely too low.

Now, where is the remedy? Manifestly in only one of two ways: Either more liberality on the part of the people or larger works. (Some of the works referred to have not paid more than three hundred dollars for five years, and that in exceptional cases.) The latter solution would result in more riding, more preaching, more visiting and more work generally on the part of the pastor, and perhaps more exposure; but, as for myself, I would prefer all this with more salary, more self-respect, more money for education, and more comforts in the home. To consolidate a few circuits in the Mississippi Conference I am certain would be better both for pastors and people.

SOUTHERN LEAGUE CONFERENCE.

The Texas Advocate, of last week, has an editorial favoring the proposed Southern Epworth League Conference, from which we quote as follows:

"We were specially notified by Dr. Berry, in the Epworth Herald, that there would be no color-line at Indianapolis, and that whites and blacks would mix to their hearts' content. This was published for the benefit of the Southern delegates, and it was carried out to the letter. In a recent number of the Herald, Dr. Berry gloats over the success of his plan. Listen to him: 'The more than eight hundred delegates of African descent were received with marked cordiality, and treated with the utmost kindness throughout. Everyone of these delegates sat where he pleased at every session, and there was absolutely no attempt at drawing the color-line.'

"Now, we have no objection to treating these colored delegates with kindness and cordiality and respect, but why does Dr. Berry stress the fact that there was no attempt to draw the color-line? Simply to show Southern delegates that, despite their training and preconceived ideas touching this question, they nevertheless got the thing forced down their throats at Indianapolis. And they did get it ad nauseam, for there was not only no color-line under the pavilion, but there was none at the hotels The negroes and the whites were herded together in these hostelries as though they were all of one race and one complexion. If Northern people want this sort of thing, we have no objection—it is a matter of taste—but Southern people are not yet educated up to that standard. And we do not want to belong to a school in the form of an Epworth League Conference whose specific business it is to impart that sort of tuition. The thing has gone far enough, and it is time to call a halt.

"But over and beyond the 'color line' question there are other features in the proceedings of the International Conference not in keeping with Southern ideas and usages. For instance: At Indianapolis, Bishop Fowler delivered his lecture on Abraham Lincoln, which would have been all right at a literary or historical association, but out of place in a great religious convocation where there were people from all sections. There are things in that production, growing out of Bishop Fowler's peculiar environments, not at all pleasant to Southern ears. Then Bishop McCabe, whom we love and respect, was induced to trot out his old lecture, musty with the mildew of thirty-odd years, on the 'Bright Side of Life in Libby Prison.' It was prepared just after the close of the war for Northern ears, and he has never delivered it to an audience of Southern people. There are things in that lecture very grating to the ears of people from Dixie. Then, too, some of the speakers—one in particular—went into the merits of slavery, and discussed the emancipation act with warmth and vigor, and said a number of things not calculated to call up pleasant memories. That is a bygone issue, and has no place in a great fraternity gathering."

(We heartily endorse Dr. Rankin's position).

NOTES.

Rev. J. C. Mimms, of the North Mississippi Conference, has been ill, but is now recuperating among the mountains of Tennessee.

From a private letter from Rev. J. A Bowen, written Aug. 24, we quote as follows: "The Lord continues to bless us here. Good revival in East Columbus last week in July that resulted in several conversions and seven accessions to the church. We now have three Sunday-schools. From the East Columbus meeting Revs. Eugene Johnson and J. A. Leech did most of the preaching. Prof. T. H. Lipscomb rendered me much valuable help."

Rev. G. W. Bachman, Columbus, Miss., Aug. 26, writes: "A good meeting this week at Flint Hill, Columbus circuit. About 20 professions, conversion—mostly church members, 5 accessions on profession of faith. The pastor, Rev. Eugene Johnson, was aided by Revs. R. A. Burroughs, P. E; A. P. Leech, and this scribe. Good work was done for the Sunday-school cause and in the distribution of religious literature. The district parsonage at Starkville has been sold, and steps are already being taken for a new one, to be located either in Columbus or West Point. The tent meeting in Durant closed the twenty-second instant, with 20 accessions to the church. Rev. J. M. Massey is yet unable to resume his work. I spend to-morrow here, and go Monday to Tabernacle Camp Meeting in Alabama."

EPWORTH LEAGUE DEPARTMENT.

"ALL FOR CHRIST."

LOUISIANA.

REV. THOMAS B. CLIFFORD, Jackson, La., EDITOR.

To the Epworth Leaguers of the Arcadia District.

As third vice-president of the Epworth League of this district, I desire to offer a few suggestions to such chapters as have done but little or nothing in the work of the Literary Department.

We recognize the fact that in many places so little desire for good literature exists that it is next to impossible to carry on successfully the work designed for the Literary Department. And yet this very fact—stubborn as it is—constitutes the chief reason why strenuous and untiring efforts should be made to change this state of things. Christ was a great teacher, Christianity is educative, and unless this opportunity offered by the Literary Department to develop our young people along this line is seized upon and improved, one of the most useful and highly significant functions of the League will be lost. The only capital with which the mass of humanity is endowed is time; and many, many refuse to invest this until it is too late to realize much profit therefrom. That individual, institution, or organization that can and will cause the youth of Christendom properly to employ their time during the age of the "teens" will have erected in the hearts of coming generations a monument more beautiful than marble, more lasting than granite.

If wisely administered, I believe the Literary Department of the Epworth League can be made an important factor in this great work. Believing there are some presidents of local chapters as well as third vice-presidents of some who have these same convictions, but for lack of more definite direction have as yet done nothing in this department, I offer the following suggestions:

In the first place, all the officers of every chapter, and especially the third vice-president, should have a familiar knowledge of The Epworth League Handbook which may be had free by applying to the Publishing House at Nashville. In this is found much interesting knowledge of the history and development of the League movement, while its "Practical Suggestions" are exceedingly helpful in carrying on the work of the Literary Department.

In the next place, I would most heartily recommend that there be a club of at least ten subscribers to the Epworth Era in every chapter. No wide-awake, thoroughly enthusiastic Leaguer can afford to miss this sweet morsel of Christian literature. Young people can be interested in this paper if the matter is tactfully presented; and that third vice-president who has ten members that are reading the Epworth Era may reasonably expect soon to be able to take up and successfully carry on other lines of literary work. This bright, high-toned sheet whettens the appetite for literature that is lofty, inspiring, and elevating.

Never allow any exercise or service to drag, but cause a spirit of earnestness, enthusiasm, and Christian cheerfulness to pervade every exercise. To your League Literary Social publicly invite all members of the League and such others as by their coming approve of its work and promise to contribute by their good conduct what they can to the pleasure and profit of the occasion. Begin your social early, have a committee to receive all guests, see that they all participate in the conversation, and share the refreshments. Break up easily, not later than eleven—better ten o'clock.

Earnestly hoping every League in the Arcadia district that is not doing satisfactory work in the Literary Department will at least give these suggestions some consideration and a trial, and that some one else will soon offer something better, I am,

"All for Christ,"

MISSISSIPPI.

REV. HENRY G. HAWKINS, Madison, Miss., ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

The associate editor's brother, Rev. Ira T. Hawkins, who is a member of the North Alabama Conference, comes about once a year to assist in one or two revivals in Mississippi. It is his custom to hold on Sunday afternoon during such protracted meeting a special service for the children, inviting all between one and a hundred years old, the biggest man in town to sit on the back seat, the smallest children to the front. It is generally the best service of the meeting, impressive to young and old. This year his help was given at Madison Station, and at Union, on the Vaughan's circuit.

Annie Estelle Boothe, of North Mississippi, in the Epworth Era writes: "I placed popularity above piety in the qualification of a Junior League superintendent intentionally, for a man or woman may be as meek as our worthy president here, as patient as Job, as pious as 'the pious Æneas' of Trojan song and story, as faithful as the 'faithful Achates,' and have no influence whatever with the children. They must be people who love the children and whom the children love. They are wise, these little ones."

On Monday and Tuesday, Aug. 14 and 15, the Madison Circuit Sunday-school Institute was held at Pearl River Church. Among other features, boys and girls of the four Sunday-schools under sixteen years of age stood a written examination on the "Life of Joseph." The premium for the best set of answers was awarded to Walter Galloway, J. Harvel Ray being second.

NOTICE.

To the Preachers of the Durant District, North Mississippi Conference—

By the first week in September you will receive all the League requisites necessary for organizing one or more Leagues on your charge. Brother, give the League an honest trial and you will find it the very thing your young people need. If you can not start out with an ideal League, begin the best you can. The young people are anxious to do something.

Suppose you ask for a penny a week from each member in your charge for foreign missions. This is a small amount, but larger than the average member contributes. You can collect "back taxes"—beginning with last December.

Call on your district secretary for any information you need. Write to me, and perhaps I can visit your charge and help you. Wherever you find it hard to organize there is where the League is needed most.

The Durant district is far behind in this great enterprise.

Let us have 20 new Leagues, 200 subscribers to the Epworth Era, and all the collections in full.

Twentieth Century Up-to-Date Map of the World.

FOR SCHOOL, HOME, OFFICE, AND LIBRARY.

The Royal Geographical Society of London recently completed a survey of the world, made necessary by the political and geographical changes that have taken place in the United States, Alaska, China, Africa, and South America, and now furnish the public with a map as valuable as it is ornamental, useful and instructive. It shows the ocean currents, steamship lines, international date line, new counties, railway stations, shipping points, thousands of new towns, cable routes, boundaries and new United States possessions. It is complete in every detail. There is nothing more useful at all times than a good map. It has already found a place in 3,000 offices and homes in Chicago, and is for sale by publishers' agent, 532 Gravier street. Agents wanted.

FROM REV. J. W. TINNIN.

MR EDITOR: Please allow me the privilege of replying to Bro. Featherstun's article in the last ADVOCATE. He says that I was not moved from the Whitestown circuit wholly on account of refusing to promise him that I would not employ evangelists, but also for intermeddling with the Summit charge, and neglect of work, especially at Fernwood. If the above charges are true, he should have not only relieved me of the circuit, but also arraigned me for trial. I will give you the facts in the case, and you can form your own conclusion.

In the early part of January thirty members of Adams circuit, for a cause satisfactory to themselves, withdrew from the church. Soon after their withdrawal they petitioned the presiding elder to allow me to reinstate them, and organize a church in their community (the nearest church to them was six miles). He gave them to understand that he would grant their request, but afterward changed his mind, and appointed a junior preacher on the Summit circuit, and authorized him to take charge of those people. They wrote him that they were not pleased with his plan, and as they were not members of the church, they were under no obligation to accept it, and would not.

Some time after this correspondence between those people and the presiding elder, three families—nine in number—came to Whitestown and rejoined the church. I notified the presiding elder, and he wrote me that he was glad I received them. I took it for granted that he wanted me to get the others in the church also; so I visited the neighborhood, preached in a school-house, and received eighteen more. In a few days after this I received a written notice from the preacher in charge in Summit circuit not to visit or preach in the bounds of his circuit. The presiding elder wrote me to the same effect. I wrote them that I did not intend to violate any law, and would respect the protest as far as it was in harmony with the law; would not preach any more in the bounds of said circuit, but would continue to visit those people as long as they remained members of my church; or language to that effect. The Summit preacher did not have a member in the bounds of the community in which I visited.

From the above, would you consider me guilty of the charge of intermeddling with the Summit circuit?

As to the charge of neglect at Fernwood, I wish to say, the year before I took charge of this church they paid the preacher $20. They were assessed for me the first year $50, and paid $92. This year they were assessed $150, and up to the second Quarterly Conference paid $79. We secured a lot for a church and parsonage, and raised about $700 cash for our new church. During the two years several professed conversion, and the membership increased about 50 per cent. Does this sound like neglecting my work at Fernwood? I take none of the glory to myself; it is the Lord's; bless his holy name!

He also charges me with mismanagement of Whitestown church-building. The facts in the case are as follows: In our second Quarterly Conference the presiding elder asked me if I had secured a deed to this church. I replied that I had not. He asked me to secure it at once. I told him that the property was not yet paid for, and that my people were not prepared to pay balance due; therefore, I was not willing to ask for the deed. He asked me if I objected to his getting the deed. I told him that I did not. He tried to get it, but failed.

As to his disputing my report from Adams and Providence, fortunately it is not a matter of veracity between us, but of record.

The Lord bless you.

Fraternally,

J. W. TINNIN.

SPANISH-AMERICAN WAR PANORAMA

is one of the war books which is likely to be in continuous demand. It is a panoramic record of the triumph of Yankee Doodle. The eagle flaps his wings on every page, and "Old Glory" waves around and above every scene. Prominent officers connected with the war are here portrayed, as well as many of the "men behind the guns." Military life is pictured to the eye, from recruiting to guard mount and skirmish line. Nor is the ludicrous omitted. The company cook receives the attention due to his importance; the mess is shown; cavalry scenes are given; the hospital arrangements are depicted; the heroines of the Red Cross service are displayed; street scenes in Havana, Santiago and elsewhere are unrolled, the new citizens or subjects (which are they?) of Uncle Sam appear and disappear as the leaves are turned.

In a word, the gazer visits the new localities and sees the tumultuous new life, without the risk or expense of a sea voyage.

The Album is 5½x8 inches, weighs 12 ounces, printed on finest coated paper.

AWAY.

BY JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY.

I can not say, and I will not say
That he is dead—he is just away!

With a cheery smile, and a wave of the hand,
He has wandered into an unknown land,

And left us dreaming how very fair
It needs must be, since he lingers there.

And you O you, who the wildest yearn
For the old-time step and the glad return—

Think of him faring on, as dear
In the love of There as the love of Here;

And loyal still, as he gave the blows
Of his warrior-strength to his country's foes—

Mild and gentle, as he was brave—
When the sweetest love of his life he gave

To simple things:—where the violets grew
Blue as the eyes they were likened to,

The touches of his hands have strayed
As reverently as his lips have prayed;

When the little brown thrush that harshly chirred
Was dear to him as the mocking bird;

And he pitied as much as a man in pain
A writhing honey-bee wet with rain.

Think of him still as the same, I say:
He is not dead—he is just away!

THE CHARM OF GOOD MANNERS.

Did you ever think, my dear young friend, what a positive charm there is about a person who is truly polite?

I do not mean the false and formal politeness of fops who put on airs, and selfish people who use flattery for purposes of their own, but the genuine politeness which can only spring from a kind heart and a pure mind.

There is a poor old man who saws wood and does odd jobs on our street, who, in spite of his rags and poverty, is universally liked and respected. It is really fine to see the grace with which he will touch his old hat to every lady he meets, and many a rich man might take a lesson from him in points of courtesy.

The washerwoman's little boy who often comes to our house on errands is another favorite with everybody. How quickly he doffs his little cap when he enters the door, and he is so polite in his speech to everyone! Poor Mrs. Murphy works hard to take care of those six little children, and when she finds time to teach Patsy such manners I can not imagine, but the boy has picked them up somehow and well deserves his mother's title for him, "Patsy, my jewel."

And there's Miss Ann Hawkins, the elderly person who goes about in families doing mending and plain sewing. She is "mortal homely," as the saying is, has not one good feature about her face, but for all that we like to have her in the family and never think of the looks at all. She always seems to know just what is best to say and what to leave unsaid, and somehow contrives to make everyone feel happy and comfortable.

So there it is. We all want to keep popular, to be liked by people, and we can all do it, no matter how poor we are, how plain, nor how hard we work. The whole secret is in a nutshell—be kind and polite to everyone, wishing them well.

Here is a good definition to remember: "True politeness consists in making everybody about you happy."—Child's Paper.

One day, many years ago, a bright boy found employment in a photograph gallery in Nashville, Tenn. His wages were small, but he took good care of them, and in course of time he had saved up a snug little sum of money. One day a friend, less thrifty than he, came to him with a long face, and asked for a loan of money, offering a book as security. Although the other knew there was little probability of his ever being repaid, he could not refuse the request.

"Here is the money; keep your book, and repay me when you can."

The grateful lad went away in such haste that he left the book behind. The kind youth examined the volume with curiosity. It was a work on astronomy by Dick, and it so fascinated him that he sat up all night studying it. He had never read anything which so filled him with delight. He determined to learn all that he could about the wonders of the heavens. He began thenceforth to read everything he could obtain relating to astronomy.

The next step was to buy a small spy-glass, and, night after night, he spent most of the hours on the roof of his house, studying the stars. He secured, second-hand, the tube of a large spy-glass, into which he fitted an eye-piece, and sent to Philadelphia for an object glass. By-and-by he obtained a five-inch glass, which, as you know, is an instrument of considerable size.

Meanwhile, he worked faithfully in the shop of the photographer; but his nights brought him rare delight, for he never wearied of tracing out the wonders and marvels of the worlds around us. With the aid of his large spy-glass he discovered two comets before they were seen by any of the professional astronomers, whose superior instruments were continually scanning the heavens in search of the celestial wanderers. This exploit, you may well suppose, made the boy famous. He was invited by the professors in Vanderbilt University to go thither and see what he could do with their six-inch telescope. In the course of the following four years he discovered six comets. He was next engaged by the Lick Observatory. With the aid of its magnificent instrument he discovered eight comets, and last Summer astonished the world by discovering the fifth satellite of Jupiter. He invented a new method of photographing the nebulæ in the milky way, and has shown an originality approaching genius in his work in star photography.

Perhaps you have already guessed the name of this famous astronomer, which is Professor E. E. Barnard, now in charge of the Yerkes Observatory of Chicago University, and this is the story of how he worked up.—Chicago Record.

BE FAIR WITH YOUR COMPETITORS.

Learn to cultivate fair-mindedness and a spirit of tolerance and generosity toward your competitor. There is no reason why his advancement should be regretted by you as a blow to your prospects, instead of giving you pleasure. It should not be looked upon as a personal injury.

There is no reason why a man should try to undermine his competitor by belittling his excellencies and magnifying his faults. Do not let generous rivalry degenerate into treacherous warfare and petty selfishness, and take the place of a broad manhood.

Learn to show a spirit of generosity and large-heartedness toward your rivals, and treat everybody with fairness. You will find this policy will pay you in the end, besides leaving you a larger, fuller, and nobler man.

Do not spend your time crying down your neighbor, but build up yourself. Let the superiority of your goods and methods of business advance you. The world always looks with contempt upon a man who attempts to build himself up by pulling others down, or to climb up on the misfortunes of others. The world admires justice and fair-dealing; and any attempt to take advantage of another will inevitably react upon yourself, and make you a smaller and meaner man.

GRAND NATIONAL PRIZE OF 16,600 FRANCS AT PARIS.

When a fellow-clerk is advanced to a higher position, congratulate him cordially. Do not ascribe his advance to good luck. Avoid all narrowness and meanness and petty jealousy; cultivate a broad, generous and hearty spirit. Mean, stingy, and uncharitable men never advance very far in the world; and, even if they happen to make money, the world despises them, in spite of it.

All the wealth of a Vanderbilt or a Rockefeller could never make a man out of a narrow, mean, stingy, jealous spirit.—Success.

HOME

A prize which was offered by a London paper for the best definition of a home brought about five thousand answers. Some of the best were the following:

A world of strife shut out, world of love shut in. Home is the blossom of which heaven is the fruit.

The only spot on earth where the faults and failings of fallen humanity are hidden under the mantle of charity.

The father's kingdom, the children's paradise, the mother's world.

Where you are treated best and grumble most.

A little hollow scooped out of the windy hill of the world, where we can be shielded from its cares and annoyances.—Exchange.

A woman who had many sorrows and heavy burdens to bear, but who was noted for her cheerful spirits, once said in explanation: "You know I have had no money, I had nothing to give but myself; and so I made the resolution that I would never sadden anyone else with my troubles. I have laughed and told jokes when I could have wept. I have always smiled in the face of every misfortune. I have tried never to let anyone go from my presence without a happy word or a bright thought to carry with him. And happiness makes happiness. I myself am happier than I would have been had I sat down and bemoaned my fate." This gospel of happiness is one that everyone should lay to heart. Set out with the invincible determination that you will bear burdens, and not impose them. Whether the sun shines or the rain falls, show a glad face to your neighbor. If you must fall in life's battle, you can at least fall with a smile on your face.—Wellspring.

Don't conclude that you have never had any opportunities in life.

Don't believe that everyone else in the world is happier than you.

Don't be inquisitive about the affairs of even your most intimate friends.

Don't get in the habit of vulgarizing life by making light of the sentiment of it.—Uplook.

Every day of meeting sorrow superbly makes the life more grand. Every tear that falls from one's own eyes gives a deeper tenderness of look, of touch, of word, that shall soothe another's woe. Sorrow is not given to us alone that we may mourn. It is given us that, having felt, suffered, wept, we may be able to understand, love, bless. —Anna Robertson Brown.

It may be true, according to the old saw, that the world owes every man a living; but it is also true that every healthy man owes the world to make his own living. No man's industry has a right to be taxed for the folly or idleness of another.—Recorder.

Hygiene.

THE CIGARETTE EVIL.

The examination of young men for the military service of the country has called attention again, and in a most emphatic form, to the evils of cigarette-smoking. The examining surgeons have spoken in no uncertain terms. First, it is said that the percentage of rejections on the ground of physical disqualification is much larger than during the Civil War. This is followed by the statement that this change is due to the curse of cigarette-smoking, ninety per cent. of the victims of which are rejected. Think of it—only ten per cent. of the young men addicted to this habit have hearts sufficiently sound to pass an examination for military service! Leaving this class out, the percentage of sound young men is higher now than during the late war.

These facts are earnestly commended to boys, and to the parents and guardians who have charge of the education of the youth. They are most serious, even alarming. They are official and impartial, and can not be charged to reformers or "cranks." Thoughtful physicians lay great stress on them.

Occasionally physicians are found who have little sympathy with those who would guard young men from evil habits; who talk without thinking; who are possibly themselves slaves to the filthy tobacco habit, and they will laugh at the cigarette evil, declaring that the evil is imaginary. We have seen reports of one or two such. But they are not to be regarded. The facts are overwhelmingly against them. The more reliable opinions of wiser men should be heeded, and everyone having the good of the rising generation at heart should use his influence and authority against this evil.—Exchange.

What is the use of traveling at sixty miles an hour if we are just as discontented at the end of the journey as at the beginning?—W. H. P. Faunce.

OUR $1 OFFER.

Much has been said about reducing the subscription price of the ADVOCATE. The only way in which a reduction can be brought about is by an increase in the number of subscribers. In order to facilitate this result, we make the following offer: Until further notice we will take new subscriptions at the rate of $1 for eight months. When seven thousand five hundred new names have been sent in at this rate with the cash, we will extend the time four months longer, thus reducing the price to $1 per annum. When the extension is made, old subscribers will get the benefit as well as new ones, provided they first pay up all arrearages. Of course, no commissions can be given under this offer. Address

LIKE A THIEF IN THE NIGHT,

Malaria creeps into the system and leaves a poison which saps its vitality until the well-known symptoms of CHILLS AND FEVER, INTERMITTENT FEVER, CONGESTION, BLOODY URINE, etc., will show their snake-like heads. Fortunately there is an antidote in DICKS' CHILLIFUGE, which absolutely exterminates Malaria in a few hours; so pleasant to the taste that children love to take it. It banishes fevers like mist before the morning sun; brings us a gift rose checks, health, happiness, and makes life worth the living

TUCKER—HOUSTON LOVE TUCKER was born near Sparta, White county, Tenn., Oct. 14, 1815. He died in Fayette, Miss., July 28, 1899.

In the year of 1839 or '40 he moved to Jefferson county, Miss. For a number of years he was successfully engaged in school teaching.

In 1845 he joined the Methodist Church at old Bethel. For many years he was an efficient Sunday-school superintendent, and through a long period of years a faithful steward of the church.

In 1854 he was married to Miss Mary Torrey, daughter of Daniel Torrey. To them were born two children: Benjamin Winans, who died in infancy, and Margaret Elizabeth, now Mrs. McClore, of Fayette, Miss.

As a church member through a period of fifty-four years, Bro. Tucker's character was unblemished; moral, exemplary, devotional, faithful—yes, of deep piety—sound in doctrine, well posted in affairs of Church and State. He had read his Bible through about forty times. His Teachers' Bible is profusely marked from Genesis to Revelation, showing how carefully he read it. As a companion to the Bible, he clung to the old hymn book. This is also carefully marked throughout. These were his constant companions in his declining years and days. Nearly all of the books of his well-selected library he presented to our parsonage, reserving only his Bible and hymn book.

He requested the writer to preach his funeral from II. Tim. iv, 6-8. He approached death without fear; in fact, was anxious to go.

B. S. RAYNER.

Fayette, Miss.

LEWIS—SARAH, only daughter of I. E. and Kate Galloway Lewis, was born in Bolivar county, Miss., Dec. 15, 1893, and died of congestion in Tchula, Holmes county, Miss., July 1, 1899.

Five and a half years was this lovely flower—for such she always seemed in her delicate beauty—permitted to gladden and make sunshine in the home of her fond parents and little brothers; then, almost without warning, she was transplanted into the garden of God, to bloom in fadeless beauty, too pure an exotic for earth's barren soil.

Sarah, in many respects, was a wonderful child. I could say much of her, for I knew and loved her well; but I feel that I can pay no higher tribute to her than quote from a letter from her almost heart-broken mother. "She was always the most thoughtful and obedient child I ever saw. I could always depend on her doing what I told her, and I never had cause to doubt her word. She was a perfect little Christian."

What finer traits could one possess? Then look up, bereft and loving father and mother, for though her little body is sleeping beside her dear grandmother who loved her so well, she needs not her sweet lullaby, for she is safe in the arms of our blessed Father, who said, "Suffer the little ones to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven." AUNT ELLEN.

CALLIHAN—Died at Springfield, La., on the thirtieth of July, 1899, LITTLETON MADISON CALLIHAN, in the seventy-third year of his age. He was buried in the family lot in the cemetery at Tangipahoa. His mother was a sister of Rev. Barnabas Pipkin, who was one of the pioneer preachers of this country, preaching for over forty years in this and adjoining States. His mother was a most excellent Christian woman, and perhaps it was by her prayers that he connected himself with the Methodist Church at Tangipahoa about thirty years ago, under the ministry of W. B. Hines. He served as steward for many years. He built and bore more than half the expense of two Methodist Churches in Tangipahoa. The first, which was burned, was built on a lot given to the church by the venerable grandmother of the late Maston Newsom (Mrs. Mixon). The Baptist Church now stands on that lot. The other church still stands on a lot given by Mr. Newsom, and was dedicated by Barnabas Pipkin as Newsom's Chapel.

The subject of this sketch was not demonstrative, and but little is known of his Christian life. He followed the rule of doing to others as he would have them do unto him. He was asked if he was ready to meet his Savior. He intimated that he was. He leaves a wife, who was married to him over forty years ago. He also leaves five sons and two daughters.

MOORE—Mrs. SIDNAY MOORE (nee Moore) was born in Calhoun county, Miss., May 21, 1861. Her parents died while she was quite young, and she, with two brothers and one sister, was placed in the orphans' home near Lauderdale, Miss. In 1873 she was converted and joined the Baptist Church. In 1875 she was taken into the home of Mr. Hall, a Baptist preacher, and remained with him until she was married to Mr. S. O. Moore, April 10, 1892. After her marriage she joined the M. E. Church, South, and remained a faithful member until her death, which took place on July 4, 1899.

As a neighbor, she was always ready to visit the sick and help those that were in distress. As a wife, she did everything she could to help her husband to succeed in business and prepare for the future world. As a mother, she watched over her children with the tenderest care, teaching them to be kind and gentle towards one another, and pointing them to the Lamb of God. As a Christian, she was always ready to attend to her duties to God, and did it in the most cheerful manner. She loved the church devotedly. She also loved the Sunday-school, and did all she could for it.

God grant that her loved ones may so live as to meet her where sorrow will never come.

B. W. LEWIS.

WHERRY—Mrs. N. M. WHERRY (nee Howell) was born in Georgia, Sept. 15, 1829; professed religion when about eighteen years old, and joined the Methodist Church. December 20, 1849, she was married to John A. Wherry in Noxubee county, Miss. Her husband being a Presbyterian, she joined that church. In 1867, with her husband and children, she moved to Holmes county, Miss. Her husband and two children preceded her to the home above. She died at the residence of her son, T. J. Wherry, July 28, 1899. She leaves a stepson, three sons, and fifteen grandchildren, besides one brother and numerous nieces and nephews, to mourn her loss. For more than fifty years she was a follower of the Lord Jesus Christ, and lived and worked for the Master's cause. As daughter, sister, wife, mother and friend, she exemplified the example of our Savior, and went about doing good. May all her loved ones live so as to meet her in that home where sin, sorrow and parting are never known! Her brother,

F. A. HOWELL.

Bowling Green, Miss.

CLARK—SARAH N. CLARK, wife of H. C. Clark, has gone to eternity; but from the facts that follow we rest in the conviction that she dwells with God, and we'll in the hope of meeting her in glory.

Cousin Sarah was born in August, 1868; joined the Methodist Church at about the age of twenty years; was married in March, 1892, and died on the twenty-sixth day of July, 1899. She was a woman of exceptional business ability, and of unflagging energy and industry. While economizing, she was liberal, and while candid and frank, she was kind. In the last months of her life she thought and talked much of God and her salvation. We shall never forget with what deep interest she talked with us about spiritual things; neither shall we forget her kindness to us the last time we saw her. She leaves a husband and one precious boy that we all remember as bright-eyed Clyde. May God comfort the loved ones, and use her death to draw us to Him! E. T. BRELAND.

LEECH—Whereas, It has pleased the all-wise Father to take from her family, our church and Sunday-school at Minter City, Miss., our young friend and sister, Miss ELMA LEECH; therefore, be it

Resolved, That, as a Sunday-school, we testify to her worth by more earnest devotion to duty, thereby imitating her example in faithfulness.

Resolved, That our Sunday-school, which she so dearly loved and faithfully served, has lost one whose place will be hard to fill; but we bow in submission to Him who "doeth all things well."

Resolved, That we extend our warmest sympathy to the bereaved family, and pray God may sustain them, and give them grace in this, their great sorrow.

MRS. J. E. LUPER, for Com.

BALDWIN—Whereas, It pleased God, in his divine providence, to call from our midst on Aug. 9, 1899, our co-laborer, Mrs. ETTA BALDWIN, to her eternal rest and reward; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Ladies' Aid Society of the M. E. Church of Biloxi realize we have lost one of our truest and most valuable members.

Resolved, That we cherish the memory of her who followed so faithfully the "footsteps of Jesus," that though her last years on earth were marked by great suffering, she bore it with such Christian fortitude that her daily life was a testimony for him.

Resolved, That we extend to the bereaved family our sincere sympathy and condolence.

New Machine Offer.

By Far the Best We Have Ever Made.

Always on the watch for something good for our subscribers, we have succeeded in making arrangements whereby we can make a sewing machine offer which is far better than any we have been able hitherto to make. Read the following description and then read our offer:

No. 4 IMPERIAL.

THE IMPERIAL HIGH-ARM SINGER will be found the perfection of mechanism as regards simplicity, durability and adaptability to the wide range of work embraced in the general family needs.

A Handsome, Light-Running, Lock-Stitch, High-Arm Machine that will not fail to please the most fastidious. Embracing all the advantages with all desirable improvements of other first-class sewing machines, so simple in mechanism that the most inexperienced need no assistance in operating it. Book of Instructions with every machine. Any child can learn to run it.

Extra Set of Attachments also free with each machine, consisting of the following: One Tucker, One Foot Ruffler, One Set of Plate Hemmers, four different widths up to ¼ of an inch, One Binder and One Thread Cutter.

No. 3 Machine, drop leaf table, gothic cover, case of two drawers at one end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $24.
Our price, $14.75.

No. 4 Machine, drop leaf table, gothic cover, case of two drawers at each end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $25.
Our price, $15.50.

No. 5 Machine, drop leaf table, gothic cover, case of three drawers at each end, making seven drawers in all. Dealer's price, $26.
Our price, $16.25.

No. 4 Columbian

EXCELLENCE OF THE COLUMBIAN.—All wearing parts are of case-hardened steel possessing great durability, and by the turning of a screw all lost motion caused by wear can be taken up. All parts are fitted so accurately that the machines are absolutely noiseless, and as easy running as fine adjustment and best mechanical skill is possible to produce. No expense or time is spared to make them perfect in every respect, as every machine passes a rigid inspection by competent men before leaving the factory.

NICKEL PLATED.—The balance wheel and many of the fine parts are nickel plated, with other parts finely enameled and ornamented, giving it a rich appearance.

A Self Setting Needle and Self-Threading Cylinder Shuttle are used in the Columbian High-Arm Sewing Machine. They are so simple that any one can easily operate them in a few minutes' time, as our Instruction Book is fully illustrated, showing how to do all kinds of fancy work with attachments.

Extra Attachments, in velvet-lined case, sent free with each machine: 1 Tucker, 1 Ruffler with shirring plate, 1 Hemmer set (4 widths) and Binder, 1 Braider (Foot and Slide), 1 Thread Cutter.

ADDITIONAL ACCESSORIES.—Each machine is supplied with the following outfit: 1 Hemmer and Feller (one piece), 10 Needles, 6 Bobbins, 1 Wrench, 1 Screw Driver, Oil Can with Oil, Cloth Guage and Thumb Screw, and a Book of Instructions. The Book of Instructions is profusely illustrated, and answers the purpose of a competent teacher.

No. 3—Drop leaf, Bent cover, case of two drawers at one end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $29. Our price, $17.

No. 4—Drop leaf table, Bent cover, case of two drawers at each end and center drawer. Dealer's price, $31. Our price, $17.75.

No. 5—Drop leaf table, Bent cover, case of three drawers at each end and center drawer, making a seven-drawer machine. Dealer's price, $33. Our price, $18.50.

The chief difference between Numbers 3, 4, and 5 is in the furniture, i. e., in the number of drawers. If you do not want to pay for the extra drawers, you need not do so. We sell these machines under a ten years' guarantee, by which we mean that if any part gives out by reason of any defect therein, the manufacturer will replace the same free of charge. Moreover, we allow the purchaser to test the machine ten days. If at the end of ten days you are not satisfied, you have only to drop us a postal card, and your money will be refunded.

OUR OFFER.

We will send any one of the above-described machines at the prices named, and also send the ADVOCATE free for six months. The only condition attached to this offer is that subscribers who are in arrears must first pay up all arrearages to date. It would be well to avail yourself of this offer at once, as we can not promise that it will last very long. Notice that you take no risk whatever. We do all the risking. Address

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

A case of bubonic plague has appeared in the prison of Oporto.

The Thirty-first Volunteer Regiment has started for the Philippines.

The New York Sugar Refinery has cut its rates to meet that of the American Sugar Refinery.

Peace has been restored in Samoa and the provisional government is being carried on without a hitch.

The postoffice at Peck, Fla., where the postmaster was whipped by White Caps, has been discontinued.

Demetri Friendlandsr, a Chicago banker, has disappeared, and $40,000 to $100,000 has also disappeared.

There was a riot in Paris between Dreyfusites and anti-Dreyfusites, in which twelve people were badly hurt.

For the first six months of the current year the receipt from taxes in Cuba exceeded the expenditures by $1,180,021.

Laberi expects to continue on the offensive in the Dreyfus case until Col. Jonaust is tired out, and then have a free field.

No matter what the verdict is in the Dreyfus case, it is thought there will be serious riots, approaching revolution, in Paris.

Fifteen hundred people took advantage of the cheap excursions to Chicago and left over the various railroads on Saturday morning.

The whole of San Domingo is fast becoming a unit in favor of a change of government, and the victory of the revolution is assured.

The battleship "Kearsarge" will have her trial trip between Sept. 5 and 15. She will be the first ship embodying the superimposed turret idea.

It is said that Russia has craftily crept into the Alaska boundary dispute, with a view of preventing an Anglo-American understanding.

The Governors of twenty-one States will take part in the conference on trusts by the Civic Federation of Chicago, beginning Sept. 13.

Gen. Pacheco, the San Dominican insurgent, has defeated the government troops, killing 150 men and a general. The revolutionists lost only 13 killed.

A wealthy cattleman of New Mexico, who shot a woman for some unknown cause, was immediately riddled with bullets by cowboys who witnessed the deed.

Several Southerners are in the last list of army appointments. Mississippi gets one captain and three lieutenants and Alabama three captains and three lieutenants.

Cornelius Vanderbilt received in his last week's mail 1500 begging letters. The total amount asked was $500,000, and the least asked by any one person was $25.

Three more regiments of volunteers are to be raised for the Philippines, two of them negro probably. When the campaign begins anew Otis will have 70,000 men.

There were 5,920 suicides in this country last year. This is far beyond any reasonable proportion. The cause which contributes most to this crime is nervous exhaustion.

Two municipal governments in Luzon have collapsed through the treachery of the native mayors, who have been arrested.

St. Ann's Convent, near Sparkill, N. Y., has been destroyed by fire, and fifteen people, mostly children, were burned to death.

The militia has been sent to Darien, Ga., to preserve peace and prevent a race war. A deputy sheriff has been shot down by a negro, and the town is in a state of great excitement.

Fully 3,000 people attended the annual session of the Universal Peace Union at Mystic, Conn. Wm. Lloyd Garrison made a notable speech against the subjection of the Filipinos.

A conflict between British and Russian authority in Hankow has been narrowly averted, but may yet result in bloodshed. The trouble is over a tract of land claimed by a British subject.

General Weyler's political opponents are making it hot for him in Spain. The Spanish newspapers take delight in misquoting him on important subjects, and the minister of war, General Polavieja, employs detectives to watch him constantly.

At Clover, S. C., a cotton mill reported earning for the year ending July 30 of $36,940, which was 11 per cent. of the capital stock of the company. The necessary buildings for increasing the original capacity of the mill threefold will be ready this autumn.

Although but a few weeks have elapsed since the new rice season opened, a very large quantity of the cereal has already come to market, indicating not only that the crop is an early one, but a large one as well. The receipts to date amount to more than 120,000 sacks of rough, or more than double what had been received up to the same date last year.

LEMONS AS MEDICINE

They regulate the Liver, Stomach, Bowels, Kidneys and Blood as prepared by Dr. H. Mozley, in his Lemon Elixir, a pleasant lemon drink. It cures biliousness, constipation, indigestion, headache, malaria, kidney diseases, fevers, chills, heart failure, nervous prostration, and all other diseases caused by a torpid or diseased liver and kidneys. It is an established fact that lemons, when combined properly with other liver tonics, produce the most desirable results upon the stomach, liver, bowels, kidneys, and blood. Sold by druggists. 50c and $1 bottles.

Mozley's Lemon Elixir

Cured me of sick and nervous headache, I had been subject to all my life.
MRS. N. A. McENTIRE,
Spring Place, Ga.

Mozley's Lemon Elixir

Cured me of indigestion and nervous prostration. I got more relief, and at once, from Lemon Elixir than all other medicines. J. C. SPEIGHTS,
Indian Springs, Ga.

Mozley's Lemon Elixir

Cured me of a long-standing case of chills and fever, by using two bottles.
J. C. STANLEY,
Engineer E. T., Va. & Ga. R. R.

Mozley's Lemon Elixir

Cured me of a case of heart disease and indigestion of four years' standing. I tried a dozen different medicines. None but Lemon Elixir done me any good.

To Subscribers.

Allow me to call attention to the fact that many of you are in arrears with the ADVOCATE. As I pay cash for labor, material and everything needful for carrying on the paper, may I not expect that all of you who are in arrears will remit promptly the amount of your indebtedness?

In remitting do not send a check on your local bank. We shall hereafter deduct the cost of collecting from the amount of the check and give credit for the remainder. W. C. BLACK,
Publisher.

"Much Pleased with It"

That is what Rev. F. N. Sweeney says of the sewing machine recently purchased of us. Try one. If it does not give satisfaction, your money will be refunded.

A RARE BARGAIN.

SELF-PRONOUNCING

S. S. Teachers' Reference Bible.

Text Conforms Exactly to the Oxford Teachers' Edition.

The self-pronouncing text enables the reader to pronounce all proper names at a glance.

This Bible is printed from Large, Beautiful and Clear New Type. All Proper Names are Divided into Syllables and Every Vowel is Marked and the Syllables Inflected, showing the Sounds and Accents as they are given in a Dictionary, thus enabling the reader to properly pronounce every word. This feature is a great improvement and a strong recommendation for this Bible over others.
